Williams, Waters—52.

Prayer by Rev. Mr. Satchell.

On motion of Mr. Gair, of East Feliciana, the reading of the journal was dispensed with.

On motion of Mr. Morey, of Ouachita, leave of absence for two days was granted to William Vigers, Chief Clerk of the House.

The Speaker announced the following select committee on House bill No. 30, relative to the Insane Asylum of the city of New Orleans:

Messrs. Rey, Carr, Hanlon, Mansion, and L'Hoste of Orleans.

The following resolution, offered by Mr. Kent, of St. Helena, on yesterday, and adopted, was omitted in the proceedings:

Resolved, That the special committee, to whom was referred House bill No. 30, relative to the Insane Asylum of the city of New Orleans, be required to visit said institution before making their report.

Under a suspension of the rules Mr. Morey, of Ouachita, offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That on Friday of each week, this House shall immediately go into Committee of the Whole, for the consideration of the various bills before it, immediately after prayer.

REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Claims submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

COMMITTEE ROOMS,
New Orleans, September —, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Claims beg leave to report as follows:

On the petition of Alexander Walker, asking that an appropriation of five hundred dollars be made to pay him for successful services rendered as an attorney, under the direction and approval of Governor B. F. Flanders, in defending the State against illegal taxation by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, saving to the Statate several thousand dollars. That your committee are fully satisfied that efficient service was rendered to the real benefit of the State by said Alexander Walker. Still, it does not appear to them that the Governor had any legal right or authority to employ any other counsel than the Attorney General of the State in such cases, or that the State is legally bound to pay for such services.

But, believing that petitioner acted in perfect good faith, on the ground that he was legally employed, and that he rendered valuable service to the State, we therefore respectfully recommend that the appropriation be made by the passage of the following act.

On the petition of Roman Montecino, asking the privilege of peddling without license on account of poverty and being a cripple, your committee have to report unfavorably, believing it would establish a bad precedent.

J. H. McVEAN,
Chairman Committee Claims;
W. POPE NOBLE.

House bill No. 225, an act for the relief of Alexander Walker, was placed on its first and second readings under a suspension of the rules, and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

The part relative to the petition of Roman Montecino was agreed to.

The Committee on Enrollment submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Committee on Enrollment,
New Orleans, September 16, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Enrollment, respectfully report the following acts duly enrolled, to wit:

1. An act to establish the fees due witnesses who are duly subpenaed before the several Senate and House committees.

2. An act to repeal an act entitled an act to authorize planters and farmers to furnish their freedmen and other employes with articles of merchandise without incurring the penalty of retail merchants, approved March 21, 1866.

Respectfully submitted,

O. H. BREWSTER,
Chairman Committee on Enrollment.

The special joint committee appointed to investigate the legality of the issuing of $4,000,000 levee bonds submitted their report, which, on motion of Mr. Morey, of Ouachita, was made the order of the day for Monday next, and 150 copies ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR.

The following message from the Governor was received:

A message from the Governor was read.

The following communication from the Governor was read:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
State of Louisiana,
New Orleans, September 21, 1868.

To the Honorable President and Members of the Senate:

I return to the Senate "An act respecting imprisonment and fines" without my signature, for the following reasons, to wit:

First—The Constitution, article fifty-eight, invests the Governor, with the consent of the Senate, with the power to grant pardons, remit fines and forfeitures, after conviction.

Second.—The Constitution, article eighty-two, says: "No duties or functions shall ever be attached by law to the Supreme or District Courts, or the several Judges thereof, but such as are judicial;" and this act proposes to confer upon them executive functions; and Third—It is bad policy to confer upon judges the power to remit fines and imprisonments imposed by themselves, as the inevitable tendency would be to corrupt the judiciary.

H. C. WARMOTH,
Governor of Louisiana.

Mr. Bacon: As it appears that this bill, framed by me, is enrolled in words directly opposite to its meaning when it passed the Senate, I would suggest that a committee be appointed to investigate the matter.

The Chair appointed Messrs. Bacon, Ray and Monette.

The Senate went into executive session.

The executive session having been raised, the President announced the following Senators as the special committee to which is referred an act relative to incorporations for agricultural purposes.

The following communications from the Governor were read:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
State of Louisiana,
New Orleans, September 18, 1868.

To the Honorable President and Members of the Senate:

I am instructed by his Excellency, the Governor, to inform the Senate that he has approved and signed:

An act to amend and re enact article 990 of the Code of Practice; and

An act to amend the third section of an act entitled an act to establish the office of Inspectors of Hay for the city and port of New Orleans, and to regulate the duties pertaing to same.

F. C. REMICK,
Private Secretary.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
State of Louisiana,
New Orleans, September 19, 1868.

To the Honorable President and Members of the Senate:

I am instructed by his Excellency the Governor to inform the Senate that he has approved and signed:

An act to amend an act entitled an act to incorporate the Louisiana Central Stem of the Mississippi and Pacific Railroad Company.

An act to amend the first section of an act entitled an act to incorporate the town of Monroe, in the parish of Ouachita, and to provide for the government of the same, approved on the eighth March, 1866, and to repeal the act entitled an act to provide for the election and commission by the Governor of a Justice of the Peace for the town of Monroe, in the parish of Ouachita, and to define his powers, approved March 13, 1866, and to abolish the office of Town Constable in the town of Monroe, and providing officers to perform the duties now required of said Town Constables; and

An act to facilitate the registry of voters under an act to create a Board of Registration to superintend the registration of the qualified voters of the State, approved September 7, 1868.

F. C. REMICK,
Private Secretary.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
State of Louisiana,
New Orleans, September 19, 1868.

To the Honorable President and Members of the Senate:

I am instructed by his Excellency, the Governor, to inform the Senate that he has approved and signed:

An act to define more fully the powers, salaries and duties of the Board of Registration and Supervisors thereof, for the registration of the qualified voters of the State;

An act fixing the salaries of the District Judges in the State;

An act defining the duties and powers of the Police Jury in that part of the parish of Orleans situated upon the right bank of the river Mississippi;

Joint resolution to provide for the payment of the mileage and per diem of members and clerks of committees who are required to sit during the recess of the Legislature; and

An act authorizing Joseph St. Cyr to donate, or will by testament, property to his natural children.

F. C. REMICK,
Private Secretary.

The President appointed as the special committee of seven on the Agricultural Incorporation bill, Messrs. Campbell, Egan, Lynch, Ray, Bacon, Wilcox and Foute.

The Senate then adjourned.

C. H. MERRITT.
Secretary of the Senate.

JOURNAL OF THE SENATE.

Seventy-Third Day's Session.

TUESDAY, September 22, 1868.

The Senate was called to order by the President at twelve o'clock M.

The roll was called; present the following members:

Anderson, Bacon, Beares, Blackman, Campbell, Coupland, Darrall, Day, Egan, Foute, Jewell, Kelso, Lewis, Lynch, Monette, Ogden, O'Hara, Packard, Pinchback, Poindexter, Pollard, Randall, Ray, Smith, Thompson, Todd, White, Whitney, Wilcox, Williams, Wittgenstein—30.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Mr. Turner.

On motion of Mr. Ray, the reading of the minutes was dispensed with.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Mr. Ray, from the Judiciary Committee, reported favorably upon Senate bill No. 230, an act for the relief of B. Delle Piane, a former resident of the parish of East Baton Rouge, and Lacey, Marks and Butler, attorneys-at-law, New Orleans, and upon Senate bill No. 203, to prohibit the receiving of city notes of indebtedness becoming due after the passage of this act, and also prohibiting the city of New Orleans from paying out any city notes and providing a penalty for the violation of this act.

Mr. Lynch, from the Committee on Finance, reported unfavorably upon House joint resolution authorizing the Warrant Clerk to draw additional warrants for the payment of the per diem of members.

Favorably, with amendments, upon substitute for House bill No. 215, an act to provide means for the relief of the State Treasurer; and favorably upon Senate bill No. 234, an act for the relief of the ex-judges of the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana or their assigns.

Mr. Lynch, from the Committee on Printing, reported, without action, House bill No. 178, an act to amend an act entitled an act relative to public printing.

Mr. O'Hara, from the Committee on Claims, reported favorably upon an act providing for the purchase of Fisher's historical painting of the battle of New Orleans; and reported back without action Senate bill 151, an act for the relief of W. W. Hadlin.

Mr. Smith, from the Committee on Elections and Returns, presented a report in the case of C. C. Antoine, contesting the seat of Reuben White, with the following conclusions:

The undersigned members of your committee respectfully submit the evidence of fraud in the parish of Caddo, in the Twenty-first Senatorial District, and the argument of the counsel for C. C. Antoine, who claims the seat made vacant by the decision of the Senate if the ineligibility of Reuben White, and that C. C. Antoine (as set forth in his petition) was legally elected. And with due consideration, and upon a full and careful examination of the evidence, together with the numerous affidavits which were introduced, and which we have not deemed it necessary to print, no other conclusion can be entertained by the undersigned members of your Committee on Elections and Returns, than that C. C. Antoine is clearly entitled to his seat as Senator from the Twenty-first Senatorial District, and would respectfully recommend the passage of the following resolution:

Resolved, That C. C. Antoine be and he hereby is declared legally elected Senator from the Twenty-first Senatorial District, State of Louisiana, and that he be sworn to fulfill the duties of that office, and allowed to take his seat as Senator in this honorable body.

WILLIAM VIGERS,
Chief Clerk House of Representatives.

JOURNAL OF THE SENATE.

Seventy-Fourth Day's Session.

WEDNESDAY, September 23, 1868.

The Senate was called to order by the President at twelve o'clock M.

The roll was called, the following members answered to their names:

Anderson, Bacon, Beares, Blackman, Braughn, Campbell, Coupland, Darrall, Day, Foute, Jewell, Kelso, Lewis, Lynch, Monette, Offutt, Ogden, O'Hara, Packard, Pinchback, Poindexter, Pollard, Randall, Ray, Smith, Thompson, Whitney, Wilcox, Williams, Witgenstein—30.

Prayer by Rev. Mr. Reed.

On motion of Mr. O'Hara the reading of the minutes was dispensed with.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Mr. Darrall, from the Committee on Enrollment, reported as duly enrolled Senate bills Nos. 116 and 64, and as duly engrossed House bills Nos. 84 and 134.

The special committee appointed to investigate the alterations to Senate bill No. 23, respecting fines and imprisonments reported as follows:

To the Senate of the State of Louisiana:

The undersigned, a special committee appointed to examine into the cause why the bill entitled an act respecting imprisonments and fines, as presented to the Governor for his approval, should have been so worded as to provide that "it shall be discretionary for such court or judicial officer" as was spoken of in the previous portions of the bill "to remit any portion of such fine or imprisonment, and to alter or amend the sentence, judgment or order whereby such fine or imprisonment shall have been adjudged," whereas said bill as it passed the Senate declared that "it shall not be discretionary for such court or judicial officer to remit any portion of such fine or imprisonment, nor to alter or amend the sentence, judgment or order whereby such fine or imprisonment shall have been adjudged."

Such was the bill as sent to the House, and it was returned by the Clerk of that body as having passed that branch of the General Assembly on the fourteenth instant without amendment.

Your committee have examined the engrossed bill as it went to the House and was returned, and find that the alterations have been made in pencil, the negative being stricken out. There is also a fourth section added in pencil, repealing all laws in conflict with this, which was unnecessary to and not in the bill as it passed the Senate.

The second section remains unaltered.

This shows the intent of the bill fully to be to prohibit the remission of fines or imprisonments by the Judges, etc., because it prescribes how they may be so remitted; not by the Judge, but by Governor and Senate, parish Judge and Police Jury, or Mayor and Common Council, as the case may be.

The bill has evidently been tampered with; by whom, your committee thinks it our duty to push further inquiries, as to which we ask leave to sit again. Your committee is informed by the Clerk of the House that when the bill left that body it was without any alteration or addition in pencil, or otherwise such as has been shown to have been made in this bill. It was therefore passed by the House as well as by the Senate, so as to read, "it shall not be competent for such court to remit," etc., "nor to alter or amend," etc., nor was said supposed fourth section in it, and your committee therefore recommend that the Secretary be directed to have said bill enrolled anew in accordance with the statements herein made, and as it really passed, and that the Governor be informed by him that the bill as it was sent to him for approval was not such as it passed the General Assembly.

A. B. BACON,
JOHN RAY,
J. J. MONETTE.

Mr. Bacon: I move that the Committee be allowed to sit further to more fully investigate the matter.

Adopted.

RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Bacon: I offer the following resolution:

On motion of Mr. Bacon it was ordered that the Secretary of the Senate proceed to the House with engrossed bill of the Senate No. 23, entitled an act respecting imprisonments and fines, and ask whether the bill as altered in the copy with pencil passed that body thus altered, and with the words "not be competent" in the sixteenth line stricken out as it now appears, or as it passed the Senate with those words, "not competent" in it, and the words, "nor to" in the eighteenth line stricken out and the word "and" substituted in pencil. Also, whether the fourth section in pencil was in the bill as it passed that body, and to inform the House that the Senate purposes to have the bill re-enrolled as it was originally engrossed and passed without these pencil alterations, and with the words "not be competent" restored, unless the House declares that such was not the purport of the bill as passed by them.

Adopted.

The majority report of the Committee on Elections, in the case of C. C. Antoine vs. Reuben White, was read, as follows:

Resolved, That C. C. Antoine be and he is hereby legally elected Senator from the Twenty-first Senatorial District, State of Louisiana, and that he be sworn to fulfill the duties of that office, and allowed to take his seat as Senator in this honorable body.

MORTIMER F. SMITH,
GEORGE Y. KELSO,
ROBERT POINDEXTER,
PATRICK O'HARA.

The order of the day was called.

SPECIAL ORDER OF THE DAY.

Senate joint resolution No. 190, a substitute to amend article ninety-nine of the Constitution, was read.

Mr. O'Hara: I ask for a suspension of the rules.

Rules suspended.

I move that the majority report of the Committee on Elections in the case of C. C. Antoine vs. Reuben White be made the special order of the day to-morrow.

Mr. Bacon: I move to amend by making the report the special order of the day on Saturday.

Lost.

Mr. O'Hara's motion was then adopted.

A call of the House was ordered.

The following members answered to their names:

Anderson, Bacon, Blackman, Braughn, Campbell, Darrall, Day, Foute, Jewell, Kelso, Lynch, Monette, Offutt, Ogden, O'Hara, Pinchback, Poindexter, Pollard, Randall, Ray, Smith, Thompson, Whitney, Wilcox, Williams, Wittgenstein—26.

Mr. Ray: I renew my motion of yesterday, that Senate joint resolution No. 190, to amend article ninety-nine of the Constitution, be considered engrossed.

The Clerk of the House of Representatives appeared with the following message from the House regarding Senate bill No. 23:

On motion of Mr. Carr, of Orleans, respectfully returned with the information that the House concurred, without amendments, and that the words "not be competent" were not stricken out by the House, neither the words "nor to" in the eighteenth line; and that the additional section was not added by the House.

WILLIAM VIGERS,
Chief Clerk.

The same officer announced that the House had concurred in the Senate bills:

No. 174, an act to amend and re-enact article 325 of the Civil Code.

No. 44, an act to amend an act entitled an act relative to District Attorneys, approved March 30, 1865.

No. 159, an act to amend an act entitled an act to amend an act entitled an act to provide for supplying the loss of the public records and other papers consumed by the burning of the Courthouse in the parish of Claiborne on the sixth of November, 1849, approved April 28, 1853.

Senate joint resolution No. 14 directing the Board of Public Works to have examined the canal leading from Napoleonville, parish of Assumption, to Lake Verret, and to make estimates for cleaning and repairing the same.

No. 135, an act to amend an act entitled an act to take the sense of the qualified voters of the parish of Winn as to the expediency of removing the seat of justice from the town of Winnfield to the town of Montgomery, and confirming the town of Winnfield as the seat of justice, and Senate, bill No. 187, an act defining more fully the duties of sheriffs, etc.

Also, that the House had postponed indefinitely:

Senate bill No. 193, an act authorizing the collection of all back taxes due the city of Carrollton.

He also asked concurrence of the Senate in House joint resolution No. 234, providing for a recess of the General Assembly from and after October 2, 1868, until November 7, 1868, at twelve M.

Action on Senate joint resolution No. 190 was resumed.

Mr. Day: I call for the yeas and nays on the motion to engross the bill.

The yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Anderson, Bacon, Beares, Blackman, Braughn, Day, Foute, Jewell, Lynch, Offutt, Ogden, O'Hara, Pinchback, Ray, Thompson, Wilcox, Wittgenstein—17.

H. WILLIAMS,
P. HARPER,
J. B. ESNARD.

The bill was ordered to be placed on the calendar for a third reading.

The Committee on Judiciary reported favorably House bill No. 207, an act relative to the collection of taxes.

Referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

The special committee to whom was referred the petition of the Police Jury of the parish of Iberville, relative to the closing of Bayou Plaquemines, submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana:

GENTLEMEN—Your special committee, composed of the members from the parishes of Iberville, St. Mary and St. Martin, to whom was referred the petition of the Police Jury of the parish of Iberville, praying to be sustained in their action in closing the mouth of Bayou Plaquemines, most respectfully report unfavorably, and recommend the prayer of the petitioners be not granted for the following reasons, viz:

First—That the Police Jury had no authority in law or precedent to justify their arbitrary action in closing a navigable stream and natural outlet of the Mississippi river, and that their action was in direct opposition to all legislation had in this matter, for previous Legislatures had most emphatically refused to allow the closing of said bayou.

Second—Even if the Police Jury had had the right to close this bayou, it was ruinous to the best interests of the State for them to do it. This bayou gave an easy access to a market for the immense amount of produce which is raised in the parishes of St. Mary and St. Martin, and enabled the residents to obtain their supplies from the city without being obliged to pay exhorbitant freight charges. The prosperity of this country depends as much upon the facilities we have to transport our crops to market as upon the climate and soil to raise them. There is nothing that would stimulate the agricultural interests of this State so much as the building of railroads and steamboats, the construction of canals, etc., thereby insuring a cheap, speedy and safe communication with the markets at all times. But here we have a natural canal, better than the work of man, and because five and twenty gentlemen at its mouth desire to make fortunes by charging excessive tolls upon all the produce of the country that passes through it, the best interests of the five thousand inhabitants shall suffer and the bayou is closed. Your committee can see no justice in this.

Third—By the bayou being closed it gives a monopoly of all the freighting business to the New Orleans and Opelousas Railroad who can charge just as much as they see proper, and the people have to pay it or do without supplies. It is impossible for steamboats to compete with with the railroad so long as they are compelled to go all the way around by the Atchafayla river, but with the bayou open boats can carry freight cheaper than the road and still make a fair profit.

For the foregoing reasons your Committee is of the opinion that it would be but right and just for the Police Jury of the parish of Iberville to cause the dam now closing the mouth of Bayou Plaquemine to be removed, and pay the expense of the same, and if they neglect or refuse to cause the same to be done, then the State Engineer shall do it.

A. J. DEMAREST,
Chairman;
P. G. DESLONDE,
P. L. DUFRESNE,
J. B. ESNARD.

Under a suspension of the rules, Mr. Brewster, of Ouachita, introduced House bill No. 233, joint resolution relative to the increasing of the numbers of the Committee to Revise the Laws of the State of Louisiana.

THE HAUNTED ROOM.

Ye voices of the past! vibrating still,
Your mournful echoes float through memory's halls
And dusky corridors—like angels' whispers,
Fill the haunted room.

Hush! do not break the spell;
I read the meaning of thy startled glance:
Do I believe in ghosts? I'll answer thee
Anon.

Is there a homestead on the earth
From proud ancestral halls of prince and peer
Down to the lowly peasant's humble cot
That can not boast its haunted room? Haunted
Forever by the ghosts of other days.
Come as it may—in happy guise bringing
The sportive scenes of childhood back, or sadder
Memories of the dear ones loved and lost,
Still was its presence felt by me whene'er
Alone I mused within the sacred precincts
Of our haunted room.

Look on the picture
Drawn by memory—thus the phantom's called;
'Tis twilight, and the sombre shadows fall
Upon the quaint, old-fashioned walls, where stand
The high-backed chairs, in grim propriety
Arrayed, as though their former occupants,
The stately dames of olden time, but now
Had vanished as we enter.

Here you see
The tall high-posted bed with curtains drawn,
While there within that dark recess still stands
The book case which, as then, for me it held
A wondrous charm. I should have mentioned first
It stands high perched upon a chest of drawers,
Where oft with eager recklessness I've climb'd
The topmost shelves in search of ancient books,
And in my haste at times have lost my hold,
Making a rather swift descent therefrom,
Minus the volume sought, plus several bumps
Phrenologists perchance might render thus:
"Aim not too high, or fear to light too low."
E'en now I can but smile as fancy paints
The failure of those literary schemes.
Between the windows to the left you'll see
The large old-fashioned mirror gleam. Its frame,
Of some dark wood, could once rich gilding boast;
Its tarnished sides now dim and worn with age,
Present an illustration of that truth
Repeated oft, "All is not gold that glitters."
The steady ticking in the corner here
Reveals the ancient clock, which seemed to me
Most striking feature of the room. How oft
With childish interest intense I've watch'd
That swinging pendulum, admiring genius
That could bring to light such mechanism strange,
Marking with the monotony of sound
The passage of each moment on the dial,
Then, sixty minutes o'er, the silvery bell
Proclaimed in accents clear the passing hour.

Oh! far more bright and beautiful to me
That ancient room, dim with its odd array,
Than all the gorgeous splendor that doth mark
Those palaces abroad where princes dwell
In gay saloons, whose brilliant garniture
With the bewitching dazzling light doth seem Like some bewild'ring dream of fairy land,
Might vanish with the morning light.

But stay:
One relic of the olden time I must not
Overlook. Beside the western window,
There it stands in its accustomed place,
That sacred "old arm chair." The sainted form
So many years its occupant, revered, beloved,
Has passed away. The halo of her presence
Lingereth yet, and never will depart
It seems but yesterday that death visited
The room, bearing the loved one from our home
To dwell forever in the "Father's house
Where there are "many mansions," at a place
Prepared for all who walk in faith sincere
As humble followers of Him, the meek
And lowly Jesus.

Our aged grandsire, too,
E'en now I listen for that well remember'd
Footsteps on the stair, though years have fled
Since it was hushed forever.

Other forms
I see, who crossed the threshold of the haunted
Room, long years ago, to dwell beyond death's
"Dreamless vale," through which the shadowy guide
Shall yet again return, to summons us.
The hour of his coming none may know,
God grant! we may be then prepared to join
Our angel kindred on the "shining shore."

Rev. E. D. Owen writes from Martinsburgh, Baltimore Conference, October 21: "God is with us. Our protracted meeting began September 6. Up to this time the work is still going on. Over 100 persons have professed conversion, and 106 have united with the Church."

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, November 6.

This is an age of research and discovery, the result of all efforts in this direction, should be noted as way marks to all adventurers, and our mite is now contributed in that interest. A certain class of papers hereabouts were last week, and for a long time previous, exhausting the vocabulary of epithets in deriding General Grant; and if their statements and denunciations are worth anything, no one would for a moment suppose he was fit for any place except one of infamy and condign punishment; but since Tuesday night a most interesting discovery has been made. These same sheets have had revelations concerning General Grant's character and attributes as a general and a statesman, but more striking than these are the revealments of his political affinities; this week he is as good a Democrat as these papers and their patrons need; they think he never was much of a Republican, and a less one now! They did don't intimate that he has changed, and of course they have not; they are not given to change! Jerry Fuller used to say the sun might change, but the clock never did.

A licentious press is the devil's great engine, and we may look for these malicious hypocrites to be the most earnest and fawning in their efforts to persuade the defamed, though triumphant candidates, that they have labored for their election and ought to be rewarded.

There are here some refugees from the South, seeking protection for life. What a magnificent example our nation is of the freedom of the press and the freedom of speech! Retribution is not always deferred till the final day of judgment, and innocent blood shed always calls for vengeance.

WASHINGTON, November 13.

Events are instructive and potential. They throw strange and glaring light on places and objects, as well as on persons in obscurity; it is really marvellous to see the grandeur of proportion in which General Grant now rises before the mind of certain parties and presses, who, but only a few days since, could see nothing but obscurity in the person, littleness in the actions, and destruction in the future of his course, if brought into power. Rumor has it that the Democratic electors will cast their votes for him, and thereby make his election unanimous. Satan, we are informed, transforms himself into an angel of light; the flow and dazzle of his garments conceal the cloven foot; there is also inspiration in the motto: "What man has done, man may do again;" but it is not to be forgotten that to do what has been done before, the circumstances must be equal; if one man has been debauched, it does not follow another man may be, unless he has the same liability. Many a sturdy oak, after resisting the storms of a century has bowed itself under the caresses of the poison vine. Jehu made a feast, and dressed his victims for the sacrifice and slaughter. So by flattery, caresses and fullsome eulogy do these despisers of the government attempt to corrupt its fountain. If the future may be judged by the past, such attempts will crush their inventors, and their fleshless skeletons hang along the way of infamy as ghastly monitors to political tricksters.

The modest Grant came home on Saturday evening last, unheralded by trump or telegram, not even his own carriage met him at the railroad station, but he was carried to his house in a hack found on the stand; the sentry at his door was taken aback when the General appeared at the steps; about nine o'clock Monday morning, he was found as usual walking to his headquarters, with hands in his pockets, puffing his long cigar, his eyes upon his path, and shrinking as much as ever from public gaze. Many distinguished persons called on him during the day, and were cordially received. Mayor Bowen and other representatives of political clubs have called to tender him a public demonstration but he politely declines it, and invites them to his house and quarters at all times with pleasure. What a contrast between him and some others that might be named. Many papers were at the General's office awaiting his return, the larger portion of which was destroyed and no doubt contained applications for place; but on inquiry we found the pile was not two feet high, as the papers announced.

There has been quite a reduction in the clerical force of the Treasury, and a greater will occur about New Year. The second Auditor's force will be reduced from five to about two hundred, owing to the decrease of work. Some seventy-five females have been dismissed from the Treasury during this month; a state of things exists in connection with this class of labor that will be dragged to light, causing the nation to blush for shame.

Another effort is about to be made to build an air line railroad to New York, to connect with the Virginia Central. This will shorten the distance and time between New York and New Orleans, via Washington, a line of travel this, imperatively demanded by the community.

The flag was hoisted over the Capitol on Tuesday, the tenth, at twelve o'clock; a very few members of either House were present, and both adjourned sine die.

The weather has presented a genuine specimen of Indian summer, as lovely as need be. General Rosecrans has availed himself of the mild season to start for Mexico; if he is as successful as Mr. Campbell was, he will winter, and perhaps summer too, in New Orleans. SELIM.

Retributive Justice.

M. ANNESLEY.

"Thou art a God to whom vengeance belongeth." "Be sure your sin will find you out."

It is amazing to think how unmindful we are of God's inflexible justice, even through the mercy of Christ. Jesus in view of his own sacrifice and intercession, said: "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again"—this means in good or evil, and we are very ready to expect a good turn for one done, and we may as well tax our expectation, evil for evil, for it will come. No doubt there is too much presuming upon the word of God. Some poor sinners think they can find repentance and forgiveness for any sin, with impunity—that is, their sins will be so cancelled that the consequences will also be forgotten. Not so, a bad life leaves its effects upon the poor body, although the sin is pardoned, and in the same way the fruit of our doings, which relate to the infliction of suffering or death on the innocent will be visited on ourselves or our dearest ones.

The Bible is full of God's "because," why such and such evils fell upon families, nations and individuals. Although in the confusion of human events much is forgotten and passed over in oblivion, nothing is obliterated from the divine mind in the annals of human good or evil, and we make a fatal mistake when we seek the darkness of night or any disguise to cover us from the vigilance of our fellowbeings, for there is an all-seeing eye gazing upon us through the deepest gloom and most successful deceit, and while it is noting our plots and execution, it has also in preparation our punishment. Jezebel thought Ahab with all his power need not feel the least trouble about the refusal of Naboth's vineyard; in an instant she devised a plan which she could make to succeed and have it put in immediate execution. But at the same time God had a counter plot, and decreed her destruction, and it was fulfilled to the letter. Her plan had so well passed off that she no doubt congratulated herself upon her wise policy, but the end was not yet, and we never read of her violent, disgraceful death, without reverence before the retributive justice of God. And he said, "throw her down; so they threw her down; and he trod her under foot. And when he was come in, said, go see now this cursed woman, and bury her, for she is a king's daughter. And they went to bury her, but they found no more of her than the skull, and the feet, and the palms of her hands."

Jezebel did not lift a stone to kill the innocent Naboth, but she instigated the mischief, the deed, the murder, and you may, at your leisure, read her whole history of sin and idolatry. While Jezebels of the present day who do similar wicked works through others, may expect their punishment assuredly, if not in the same exact form, that which will satisfy divine justice, and many will wondering say, "why is this?"

God's blessing or avenging justice comes upon character, without the human distinctions of greatness or lowliness. We often wonder at the strange things we see and hear, but if we stepped back a little and gathered up fragments of past history in families and individuals, we would cease our astonishment. There is a house and family, all broken up. Quite mysterious to the stranger. Did you know it? an aged parent was turned away from that door. A strange calamity has fallen upon a dear child. Ah, there was some years ago a defenseless one torn from kindred and friends and all that was dear, and sacrificed to her ruin.

It was said of David for his double sin, that the sword should never depart from his house, and secret sins bring unaccountable dealings upon people, even after a long repentance. If we transgress God's law, we must be willing to take the consequences of the sin.

The innocent sufferer may forgive, and having no malice for the inflicted wrong, and bless—but God hath said, "vengeance is mine, I will repay," and he does repay, in a time, and with a power that gives the principal and interest of the suffering. Those who make widows and fatherless children, must expect their wives to be desolate widows, and their children left fatherless; those who break up and destroy homes, must expect to be homeless and have all their comforts scattered.

There is no mistake in God's judgment; his decisions are infinitely true and exact, and there is no evading his justice; human law may be set aside by bribery and corruption, but the chancery of Heaven leaves no appeal. Those who oppress must expect the rod of the oppressor to afflict, when they will most keenly feel it. A few months or years, under the just chastening of the Lord, makes the soul understand God's equity better than any thing else. Read your Bible upon this holy doctrine, and make your own observations upon things you see and hear in the world, and you will more perfectly understand the retributive justice of God.

Pins—How they are Made—An Interesting Account.

A correspondent of the New York Evening Post, writing from Seymour, Connecticut, gives the following account of how pins are manufactured:

The pin machines is one of the closest approaches that mechanics have made to the dexterity of the human hand. A small machine, about the height and size of a ladies' sewing machine, only stronger, stands before you. On the back side a light belt descends from the long shaft at the ceiling that drives all the machines, ranged in rows on the floor. On the left side of our machine hangs on a peg a small reel of wire, that has been straightened by running through a compound system of small rollers.

This wire descends, and the end of it enters the machine. This is the food consumed by this snappish, voracious, little dwarf. He pulls it in and bites it into inches, incessantly, one hundred and forty bites to the minute. Just as he sizes each bite a saucy little hammar, with a concave face, hits the end of the wire three taps and "upsets" it to a head, while he gripes it in a counter-sunk hole between his teeth. With an outward thrust of his tongue he then lays the pin side-wise in a little groove across the rim of a small wheel that slowly revolves just under his nose. By the external pressure of a stationary hoop these pins roll in their places, as they are carried under two series of small files, three in each. These files grow finer toward the end of the series. They lie at a slight inclination on the points of the pins, and by a series of cams, levers and springs are made to play "like lightning." Thus the pins are pointed and dropped in a little shower into a box. Twenty-eight pounds of pins is a day's work for one of these jerking little automatons. Forty machines on this floor make five hundred and sixty pounds of pins daily. These are then polished. Two very intelligent machines reject every crooked pin, even the slightest irregularity of form being detected.

Another automaton assorts half a dozen lengths in as many different boxes, all at once unerringly, when a careless operator has mixed the contents of boxes from various machines. Lastly, a perfect genius of a machine hangs the pins by the head in an inclined platform through as many "slots" as there are pins in a row on the papers. These slots converge into the exact space spanning the length of a row. Under them runs the strip of pin paper. A hand-like part of the machine catches one pin from each of the slots as it falls, and by one movement sticks them all through two corrugated ridges in the paper, from which they are to be picked at by taper fingers in boudoirs, and all sorts of human fingers in all sorts of human circumstances.

A DEMOCRAT'S SOLILOQUY.

"Now is the winter of our discontent"
Made doubly dismal by this "Son of York."
Would we had given Chase in time after Another candidate e'er 'twas too late.
But now, alas! we fear a Democratic President we never shall See-more.
Our worthy Vice, too, he who was so Frank,
And wrote a letter, which we now believe
Would have been better let-er-lone, for though
We never saw a tighter Vice, or one
With greater power of jaw, yet even he
Was forced to loose his grip.

Cold-facts are these
For Democratic ears, and yet 'tis true
That we must Grant unto another man
The place that should have been Horatio's.
Methinks so great defeat should prove to us
Right always will prevail.

Let us repent,
Banish our emblems of fraternal strife,
The copperhead and rattlesnake, those vile
Twin sisters (or sin-twisters, better called)
And let us heartily support U. S.—

The National Savings Bank.

This institution for savings, chartered by the Congress of the United States, has now in full operation in our midst, a branch located on the north side of Dock street. The building occupied so long as a town hall, previous to the building of the present spacious edifice, has recently been fitted up in a neat and comfortable style, with every convenience for a banking institution. It is good to look at—it is good to put your money there. The indefatigable efforts of Mr. S. L. Harris, general inspector, has inspired an earnest desire on the part of everybody, and particularly the freedmen, for whom the institution was more especially designed, to save some portions of their earnings for a "rainy day."

This bank is safe—as safe as the Government of the United States. As the deposits are funded in government bonds, and an arrangement is made by which these bonds can be instantaneously turned into currency and depositors paid. As there is no money loaned there is no chance for loss in that way. Five per cent interest per annum, is paid three times a year, and all the profits are to be divided among the depositors after ten per cent has been accumulated.

While the National Savings Bank is designed to encourage the freedmen to save, it receives deposits from everybody, of every color and age. By Section thirteen, of its charter, the trustees are permitted to receive deposits from minors and married women, and to pay the same to either of this class of persons, thus preventing loss or misapplication of the funds by any authority other than the depositor.

On the death of a depositor, the amount due is paid to their legal representatives.

Deposits of five cents and upward are received. Interest is paid on deposits of five dollars and upward.

This bank is of no party and sect, it is national, it is the only bank with a charter from government. It is under the management of great, good and wealthy men. "Take care of the cents, they will grow to dollars."

The accommodating acting cashier, Mr. R. B. Hunt, is always ready to receive deposits or pay them. It is the desire of the advisory committee that every person in the city should visit, inspect and patronize this institution.—Wilmington Post.

Business Lies.

It is scarcely necessary for us to prove that there is no middle ground between truth and falsehood; or to insist upon the criminality of all deviations from the straight-forward truth. It is to be apprehended, however, that vicious custom recognizes distinctions on this subject which have no foundation in Christian morals. There are many who would regard it as an injustice and insult if they were called liars, who in the ordinary pursuit of their business feel little hesitation in misrepresenting facts, and in making promises which they have no intention of fulfilling. What is more common than to hear respectable shopkeepers misrepresenting the character of their goods, to take the advantage of the credulity of the ignorant, or asserting that they are selling at ruinous sacrifices to stimulate purchases, when the contrary is the fact? And how frequently do we find mechanics, in order to secure a job, making positive promises of immediate attention to customers' work, which are either wholly insincere, or which are violated on the most trivial pretext? This is not only positively wrong, but grievously annoying. An honest man makes his arrangements on the presumed truthfulness of those with whom he deals, and if they deceive him, his plans are thrown into confusion. A single lie, like an obstruction placed on a railroad, may cause embarrasments far beyond its own neighborhood. It is a sad state of things when it has almost become an axiom, that all men will lie in business. We know that all men will not do so, but unquestionably it is very common, and so common as to cause distrust in receiving the declarations of those who intend to adhere to the truth.

The practice aside from its moral turpitude, re-acts on those who adopt it. A tradesman who is detected in it is always regarded with suspicion, and as it is presumed that the man who will lie will also cheat, his business will sooner or later be affected. Who wishes to trust the man that has once deceived him? We certainly do not, and we try, by avoiding contact with him, to escape from the possibility. To be always truthful is an excellent virtue, and no one has ultimately suffered by cultivating it.—Presbyterian.

Ill Breeding.

There is no greater breach of good manners, or rather no better evidence of ill-breeding than that of interrupting another in conversation while speaking, or commencing a remark before another has fully closed. No well-bred person ever does it, or continues a conversation long with one that does. The latter will find an interesting conversation often waived, closed or declined by the former, without even suspecting the cause. It is a criterion which never fails to show the true breeding of the individual. A well bred person will not interrupt one who is in all respects greatly his inferior. If you wish to judge the good breeding of a person with whom you are but sightly acquainted, mark such person strictly in this respect, and you will assuredly not be deceived. However, intelligent, fluent, easy or even graceful a person may appear for a short time, you will find him or her soon prove uninteresting, insipid and coarse. Solomon says: "He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him." Dr. Franklin was very impatient of interruption in conversation. He often mentioned the custom of the Indians, who always remain silent some time before they give an answer to a question which they have heard attentively. One who rudely interrupts another, in conversation, does much the same thing as though he should, when walking with another, impertinently thrust himself before his companion, and stop his progress. Great talkers always think themselves very interesting; but they are most sure to be interrupting and otherwise disagreeable.

The Bible.

"When I commenced my duties of professor of theology, I feared that the frequency with which I should have to pass over the same portions of Scripture would abate the interest in my own mind in reading them; but after more than fifty years of study, it is my experience that with every class my interest increases."—Leonard Woods.

"From the time that, at my mother's feet, or on my father's knee, I first learned to lisp verses from the Sacred Writings, they have been my daily study and vigilant contemplation. If there be anything in my style or thoughts to be commended, the credit is due to my kind parents, in instilling into my mind an early love of the Scriptures."—Daniel Webster.

"I will hazard the assertion, that no man ever did or ever will become truly eloquent, without being a constant reader of the Bible, and an admirer of the purity and sublimity of its language."—Fisher Ames.

"There are no songs comparable to the songs of Zion, no orations equal to those of the prophets, and no politics like those which the Scriptures teach."—Milton.

"I must confess to you that the majesty of the Scriptures astonishes me. The holiness of the evangelists speaks to my heart, and has such strong and striking characters of truth, and is, moreover, so perfectly inimitable, that if it had been the invention of men, the inventors would be greater than the greatest heroes."—Rousseau.

Two Pictures of Death.

In a scantily furnished chamber lies an old Scotch minister with thin, gray hair, and wrinkled skin. But his brow is high and broad; his deep set eyes are bright and piercing; a smile plays round his lips; and though feeble and dying, he looks calm and happy. Let us speak to him and say:

"Do you think yourself dying, dear sir?"

He fixes his eye calmly upon you, and slowly he replies:

"Really, friend, I am not anxious whether I am or not; for if I die, I shall be with God; if I live he will be with me."

Now let us step into yonder mansion. Entering a richly furnished chamber, we find a dignified personage infolded in warm robes, and seated in a large easy chair. He, too, is feeble and dying; but the light in his eyes is unsteady, and he looks like a man ill at ease with himself. Let us also ask him a question:

"Mr. Gibbon, how does the world appear to you now?"

The eloquent historian of the Roman empire (for he it is) closes his eyes a moment, then opens them again, and with a deep sigh he replies:

"All things are fleeting. When I look back, I see they have been fleeting; when I look forward, all is dark and doubtful."—Protestant Churchman.

Church and Personal Items.

Several conversions have been reported in a revival in progress at Warwick, N. Y., Rev. D. W. C. Van Gaasbeck, pastor.

PARKER.—Rev. E. W. Parker with his wife, after an absence of nine years, has returned from service in our India mission. Their health is impaired.

MORRIS.—Rev. F. A. Morris, son of Bishop T. A. Morris, is stationed at St. John's Church, St. Louis. He is a member of St. Louis conference, Church South.

GRANT PLACE CHURCH, CHICAGO.—This new church, dedicated a week since, had a glorious accession last Sunday of thirty-one members. This nearly doubles their number of the first week.

Last week's Western Advocate says: "The Agents, Hitchcock and Walden, have been in the South for two weeks past, looking after the interests of our work in the Tennessee, Holston and Georgia Conferences."

COLORED CONVENTION.—The colored Methodists of Georgia are considering the question of a seperate African Methodist Episcopal Church South. A convention assembled in Augusta on the tenth.

Rev. Henry Jackson, of the India Mission work, expects to sail on his return voyage to India on the 21st instant. If there be no unusual delay he will reach his post of labor about January 15, the date of the Conference session.

PENNIES CARE FOR THEMSELVES.—Rev. E. C. Bass writes to the Vermont Christian Messenger that more than three-fifths of all Missionary money raised in the Vermont Conference were secured by subscriptions of less than five dollars each. This is a word in season to the many who, because they can not give much, do not give anything.

At the late session of the California Conference, a letter was read from Rev. William Taylor, (formerly noted as the "California Street Preacher"), giving an account of his great successes in the gospel in Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Natal, England, Ireland and the British West India colonies. He expressed doubts of his return to this country, and intimated his purpose to continue in the labors of an Evangelist in the colonies of Great Britain.

BASELY MURDERED.—Rev. B. F. Randolph, a member of the South Carolina Methodist Episcopal Conference, and a South Carolina State Senator, was murdered on the cars, October 14, at Abbeville Court House. He had made a speech the night before, and while standing on the platform before the cars started, three mounted men fired upon and mortally wounded him.

GEORGIA CONFERENCE.—This Conference was held October 15 and 17, at Atlanta, by Bishop Clark.

The total membership is 15,134, an increase during the year of 4524, or nearly forty-three per cent. The increase in the number of church edifices is over one hundred and forty-six per cent.

We have encouraging revival reports from several M. E. Churches in the St. Louis Conference. On the Lamar Circuit there have been twenty recent conversions. At Fort Smith Rev. R. W. Hammett has received during the last three months nearly one hundred and ninety probationers. At Fletcher's Point thirty conversions and twenty-four accessions to the Church are reported.

During the last three weeks twenty-five conversions have taken place in the M. E. Church at Croton, Rev. T. S. Lent, pastor. At Furnace Woods, another appointment on the circuit, the pastor on Sunday last baptized six persons and received fifteen into the Church. This news from the old Croton charge will be cheering to all who are acquainted with its history and condition for a few years past. We learn that the good people there have very thoughtfully conferred upon the pastor and his family very generous and practical remembrances of late.

Rev J. L. Nevius and wife, and Miss Mary Patrick, daughter of General Patrick, of Manlius, N. Y., have left this city for China, by way of California. They go under the care of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. Mr. and Mrs. Nevius have already spent ten years in that field. Miss Payson goes with them to join the mission of the American Board in China. On October 9, Rev. James W. Van Dyke and wife embarked for their mission field in Siam, via Pacific Mail Steamship line.

Rev. Emmor Elliott, Presiding Elder of the Griggsville District, Illinois Conference, and a member of the late General Conference, died at Barry, October 24. On the morning of October 16, while on his way to the District Stewards' meeting in Barry, his horse took fright, and after running some distance he was thrown from his buggy, receiving severe injuries in the face and head. He was taken up unconscious and carried to the pastor's residence in Barry. He remained in the same state until he breathed his last. While his friends surrounding his bedside tearfully sang "My latest sun is sinking fast," his spirit was called home.

Senate bill No. 157, reported by same committee with amendment.

The amendment was adopted, and the bill ordered to be placed on the calendar for a third reading.

REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEES.

The special committee to whom was referred House bill No. 30, submitted a majority report accompanied with a substitute for House bill No. 30.

The report was received.

Mr. Carr, of Orleans, moved that the further consideration of the report be postponed until Saturday next.

Carried.

Mr. Gartskamp, of Jefferson, moved that the report and substitute be made the special order of the day for Saturday at one o'clock.

Carried.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The following message was submitted to the House by the Secretary of the Senate:

On motion of Mr. Bacon, it was ordered that the Secretary of the Senate proceed to the House with engrossed bill of the Senate No. 23, entitled an act respecting imprisonment and fines, and ask whether the bill as altered in the copy with pencil passed that body thus altered, and with the words "not be competent" in the sixteenth line stricken out, as it now appears or as it passed the Senate, with those words "not be competent" in it, and the words "nor to" in the eighteenth line stricken out and the word "and" substituted in pencil; also whether the fourth section in pencil was in the bill as it passed that body, and to inform the House that the Senate proposed to have the bill re-enrolled as it was originally engrossed and passed without these pencil alterations and with the words "not be competent" restored, unless the House declared that such was not the purport of the bill as passed by them.

On motion of Mr. Carr, of Orleans, the Chief Clerk was called to make a statement relative to Senate bill No. 23.

The Chief Clerk stated that the bill passed the House without amendments, and was so forwarded to the Senate, and if any changes were made it was after the bill was delivered to the Secretary of the Senate.

On motion of Mr. Carr, of Orleans, the statement was ordered to be indorsed on the back of the bill and returned to the Senate.

SPECIAL ORDER OF THE DAY.

House bill No. 73, entitled an act to amend sections first and fifteenth of an act entitled an act relative to pilots, approved April 4, 1865, was taken up.

Section first was read.

Messrs. Isabelle and Hill called for the yeas and nays on the adoption of the first section.

There being no quorum voting, the Sergeant-at-Arms was dispatched for absent members.

After a lapse of ten minutes, Mr. Carr, of Orleans, moved a call of the House.

The roll was called and fifty-six members answered to their names.

There being a quorum present, the further consideration of the bill, on motion of Mr. Carr, of Orleans, was postponed subject to call.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The Secretary of the Senate was announced, informing the House that the Senate had concurred in House bills 168, 217, and in House bill No. 198, with amendments, and asking the concurrence of the House in Senate bill No. 101.

SENATE BILLS ON FIRST READING.

Senate bill No. 137, under a suspension of the rules, was placed on its first first and second readings.

Referred to the Committee on Railways and 150 copies ordered to be printed.

House bill No. 28, entitled an act to incorporate the town of Alexandria, returned from the Senate with amendments, was taken up.

The amendments were concurred in, notice ordered to be sent to the Senate and the bill sent to the Enrolling Committee.

House bill No. 84, entitled an act removing the seat of justice of the parish of Carroll from the town of Floyd and fixing it at the village of Elton, in said parish, on the Mississippi river, returned from the Senate with amendments, was taken up.

The amendments were concurred in, notice ordered to be sent to the Senate and the bill sent to the Enrolling Committee.

House bill No. 198, entitled an act authorizing the Police Jury of the parish of Jefferson to order the making of a sheil road, returned from the Senate with amendments, was taken up.

The amendments were adopted, notice ordered to be sent to the Senate, and the bill sent to the Enrollment Committee.

House bill No. 168, entitled an act to incorporate and establish the New Orleans News Association, returned from the Senate, was ordered to be enrolled.

House bill No. 217, joint resolution tendering the thanks of the General Assembly to Mr. Edward Gotthiel, returned from the Senate, was ordered to be enrolled.

The following Senate bill No. 101, under a suspension of the rules, possed its first and second readings.

Referred to the Committee on Corporations and one hundred and fifty copies ordered to be printed.

BILLS ON SECOND READING.

House bill No. 233, joint resolution relative to the increasing of the number of the Committee to Revise the Laws of the State of Louisiana, was placed on its second reading and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Morey, of Ouachita, called up the report of the special joint committee to investigate the legality of the issuing of $4,000,000 levee bonds and the disposition of the same.

The report was read.

Mr. Harper, of St. Charles, moved that the report be received and accepted, and that the committee be authorized and directed to proceed into further investigation.

Pending the discussion the House, on motion of Mr. Burrel, of St. John the Baptist, adjourned until to-morrow at twelve o'clock M.

WM. VIGERS,
Chief Clerk House of Representatives.

JOURNAL OF THE HOUSE.

Seventy-Sixth Day's Session.

THURSDAY, September 24, 1868.

The House met pursuant to adjournment, Speaker Lowell in the chair.

The roll being called, fifty-four members answered to their names:

Speaker Lowell, Abbot, Alexander, Antoine, Adolphe, Brewster, Burrel, Collins, Carr, Cuny, Deslonde, Dewees, Dufresne, DeGrange, Dupart, Evans, Esnard, Fouts, Guigonet, Gair, Garstkamp, Gray, Hill, Honore, Hutchinson, Holland, Heidenhain, Isabelle, Le Blanc, Leroy, Morris, McVean, Murrell, Mathews, Magee, Pearce, Pierce, Raymond, Reese, Rey, Slaton, Sterrett, Simms, Taylor, Tureaud, Umphreys, Walsh, Washington, Wren, Wm. Be it resolved, That the Committee on Elections and Qualifications be authorized to sit during the recess of the General Assembly, and be authorized to send for persons and papers.

Mr. Gray, of St. James, presented a petition of Mrs. Lelia M. Talbert, praying for relief.

Referred to the Committee on Claims.

Under a suspension of the rules, Mr. Heidenhain, of Orleans, gave the following notice:

I give notice that to-morrow I will introduce an act entitled an act to amend the second section of an act entitled an act transferring certain funds in the State treasury to the general fund, passed twenty-second July, 1868.

On motion of Mr. Wren, of Bossier, leave of absence for two days was granted to Mr. Curell, of Orleans.

On motion of Mr. DeGrange, of Orleans, leave of absence for five days was granted to Mr. Kent, of St. Helena.

REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Railways submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, Committee on Railways, New Orleans, La., September 24, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

Your Committee on Railways have the honor to return Senate bill known as No. 137 entitled an act to increase the capital and extend the powers of the Pontchartrain Railroad Company, and report favorably therein.

Respectfully,
J. B. ESNARD,
Chairman of Committee on Railways.
HENRY L. REY,
J. H. McVEAN,
FRANK MOREY,

Senate bill No. 137:

Ordered to be placed on the calendar for a third reading.

The Committee on Claims submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

COMMITTEE ROOMS, September, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Claims beg leave to report unfavorably on House bill No. 236, an act to appropriate three hundred and fifty dollars ($350) to pay John T. Michel fer publishing reconstruction laws, calling for the election of delegates to the State Constitutional Convention. The said debt having been contracted in pursuance of United States laws by a military commander, your committee are of the opinion that the claim is against the United States, and not against the State of Louisiana.

J. H. McVEAN,
Chairman Committee on Claims.

The report was agreed to.

The Committee on Judiciary submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

JUDICIARY COMMITTEE ROOMS, September 24, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—The Committee on Judiciary beg leave to make the following report:

Senate bill No. 180, favorably.

Senate bill No. 198, favorably.

House bill No. 116, favorably.

Recommending the adoption of the following amendment:

In section five, fifth line, strike out "one thousand" and insert the words "six hundred."

P. HARPER, Chairman.

House bills Nos. 180 and 198 were ordered to be placed on the calendar for a third reading.

The amendment to House bill No. 116 was adopted and the bill ordered to be engrossed.

The Committee on Library submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

ROOM OF COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC LIBRARY, House of Representatives, New Orleans, La., September 24, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

Your Committee on State Library, to whom was referred Senate bill No. 113, do report favorably thereon and recommend the passage by the House of said bill.

DENNIS BURREL,
Chairman;
A. J. DEMAREST,
MOSES STERRETT,
CANON J. ADOLPHE,
P. G. DESLONDE.

Senate bill No. 113, was ordered to be placed on the calendar for a third reading, under a suspension of the rules.

The Committee on Library introduced the following House bill No. 241, which underwent its first and second readings and was referred to the Committee of the Whole:

An act to purchase two hundred volumes first to fifteenth inclusive, of the annual reports of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the State of Louisiana.

The Committee on Ways and Means reported favorably on—

Senate bill No. 23.

Senate bill No. 118.

Senate bill No. 216.

Which were ordered to be placed on the calendar for a third reading.

The same committee reported, also, favorably on House bill No. 207, by the following substitute, which was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

An act relative to the collection of taxes.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That the taxes and licenses standing on the assessment rolls against delinquent taxpayers shall operate as and be equivalent to so many orders of seizure and sale in the hands of the Collector. The Tax Collector shall give ten days' notice to said delinquent taxpayers, that unless they come forward and pay their taxes he will proceed to seize and sell their property, real or personal, and in case said delinquent taxpayers are non-residents, absentees, or unknown, said notice shall be published in the official newspaper. If said delinquent taxpayers do not pay their taxes within the ten days notice the Tax Collector shall proceed to sell their property by giving ten days' notice for personal property, and thirty days' notice for real property, as in sheriff's sales. In sales and advertisements of real property the Tax Collector shall describe the property as accurately as practicable, giving at least the boundaries, and in case of town lots he shall give at least the names of the streets by which the square is bounded, and the name of the street on which the lot or lots front. The title shall be recorded by the Tax Collector before delivery to the purchaser, in the Conveyance or Recorder's office, and if the original owner does not apply within two years to the purchaser to redeem the same by paying him all his expenses, outlays and improvements, and one hundred per cent. damages on the taxes and costs, he shall be forever barred from redeeming the same, and the title given by the Tax Collector shall be held good and valid by all the courts of the State. All the costs shall be paid out of the purchase money, and should the property sold bring more than sufficient to satisfy the taxes, damages and costs, the Collector shall hand the overplus to the delinquent, if known; otherwise he shall pay the same into the State treasury. The Tax Collector shall be allowed to charge two dollars for each title.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That in case of refusal of any Tax Collector to sell any property so odered to be sold, or in case said property can not be sold in the parish where it is located, that the Auditor be and he is hereby empowered to sell such property at public auction in the city of New Orleans, after notice in the official journal for thirty days, for whatever it will bring, and the Auditor shall give title to all such property as in case of Tax Collectors' sales, herein made and provided for, and the proceeds shall be paid into the Treasury after deducting expenses: Provided, That where property seized is of a perishable nature the Tax Collector shall sell the same immediately.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That any Tax Collector refusing or failing to do his duty as prescribed by this act shall be liable to suspension from office by the Auditor, and on conviction before any court of competent jurisdiction, shall be dismissed from office. Any Sheriffs or other persons collecting or attempting to collect, any licenses or taxes in the name of the State of Louisiana, without having duly qualified and given bond in accordance with law, shall be subject to a fine of not less than $1000, nor more than $5000 and be imprisoned not less than two or more than five years at hard labor.

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted, etc., That Tax Collectors be and they are hereby required to collect all taxes on capital and stock in trade in advance, as in the case of collection of licenses.

SEC. 5. Be it further enacted, etc., That this act shall take effect from and after its passage, and shall be in force until January 1, 1869, and so much of this act as is not in conflict with the "act to provide a revenue for the support of the State government, and the manner of collecting the same," shall remain in force from and after that date.

The same committee reported favorably on House bill No. 239, which was ordered to be engrossed.

The same committee reported favorably on House bill No. 55, and No. 222, by substitute.

Referred to the Committee of the Whole.

The Committee on Penitentiary submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

ROOMS COMMITTEE ON STATE PENITENTIARY, House of Representatives, New Orleans, September 24, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

Your committee beg leave to return House bill No. 185, with a copy of the lease of the Penitentiary to Messrs. Jones and Huger, together with the printed copy of the Revised Rules and Regulations of the Board of Control, as instructed.

W. C. MELVIN,
Chairman;
JAMES S. MATHEWS,
E. LE BLANC,
SAM. E. CUNY,
G. H. HILL.

The bill was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE.

The select committee appointed to investigate the action of the State Tax Collectors submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Your committee appointed to investigate what become of the money turned over by the different State Tax Collectors into the State treasury, have the honor to report that we have thoroughly examined the report of the State Treasurer, which is hereto appended, and have examined the different State Tax Collectors as in regard to the correctness of the Treasurer's report, that same is correct. The report shows that different Tax Collectors paid into the treasury large amounts of warrants, which, under the present existing laws, they have a right to pay to the Treasurer: another reason that no more money was paid over is found in the fact that the Collectors of the First, Second and Fourth Districts paid to J. Pinckney Smith, Warrant Clerk, the amount of $27,000, for which amount they received warrants, which they paid into the treasury. J. Pinckney Smith used the money he received for the payment of the per diem of members, on the commencement of the session.

It is further evident that Mr. L. E. Lemarie, collector of the Second District, has cashed without discount a large amount of warrants for members of the General Assembly. The Collector of the Third District has done the same. In conclusion, your committee would respectfully recommend that section second of Act No. 6, which became a law on July 22, 1868, be so amended as to make warrants receivable for taxes from tax payers, and give the the right to collectors to pay warrants into the Treasury whenever they receive them for taxes.

Respectfully submitted,
J. HEIDENHAIN,
Chairman;
J. HANLON.

One hundred and fifty copies of the report and tabular statement of the Treasurer were ordered to be printed.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Under a suspension of the rules the following bills were introduced by Mr. Reese, of Lafourche:

House bill No. 246, an act to amend an act and re-enact the third section of an act entitled an act to fix the terms of the District Courts in the Third Judicial District.

First and second readings and referred to the Committee on Commerce and Manufactures.

By Mr. Brewster, of Ouachita:

House bill No. 247, an act for the relief of clerks employed by the State to finish the recording of the bebates of the Constitutional Convention of 1864.

First and second readings, and referred to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. McVean, of Caddo:

House bill No. 244, an act to make the warrants of the General Assembly of 1868 receivable for State lands.

First and second readings, and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The report on the $4,000,000 of levee bonds being under consideration.

The pending motion of Mr. Harper, of St. Charles, to receive and accept the report, and that the committee be authorized to proceed into further investigation being under consideration,

Mr. Gray, of St. James, offered the following amendment:

That the report be recommitted.

Mr. Harper, of St. Charles, moved to lay the amendment on the table.

Messrs. Tureaud and Rey called for the yeas and nays, resulting as follows:

Yeas: Antoine, Brewster, Collins, Cuny, Deslonde, Dufresne, Dupart, Evans, Harper, Hutchinson, Heidenhain, Isabelle, Le Blanc, Leroy, Lott, Morris, Murrel, Melvin, Morey, Pearce, Raymond, Reese, Taylor, Walsh, William C. Williams, H. Williams, Yorke—27.

Nays: Abbot, Alexander, Adolphe, Belot, Burrel, Carr, Crawford, DeGrage, Eager, Guigonet, Garstkamp, Gray, Hill, Hanlon, Honore, Holland, McVean, Morand, Magee, Noble, Pratt, Pierce, Rey, Slaton, Sterrett, Tureaud, Washington, Wilson, D. Young, Zoelly—30.

The amendment was adopted and the report recommitted.

SPECIAL ORDER OF THE DAY.

House bill No. 132, an act to incorporate the Farmers' and Savings Bank of New Orleans, being under consideration, the reading in detail was dispensed with, the bill was placed on its third reading, final passage, title adopted, and sent to the Senate for concurrence.

House bill No. 96 was taken up, and, on motion of Mr. Morey, of Ouechita, was postponed six weeks.

House bill No. 161 was taken up.

Mr. McVean, of Caddo, offered the following substitute:

An act to protect the health of New Orleans and other purposes.

Mr. McVean, of Caddo, moved to receive the substitute in lieu of House bill No. 161.

Mr. Wren moved to lay the motion on the table.

It being ascertained at this time that no quorum was present, Mr. Burrel, of St. John the Baptist, moved to adjourn.

Carried.

The House then adjourned until to-morrow at twelve o'clock M.

WM. VIGERS,
Chief Clerk House of Representatives.

Granted.

Under a suspension of the rules, Mr. Yorke, of Carroll, offered the following resolution, which was adopted:

WHEREAS, This House did, on the twenty-first September, adopt a resolution granting Theogene Castille, who contested the seat of Hon. Willis Prescott, as a member from the parish of St. Landry, per diem and mileage from the commencement of this session unto the day when Mr. Prescott was confirmed in his seat; and

Whereas, The said Theogene Castille abandoned the contest on the grounds of total inabilaty to prove a single allegation, and did not appear as a contestant; be it

Resolved, That this House do revoke the resolution referred to, and do recede from their action in the premises.

P. JONES YORKE,
Chairman of the Committee on Elections and Qualifications.

Under a suspension of the rules, Mr. Murrel, of Lafourche, offered the following resolution, which was, on motion of Mr. Carr, amended to read as follows:

Resolved, That the Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands and Levees be allowed to sit during the reecss of the General Assembly or during the adjournment of the same, and that he is hereby directed to prepare a report in detail, showing the condition and dispositon of the public lands of the State since the twenty-sixth day of January, 1861.

The amendment was accepted by the mover, and the resolution adopted.

Under a suspension of the rules, Mr. Isabelle, of Orleans, offered the following resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Claims:

Resolved, That W. B. Phillips, who has acted as Secretary to Committee on Parochial Affairs, and rendered efficient service to Chairman of Committee on Public Health and Quarantine, be paid his salary as Secretary from the fifteenth of August past.

REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Elections and Qualifications submitted the following reports, which were received and read:

MAJORITY REPORT.

ROOMS OF COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS AND Qualifications, House of Representatives, State of Louisiana, New Orleans, September 24, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned, composing a majority of your Committee on Elections and Qualifications, to whom was submitted the contested election case of the parish of East Baton Rouge, wherein V. M. Lange and Robert Lange contest the seats of B. E. Chaney and John S. Huguet, do report to your honorable body that they have carefully examined the evidence adduced, and have arrived at the following conclusions:

First—That B. E. Chaney received a majority of 758 votes over V. M. Lange; and John S. Huguet had an excess of 754 votes over Robert Lange, and sufficient evidence has not been presented to overcome these majorities.

Second—The charge of intimidation, violence and fraud are disproven by the rebutting testimony.

Third—The evidence presented shows that several colored voters testified that peace and order reigned on both days of election.

The committee overruled the exceptions of defendants to the trial of this cause, and all parties by mutual consent submitted the evidence as per printed report, and after more than twenty days had elapsed, the contestants demanded that the case be referred for the purpose of allowing them to reject certain rebutting testimony, which they had already accepted, which was properly refused them according to law.

Hence, the premises considered, we are of the opinion that Messrs. B. E. Chaney and John S. Huguet were fairly elected, and we recommend that they be confirmed in their seats as representatives of the parish of East Baton Rouge.

Respectfully submitted,
P. JONES YORKE,
Chairman;
AMOS KENT,
JAMES S. MATHEWS.

MINORITY REPORTS.

ROOM OF COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS AND QUALIFICATIONS, House of Representatives, New Orleans, September 24, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned, members of your Committee on Elections and Qualifications, to whom was committed the contested election case of the parish of East Baton Rouge, wherein Victor M. Lange and Robert Lange contest the seats of B. E. Chaney and John S. Huguet, beg leave to report to your honorable body that they differ with the majority report for the following reasons:

First—That the chairman of the committee would not allow Robert Lange, contestant, to appear to file exceptions to certain rebutting testimony.

Second—That witnesses who were charged with fraud were allowed to come forward and purge them elves by their own oaths of such charges, which is contrary to law.

Third—That the evidence of all colored men who testified in favor of Chaney and Huguet, and who made their mark, is inadmissable, by reason of said mark being unaccompanied by any attesting witnesses, and the law provides that two attesting witnesses shall sign in such instances in all contested election cases.

Fourth—That the certificate of General Sykes and Lieutenant McGee are inadmissable by reason of not being sworn to according to law.

Fifth—That the evidence shows clearly to our minds that immense frauds were perpetrated, and that Victor M. Lange and Robert Lange would have been elected had the election been conducted fairly and honestly.

And we feel justified for the foregoing reasons to recommend that the said Victor M. Lange and Robert Lange be allowed to take their seats in your honorable body as Representatives of the parish of East Baton Rouge.

Respectfully submitted,
HARRY LOTT,
F. C. ANTOINE.

ROOM OF COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS AND QUALIFICATIONS, House of Representatives, State of Louisiana, New Orleans, September 24, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned, a member of your Committee on Elections and Qualifiations, feels it incumbent upon him to dissent from the two reports made to your honorable body in regard to the contested election case of V. M. Lange and Robert Lange versus B. E. Chaney and John S. Huguet, of the parish of East Baton Rouge.

I am satisfied from the evidence presented that frauds and intimidation were practiced in all the wards of said parish.

I do not believe, consequently, that there has been a fair election, and am of opinion that neither contestants or defendants are entitled to seats in the General Assembly, and respectfully recommend that your honorable body do order a new election for two Representatives in the aforesaid parish of East Baton Rouge.

Respectfully submitted,
DENNIS BURREL.

On motion of Mr. Yorke, of Carroll, the further consideration of the above reports was postponed until Wednesday next, the the thirtieth, and made the special order of the day.

The Committee on Claims submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

COMMITTEE ROOMS, New Orleans, September 26, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Claims beg leave to report on the petition of Martha Waters, asking relief on account of her suffering condition, caused by the outrageous, brutal action of rioters, July 30, 1866, as follows:

That they are satisfied that the said Martha Waters was robbed of $495 in money and effects and suffered personal brutal treatment while in the hands of the rioters. Her dwelling being adjoining the Mechanics' Institute, was entered and everything of value taken or destroyed, and herself dragged to prison with a young child in her arms. Your committee, therefore, recommend that the sum of two hundred dollars be paid to her by the passage of the following act.

J. H. McVEAN,
Chairman on Claims;
P. JONES YORKE,
W. POPE NOBLE,
S. E. CUNY.

House bill No. 248, an act for the relief of Martha Waters.

The bill was placed on its first reading, and on motion of Mr. Garstkamp, of Jefferson, further consideration was postponed until Monday next, in order to allow him to submit a minority report.

The Committee on Judiciary submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

JUDICIARY COMMITTEE ROOM, September 25, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Judiciary beg leave to make the following report, viz:

Unfavorably upon House bill No. 233; favorably on House bill No. 232; unfavorably on Senate bill No. 96, and favorably on Senate bill No. 67, with the following amendment, viz: Strike out the third paragraph in the first section.

P. HARPER, Chairman.

The unfavorable reports made by the Committee on Judiciary on House bill No. 233, joint resolution relative to the increasing of the members of the Committee to Revise the Laws of the State of Louisiana, and on Senate bill No. 96, an act to create an additional court for the parish of Orleans, were agreed to.

Same committee on House bill No. 232, an act to allow Charles A. W. Milchsack to change his name to Charles A. W. Milthack, reported favorably by the Committee on Judiciary, was ordered to be engrossed.

Same committee reported favorably on Senate bill No. 67, with an amendment as mentioned in the report.

The amendment was adopted, and the bill ordered to be placed on the calendar for a third reading.

The Committee on Internal Improvements submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Internal Improvements, to whom was referred back House bill No. 22, relating to the opening of Bayou Plaquemines, most respectfully beg leave to report that they fully indorse and concur with the report of the special committee to whom was referred the petition of the Police Jury of the parish of Iberville in relation to the same matter, and submit the annexed bill as a substitute for the above mentioned bill and recommend its passage.

A. J. DEMAREST,
Chairman;
M. RAYMOND,
W. C. MELVIN,
DAVID YOUNG,
W. C. WILLIAMS,
T. B. SIMMS.

An act to remove the dam now closing the mouth of Bayou Plaquemines.

Under a suspension of the rules the bill was placed on its first and second readings, considered engrossed, and further consideration postponed until two o'clock P. M.

The same committee submitted the following report, which was received and accepted.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Internal Improvements, to whom was referred Senate bill No. 134, entitled an act to incorporate the New Orleans and Ship Island Canal Company, report favorably, and recommend the House to concur with the Senate by passing this bill. The advantages to be derived by the State of Louisiana, and more especially by the city of New Orleans, by the construction of this canal, are so apparent, that it would be useless for this committee to enumerate them.

A. J. DEMAREST,
Chairman;
W. C. MELVIN,
M. RAYMOND,
DAVID YOUNG,
W. C. WILLIAMS,
T. B. SIMMS.

O. H. HEMPSTEAD, Secretary.

The bill was ordered to be placed on the calendar for a third reading.

The Committee on Enrollment submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

ROOMS ENROLLING COMMITTEE,
House of Representatives,
New Orleans, September 25, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

Your Committee on Enrollment have the honor to report that the following bills have been duly engrossed, to wit:

House bill No. 240, joint resolution creating a joint committee of the Senate and House to investigate about the tumult that occurred on the night of the twenty-second of September.

House bill No. 239, an act for the relief of certain bondholders, authorizing the issue of new bonds, providing for their payment and declaring invalid certain treasury notes issued in aid of the rebellion.

House bill No. 243, an act for the protection of planters and shippers of cotton to the port of New Orleans, Louisiana.

And also duly enrolled:

House bill No. 217, joint resolution tendering the thanks of the General Assembly to Mr. E. Gotthiel for the able manner in which he represented the State of Louisiana at the late Paris Universal Exposition.

House bill No. 168, an act to incorporate and establish the New Orleans News Association.

House bill No. 198, an act authorizing the Police Jury of the parish of Jefferson to order the making of a shell road or Nicolson pavement.

House bill No. [illegible], an act removing the seat of justice of the parish of Carroll from the town of Floyd, and fixing it at the village of Elton in said parish, on the Mississippi river.

Respectfully, etc

O. H. BREWSTER,
Chairman Enrolling Committee.

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
State of Louisiana,
New Orleans, September 26, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker of the House of Representatives:

I am instructed by his Excellency, the Governor, to inform the House of Representatives that he has approved and signed:

An act entitled an act for the relief of Widow Hettie Sinclair, of Ouachita parish.

An act to authorize the closing of Benoit's Bayou, in the parish of Bossier.

An act to amend and extend an act entitled an act to provide for supplying the loss of the public records and other papers consumed by the burning of the courthouse in the parish of Rapides, during the month of May, 1864, and to ratify the appointment by Governor Wells of a Commissioner for that purpose; and

An act for the relief of Augustus Bo[illegible], a patient in the Insane Asylum at Jackson, Louisiana; and

An act for the relief of the office of Attorney General of the State of Louisiana.

F. C. REMICK,
Private Secretary.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
State of Louisiana,
New Orleans, September 25, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

I return to the House of Representatives an act to protect all persons in their public and civil rights, without my signature, for the following reasons, to wit:

The rights and privileges enumerated in the first section of this bill, and sought to be enforced thereby, are fully and explicitly recognized and established in the Constitution of the State. Even a foreigner, not a citizen, has the same right to travel and be entertained as a citizen, and there is nothing in our jurisprudence which makes distinctions on account of race or color, except in so far as relates to slavery. The organic law of the land gives to "all persons" perfect equality of civil and political rights, including the privilege of enforcing these rights in the courts and employing all the legal remedies which have heretofore been found requisite to secure their rights to all persons; the means, however, proposed in the fourth section of the bill for enforcing these rights are, in my judgment, not merely novel and unprecedented, but impracticable and pernicious. It seeks to make that a crime which has never to my knowledge been so considered in those communities where the highest regard is paid to the personal rights of all men.

There is, and always ought to be, a broad line of demarcation fixed between a crime and the breach of obligations growing out of civil contracts, and we demoralize the public conscience and confuse its conceptions of right and wrong when we seek to obliterate so evident a distinction. Our statute book is filled already with criminal laws that are never enforced, and never will be, until public opinion rises to their respective levels. The history of the world is full of examples of this sort, when acts not in themselves criminal have been vainly declared so, and in this way a levity of feeling in regard to real crimes produced, we relapse into the legislation of a less enlightened period, when we try to convert an act which is properly a question of civil damages into an offense against the peace and dignity of the State. And it ought to be carefully borne in mind that we can not hope by legislation to control questions of personal association; much less can we hope to force on those who differ from us our views of what is humane, or courteous, or Christian-like. Mutual forbearance and kindness, and the noble belief in the brotherhood of man, must spring from a higher source than the fear of punishment. They can never be forced to grow by pains and penalties.

Again, so far as railroads and steamboats are concerned, it must be borne in mind that the regulation of commerce between the several States was wisely confided, under the Constitution of the United States, to the national Congress. The object of this grant of power was clearly to prevent the confusion which would arise from conflicting legislation on such subjects by the different contiguous States; and the wisdom of the provision appears more clearly every day as the means of transportation are increased and improved. By the second and third sections of this act, no distinction is clearly made between railroads and steamboats whose routes are wholly within this State, and those whose routes are beyond. Of course, criminal jurisprudence can not go beyond our State lines, and in this respect the act seems impolitic and liable to produce unnecessary confusion and litigation. For experimental legislation of this kind, for which the sanction of no successful precedent can be adduced, a more unfavorable occasion than the present could hardly be imagined. In the midst of a most exciting political campaign, at a time when the passions, animosities and resentments consequent upon a great war, and attendant upon great and sudden changes in affairs, are roused to the highest pitch of intensity, and when the prejudices regarding race are inflamed to the utmost, it is here proposed to enforce by penal remedies what is practically class legislation, and to maintain and confirm class distinctions. The effect, in my judgment, of such an act, would be to defeat rather than to promote the ends apparently had in view by the author of the bill. The barriers of race, instead of being thereby removed, would be increased in height and breadth, in firmness and strength. So long as these barriers are maintained, so long will be deferred the era of peace, order and prosperity in the State, to which mutual harmony and good will are essential, and so long will the rights of the lately enfranchised linger in the condition of doubt and insecurity. The prejudices upon which these barriers are founded have no foundation in reason or nature and will surely give way to the softening influences of time, unless they are constantly fretted into activity. In the meantime any person, colored as well as white, is equally secured by the Constitution in the enjoyment of political and civil rights, and in his remedy for their infringement. The courts are open to all alike; the same rule obtains in National and State Courts. The Judges of the State Courts and their officers are amenable to and dependent upon all citizens alike. Colored and white alike constitute juries. Those of the lately enfranchised who are wise and reflecting will not ask for more. They will rather deprecate a kind of legislation, which, instead of advancing their present condition, only renders the enemies of their race more bitter and determined in their hostility, and furnishes them weapons whereby to assail the rights which the colored men have already acquired. In returning the bill without my signature, it is hardly necessary for me to say that I am prepared, so far as lies in my province and power, to enforce the new Constitution as it exists; such is my desire, as well as my duty. But when I find the act in question to be, in my best judgment, unnecessary and unwise, and for the reasons I have stated, calculated to demoralize the public conscience and intensify distinctions which will surely yield to the power of time and the growth of more catholic views of our personal relations, it becomes no less clearly my duty to decline to sign it.

H. C. WARMOTH,
Governor of Louisiana.

After considerable discussion upon the Governor's veto, the further consideration of the same was, on motion of Mr. Isabelle, of Orleans, postponed until Monday next, the twenty-eighth, until one o'clock P. M.

On motion of Mr. Crawford, of Franklin, 500 copies of the veto message and bill No. 11 included were ordered to be printed.

On motion of Mr. Dewees, of Bienville, the House adjourned until Monday next, at twelve o'clock M.

WILLIAM VIGERS,

JOURNAL OF THE SENATE.

Seventy-Seventh Day's Session.

SATURDAY, September 26, 1868.

The Senate was called to order by the President at twelve o'clock M.

The roll was called; the following members present:

Anderson, Bacon, Beares, Blackman, Braughn, Campbell, Coupland, Darrall, Day, Foute, Futch, Jenks, Jewell, Kelso, Lewis, Lynch, Monette, Offutt, Ogden, Pinchback, Pollard, Randall, Ray, Todd, Whitney, Wilcox, Wittgenstein—27.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Mr. Turner.

On motion of Mr. Ray the reading of the minutes was dispensed with.

In accordance with the resolution adopted yesterday, the report of the Joint Committee on Finance and City Delegation, favorably with amendments upon House bill No. 154, an act to authorize the Mayor and Common Council of the city of New Orleans to issue bonds for the redemption of city notes, and for the liquidation of other indebtedness.

The bill was taken up section by section.

Section first was read and adopted as amended by the committee.

The second and third sections were read and adopted.

Sections fourth, fifth and sixth were read and adopted as amended by the committee.

Section seven was read.

Mr. Coupland: I offer the following as a substitute for section seven and move its adoption:

SEC. 7. Be it further enacted, etc., That the city notes of New Orleans now in circulation shall be received in exchange for the bonds issued in conformity to the first section of this act, or in payment of the taxes or other dues of the city of New Orleans until the first day of January, 1869, and that from and after the said first day of January, 1869, the said notes shall be prescribed.

Adopted.

Mr. Foute: I offer the following as section eight, and move its adoption:

SEC. 8. Be it further enacted, etc., That all plates, designs or engravings upon which the currency known as City Notes of New Orleans have been printed or engraved, shall, immediately after the passage of this act, be destroyed by the Treasurer of the city of New Orleans in the presence of the Mayor and Controller of the city of New Orleans, and the Chairmen of Finance of the two Boards of the Common Council of the city.

And further, if within ten days after the passage of this act the Treasurer shall fail to completely destroy the plates aforesaid of any and all denominations whatsoever upon or from which city notes of New Orleans have been struck or printed, he shall be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by being dismissed his office and imprisoned for a period not exceeding two years, within the discretion of the court.

Adopted.

Mr. Foute: I offer the following as section nine and move its adoption:

SEC. 9. Be it further enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of the Treasurer of the city, in the presence of the officers named in the preceding section of this act, at the expiration of every month after the passage of this act, to destroy, or cause to be destroyed, all notes and issues known as city notes of New Orleans, that may have been received theretofore in the city treasury, failing in which he shall be subject to the same penalty set forth in section eight of this act.

Adopted.

Mr. Foute: I offer the following as section ten and move its adoption:

SEC. 10. Be it further enacted, etc., That from and after the passage of this act it shall not be lawful for the Mayor of the city of New Orleans, the Common Council of the city of New Orleans, or either or any of them, to issue or cause to be issued any city notes or certificates of indebtedness other than the bonds hereinbefore provided for.

Sections eleven and twelve were then read and adopted.

Mr. Bacon: I move to amend the title by adding the following words: Providing a prescription for the redemption of city notes and for their cancellation when received; and prohibiting their further issue; providing for the destruction of the plates upon which they have been printed, and for other purposes.

Adopted.

Mr. Lynch: I move that the bill be adopted as a whole.

Adopted.

The bill was then considered engrossed.

On a suspension of the rules it underwent its third reading, and was finally adopted, and the title adopted as stated.

A communication from the Governor was received, informing the Senate that he had approved of and signed an act for the relief of Wm. Pearson, of Union parish.

Joint resolution relative to a joint committee consisting of the Committees of each House on Charitable Institutions to visit certain charitable institutions in the State.

An act to amend an act entitled an act to incorporate the town of New Iberia, in the parish of St. Martin.

Mr. Ray: I ask for a suspension of the rules to call up a bill.

Rules suspended.

House bill No. 231, an act to repeal an act entitled an act authorizing the issue of $200,000 warrants by the Auditor on the Treasurer of the State to provide by the sale thereof funds to meet the current expenses of the General Assembly, was read.

Mr. Ray: I ask for a suspension of the rules to put the bill on its second reading.

Adopted.

The bill was considered engrossed.

Under a suspension of the rules the bill was read a third time and finally adopted with its title.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Mr. Ray, from the Internal Improvement Committee, reported favorably upon House bill No. 40, an act relating to removing obstructions and wrecks from the Boguefalaya river, parish of St. Tammany.

And from the Judiciary Committee:

Substitute for Senate bill No. 232, an act to amend and re-enact an act providing against usurpation, intrusion into or the unlawful holding or exercising a public office or franchise in this State, approved September 8, 1868.

And unfavorably upon Senate bill No. 243, an act appointing the sheriffs of each parish in this State auctioneers in certain cases.

Mr. Lynch, from the Finance Committee, reported unfavorably upon House bill No. 45, an act relating to State and Parish Tax Collectors.

And upon House bill No. 224, joint resolution appropriating the sum of $300 to the widow of Michael Butler, police officer of the city of New Orleans, who was murdered while in the discharge of his duty.

Also substitute for Senate bills Nos. 239 and 242, an act to authorize State Tax Collectors to receive State warrants in payment of certain taxes.

Mr. Lynch: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up the substitute for Senate bills Nos. 239 and 242.

Rules suspended, and the bill read twice under a suspension of the rules.

The bill was taken up section by section.

Sections one and two were read and adopted.

Mr. Ray: I offer the following additional section as section three, and move its adoption:

Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the Auditor to issue warrants for debts due by the State, in sums of not less than fifty dollars, except when the claim is less than fifty dollars, or in sums above fifty dollars, as may be demanded by the holder of the claim.

Adopted.

Section four was read and adopted.

The bill was considered engrossed.

By unanimous consent, the words, "or moneys," in the second section, were stricken out.

Under suspension of the rules the bill was read a third time and finally adopted with its title.

Mr. Darrall, from the Committee on Enrollment, reported as duly enrolled Senate bills Nos. 44, 105, 146, 159, 166 and 194, and Senate joint resolution No. 14; and as duly engrossed Senate bill No. 244.

Mr. Ray: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a bill.

C. H. MERRITT,
Secretary of the Senate.

JOURNAL OF THE SENATE.

Seventy-Ninth Day's Session.

TUESDAY, September 29, 1868.

The Senate was called to order by the President at twelve o'clock M.

The roll was called; the following members present:

Anderson, Antoine, Beares, Blackman, Braughn, Coupland, Day, Futch, Jenks, Jewell, Lynch, Offutt, Ogden, O'Hara, Packard, Pinchback, Poindexter, Pollard, Randall, Ray, Thompson, Todd, Wilcox, Wittgenstein—25.

Prayer by Rev. Mr. Jackson.

On motion of Mr. Ray, the reading of the minutes was dispensed with.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Mr. Ray, from the Judiciary Committee, and Mr. Lynch, from Finance Committee, reported progress.

Mr. Wittgenstein, from the Committee on Enrollment, reported as duly enrolled Senate bill No. 187, and as duly engrossed House bill No. 154 and Senate bill 250.

Mr. Braughn, from the special committee to inquire into the instructions of the Board of Registration to the Supervisors and other actions of the Board, reported as follows:

To the Honorable the Senate of Louisiana:

The special committee, appointed in conformity to the annexed resolution, begs leave to report that it has discharged its duty, and begs leave to submit the following report, viz:

After an examination of various Supervisors, from the first, second, sixth and the tenth wards, your committee is forced to the conclusion that the Board of Registrars, of which William Baker is Chairman, has given instructions to the various Boards of Supervisors throughout the State, that are unwarranted in theory and entirely beyond the law of registration. The Board of Registration argues that the only persons who can take the oath, known by the printed instructions as Form No. 3, are those who favored and voted for a convention to revise the Constitution of the State, at the election held on September 27 and 28, 1867, and that those who did not favor said Convention and that those who did favor said Constitution can not avail themselves of said affidavit. (See page 4.)

The Board of Registration has further instructed the Board of Supervisors to reject all citizens who have been naturalized by the Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth and Seventh District Courts, in the parish of Orleans, since the fourth of July, 1867, contending that these courts, while in vacation, had no legal right to naturalize citizens. (See page [illegible].)

This is clearly wrong. The certificates issued by courts of competent jurisdiction, acting under and in obedience to a law of Congress, have all the force and power of judgments, and must be so regarded and respected by all persons.

The Board of Registration has furthermore instructed the various Boards of Supervisors that all persons "who held office, civil or military, for one year or more, under the Confederate States, all who registered themselves as enemies of the United States, leaders of guerilla bands, those who wrote or published treason in newspapers, and those who voted for and signed an ordinance of secession in any State can not be registered except they produce the certificate of the Secretary of State, showing that they have filed their recantation, and that it has been published in the official journal." (Vide page 6.) These instructions deprive persons of the benefit of the proviso in article ninety-nine of the Constitution, which deprivation is not only unjust but clearly against the Constitution.

Your Committee is clearly of the opinion that a person who is ready and willing to take one of the three affidavits should be registered; the responsibility of the act being entirely with the applicant. If any evidence is demanded by the Supervisors the same should be taken contradictorily with the applicant.

Your Committee is further of the opinion that the supplemental act permitting the Board of Registration to form regulations is entirely superfluous, and calculated to breed public dissatisfaction and trouble. The law is plain and sufficiently comprehensive, and if carried out, will accomplish everything required.

Your Committee accompanies this its report with a printed copy of the instructions issued by the Board of Registration, a minute of the proceedings had, and the evidence adduced, all of which is annexed for your referrence.

With a view of settling in a definite form the difference in the construction of the law of registration, your committee submits an act to repeal section one of an act entitled an act to define more fully the powers and duties of the Board of Registration and Supervisors thereof, for the registration of the qualified voters of the State.

All of which is respectfully submitted by the committee.

G. H. BRAUGHN,
Chairman;
JOHN RAY,
GEORGE Y. KELSO.

Mr. Thompson: I ask for a suspension of rules to introduce a bill.

Rules suspended.

An act to quiet the title to public lands sold during the war.

Read twice under a suspension of the rules and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Braughn: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up the report of the Committee to investigate the action of the Board of Registration.

Rules suspended and the report read.

Mr. Braughn: I move the adoption of the report.

Adopted.

Mr. Braughn: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up "an act to repeal section one of an act entitled an act to define more fully the powers and duties of the Board of Registration and Supervisors thereof, for the registration of the qualified voters thereof," approved September 19, 1868, introduced as a part of the report of the committee.

Rules suspended and the bill read second time.

Mr. Campbell: I move that the bill be made the special order of the day on Wednesday.

Adopted.

Mr. Campbell, from the Committee on Corporations, reported favorably upon House bill No. 188, an act to incorporate the Bayou Rapides Navigation Company.

MOTIONS.

Mr. Pinchback: I move to reconsider the vote on the adoption, yesterday, of the resolution allowing per diem from the commencement of the session to Senator C. C. Antoine.

The vote was reconsidered.

Mr. Pinchback: I move to amend by inserting " and mileage " after " per diem " in the body of the resolution.

Adopted.

Mr. Pinchback: I move the adoption of the resolution as amended.

Adopted.

RESOLUTIONS.

Mr. Futch: I move the adoption of the following resolution:

Be it resolved, That the Senate Committee on Public Buildings be authorized to visit, during the recess of the Legislature, the public buildings and to report upon the reassembling of the Legislature.

Mr. Pinchback: I move to lay the resolution on the table and call for the yeas and nays:

The yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Antoine, Braughn, Coupland, Darrall, Day, Kelso, Lewis, Lynch, O'Hara, Packard, Pinchback, Randall, Ray, Thompson, Whitney—15.

Nays: Bacon, Beares, Blackman, Francois, Futch, Jenks, Ogden, Poindexter, Pollard, Todd, Wilcox, Wittgenstein—12.

The resolution was laid on the table.

Mr. Day: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a bill.

Rules suspended.

An act for the relief of the succession of O. C. Breckinridge, S. H. B. Schoonmaker, and others.

Read twice under a suspension of the rules and referred to the Committee on Claims.

Mr. Lynch: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up Senate bill No. 235, an act making appropriations for the general expenses of the State for the unexpired term of the year ending the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight.

Rules suspended, and bill read.

Mr. Lynch: I move that the bill be made the special order of the day on Wednesday, after action on the supplementary act relative to registration.

Mr. Whitney: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up a bill.

Rules suspended.

House bill No. 176, an act to fix and determine the salaries of the Board of Police Commissioners of the city of New Orleans, establishing a Board of Police Commissioners for the city of New Orleans, approved

Personal Responsibility.

Among the incidents connected with the New York Water street movement, one was peculiarly suggestive. An abandoned habitué of the place was encountered in a distant part of the city, and being asked why she had left Water street, replied: "Because too many good people came there."

Does not this teach Christians a lesson of duty to the suffering and vicious? This person supposed to be so shameless, shrank from the reproof conveyed by the mere presence of personal purity; and thus demonstrated the logical correctness of our Lord's declarations, "Ye are the light of the world" and "the salt of the earth."

Not simply the church in its organized character, Christians in the aggregate, in which case certainly the words are applicable; but first and more directly, that in morals every true Christian life produces for society, effects analagous to those produced in nature by light.

Moral darkness, sensual impurity, dishonesty, hypocrisy, all these are in some sort rebuked, and their victims are conscious of shame in the presence of honesty and purity; thus arguing that no Christian or light-bearer should be faithless to the great duty resting upon him or her to shine their best, though it be but a taper's gleam or a star's glimmer, in a world which has no other means provided for dissipating its moral gloom. The most fitting and favorable place for the aggressive work upon which depends the church's life and the spread of religion, is not within the walls of her sanctuaries. Here are more particularly her conservative forces; her strongholds for defensive operations. Here are gathered for counsel and comfort her trained veterans, and here are those drilled and fitted for labor, who have from time to time been saved out of the world.

In any age when God's people lose sight of this truth, they invite decay and insure defeat. They receive and deserve the contempt of those who no longer have reason to fear their power for good. Then they receive and blindly rejoice in the eulogies of their own and God's enemies. Such churches, especially if their pulpits are silent on moral questions, and have no rebukes for social or political evils, will have favorable notices from venal presses, and will rent pews at high rates, to men whose gains are the price of blood and precious souls.

In our view every Christian is a missionary, and holds the Master's great commission, "Go ye out into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature." And in the words of Wesley, "Go not only to those who need, but to such as need you most," remembering that in most cases, very near home there is urgent necessity for work, and often the best opportunity for doing good.

Does any one suppose that daily murders, gambling, drunkenness and licentiousness would prevail in this city, as the records indicate is the case, if the minority of pure Christian people here, were true to duty and let their light shine? There is a mighty power in a little good leaven.

The Christian, be he high or low in church or society, who tampers with the pure morality of the Gospel, who timidly or corruptly lowers its standard, and sinks its claims in deference to business or friendship, prejudice or politics, even of life, provokes the woe pronounced by Christ upon "him by whom the offense cometh."

A personal responsibility must be felt by every professor of religion for the welfare of society, because no other member of the community has sufficient inducement to do the work to which he is called; and no others can so safely trust themselves in contact with the infected and pernicious elements around.

Men in general have nothing in view but the enjoyment of this life, the acquisition of wealth, the advancement of worldly interest; however honest or learned they may be, they feel no vocation for unselfish efforts to check vice and purify society; to save the State and perpetuate freedom. With them all phases of socity are alike and any government good, if their present advantage or inclination is secured. The history of our race demonstrates that even patriotism yields and human sympathy fails when the strain upon them is too severe or long continued.

The man who sees far into futurity, who knows of another life, believes implicitly in the final judgment and awards according to the deeds done in the body, accepting the teachings of Jesus about Heaven and hell; he only has a motive sufficiently powerful to make sacrifices of ease, fame, life, in the effort to dispel the moral darkness and make war against the evils of society.

If the Christian fails in any degree to act up to this responsibility, in the same measure he manifests his unbelief in the doctrines of Christ, and weakens the power of Christianity in the world.

No others have the power of escaping the contagion of sin, whose infection spreads so rapidly and destroys so surely. The only certain disinfectant is a vivid Christian faith; a life of prayer and companionship with the pure and spotless Jesus; possessed of this, one may penetrate the darkest region and come in contact with the vilest creatures.

While thus engaged Christ will feed your lamp with holy oil; he will clothe and protect you with the sanctity of his presence; then "one can chase a thousand and two put ten thousand to flight."

No battle-scarred veteran of a hundred well fought fields, ever felt so calmly fearless amid iron or leaden hail, as an assured Christian in the path of duty; because "there is no fear in love, for perfect love casteth out fear."

And no skilled physician ever walked amid the festering victims of the plague so safe from disease, as the humble disciple of Jesus, about his labors of love among the polluted and infatuated votaries of sin. No long range artillery will answer in this work; your presence, your eye, your tongue is wanted; as the physician seeks the bedside of his patient, so you must go forth to seek and save the lost. There are "Water streets" and abandoned ones in all places of human abode; lost men, women and children, as well in silks and broadcloths as in rags and homespun. There is vice to be shamed by outspoken virtue, and heart broken sinners to be found among all classes.

One link in the chain of your testimony for Christ is missing, unless "to the poor the Gospel is preached," and their religion may well be doubted, who follow not after Him who "went about doing good."

The Knights of the White Camelia.

There is an organization under this name existing in Louisiana. It is a secret armed society. Its central organization has its headquarters in New Orleans It extends into every parish. It is connected with similar organizations throughout the eleven ex-rebel States. It is, in fact, a recrystalization of all the dissatisfied, unsubdued elements of the old rebellion. It is commanded by a secret conclave, called the Grand Council, whose numbers are kept a profound secret from all below them. Their word is law to the whole body in the State, and to them come in stated reports from all the branches. The subordinate bodies are called councils. Of these there are over twelve in New Orleans. They estimate their own force in this parish at about 20,000 armed brothers. The councils are provided with armories, and muskets and bayonets. Over the whole force is placed a military officer with the title of Grand Commander The present Grand Commander is a celebrated ex-Confederate General. The members are bound together by the most horrid oaths to obey every order of their superiors, and to keep inviolably secret everything pertaining to the society. The penalty of disobedience is death.

The sworn object of the society is to resist by every means, including violence, negro suffrage, negro eligibility to office, or the participation of negroes in the government in any shape; and also to overthrow the present State governments. One of their peculiar institutions is the custom of electing any obnoxious person to disappear. This they do by electing certain brothers to cause the disappearance. The brothers elected for such duty, must perform it, under the penalty of being branded as cowards, and of being perpetually ostracised and disgraced.

Of this beautiful Christian association we have the ritual, signs, records and the rolls of their members. Their publication we reserve for the proper moment. The foregoing is perhaps as plain and succinct an account of the character and purposes of this organization, as could be given by any one of its members. Nor must it be thought that it is composed of the roughs, and thugs, and loafers of the State.

In this city, in the furor of excitement which attended its first organization, and especially under the heavy social and business pressure, brought to bear during the Seymour and Blair canvass upon all parties whose business depended upon public favor, a large majority of the merchants, grocers and clerks of the city were swept into the organization. It was the same pressure which swept many into secession who would have preferred to stay out.

This portion of the membership as they begin to perceive that what they are engaged in is a conspiracy, and that that they are incurring personal liability for any crimes which may be committed at the instigation of the society and especially since the election of Grant, has dashed to the ground all hopes of aid or countenance from the North, are growing restive, and begin to think of withdrawing, cutting off the supplies, and devoting themselves to business.

To these gentlemen we say, this is the only wise part to act.

Your association killed Colonel Pope. It is threatened on the streets daily that it will kill this one and that one. The stain of all the crimes will attach to each one of you individually. When the lists of membership are published, as they assuredly will be, do you think that men whose names are on that list can do much business at the North or with Northern men. Will "Bradstreet" or "Dunn" quote your firm any higher when informed that you or your clerks are active members of a secret political armed society, for the destruction of government and the assassination of individuals? Think of this!

General Longstreet.

We know of no man in the South, who so much resembles in simplicity and straightforwardness of character, fair-mindedness and justice, truthfulness and hatred of all shams and humbugs, General Grant himself, as this distinguished Confederate soldier. The moral courage which enabled him to boldly and manfully express his sentiments, in opposition to the cant, hypocricy and mingled whine and fury which characterized the Southern press shortly after the surrender, was sublime.

The storm of execration which greeted this hero of a hundred battles, from bomb-proof editors, ex-quartermasters and ex-home guard officers, was only another illustration of the tendency of the unreconstructed rebel masses to set blood hounds after all who differ from them in sentiment. The time has now come for a recognition of General Longstreet's patriotism and courage. No man is more fitted to be the leader of that large class of Southern whites who have hitherto secretly detested the Democratic reign of terror, but have not had the courage to brave the social and business ostracism which would follow their revolt from the Democratic party Let these gentlemen now follow the noble lead of General Longstreet. The Republican party of this State will be proud to see some distinguished recognition of General Longstreet's worth and ability, by the incoming administration. This will gratify us not only as a just tribute to the patriotism and moral courage which General Longstreet has evinced during the last three critical years, but as a right hand of fellowship stretched out to that class of men; of whom he is a representative man. It will show beyond cavil then, what has all along been true, that the war which the Republican party has waged, has not been against the Southern man, or even the Southern ex-rebel—but against the persistent, unrepentant Southern rebel, still continuing to fight the results of the war. It will also make some of the newly fledged rebels of the South, who fought far less than General Longstreet during the war, and far harder than he did after it was over, ashamed if such a thing were possible. Let the chivalrous ex-Confederates and the true blue ex-Federals and the newly enfranchised freedmen of the South join hands with the German and Irish, and form the gallant progressive Republican party of the South. The old Know-Nothing, the thug and the bomb-proofs will make up the Democratic party. We will have a fair free fight at the next election, and we will whip them two to one.

There Was no Election.

We see that the North has from a perusal of the daily news from Louisiana, without any other advisement, already arrived at a correct conclusion as to the character of the pretended election in this State on November 3. They believe that a fair election was prevented by terrorism and intimidation. This is strictly true. Therefore there was no election. We hope that proper steps will be taken before the canvassers of the electoral vote, to prevent any returns being counted from any parish in which murder and riot was allowed during the period of registration. We hope also that the facts may be presented to Congress in such a shape that every Democratic Congressman from this State may be thrown out.

There was no election. Two-thirds of our vote was prevented from being registered by murders, riots, assassinations, the sacking of club houses and colored churches, and the most violent threats. This sort of work continued up to within two or three days of the election, when suddenly alarmed at the blunder they had committed, the leaders passed the word to have no more violence. Suddenly a calm like that of a summers' day, fell upon New Orleans. Her thugs became lambs. And on the strength of this calm, after all the mischief had been done, the Democrats have the impudence to claim that everything was done fair and peaceably.

The only thing this action on their part does prove, is a very significant point against themselves. It is this, it shows that it lay in their power at any moment to quell the bloody disturbances of the three or four weeks preceding the election. That they could and did not, shows that they are the responsible originators and criminals of those mobs and riots.

Murder of Bureau Agents.

Last week information reached us of the unprovoked and cold-blooded murder of Mr. William G. Kirkman while on duty as Bureau Agent in eastern Texas. We knew him as a most amiable young man and a valuable officer. He was a brother of Captain Kirkman, U. S. A., Jackson Barracks, Texas.

No clue has yet been found to the murderers of Lieutenant Bayne, Bureau Agent in charge of Winn parish, Louisiana, at the time; in which case the negroes were threatened with death if they interred the body.

We take from the Picayune an account of the "unpleasantness" in Arkansas, in which Lieutenant Willis, of the Bureau, and Major Andrews, Revenue Collector, were murdered. "The citizens," as the sympathizing editors generally style assassins, propose to "go for" all who are less murderous than themselves. They say "this terrible state of things must go on and increase, should the Radicals persist in their fiendish purpose of subordinating the men of their own race to the rule of the half civilized black man."

About ten o'clock on the morning of Saturday the 24th ult. Major Andrews, Revenue Collector, Lieutenant Willis, Bureau Agent, and R. H. Standal, Sheriff, (imported Radicals) were halted in the road some few miles from Bocky Comfort by Cullen Baker and four or five others, and Andrews and Willis killed. Standal escaped, and taking the news to the negroes, who happened to be under arms at the time, they became terribly excited, and many bloody threats and some hostile demonstrations were made; but they were kept in check by Daniel Simpson and a few other prudent white men. It seems that Baker "went for Lieutenant Willis," with whom he had an old account to settle, not purposing to interrupt any one else, but he was riding in a buggy or ambulance with Major Andrews, and both were killed at the same instant.

The citizens universally deprecate the whole matter, and especially regret the death of Major Andrews, who had made friends of all of them. This terrible state of things must go on and increase, should the Radical party persist in their fiendish purpose of subordinating the men of their own race to the rule of the half-civilized black man. There will be Cullen Bakers in every county of the South, and somebody will certainly "go for" all who enlist in such a scheme.

The Crescent in its eulogy of the late Thomas Adams, ex-Chief of Police, says:

The part which Colonel Adams took in the affairs of the city since the war is too recent for impartial narration. One fact, however, can nowhere be gainsaid—that his conduct and generalship on the memorable thirtieth July, 1866, were worthy of being classed with the conduct and generalship of the first military men of this age.

We do not call up the acts of deluded men to speak lightly of the same after their departure. We were told that Mr. Adams did not lead the police and citizens on that terrible day. But if he was their leader, as the above intimates, we confess that we can not see where a single element of generalship was manifested, unless it was in the mere matter of keeping his plan a secret until the hour arrived for its execution. All that was necessary was to have the police assembled at the various stations, with orders to proceed to the Mechanics' Institute as soon as the signal was given by the fire alarm bell, and with those citizens who would naturally join them, surround the building and commence the work of slaughter.

All know that on the occasion referred to these within the building were unsuspecting and unarmed. The attacking party being well supplied with revolvers and other weapons, they succeeded in murdering about fifty on the spot, and wounding seriously or fatally about one hundred and fifty more, without any or at most a trifling loss on their part.

But where is there in this anything to be compared with the "conduct and generalship of the first military men of the age?"

General Grant on Impartial Suffrage in Iowa.

The Des Moines Register says that on the nineteenth instant one of the most prominent politicians of this State had a conversation with General Grant, in which the General expressed himself as being particularly solicitous about the success of impartial suffrage in Iowa. He said he "hoped the people of Iowa, whose soldiers achieved such immortal renown in the field, would be the first State to carry impartial suffrage through unfalteringly. It had gone down in other States, but he trusted that Iowa, the bright Radical star, would proclaim by its action in November, that the North is consistent with itself, and willing to voluntarily accept what its Congress had made a necessity in the South. The negro race, by their devotion in the war, by their faithfulness when all others were faithless, had nobly earned the possession of their deprived rights, and surely should have it before the white rebels whom they helped to subdue." Good for General Grant.

We commend the above to the attention of the Bee, Crescent, Times and Bulletin. Cold comfort, isn't. "You'll have more of it! When you talk of upsetting negro suffrage, you talk of upsetting the laws. As to your dream of undoing everything here by means of elections, which are no elections, that is nonsense. We'll see that nothing is undone here except by a fair vote of all the people.

Thos. J. Durant.

We hope that every Republican member of Congress from this State will unite in presenting to General Grant the strong, earnest desire of the Republicans of Louisiana to see her and the South represented in the cabinet by this distinguished Louisianan. No where can there be found a more thoroughly elevated, high-toned gentleman of more commanding abilities, more varied acquirements and of purer and loftier character representing the original Union sentiment of the South than Thos. J. Durant.

True, in the beginning of the war he shared in the prejudices of his class and caste against the North and abolition; but so did Butler and many others. He came out manfully at an early stage, threw away prejudice, and with true chivalry arrayed himself on the side of the weak and the lowly, for suffrage and citizenship to the blacks.

He proved himself a statesman and not a politician. Of such men has the Republic need to-day.

The Challenge Washing Machine.—This most excellent washing machine, the cheapest and best, is manufactured in Auburn, N. Y., by S. W. Palmer & Co. It has had a wide sale throughout the North, and we learn that large numbers have been shipped to Texas. As yet we have not heard of any agency being established in New Orleans, but hope there may be soon, as this machine is truly the housewife's blessing. It is a great saving of time and strength. It is compact, taking up but little room, does its work satisfactorily, and last, but not least, we are informed that it costs about one-half or one-third of the price of other machines. We hope to give information soon where in the city these machines can be obtained.

A Joke.—We remember hearing of the office seeker who called upon General Jackson to ask a foreign mission. Being answered that no vacancy existed, he gradually fell to less important positions, and all failing, begged for some old clothes. This joker has been excelled by an unsophisticated colored office seeker who recently called upon Governor Warmoth and modestly asked for a place. Our courteous Executive inquired what position he desired, when the accommodating seeker expressed a willingness to take anything. Sagely pondering for a moment, the Governor said he thought there were no vacancies, unless perhaps that of Chief Justice, when our applicant sagely said, "I'll take it."

An Immense Establishment is B. T. Babbit's manufactory of saleratus, labor-saving soap, concentrated potash, and star yeast powder. The extensive business in every portion of the country which Mr. Babbitt has built up shows what integrity and honesty in both the manufacture and sale of these articles can accomplish. Who has not heard of Babbitt's saleratus? Always ask for Babbitt's if you want good light biscuit, &c. And ask for his labor-saving soap if you want clean clothes with little labor.

Evans's Advertising Agency.—T. C. Evans, 129 Washington street, Boston, Mass., has established one of the most reliable advertising agencies in the whole country. All who wish to advertise any goods or wares will find it to their advantage to put their business into the hands of Mr. Evans. All papers receiving advertisements from Mr. Evans may know that he is perfectly reliable, and that quick returns will be made on his collections.

Such has been our experience in our transactions with him.

Hon. G. M. Wickliffe.—We are glad to chronicle the recovered health of this gentleman. Since his election he has constantly and arduously discharged the onerous duties of his office, until stricken down by a raging fever, which for a week or two gave him a very hard wrestle. Mr. Wickliffe has proved himself an accommodating and efficient officer.

Another Press Destroyed.—The type and press of the Homer Illiad, W. Jasper Blackburn's paper, was recently entirely destroyed by a party of the reconstructed.

Notices of Periodicals.

Peters' United States Musical Review.—The November number contains the following choice new music: "A Heart that beats only for Thee," and "When I went Home with Belle;" two new songs by the author of "Nora O'Neal;" a sacred song by Bishop, entitled "Seek and ye shall find;" "Pleasant Thoughts Mazurka," by Chas. Kinkel, and "Loves of the Angels," a beautiful march by Packer. This music is written especially for the Review, and is published in a sheet form at a cost of $2 40.

In addition to the music, the following reading matter: Poetry—"Autumn Festivals," and "Nellie;" "Soldier's Music;" "Popular Songs;" "Early Years of Meyerbeer;" "What are the Bells Saying;" "Our Village Annals;" "Music in Poetry;" "Æsthetic Woman;" "New Music;" "Review," etc., making in all thirty-two large pages.

The Review is published by J. L. Peters, 198 Broadway, New York, at $2 per year. Sample copies twenty-five cents.

Peters' Monthly Glee Hive.—Among the contents of this musical work for November we notice: "Departure for Palestine," from the comic opera Genevieve de Brabant, with both French and English words; "You've been a Friend to Me;" "If You Love Me do My Will;" "Ladies, we are Hunters Free;" "Smile to-day and Frown to-morrow."

Published by J. L. Peters, 198 Broadway, New York, at $3 per year.

Peters' Parlor Companion.—This monthly contains mostly quadrilles and polkas. Published by J. L. Peters, 198 Broadway, New York, at $3 per year.

Traveler's Guide.—Appleton's Railway and Steam Navigation Guide is published monthly, by D. Appleton & Co., 90, 92 and 94 Grand street, New York. It contains a large map of the United States, and small maps of all the principal railroads, with time tables, &c., &c. Don't take a journey without it. News dealers sell it.

The New York Mercantile Journal, and Merchants, Manufactors and Bankers' Ledger, a large weekly quarto, contains all the latest news of business matters, markets, &c. $5 per year. Address New York Mercantile Journal, box 1919, New York.

Arthur's Home Magazine for December contains, besides music, fashion plates, &c., the usual amount of interesting reading matter. Among the contributions are: "After the Victory," "Woman's Woe," "The Sciences," "An Acting Proverb," "Don't Count Your Chickens before They are Hatched," in which seven characters appear, "Anecdotes of Webster's Boyhood," "A Gadding Wife," "The Hollands," &c.

Washington Correspondence.

Washington, November 12.

It is refreshing to witness the presence of such religious influences as are still prevailing at McKendry Church. There the pious emotion of the Psalmist can be appreciated, "I was glad when they said unto me let us go into the house of the Lord." Thither indeed the tribes have gone up; largely over sixty persons have connected themselves with that charge since the meeting commenced. The time is approaching for the missionary anniversaries of the different Methodist charges here, and to this season of religious interest there will be added the meeting of the Parent Missionary Society in Foundry Church, some time in January. Preparations are now also being made for the Sunday School festivities connected with the Christmas holidays. These celebrations are gotten up on a very large scale, and entered into by all class with commendable zeal and benevolence. There is a class of Sunday School pupils to whom the festive season brings no joyous presents within their home circle; indeed many are without home, and were always without. There is something exceedingly beautiful in the provisions that bring the joys of Christmas to persons and circles where they would otherwise unknown. The Sunday School has in a great measure rescued this season of gladness from the irrational and debauching revelry with which it used to be so generally connected.

The Young Men's Christian Association are arranging for a fair for the purposes of their organization, under the direction of the ladies of the different Protestant churches of the District. The Association is employing all means within their reach to reclaim the abandoned, and promote virtue where it already exists. Encouraging success has crowned their efforts. They labor under many disadvantages for want of their new hall, now in process of building, which, when finished, will be an architectural ornament to the city. Last season they tried a course of lectures, but this is perhaps the poorest place on earth for lectures, especially when tickets are sold. Newman Hall could not command a respectable sized audience to pay lecture. The proposed fair will be in such hands as will no doubt secure favorable results. The different churches will be represented by the ladies who have charge of the tables. Foundry Church will be represented in part by Miss Gardner, Miss Brown, Miss Camack and Mrs. Judge Fisher; Wesley Chapel by Mrs. Head, Miss Tilley and others; the Metropolitan by Mrs. General Grant, Mrs. Senator Harlan and others. The expedients resorted to by Christian churches to raise funds for religious and benevolent purposes show a low state of religious vitality. The whole class of these expedients is inconsistent with the nature of a pure religion; nor are lectures for such objects an exception. Let them be delivered free; let the widows and the fatherless be visited and relieved; let the demands of humanity be met; but let it be done by zealous work in personal effort; let Christian people work in the name and by the spirit of their holy religion, and while the drudgery will be less the moral, religious and financial results will be vastly superior. What the public mind needs is a deep sense of moral obligation; to feel that the support of religion and its concomitants by voluntary and regular contribution is as indispensable to society as the payment of taxes for the support of the State. This serving God and his cause through the gratification of appetite is not the self-denial inculcated by the Saviour. The object of this criticism, however, is not so much the expedients resorted to by church people as the morbid state of religious and moral feeling which makes these expedients a necessity in benevolent enterprises. MORDECAI.

From the Churches.

Rev. Mr. Grimes, of Lafourche circuit, writes October 28:

I have been very busy since writing last. The schools have occupied much of my attention, and the new church going up near Raceland; it will soon be ready for use. I was recently at Monroe, in Ouachita parish, and had an opportunity of helping Brother Fenner, who has a hard work; his church in Monroe is now being finished, having been a long time in bad condition by being in debt. While there I had an invitation to address a meeting of two or three thousand people, which I thought it my duty to accept. It was a grand occasion, and I tried to give them good instruction. Much suffering has been endured by the colored people there, and many murders committed. On my circuit everything is now quiet, but many hard threats are made against us, and we do not know how soon we may have trouble. We see that our enemies have prepared themselves with the means of doing their evil work, but we trust in the Lord to disappoint their aim.

Rev. Mr. Small writes from Alexandria, October 29:

I am glad to be able to write after so hard a spell of sickness, which was nigh unto death. I fell sick the day after my return from Brother Hilton's quarterly meeting. Thank God I am up again, and the doctor says, with good care, I will get over it. I am not yet able to preach or see to any church business, but soon as possible shall send on the minutes and accounts.

Rev. Mr. Hayvard writes from Natchitoches:

We are again threatened with trouble by our builder, though we offered him $125 after he had promised to take it in small sums. Our people are gathering their crops, and we shall be able to get some more money soon. The churches are doing pretty well; we are having souls for our hire. I visited Brother Dapley's church lately, and found them doing well. The people in Saline, both white and colored, are calling for me to go or send some one to preach for them, as they say Brother Turner need not to have left.

You have the sad news about the murder of Brother Hazen. He was a good man, and it is a great loss to us. Mr Falkner, too, suffered terribly, being beaten very bad; he was our church secretary and school teacher.

Brother Amos Gunby, pastor of Shady Grove, Washington parish, recently held a two days' meeting, and says that there were more people present than have ever been at his meetings before. He says:

I preached a short time since in Mississippi, nineteen miles from here, and nineteen persons joined the church. We now have two hundred members at this (Shady Grove) Church. At Spring Hill one hundred and eight members and probationers, at another appointment two hundred and twenty-five members and probationers. We have about all the colored people who are church members in this parish and the neighboring county in Mississippi in our church.

We would desire one of you white brethren to come and hold our quarterly meeting, but it is hardly safe. Some of our "friends" say that it is you white preachers that put the devil in the colored people's heads.

We are needing church buildings very much at most of my appointments.

Macon, Mississippi.—Brother Wesley Jones informs us that he has commenced a protracted meeting on his charge, and thirty-one have been converted, all of whom joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, save three, whose parents were Baptists. His list of probationers for the year amounts to 113. He says that Father Buck, an old colored man, aged 121 years, and more than eighty years a Methodist minister, recently died there.

Brother Joseph Moore, preacher in charge at Forest, Mississippi, writes encouragingly of his work there, though the wites are disposed to persecute them.

He praises in the highest terms the agent of the Freedmen's Bureau, Major J. W. Corliss, saying that he is working night and day in the great work of educating the colored people.

Progress in Art.

But a few years ago, comparatively, the dwellings of the wealthy only, were adorned with first class paintings, as none others could afford them. Cheap and rude pictures were of course more common, as every school girl ere she received her diploma was expected to finish up two or three specimens. Some of these would of course be superior to others, yet few or none would be considered worthy of a place in the room of the connoisseur. First, because the artists had not had sufficient experience, as long years of practice are required to perfect one in this art; and secondly, but very few of the mass who paint pictures could ever excel as artists. Many may be able to appreciate a fine painting, and may be filled with admiration as they gaze thereon; but few, however, could possibly have finished the picture so as to awaken this admiration. Many may be able to draw the outlines of objects, may possibly excel at this, but can go no further; for when we add color, with light and position, we enter upon a field unlimited. Here is where that wonderful gift of the true artist stands out beyond the mere sketcher and dauber. The position and strength of the light and even the fainted reflections thereof must all be taken into consideration. Some parts must be very brilliant, some very subdued, some warm and some cold. An ordinary painter looks at a comparatively smooth object, and detects perhaps but a single color and shade. The true artist, at a glance, observes many degrees of shade and transfers them all to his work.

As great artists, like great poets, are born, not developed merely, it is understood why first class paintings are so seldom met with, and being so scarce, why they are so high priced.

How very natural as one stands before a beautiful painting, is the longing that some process might be discovered by which these most beautiful and expensive paintings of the masters could be accurately, and with comparatively little expense, copied, that they might find their way into the homes not only of those in moderate circumstances, but might even adorn the walls of the laborer's cottage, thus sending gleams of joy and sunshine into his little circle, elevating and purifying their tastes. This longing of every refined and benevolent heart has been fully realized, so great has been the progress of art.

This art of obtaining these perfect copies is called chromo-lithography and the copies themselves chromos. To give a complete description of the manner of making chromos would consume too much time and space. A portion of the process, however, may be briefly given, which will be enough to give an idea of the work to the uninitiated.

To understand it, the art of lithography must first be briefly explained. The stone used in lithographing is a species of limestone found in Bavaria, and is wrought into thick slabs with finely polished surface. The drawing is made upon the slab with a sort of colored soap which adheres to the stone, and enters into a chemical combination with it after the application of certain acids and gums. When the drawing is complete the slab is put on the press, and carefully dampened with a sponge. The oil color (or ink) is then applied with a common printer's roller. Of course, the parts of the slab which contain no drawing, being wet, resist the ink, while the drawing itself, being oily, repels the water but retains the color applied. It is thus that, without a raised surface or incision—as in common printing, wood cuts, and steel engravings—lithography produces printed drawings from a perfectly smooth stone.

In a chromo the first proof is a light ground-tint, covering nearly all the surface. It has only a faint, shadowy resemblance to the completed picture. It is in fact rather a shadow than an outline. The next proof, from the second stone, contains all the shades of another color. This process is repeated again and again and again, occasionally as often as thirty times. The number of impressions, however, does not necessarily indicate the number of colors in a painting, because the colors and tints are greatly multiplied by combinations created in the process of printing one over another. In twenty-five impressions it is sometimes necessary and possible to produce a hundred distinct shades.

The last impression is made by an engraved stone, which produces that resemblance to canvas noticeable in all of Mr. Prang's finer specimens. English and German chromos, as a rule, do not attempt to give this delicate final touch, although it would seem to be essential in order to make a perfect imitation of a painting.

The paper used is white, heavy "plate paper," of the best quality, which has to pass through a heavy press, sheet by sheet, before its surface is fit to receive an impression.

The paper board on which the painting is taken, is, when completed, from an eighth to a quarter of an inch in thickness. Being really oil paintings, of course no glass is needed in framing.

The process thus briefly explained, we need hardly add, requires equally great skill and judgment at every stage. A single error is instantly detected by the practiced eye in the finished specimen. The production of a chromo, if it is at all complicated, requires several months—some times several years—of careful preparation. The mere drawing of the different and entirely detached parts on so many different stones is of itself a work that requires an amount of labor and a degree of skill, which, to a person unfamiliar with the process, would appear incredible. Still more difficult, and needing still greater skill, is the process of coloring. This demands a knowledge which artists have hitherto almost exclusively monopolized, and in addition to it, the practical familiarity, of a printer with mechanical details. "Drying" and "registering" are as important branches of the art of making chromos as drawing and coloring. On proper registering, for example, the entire possibility of producing a picture at every stage of its progress depends. "Registering" is that part of a pressman's work which consists in so arranging the paper in the press, that it shall receive the impression on exactly the same spot of every sheet. In book work each page must be exactly opposite the page printed on the other side of the sheet, in order that the impression, if on thin paper, may not "show through." In newspaper work this is of less importance, and often is not attended to with any special care. But in chromo litography the difference of a hair's-breadth would spoil a picture; for it would hopelessly mix up the colors.

After the chromo has passed through the press it is embossed and varnished, and then put up for the market. These final processes are for the purpose of breaking the glossy light, and of softening the hard outlines which the picture receives from the stone, which imparts to it the resemblance of a painting on canvas.

Were it necessary, we would gladly give descriptions of these paintings of landscape, fruits, animals, etc., that we might aid in sending them into the homes of the people. But a little work published by L. Prang & Co., of Boston, Massachusetts, who prepare these beautiful works of art, can be obtained free, by applying for the same, by letter. This would be much more satisfactory, as it is more complete than we can give.

Notwithstanding the vast amount of labor and expense in making the preparations for copying these choicest paintings, the sales are so great, (20,000 of some being sold), that they are furnished at the small sum of from a dollar or two, to five or six dollars, a few only being as high as ten dollars. Some of the originals, scarcely discernable from these copies, would cost hundreds of dollars.

We hope that this public benefactor, for so we may call Mr. Prang, while he is doing so much toward elevating the taste of the people and bringing joy to thousands of homes, by his wonderful and beautiful art, may at the same time meet with ample remuneration.

A Word of Warning to Our Brethren in Texas.

A person calling himself Dr. M C. Keitth, editor of the Freeman's Press, is now traveling through the Southern portion of our State, collecting money and obtaining subscriptions for the Freeman's Press.

This man came to Galveston and started the publication of said paper, ran into debt largely, borrowed all the money he could from the colored men and their friends, and has left us, and we know nothing of his whereabouts. The material in his office has been attached for work, and we believe he is now going through the country, raising money among the colored people. Look out for him. He has imposed upon us and will try his imposition upon you.

GEO. W. HONEY,
Pastor Galveston M. E. Church.

UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK.—We have received a copy of the introductory lecture to the course of 1868-'69, in the Medical University of New York, by Henry Draper, M. D. We have not yet read it in full, but it appears to be one of ability.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES will be held in Dr. Newman's Church, on Sunday morning at eleven o'clock, and in the chapel on Sunday evening at seven o'clock.

SUNDAY.—The same sun arises on this day, and enlightens it; yet because the Son of righteousness arose upon it, and gave a new life unto the world in it, and drew the strength of God's moral precept unto it, therefore justly do we sing with the Psalmist, "This is the day which the Lord hath made!" Now I forget the world; and in a sort myself, and deal with my wonted thoughts, as great men use, who at sometimes of their private forbid the access of all suitors. Prayer, meditation, reading, hearing, preaching, singing, good conference, are the business of this day, which I dare not bestow on any work or pleasure, but heavenly. I hate superstition on the one side, and looseness on the other; but, I find it hard to offend in too much devotion, easy to offend in profaneness. The whole week is sanctified by this day; and according to my care of this is my blessing on the rest.

The Story of a Fugitive.

We give the following interesting account of the adventures and hair-breadth escapes of one of the refugees from the parish of St. Landry, in western Louisiana. Mr. Bentley, the fugitive, is a young man of eighteen years of age. He was engaged in teaching the colored scheol in Opelousas, and was also the English editor of the St. Landry Progress. Mr. Bently was formerly from the North. He is personally known to us as a young man of excellent morals and unblemished reputation. We have no doubt as to the truthfulness of the narrative. To hear the account, with names and localities, the story is as thrilling as those recounting the escapes from wild savages in olden times. All particulars in regard to localities where he received food or aid, together with names of guides, route pursued, &c., are withheld, fearing that the information would bring death to those implicated:

On Sunday morning, September 28, about ten o'clock, Mr. Bentley was engaged in teaching one department of his school in the new Methodist Episcopal church; three men, whom he recognized to be Seymour Knights, came to the back door and called him out. As the Knights had a day or two previous published a series of resolutions denouncing the editors of the Progress in strong terms, and Mr. Bentley especially, he declined to step out, but invited the men to enter. "Just as you please, sir," said one, who stepped into the doorway opposite Mr. Bentley, drew from his pocket a copy of the Progress of the nineteenth instant, containing an editorial report of a Republican meeting, held at Washington, Louisiana, on the thirteenth instant, when several Democratic clubs, including the Seymour Knights, were under arms, and exhibited considerable spirit—and said, "You are aware, Mr. Bentley, that on Sunday last a party of gentlemen went to Washington armed, in consequence of speeches made in the clubs, and reports circulated that the Radicals intended to burn the town. They went there simply to defend themselves. Notwithstanding, we warned you that in case you lied about that affair, you could not escape our revenge; you have published a report which is both false and malicious:" Mr. Bentley: "Do you mean to say that I lied in that report." "Yes, sir, G—d d—n you, I do!" was the reply. He then struck Mr. Bentley several blows in quick succession upon the shoulders and back. The pupils ran from the schoolhouse and shouted, "they are killing Mr. Bentley." In the doorway they were met by one of the ruffians, who presented his pistol at the heads of several. The two who had remained outside, now entered the room, and Mr. Bentley was at their mercy. On attempting to draw a revolver, the trigger caught in the pocket lining, and prevented his doing so without attracting the attention of the ruffians, who were armed and prepared for any resistance. The church is on the edge of town, and Mr. Bentley could not call, and was without immediate prospect of assistance. After inflicting near fifteen blows, a paper was produced, which was in effect, an acknowledgment on the part of Mr. Bentley, as editor of the St. Landry Progress, that his report of the Washington meeting was both false and malicious. He was ordered to sign it. A chair was placed at the table, and Mr. Bentley ordered to sit down. He hesitated. Ruffians made use of remarks similar to the following: "Give it to him!" "G—d d—n Radical dog!" "Give him enough!" "There are three of us!" "Let us have satisfaction!" The cane changed hands and Mr. Bentley received more blows. He endeavored to find out what portions of his editorial they took exception to, was told that they did not wish to talk with him. He then asked: "If I sign this document will you go away and let me alone?" "Yes, sir, this will do until you lie again." Mr. Bentley then signed the retraction, and the ruffians passed out. At the door Mr. Bentley was met by Mr. B. R. Gault, a member of the Democratic Executive Committee, who advised him to make affidavit immediately against the parties. Mr. Bentley said he would do so. A deputy sheriff came to ascertain the disturbance. The streets were thronged. Mr. Bentley advised his friends to go to their homes and prevent a disturbance. Judge George R. King and Dr. James Ray, prominent Democrats, advised him to allow the law to take its course, and assured him that everything possible would be done to punish the parties. Mr. Bentley assured them it was his intention to abide by the law. He then proceeded to Justice D. Hill, made affidavit against the assaulting parties, and started to the Progress office. He was met by Dr. Hill, a Democrat, who advised him to go home, a lawyer would be procured, and he need do nothing but appear at the trial. Trial was set at 3 P. M. that day. Mr. Bentley frequently met with groups of his friends, whom he advised to leave the streets, and thus avoid any pretext for a public disturbance. Parties of armed white men were then proceeding to the edges of town. Arriving at the Progress office, he passed up stairs to a bed, where he lay with a burning fever, for perhaps an hour, when he was aroused by excited voices in the office. This was a party of armed white men, who came to see Mr. Donato. A voice: "Mr. Donato, because a party of gentlemen caned that scoundrel Bentley for half an hour and did not give him half enough, you have sent for the Club." Mr. Donato said he had not done so. "You lie!" was the response, "You have sent for men to come and murder our wives and children. This town belongs to us. We have stood this long enough. Now see if you can take it." While this controversy was going on a man came in and said, "They are fighting down town." The crowd left. Mr. B's friends then concealed him in the loft of a barn in the rear of the Progress office. Near eight P. M. was awakened by men talking in the yard, moving through the stable with lanterns in search, and walking through the office. Recognized them to be Seymour Knights. One said, "We are going to kill every man who has been engaged in deceiving the freedmen and creating an enmity between the races." A party came to the door of the barn which led to the loft, and finding it locked one suggested that probably Mr. B. was concealed here, and sent for the key. Failing to get it, one proposed to break the door down with an ax, when, fortunately for Mr. B. who could not possibly have escaped, one in the yard cried, "Come away boys, he is not there. He's gone to the country. There is no loft there. I know all about this yard!" Some one proposed to visit François D'Avy, a prominent Republican, when the party left, placing pickets near the barn and office. One chuckled, "I guess there will be more Democrats now!"

At seven o'clock next morning a friend came to bring him food; ten minutes later returned to inform him that a party of men were then coming to search the barn. They believed he was concealed there, and if found he would be killed. Mr. Durand French, editor of the Progress, had been killed, and D'Avy shot. He must find a new hiding place immediately. Mr. B. ran into a garden overgrown with weeds in the rear. Had scarcely entered when a body of mounted men rode up and proceeded to search the loft and Progress office. Some rode near the fence, and appeared to examine the garden. At night, about ten o'clock, he heard great noise in the Progress office. He saw men moving from the office to a common, where they deposited some material. A wagon or cart was driven to the office two or three times, and was probably loaded. A portion of the material was burned. He was not able to distinguish any of the parties. One who attempted to speak was commanded to "hush." Parties on horseback rode through town all night, and were several times halted by pickets, when countersigns were given. Next day about nine o'clock a boy near the fence shouted, "There's the carpet-bagger. There's old Bentley; see his hat!" Mr. B. changed position. A person immediately rode up and scrutinized the spot. A body of mounted men rode up and again searched the loft. Some rode around the garden and examined the weeds. In the evening a large number of men congregated in the Progress yard. They appeared to be constructing a seat upon a wagon, and chopping boards. Remarks: "We are going to burn old Bentley." "Better put a bombshell in." A little child: "Please don't kill Mr. Bentley, he's my teacher." Mr. B. had now been over thirty-three hours without food or drink. He had a high fever, and his limbs were swollen. Raising his hands to pluck a May apple a boy in the yard shouted, "See that snake; look right through here; that's the carpet-bagger." Mr. B. ran from the garden. A body of mounted men passed down the street, and after a short absence returned. Having found no trace of him, a search was instituted, but Mr. B. had passed again into the weeds. One or two parties followed him, and proceeded to the fence on the opposite side. "He must have jumped here," said one. "Maybe he is in here yet, let us get the boys and look through. Mr. B., who had crawled on his hands and knees through the weeds and returned to his starting point, now crawled to the north side, jumped the fence, and ran across open prairie several hundred yards to a field fronted by a hedge eight or ten feet in height. By means of a fence he scaled this, and as his enemies, who had discovered him and gave chase, were now close at hand, lay between two old corn rows. Mounted men proceeded to the rear of the field; some to the left; a crowd of men, women and children were in front. Some passed through the field. A number of shots were fired in town, and several voices were entreating parties not to shoot. Friends of Mr. B. implored them not to kill him. Mr. B. crawled on his hands and knees through the field. Several times parties appeared to be closing upon him, when he would pass into an adjoining field. Pickets were posted all night, and mounted men were riding near continually. About seven o'clock next morning he found means of escape, and ran across an open prairie and concealed himself under the house of a Democrat. There he remained until night. Two brigh-eyed little blacks at play discovered him during the day, but were probably too deeply engaged, and did not give an alarm. Friends ascertained his whereabouts, and at night a guide escorted him through the prairie and woods. Pickets guarded all the highways, and traveling was exceedingly dangerous. Friday, October 2, he arrived at a gully within five miles of Opelousas. The guide, who had examined the woods, reported it picketed, and thought it best to halt and travel through at night. The guide then left. About sundown he heard a whistle and his name pronounced distinctly. He passed into a small canebrake. In a few moments men were picketed on both sides of the gully. Fearing that a searching party might soon discover him, he endeavored to crawl out of the gully to a cotton field. When nearly out he heard a whistle. A few feet in front stood a picket. Passed to the opposite side. The whistle was repeated. Another picket promptly raised his gun. Proceeding some distance up the gulley, he made several attempts to pass the pickets, who were placed at short distances apart, but failed in each attempt. At one time he came within a few feet of four men who promptly advanced and held their guns in readiness. Mr. B. became acquainted with the whistle, and would conceal himself upon hearing it. The gully became narrow as he advanced, and pickets appeared to be on the lookout. He then made considerable noise, passing a short distance through the water, and crawled noiselessly down the gully where he had started from. From the loss of food and the great exertion he had made to escape, he was now completely exhausted, and giving up all hope of escape, he lay down and slept, and did not awake until three o'clock in the afternoon of the next day. On the bank opposite sat a picket, whose presence was betrayed by a new straw hat and gun. Evidences of a general search made during the night was found in trampled grass and moved logs. At night Mr. B. in passing up the bank to make his escape came in contact with a patch of briers. To advance would attract the attention of the picket a few feet distant; to retreat would be attended with like hazard in breaking twigs. Grasping the briers near the root he broke them off, one by one. In about half an hour he had made a distance of fifteen feet. Then passing rapidly through a cotton field he lay down. In an hour or two the guide accidentally passing here was hailed. He informed Mr. B. that the house to which he had intended to conduct him had been entered and searched the day he started. The guide brought him food and water, and concealed him. At night a party of men with dogs passed through the gully. Fearing to remain in close proximity, and the guide failing to appear, Mr. B. started out, totally ignorant of the country, and with no money in his pocket. He met with friends who concealed him in a field five days. Mr. B. sent friends to town each day to ascertain the extent of the riot, but gained nothing satisfactory. Colored men were not allowed to stand in groups upon the sidewalks. Men wore red ribbons for protection; houses of friends were strictly guarded. The number of killed was variously estimated from fifty to two hundred. Each day new victims fell. He believes two hundred to be a fair estimate. Another friend concealed him in a corn crib ten feet square, with three feet between the corn and the roof, for three days. Leaving this place of concealment, he traveled some distance, where he was hospitably received and directed to a field. While lying in wait, he accidentally found a clue to the whereabouts of two other refugees. They had remained under a tree for eight days. They now planned to escape. One proposed a covered wagon with two ladies in front as a blind. This was rejected. A secretary of a club had endeavored to make his escape in a similar manner, and had been discovered and murdered. Another plan was adopted. After traveling one night through a swamp, camping out two nights, and traveling three days in a skiff, they were safe, having reached the Mississippi river, where they took a steamer for New Orleans, which they reached on the morning of October 19, being twenty-one days in making their escape.

Another Refugee's Story.

Swan A. Miller, of this city, formerly a resident of St. Landry parish, and an active Republican, understanding that troops had been forwarded to Opelousas, filled his carpet-bag with Republican tickets, and traveled by stage to Opelousas, without its being suspected who he was, or what he went for. He stopped at a hotel kept by James G. Hayes, sheriff of St. Landry. He was very soon informed by this gentleman that his record had been too obnoxious, and that he could not put up there. Mr. Miller took his carpet-bag and proceeded to the office of the Freedmen's bureau. While conversing with the agent, Captain Dutton, a crowd of some forty or fifty assembled, using abusive and threatening language. A note was sent him, ordering him to leave town, signed "Young Democrats." Mr. Miller tore it up. O. H. Violet, late bureau agent, who was removed through the aid of Mr. Miller and others, for neglect of duty, entered the office, ascertained that his name was Miller, and asked an interview. This was had on the back step or gallery, when Mr. Violet indulged in violent and abusive language. Mr. Miller said that he was willing to fight him, but not the mob at his back. During this time Mr. Miller's carpet-bag had been examined by the crowd, and the tickets abstracted. Parties sneeringly inquired whether he thought he could "make speeches and carry on like he used to." A deputy sheriff and a member of the town Council informed Mr. Miller that he must leave town. Mr. Miller told them he was not in a condition to walk, but proposed to leave by steamboat or stage next morning. He was told that he must go immediately. The excitement was too great, and they could not control the mob. Mr. Miller then, as a citizen of St. Landry, demanded protection to the outside of the parish. A member of the town Council informed him he could only afford him protection to the limits of the corporation. Mr. Miller asked Captain Dutton to go with him a short distance, and in company with the deputy sheriff and the member of the town Council, started. By the time they reached the corporation limits, Mr. Miller was nearly surrounded by mounted men, two of whom threatened to take his life. Mr. Miller remonstrated with the civil authorities, who proposed to leave him in the clutches of his enemies. They escorted him a short distance further. A deputy sheriff then arrived with orders to escort Mr. Miller further on. Mr. Miller was unable to hire a horse for any amount of money, and was compelled to follow the deputy sheriff on foot. Parties were behind and in front, and men were seen at a distance to the right and left, following. The deputy sheriff ordered Charles Moss and a Mr. Perodin, who rode behind, to go back to town, and directed a person to take charge of them, and take them back. They drew their pistols and defied any one to stop them. When about three miles out, the deputy sheriff told Mr. Miller that he could go no further with him, he must now take to the woods, and make his escape the best way he could. Miller had just stepped out of the way, when Charles Moss came riding rapidly by with pistol directed toward him. The deputy sheriff ordered him to halt, and not being obeyed, fired two shots and gave chase. The horse stumbled and threw the deputy into some mud and water; turning to Miller he said that his loads were now damp, and Moss would shoot them both if he returned, and to make his escape as quick as possible. Mr. Miller entered a brush-heap; in a few moments Moss returned and passed back toward Opelosas; scarcely fifteen minutes elapsed before a body of mounted men rode by, and commenced to station pickets. Mr. Miller several times came in close proximity to these pickets, and had much difficulty in passing them. This he did by considerable maneuvering and crawling upon his hands and knees. One Sunday was spent lying flat upon his back in a ditch in a field, just deep enough to conceal his body, with his enemies on all sides of him, who, with a numbor of dogs, were seaching the bushes. The night previous he crawled a half mile on his hands and knees, several miles in a stooping posture, when he found himself just outside a new picket line, and his enemies were searching for him in the wrong direction. Falling in with friends, he was sheltered for several days, and through their assistance, by avoiding the towns, he reached New Iberia safely, and hailed a steamer below New Iberia, and sat down to a table, where he heard related with great gusto, how a white Radical had lately been disposed of in St. Landry. Before reaching Berwick's Bay, Mr. Miller was discovered. There being considerable commotion on baard when the boat landed. Mr. Miller thought best to hasten from the boat. He did so, and received a number of disagreeable compliments. Taking a seat in a ladies car, probably saved him from molestation, because two or three parties came to the windows and examined him closely. Mr. Miller states that he only lost his self-possession once; on the Sunday mentioned, several buzzards sat upon the fence and eyed him severely. What a comment upon St. Landry.

OF PREACHERS.—"A good preacher should have these properties and virtues: First, to teach systematically; secondly, he should have a ready wit; thirdly, he should be eloquent; fourthly, he should have a good voice; fifthly, a good memory; sixthly, he should know when to make an end; seventhly, he should be sure of his doctrine; eightly, he should venture and engage body and blood, wealth and honor, in the Word; ninthly, he should suffer himself to be mocked and jeered of every one.

"The defects in a preacher are soon spied; let a preacher be endued with ten virtues, and but one fault, yet this one fault will eclipse and darken all his virtues and gifts, so evil is the world in these times. Dr. Justus Jonas has all the good virtues and qualities a man may have; yet merely because he hums and spits, the people can not bear that good and honest man.—Martin Luther.

The Bible must be the invention of good men or angels, or bad men or devils; or of God. It could not be the invention of good men or angels; for they neither would nor could make a book, and tell lies all the time they were writing it, saying "Thus saith the Lord," when it was their own invention. It could not be the invention of bad men or devils; for they could not make a book which commands all duty, forbids all sin, and condemns themselves to all eternity. I therefore draw this conclusion; the Bible must be given by inspiration of God.—Simpson.

PRANG'S AMERICAN CHROMOS
IN OIL AND WATER COLORS.

PRANG'S AMERICAN CHROMOS are fac simile re-productions of oil and water color paintings; so faithfully and skilfully done that it requires the experience of an expert to detect the difference between them and the originals.

For every purpose of decoration, for parlors, sitting rooms, nurseries, or chambers, nothing so exquisitely beautiful as these Chromos can be obtained for the same amount of money. No other ornaments of the same cost are so admirably calculated to adorn home, to cultivate a love for art among the people at large; to brighten up the dwellings of every class of our citizens, and to teach the rising generation, by their silent yet refining influence, to love the beautiful in Art and Nature. Hitherto Art has been aristocratic in its associations, none but the wealthy classes could afford to buy fine works of art: but chromo-lithography has changed all that, and brought exquisite paintings within the reach of every family. It is doing for Art what the printing press did for Literature. Let no family, henceforth, be without a few classical books and one or two masterly painting. Both should be regarded as indispensable to complete a home.

Ask for them at the art stores and book stores.

Our Chromos are sent free to any address within the United States east of the Mississippi, on receipt of price. Our journal of Popular Art, explaining how Chromos are made, mailed free. Send for a copy.

THE LEGISLATURE.

July 9, 1868, reported favorably upon by the Finance Committee, with amendments, was read.

The bill was taken up section by section.

The first section was read and adopted.

The second and third sections were read and adopted, as amended by the committee.

The fourth section was read and adopted.

Mr. Lynch: I move the adoption of the bill as a whole.

Adopted.

The bill was considered engrossed.

Under a suspension of the rules the bill was read a third time and finally concurred in with its title.

Mr. Ray: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up a bill.

Rules suspended.

Senate bill No. 247, an act to authorize the compilation of a new and official map of the State, was read.

Mr. Ray: I move that the bill be considered as engrossed for a third reading.

Adopted.

Under suspension of the rules, the bill was read a third time and finally adopted with its title.

Mr. Braughn: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended and the following read:

WHEREAS, The House of Representatives has appointed a special committee of three on the revision of the charter of the city of New Orleans, and whereas said committee should be composed of members from both branches of the General Assembly;

Resolved, That the Senate of the State of Louisiana appoint a special committee of three to revise the charter of the city of New Orleans, and that said committee meet the special committee from the House, in order to form a joint committee.

Be it further resolved, That said joint committee have the power to send for persons and papers, and that it shall hold its session after the adjournment of the General Assembly, and until its labors are completed.

Mr. Braughn: I ask for a suspension of the rules to put the bill on its second reading.

Rules suspended, and the bill read.

The resolution was considered engrossed.

Under a suspension of the rules the bill was read a third time, and finally adopted with its title.

Mr. Campbell: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up a bill.

SPECIAL ORDER OF THE DAY.

Mr. Campbell called up the Election bill.

Substitute to section eight was read.

Mr. Campbell: I moved to amend the substitute by inserting in line one hundred and nine the following proviso:

"Provided, That until the finding of the Judge in such cases as are above provided shall have been officially transmitted to the Governor, no returns thus had in question shall be counted for any candidate, and that if such finding shall not be so transmitted until after the expiration of the time prescribed by law for the official promulgation of the result of election, no returns so questioned shall be included in such promulgation, but such returns shall be held null and void.

The amendment was adopted.

Mr. Campbell: I move that the substitute be adopted as amended.

Adopted.

The eighth section was adopted as amended.

A message from the Governor was received.

Mr. Campbell: I offer the following as an additional section—thirty-seven—and move its adoption:

SEC. 37. Be it enacted, etc., That any civil officers or other persons who shall assume or pretend to act in any capacity as officers of election to receive or count votes, or to do any other acts toward the holding or conducting of elections, in violation of or contrary to the provisions of this act, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not exceeding three years nor less than one year, and by a fine not exceeding three hundred nor less than one hundred dollars.

Adopted.

Mr. Campbell: I move the adoption of the following as an additional section:

SEC. 38. It shall be the duty of the Commissioners to receive the ballots of all legal voters who shall offer to vote, deposit the same in the ballot-box to be provived for that purpose, and to keep duplicate lists thereof.

Immediately after the closing the polls, they shall open the box and count the votes, with open doors, and make duplicate returns of the number of votes polled for each candidate, making mention of the name of the candidate and the office voted for; they shall then deliver one of the lists and one of the returns to the Deputy Sheriff or other officer in attendance, whose duty it shall be to convey the same without delay to the returning officer or officers of the parish. But if no Deputy Sheriff or other officer be in attendance, such return shall be conveyed to the returning officer or officers of the parish by one of the Commissioners of Election for that precint, to be selected by those who have presided at the election.

The bill was then adopted as a whole and considered engrossed.

Mr. Campbell: I ask for a suspension of the rules to put the bill on its third reading.

Rules suspended and the bill read.

A message from the Governor was received.

The following message from the Governor was read:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
State of Louisiana,
New Orleans, October 7, 1868

To the Honorable President and Members of the Senate:

I return to the Senate an act defining the boundary line of the parish of Plaquemines, on the right bank of the Mississippi river, without my signature, for the following reasons, to wit:

That the old boundary line has existed for many years, and no good reason appears for changing it; the proposed change would create confusion in the records of both parishes and thereby great inconvenience to property holders. It is objected to by members of the Legislature from both parishes, and I believe a more careful examination of the subject will convince the Legislature that it ought not to become a law.

H. C. WARMOTH,
Governor of Louisiana.

The Senate went into executive session.

The executive session having been raised, the President appointed the special committee on the City Charter, Messrs. Braughn, Coupland and Campbell.

Mr. Lynch was appointed as the member from the Senate to act with the Governor, Treasurer and a member from the House, to sell the $1,586,000 in bonds.

Prayer by the Rev. Mr. Jackson.

On motion of Mr. Beares, the reading of the minutes was dispensed with, after a correction by Mr. Todd.

SPECIAL ORDER OF THE DAY.

House bill No. 8, an act relative to notaries public.

The two first sections having been adopted yesterday, the third section was read.

Mr. Braughn: I move a reconsideration of the vote by which the first section was adopted.

Mr. Todd: I move to amend the first section by striking out all after the word "shall" in live five, and inserting instead the words "commission as Notaries Public all citizens who, upon an examination, before a Justice of the Supreme Court or a District Judge, shall be found qualified to discharge the functions of Notaries Public, excepting Attorneys at Law, duly admitted to practice by the Supreme Court of the State, who shall furnish a certificate to that effect from the Clerk of the Supreme Court of the State."

A message from the Governor was received.

Mr. Blackman: I move that the substitute for House bill No. 8, an act relative to Notaries Public, introduced into the House by Mr. Isabelle, of Orleans, be taken up instead of the original House bill before the Senate.

The Clerk of the House of Representatives appeared with a message from that body announcing concurrence by the House in Senate bill No. 68, an act requiring a special term of the Supreme Court to be holden at Monroe, Louisiana, and fixing the term thereof with an amendment, and Senate joint resolution No. 27, appointing a committee to investigate the report of the Grand Jury of the parish of Orleans, concerning Eugene McCarty, fifth Justice of the Peace, Orleans Right Bank, without amendment: also that the House had laid on the table Senate bill No. 256, an act to repeal section one of an act entitled an act to define more fully the powers and duties of the Board of Registration and supervisors thereof, for the registration of the qualified voters of the State, approved September 19, 1868, and to make other provisions respecting the same, was laid on the table.

Action on House bill No. 8, an act relative to Notaries Public, was resumed.

Mr. Bacon: I move to refer the original bill and substitute to a special committee of three.

Mr. Todd: I move to amend by providing that the committee be composed of three attorneys at law.

Mr. Campbell: I move to lay the motion to refer on the table.

Lost by a rising vote of six yeas and fourteen nays.

Mr. Bacon having accepted the amendment of Mr. Todd,

Mr. Campbell: I move as a substitute to recommit to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Todd: I move to lay the substitute on the table.

Lost.

Mr. Campbell's substitute was then adopted, and the bills referred to the Judiciary Committee.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Mr. Lynch, from the Finance Committee, reported unfavorably upon Senate bill 268, an act for the purchase of a museum of medals, models, scientific library, etc.

SPECIAL COMMITTEES.

The Senate refused to suspend the rules.

Mr. Day: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a bill to be entitled an act to provide for the collection of the unpaid convention tax in the various parishes of the State.

Rules suspended.

Under further suspension of the rules the bill was read a second time, and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

The Senate went into executive session on the call of Mr. Todd.

The executive session having been raised the following communications were read:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
State of Louisiana,
New Orleans, October 8, 1868.

To the Honorable President and Members of the Senate:

I transmit herewith for the information of the Senate a communication from the President of the New Orleans Mechanics' Society in relation to the lease of the Mechanics' Institute as a State House.

As the time for which the Governor was authorized to lease the building, under joint resolution No. 57, approved March 2, 1866, expires on the twenty-third proximo, I respectfully recommend that immediate action be taken by the Legislature to provide for a renewal of the lease.

H. C. WARMOTH,
Governor of Louisiana.

To His Excellency the Governor and the General Assembly of the State of Louisiana:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned in his capacity of President of the New Orleans Mechanics' Society, most respectfullys beg leave to call your united attention to the facts that the lease for three years granted to the State of the building now used as a State House will expire on the twenty-third day of November next, that the rent for the last six months, of four thousand dollars has not been paid, and that the Mechanics' Society desires to know as soon as practicable whether or not the State of Louisiana desires to renew said lease.

The act of lease was passed before T. O. Stark, Esq., notary, on the twelfth day of April, 1866.

An early answer together with the payment of the rent due, will greatly oblige the Mechanics' Society, and your most obedient servant.

WILLIAM McCULLOCH,
President.

New Orleans, October 6, 1868.

The Senate adjourned.

C. H. MERRITT.
Secretary of the Senate.

JOURNAL OF THE SENATE

Eighty-Eighth Day's Session.

FRIDAY, October 9, 1868.

The Senate was called to order by the President at twelve o'clock M.

The roll was called; present the following members:

Antoine, Bacon, Beares, Blackman, Braughn, Campbell, Coupland, Foute, François, Futch, Jewell, Kelso, Lewis, Lynch, Monette, O'Hara, Packard, Pinchback, Poindexter, Pollard, Randall, Ray, Smith, Todd, Wilcox, Wittgenstein—26.

Nays: Antoine, Bacon, Blackman, Braughn, Coupland—5.

No quorum.

Mr. Bacon: I ask for permission to withdraw my appeal.

The permission was granted and the appeal withdrawn.

Mr. Campbell's motion to make the bill the special order of the day to-morrow after the reading of the minutes prevailed.

A memorial from the members of the police force detailed at the capitol, asking for relief, was received and read, and referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Blackman: I move that Senate bill No. 169 be considered engrossed.

The President: The motion is out of order.

Mr. Bacon: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a bill to be entitled an act to provide for the punishment of vagrants and dangerous and suspicious persons.

Rules suspended, and the bill read:

Mr. Bacon: I ask for a suspension of the rules to put the bill on its second reading.

Mr. Lewis: I move to lay the bill on the table.

OFFICIAL.

LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Passed at the Second Session of the Fortieth Congress.

[PUBLIC—No. 107.]

AN ACT supplementary to an act entitled "An act to allow the United States to prosecute appeals and writs of error without giving security," and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions of the act entitled "An act to allow the United States to prosecute appeals and writs of error without giving security," approved February twenty-one, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, be, and the same hereby are, extended to writs of error, appeals or other process in law, admiralty or equity, issuing from or brought up to a circuit court of the United States.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That any corporation, or any member thereof, orther [other] than a banking corporation, organized under a law of the United States, and against which a suit at law or in equity has been or may be commenced in any court other than a circuit or district court of the United States, for any liability or alleged liability of such corporation, or any member thereof as such member, may have such suit removed from the court in which it may be pending, to the proper circuit or district court of the United States, upon filing a petition therefor, verified by oath, either before or after issue joined, stating they have a defense arising under or by virtue of the Constitution of the United States, or any treaty or law of the United States, and offering good and sufficient surety for entering in such court on the first day of its session, copies of all process, pleadings, dispositions, testimony, and other proceedings in said suit, and doing such other appropriate acts as are required to be done by the act entitled "An act for the removal of causes in certain cases from State courts," approved July twenty seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-six; and it shall be thereupon the duty of the court to accept the surety and proceed no farther in the suit; and the said copies being entered, as aforesaid in such court of the United States, the suit shall then proceed in the same manner as if it had been brought there by original process, and all the provisions of said act in this section referred to, respecting any bail, attachment, injunction, or other restraining process, and respecting any bond of indemnity or other obligation given upon the issuing or granting of any attachment, injunction, or other restraining processes, shall apply with like force and effect in all respects to similar matters, process, or things in the suits for the removal of which this act provides.

Approved July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 57.]

A RESOLUTION relative to lighting the streets of Washington City, District of Columbia.

WHEREAS, The municipal authorities of the city of Washington have failed to carry out the arrangements for lighting the streets of said city, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the government," approved July twenty eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six: Therefore

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the mayor and city councils of the city of Washington be and they are hereby authorized and directed to levy and collect a tax from the property holders of the city of Washington, sufficient to defray the expenses of lighting the avenue and street lamps of said city with six feet burners, twenty-one nights in each month, from dark until day light, and keep said lamps so lighted each year.

SEC. 2 And be it further resolved, That the mayor and city councils of the city of Washington be and they are hereby authorized to contract with the Washington Gas Light Company for the term of one year, and so from year to year until otherwise provided by law, at such rates as may be agreed upon not exceeding the maximum now fixed by law, for all the illuminating gas required for the avenue and street lamps and public offices of the city, and public grounds under the control of said city.

SEC. 3 And be it further resolved, That the mayor and city councils of the city of Washington be and they are hereby authorized and directed to increase from time to time, as the public good may require, the number of street lamps on any of the streets, lanes, alleys, public ways and grounds in the city of Washington, and to do any and all things pertaining to the well lighting of the city, and to levy and collect a tax from the property holders thereof.

SEC. 4. And be it further resolved, That in the event of the failure of the mayor and city councils to levy and collect the tax herein authorized, or to light the said city as herein directed, then the Secretary of the interior be and he is hereby authorized and directed to levy a tax upon the property of said city, and to collect the same, sufficient to light said city for the current year, and so from year to year, in case of such failure of said mayor and city councils to light as herein directed, and to fully execute the provisions of this joint resolution in the place and stead of the said mayor and city councils.

SEC. 5. And be it further resolved, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to relieve the said Washington Gas Light Company from paying the internal revenue tax imposed by law.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC—No. 110.]

AN ACT in amendment of an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved March second, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the provisions of second clause of the thirty-third section of said act shall not apply to the cases of proceedings in bankruptcy commenced prior to the first day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, and the time during which the operation of the provisions of said clause is postponed shall be extended until said first day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine. And said clause is hereby so amended as to read as follows: In all proceedings in bankruptcy commenced after the first day of January, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, no discharge shall be granted to a debtor whose assets shall not be equal to fifty per centum of the claims proved against his estate upon which he shall be liable as the principal debtor, unless the assent in writing of a majority in number and value of his creditors to whom he shall have become liable as principal debtor, and who shall have proved their claims, be filed in the case at or before the time of the hearing of the application for discharge.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That said act be further amended as follows: The phrase "presented or defended" in the fourteenth section of said act shall read "prosecuted or defended;" the phrase "non-resident debtors" in line five, section twenty-two, of the act as printed in the Statutes at Large, shall read "non-resident creditors;" that the word "or" in the next to the last line of the thirty-ninth section of the act shall read "and;" that the phrase "section thirteen" in the forty-second section of said act shall read "section eleven;" and the phrase "or spends any part thereof in gaming," in the forty fourth section of said act, shall read "or shall spend any part thereof in gaming;" and that the words "with the senior register, or" and the phrase "to be delivered to the register" in the forty-seventh section of said act be stricken out.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That registers in bankruptcy shall have power to administer oaths in all cases and in relation to all matters in which oaths may be administered by commissioners of the circuit courts of the United States, and such commissioners may take proof of debts in bankruptcy in all cases, subject to the revision of such proofs by the register and by the court according to the provisions of said act.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC—No. 111.]

AN ACT to transfer to the Department of the Interior certain powers and duties now exercised by the Secretary of the Treasury in connection with Indian affairs.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the powers and duties devolving upon the Secretary of the Treasury, under and by virtue of the fourth section of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian department, and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with the various Indian tribes for the year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and forty-nine, and for other purposes," approved July twenty ninth, eighteen hundred and forty eight, and the powers and duties devolving upon him under and by virtue of the laws relating to the investment of the moneys in behalf of the Cherokee Indians, from the sales of land under the treaties concluded at Pontotoc, October twentieth, eighteen hundred and thirty-two and at Washington city, May twenty-fourth eighteen hundred and thirty four, as also all other supervisory and appellate powers and duties in regard to Indian affairs, which may now by law be vested in the said Secretary of the Treasury, shall from and after the passage of this act be exercised and performed by the Secretary of the Department of the Interior.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Interior shall cause a new roll or census to be made of the North Carolina or Eastern Cherokees, which shall be the roll upon which payments due said Indians shall be made.

SEC 3. And be it further enacted, That hereafter the Secretary of the Interior shall cause the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to take the same supervisory charge of the Eastern or North Carolina Cherokees as of other tribes of Indians.

Approved July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC—No. 112.]

AN ACT to provide for an American line of mail and emigrant passenger steamships between New York and one or more European ports.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Postmaster General is empowered and hereby authorized to contract with the Commercial Navigation Company of the State of New York, a corporation existing under the laws of the State of New York, under a special charter passed by the Legislature of said State under the date of April twenty-three, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, for the weekly or semi-weekly conveyance of all European and foreign mails of the United States between New York and Bremen, touching at Southampton, England, or Liverpool, touching at Queenstown, in first-class sea going steamships, to be constructed in the United States and owned by said company, for a term not exceeding fifteen years, in the manner and on the conditions hereinafter stated

SEC 2. And be it further enacted, That the said navigation company shall, with a purpose of performing the above service, build, contract and fit out, within one year from the passage of this act, at least seven first-class, sea-going steamships, five of which shall not be less than three thousand tons each, government measurement, and two others of not less than two thousand tons each, all of which vessels shall be constructed in the best manner, under the supervision and inspection of the American Lloyds, or, if ordered by the Postmaster General, under the inspection of the most competent engineer, to be detailed for this purpose by the Secretary of the Navy, upon a written application of the Postmaster General, so that when completed each vessel shall be of the first class in every respect, and with all known modern improvements in model, machinery and outfit, so as to secure the greatest possible speed and safety; which steamships, when so constructed, shall be organized into and compose the United States mail steamship line, for the proper conveyance of mails and passengers, as hereinafter provided; the time of sailing, and all other details, to be arranged and agreed upon between the said company and the Postmaster General, with power to modify such agreements, from time to time, as may best promote the object in view: Provided, That no letters or mail matter shall be detained for the purpose of being sent by this line: And provided further, That the average rate of speed of the steamships of the said navigation company shall not be less than that of the steamships of other lines upon the same or similar routes, and if for the space of three months the trips successively of the steamships of said company shall be made in longer time than that employed by other steamships as aforesaid, then any contract made under the provisions of this act shall cease and determine at the pleasure of the Government of the United States

SEC 3. And be it further enacted, That the compensation for carrying and transporting the mail by sea, as herein provided, shall be agreed upon, and shall be in conformity with the act of Congress, approved June fourteen, eighteen hundred and fifty-eight, and shall in no event or contingency exceed the sum therein provided, being all postage on letters, newspapers and all other matter transported by or in the mails carried by said navigation company, shall belong to said company, and shall be paid to said navigation company quarterly, or applied to their use or benefit, as hereinafter provided: Provided, That when the receipts of said navigation company from sea postages, under any contract to be made in pursuance of this act, shall equal or exceed the sum of four hundred thousand dollars per annum, then the right of said company to receive the inland postages shall cease and determine, and said company shall only receive the sea postages: Provided, That such postages shall not exceed six hundred thousand dollars per annum, after the discontinuance of said inland postage.

SEC 4. And be it further enacted, That to insure the construction of the above-mentioned vessels within the time and in the manner hereinbefore provided, and the maintenance of the said line, the said Commercial Navigation Company may issue bonds to such an amount that the entire annual interest thereon shall not exceed the sum of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, such bonds to be made payable at the expiration of the before named fifteen years, and the interest thereof to be made payable semi-annually, the principal and interest of such bonds to be made payable in coin of the United States. That for the protection of the holders of such bonds they shall be severally registered at the Post office Department and certified by the chief clerk of the department, without liability for the payment of the interest or principal of said bonds upon the part of the Post-office Department only in manner as hereinafter provided. And the Postmaster General shall receive all moneys for postage earned by the steamships of said company, and shall apply the same as far as needed to the payment of the semi-annual interest upon the before named bonds, and shall retain the surplus after paying such interest, and shall invest the same quarterly in the securities of the United States to form a sinking fund, to be held solely for the benefit of the bondholders, and to be applied to the payment of the principal of such bonds. And whenever, and as soon as such sinking fund shall equal in amount the entire principal of said bonds, then from that time forward the interest of said bonds shall be paid out of the income of such sinking fund, and the principal thereof out of the same fund at their maturity. And all postage earned after the time when said sinking fund shall be made up to the amount aforesaid, shall belong to and be paid quarterly to the said company by the Postmaster General of the United States.

SEC 5. And be it further enacted, That the afore said mail steamships shall be commanded and officered only by citizens of the United States, shall mount an armament, if required, of two guns each, and shall have at least one apprentice to be instructed in engineering, seamanship and navigation, for every two hundred tons of registered tonnage for each steamship; and the government of the United States shall have the power to take and use the aforesaid mail steamships as transports or for ships of war whenever, in the opinion of the President, the exigencies of the United States may require them, who is authorized, in such an event, to take said mail steamers and pay said company a just and equitable sum for their use, or purchase the same, as may be deemed most for the interest of the United States; said payment, whether for purchase or use, to be made to the Postmaster General, who shall pay to said navigation company whatever balance be due them, after deducting sufficient for payment for all the before-named registered bonds, the amount of which in this event shall be paid to the holders thereof at maturity of the same.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the foreign mail agents of the government of the United States shall have free passage on the ships of the said Commercial Navigation Company whenever the Postmaster General to such foreign mail agents issues passes certifying to said company that such is their official character.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the said navigation company shall keep up and maintain for a period of twenty years, for the said United States mail service, at least the said number of seven first-class steamships.

SEC. 8. And be it further enacted, That the rights and privileges herewith granted shall be and remain to this company, and in no event shall this company transfer or assign the privileges herein rights and granted, nor shall it be lawful for any officer of the government hereafter to recognize any assignment or transfer, it being the intent and meaning of this act to secure an American line of steam vessels for the transportation of mails and the proper conveyance of emigrant passengers between the port of New York and the European ports above named; and Congress may at any time hereafter, during the period of fifteen years, terminate or abandon any contract of the United States made with such company, and, having a due regard to the accrued rights of the said company, alter, repeal, or amend this act, and it shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

Approved July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC—No. 113.]

AN ACT relating to the Alexandria canal.

WHEREAS, by an act of Congress, on the twenty sixth day of May, eighteen hundred and thirty, the Alexandria Canal Company was incorporated, and authorized and empowered to construct, operate, and maintain a canal from Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, to Alexandria, in the State of Virginia, with an aqueduct across the Potomac river at Georgetown; and whereas by an act of the General Assembly of the State of Virginia, passed on the sixteenth day of February, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, the board of public works was authorized to unite with the corporate authorities of the city of Alexandria in making disposition of the Alexandria canal, in order to repair and make said canal available; and whereas said board of public works did, in pursuance of said authority, so unite with said corporate authorities, and did by their joint vote, and a vote of the majority of the stockholders of said canal company, empower and direct the president and directors of the said canal company to lease the said canal for the period of ninety-nine years; and whereas the said president and directors, in pursuance of said authority did, on the sixteenth day of May, eighteen hundred and sixty six, grant, lease, and convey the said canal, its aqueduct, locks, banks, lands, gates, and property of all description to Henry H. Wells, Philip Quigley, and William W. Dungan, the grantees therein named; and whereas afterward, and by an act passed by the General Assembly of the State of Virginia, on the seventeenth day of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, the said lease was ratified and affirmed, and the lessees were further authorized and empowered to build, operate, and maintain a new aqueduct, and in conjunction therewith a railroad and a road bridge across said piers and build, operate, and maintain a railroad from Georgetown to Alexandria; and whereas the said lessees have entered into possession of and repaired the said canal, and have erected a new aqueduct across the said Potomac river upon the said piers connecting the Chesapeake and Ohio canal with the said Alexandria canal; therefore

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the said aqueduct across the Potomac river from Georgetown to the Virginia shore, and so connecting the said canals, is hereby declared to be a lawful structure in its present position and elevation, anything in any law or laws of the United States, or of any State, to the contrary notwithstanding.

SEC. 2 And be it further enacted, That the said lessees, their associates, their heirs and assigns, are hereby authorized and empowered to maintain and operate said aqueduct, and to erect, build, operate, and maintain across the Potomac river from Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, to the Virginia shore, upon and over the stone piers upon which the aqueduct now rests, in conjunction therewith, a bridge of wood, iron or stone, with one or more ways for the passage of persons, animals and vehicles and also with one or more tracks or ways for the passage of engines and cars, with such other conveniences as are usual or necessary for a railroad.

SEC 3 And be it further enacted, That it shall be lawful for said lessees, their associates and successors, to lay out, construct, maintain, and operate a railroad across said bridge from Georgetown, in the District of Columbia, to the Virginia shore, and there to connect with said railroad.

SEC 4 And be it further enacted, That as soon as the chief engineer of the army shall certify to the Secretary of War that the said bridge is so far completed as to be ready, fit and convenient for the passage of persons, animals and vehicles, the said lessees, their successors, and their legal representatives may demand, have, and receive, in advance, the following tolls, to wit: For any foot passenger crossing on said bridge, two cents; for any horse, mule, or jack, any ox, or other horned cattle, five cents; for any vehicle drawn by one animal, fifteen cents; drawn by two animals, twenty-five cents; drawn by four animals, thirty-five cents, but no extra charge shall be made for the driver of such vehicle; for any hog, sheep, or other live creature, one cent; which certificate shall be published for three weeks in two daily papers in the city of Washington, at the expense of the company; Provided, however, That it shall be lawful for said lessees to commute those rates to persons requiring yearly passes; which said rates, or other lower rates to be by them prescribed from time to time, the said lessees may demand in advance, or may sue for, have and receive, of and from any person who shall pass over said bridge, or who shall send, ride, or drive any animal or vehicle over the said bridge without first paying said tolls. And any person who shall attempt to injure said bridge, or to pass over the same, or to pass his animals over it, without first paying the tolls prescribed herein, or shall attempt to force said bridge, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and be subject to a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than ten dollars for each offence, to be recovered in any court having jurisdiction of misdemeanors in the District of Columbia: Provided, however, That a conviction for such misdemeanor shall not in any wise be a bar to any suit brought to recover damages for an injury to said bridge; Provided, however, That said bridge is open and free for the passage of troops and munitions of war by the United States without charge or compensation of any kind.

SEC 5 And be it further enacted, That in case the said bridge shall not be fully completed within five years from the passage of this act, then this act shall be null and void.

SEC. 6 And be it further enacted, That said company shall not grant to any railroad or other corporation the exclusive right to transfer passengers or freight over said railroad bridge, but any privilege granted to one corporation shall be extended to all who may make application for such privilege on equal terms and shall not sell, transfer, or lease their corporate rights to any company that will not check baggage or commute fares with all railroads north or south.

SEC 7 And be it further enacted, That the right is hereby reserved to Congress to amend, alter, or repeal this act

[PUBLIC—No. 114.]

AN ACT making appropriations for the service of the Columbia Institution for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb, and establishing additional regulations for the government of the institution, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums be and the same are hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the benefit of the Columbia Institution for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb:

For the support of the institution, in addition to the appropriation to meet the increased expense of maintaining pupils whose admission was authorized by an act of Congress, approved March second, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, three thousand dollars.

For continuing the work upon buildings of the institution, in accordance with the plans here of submitted to Congress forty-eight thousand dollars

SEC 2. And be it further enacted, That in addition to the directors whose appointment has heretofore been provided for by law, there shall be three other directors appointed in the following manner: One senator by the President of the Senate, and two representatives by the Speaker of the House; these directors to hold their offices for the term of a single Congress, and to be eligible to a reappointment

SEC 3. And be it further enacted, That no part of the real or personal property now held or hereafter to be acquired by said institution shall be devoted to any other purpose than the education of the deaf and dumb nor shall any portion of the real estate be aliened, sold, or conveyed, except under the authority of a special act of Congress.

SEC 4. And be it further enacted, That so much of the act of February sixteenth, eighteen hundred and fifty-seven, as allows the payment of one hundred and fifty dollars per annum for the maintenance and tuition of each pupil admitted by order of the Secretary of the Interior, be, and the same is hereby repealed.

SEC. 5. Be it further enacted, That the number of students in the collegiate department from the several States, as authorized by the act of March second, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, shall be increased from ten to twenty-five in number.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That the following sums be and the same are hereby appropriated for the purposes hereinafter expressed, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty nine:

GOVERNMENT HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

For the support, clothing, medical and moral treatment of the insane of the army and navy and revenue cutter service, and of the indigent insane of the District of Columbia in the government hospital for the insane, including five hundred dollars for books, stationery, and incidental expenses, ninety thousand five hundred dollars.

For finishing, furnishing, lighting, and heating the unfinished part of the east wing of the main hospital edifice, seven thousand dollars.

COLUMBIA INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.

For the support of the institution, including one thousand dollars for books and illustrative apparatus, twelve thousand five hundred dollars.

For the proper inclosure, improvement, and enlargement of the grounds of the institution, in accordance with plans heretofore submitted to Congress, three thousand six hundred dollars.

COLUMBIA HOSPITAL FOR WOMEN AND LYING-IN ASYLUM.

For the support of the asylum, over and above the probable amount which will be received from independent or pay-patients, fifteen thousand dollars.

For the completion of the Providence Hospital in Washington city, District of Columbia, thirty thousand dollars; Provided, That all expenditures for the said Providence Hospital under appropriations of Congress shall be made under the direction and control of the Surgeon General of the army, whose duty it shall be to report at the December session of every Congress a full and complete statement of all expenses incurred under and by virtue of appropriations made by Congress.

For the National Soldiers and Sailors' Orphans' Home, in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, ten thousand dollars.

For care, support and medical treatment of sixty transient paupers, medical and surgical patients, in some proper medical institution in the city of Washington, under a contract to be formed with such institution, twelve thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary; Provided, That said contract shall be made by the Surgeon General of the army, who shall report to the December session of every Congress, stating with whom the said contract is made, and the amount and nature thereof

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That the superintendent of the said Columbia Institution for the Deaf and Dumb shall, at the commencement of every December session of Congress, make a full and complete statement of all the expenditures made by virtue of any appropriations by Congress. Said statement shall include the amount paid to said superintendent, and also for teachers, to whom paid, and the rate at which paid; and all expenditures for the Columbia Hospital for Women and Lying-in Asylum shall be under the direction of the Surgeon General of the army, who shall also report to Congress at every December session, a full and accurate account of all expenditures made by said asylum out of appropriations by Congress; and all accounts for all appropriations made by Congress for charitable purposes and for charitable institutions in the District of Columbia shall be audited by the First Auditor of the Treasury. But nothing herein contained shall take from the Secretary of the Interior the jurisdiction he now has over the subject of charities and charitable institutions in the District of Columbia.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC—No. 115.]

AN ACT making appropriations for certain executive expenses of the government for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be and the same are hereby appropriated for the objects hereinafter expressed, for the fiscal year ending June thirtieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-nine, viz:

That there may be appropriated, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of twenty thousand two hundred dollars, for the employment of temporary clerks in the Indian bureau, to be employed at the following rates: one clerk, at sixteen hundred dollars per annum; six clerks, at fourteen hundred dollars each per annum; seven clerks, at twelve hundred dollars each per annum; and two female copyists, at nine hundred dollars each per annum; and the sum of ten thousand dollars for the employment of temporary clerks in the State Department; the said clerks to be employed in said State Department shall receive a compensation of twelve hundred dollars each per annum; and the sum of nine thousand dollars, or so much thereof as is necessary, is also appropriated to pay the salary, office expenses, and clerk hire of the surveyor general of Utah Territory, in accordance with provisions of the act of July sixteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That there be appropriated, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of five thousand dollars, to be expended, under the direction of the Commissioner of Public Buildings and Grounds, for the purpose of building an arched roadway over Tiber creek, on North Capitol street leading to the Government Printing Office; Provided, [That] the city of Washington will appropriate sufficient additional amount to complete it.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Henry B Ste. Marie, the sum of ten thousand dollars for services and information in the arrest of John H. Surratt, in the kingdom of Italy, charged with the crime of conspiracy and murder, and the joint resolution for the relief of Henry B. Ste Marie, approved July twentieth, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, be and the same is hereby repealed.

AN ACT relating to pensions.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the laws granting pensions to the hereinafter-mentioned dependent relatives of deceased persons leaving neither widow nor child entitled to pensions under existing laws, shall be so construed as to give precedence to such relatives in the following order, namely: First, mothers; secondly, fathers; thirdly, orphan brothers and sisters under sixteen years of age, who shall be pensioned jointly if there be more than one: Provided That if in any case the said persons shall have left both father and mother who were dependent upon them, then on the death of the mother the father shall become entitled to a pension commencing from and after the death of the mother; and upon the death of the mother and father the dependent brothers and sisters under sixteen years of age shall jointly become entitled to such pension until they attain the age of sixteen years respectively, commencing from and after the death of the party who, preceding them, would have been entitled to the same; And provided further, That no pension heretofore awarded shall be affected by anything herein contained.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That no person shall be entitled to a pension by reason of wounds received, or disease contracted in the service of the United States, subsequently to the passage of this act, unless the person who was wounded or contracted disease was in the line of duty; and, if in the military service, was at the time actually in the field, or on the march, or at some post, fort, or garrison; or if in the naval service was at the time borne on the books of some ship, or other vessel of the United States, at sea or in harbor, actually in commission, or was on his way, by direction of competent authority, to the United States or to some other vessel or naval station.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That so much of the acts approved April sixth, eighteen hundred and thirty-eight, and August twenty-third, eighteen hundred and forty-two, as requires that pensions remaining unclaimed for fourteen months after the same have become due, shall be adjusted at the office of the Third Auditor, is hereby repealed; and the failure of any pensioner to claim his or her pension for a period of three years after the same shall have become due shall be deemed presumptive evidence that such pension has legally terminated by reason of the pensioner's death, remarriage, recovery from disability, or otherwise, and the pensioner's name shall be stricken from the rolls, subject to the right of restoration to the same on a new application, with evidence satisfactorily accounting for the failure to claim such pension.

SEC 4 And be it further enacted, That if any officer, soldier, seaman, or enlisted man has died since the fourth day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, or shall hereafter die, leaving a widow entitled to a pension, and a child or children under sixteen years of age by a former wife, each of said children shall be entitled to receive two dollars per month, to commence from the death of their father and continue until they severally attain the age of sixteen years, to be paid to the guardian of such child or children for their use and benefit; Provided, however, That in all cases where such widow is charged with the care, custody and maintenance of such child or children, the said sum of two dollars per month for each of said children shall be paid to her for and during the time she is or may have been so charged with the care, custody, and maintenance of such child or children, subject to the same conditions, provisions and limitations as if they were her own children by her said deceased husband.

SEC 5. And be it further enacted, That in all cases where an increased pension has been or may hereafter be granted to any widow or guardian of the children under sixteen years of age of a deceased soldier or sailor under an act entitled "An act increasing the pensions of widows, and for other purposes," approved July twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, or any subsequent act, such widow, or the guardian of such children, shall not be deprived of such increase by reason of any child or children of such deceased soldier or sailor being the inmate of any home, orphan's asylum or other public or private charitable institution organized for the care and education of soldiers' orphans under the laws of any State, or in any school or institution where such orphan may in whole or in part be maintained or educated at the expense of a State, or of the public

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That all pensions which have been granted in consequence of death occurring or disease contracted, or wounds received since the fourth day of March eighteen hundred and sixty-one, or may hereafter be granted, shall commence from the discharge or from the death of the person on whose account the pension has been or shall hereafter be granted; Provided, That the application for such pension has been or shall hereafter, be filed with the Commissioner of Pensions within five years after the right thereto shall have accrued; except that applications by or in behalf of insane persons and children under sixteen years of age may be filed after the expiration of the said five years if previously thereto they were without guardians or other proper legal representatives.

SEC. 7. And be it further enacted, That immediately upon the passage of this act, or as soon thereafter as may be practicable, it shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Pensions to give public notice of the contents of the foregoing section, particularly at the offices of the several pension agencies; and upon any application by letter or otherwise from or in behalf of any person entitled to the benefit of its provisions, or upon any notification that such person is so entitled to pay or cause to be paid to him all such arrears of pensions as he may be entitled to under the provisions of the said section; and no claim agent or other person shall be entitled to receive any compensation for services in making application for the arrears of pension under this and the preceding section.

SEC 8. And be it further enacted, That section eleven of an act entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts relating to pensions," approved June six eighteen hundred and sixty-six be amended and re-enacted so as to read as follows: "That if an officer, soldier or seaman shall have died of wounds received or disease contracted in the line of duty in the military or naval service of the United States, leaving a widow and a child or children under the age of sixteen years, and it shall be duly certified under seal, by any court having probate jurisdiction, that satisfactory evidence has been produced before such court that the widow aforesaid has abandoned the care of such child or children or is an unsuitable person, by reason of immoral conduct, to have the custody of the same, or on presentation of satisfactory evidence thereof to the Commissioner of Pensions then no pension shall be allowed to such widow until said child or children shall have severally become sixteen years of age, any previous enactment to the contrary notwithstanding; and the child or children aforesaid shall be pensioned in the same manner as if no widow had survived the said officer, soldier, or seaman, and such pension may be paid to the regularly authorized guardian of such child or children."

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That section six of an act entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts relating to pensions," approved June six, eighteen hundred and sixty-six be and the same is hereby amended and re-enacted so as to read as follows: That if any person entitled to a pension has died since March fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, or shall hereafter die while an application for such pension is pending, leaving no widow and no child under sixteen years of age, his or her heirs or legal representatives shall be entitled to receive the accrued pension to which the applicant would have been entitled had the certificate been issued before his or her death.

SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That the remarriage of any widow or dependent mother, otherwise entitled to a pension prior to the application therefor, or to the issue of a pension certificate to her, shall not debar her right to a pension for the period elapsing from the death of her husband or son, on account of whose services and death she may claim a pension, to her remarriage; Provided, however, That nothing in this section shall be construed to repeal or modify the fourth section of an act entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts granting pensions," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty five.

SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That the provisions of the ninth section of an act approved July fourth, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act supplementary to 'An act to grant pensions,'" are hereby continued in force for five years from the fourth day of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

SEC. 12. And be it further enacted, That section one of an act entitled "An act supplementary to the several acts relating to pensions," approved June six, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, shall be so construed as to secure to every person entitled by law before the passage of said act to a less pension than twenty-five dollars per month, who while in the military or naval service and in the line of duty, or in consequence of wounds received or disease contracted therein, having only one eye, shall have lost the same, a pension of twenty five dollars per month

SEC. 13. And be it further enacted, That the third section of an act entitled "An act increasing the pensions of widows and orphans, and for other purposes," approved July twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, shall be so construed as to place all pensioners whose right thereto accrued subsequently to the war of the Revolution, and prior to the fourth day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-one, on the same footing, as to rate of pension, from and after the passage of said act, as those who have been pensioned under acts passed since said fourth day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-one; and the widows of revolutionary soldiers and sailors now receiving a less sum shall hereafter be paid at the rate of eight dollars per month.

SEC 14. And be it further enacted, That all officers in the military or naval service, of the rank of captain in the army or lieutenant in the navy, and of less rank, who have lost a leg or arm in such service and in the line of duty, or in consequence of wounds received or disease contracted therein, shall be entitled to receive an artificial limb on the same terms as privates in the army are now entitled to receive the same.

SEC 15. And be it further enacted, That in all cases pensions heretofore or hereafter granted by special acts of Congress shall be subject to be varied in amount according to the provisions and limitations of the pension laws.

SEC. 16. And be it further enacted, That all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the foregoing provisions of this act be, and the same are hereby repealed.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

AN ACT to amend an act entitled "An act proposing to the State of Texas the establishment of her northern and western boundaries, the relinquishment by the said State of all territory claimed by her, exterior to said boundaries, and of all her claims upon the United States, and to establish a territorial government for New Mexico.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the aforesaid act shall be amended as follows: Every bill which shall have passed the council and house of representatives of the said Territory shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the governor of the Territory; if he approve he shall sign it, but if he do not approve it he shall return it with his objections to the house in which it originated, who shall enter the objections at large upon their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration two thirds of that house shall pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that house, it shall become a law, the governor's objections to the contrary notwithstanding But in such case the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and entered upon the journal of each house respectively. And if the governor shall not return any bill presented to him for approval, after its passage by both houses of the legislature, within three days (Sunday excepted), after such presentation, the same shall become a law in like manner as if the governor had approved it: Provided, however, That the assembly shall not have adjourned sine die during the three days prescribed as above, in which case it shall not become a law

SEC. 2 And be it further enacted, That from and after the passage of this act the secretary of the Territory of New Mexico shall be ex-officio superintendent of public buildings and grounds, and shall have all control and management of all public buildings now erected, in progress of erection or to be hereafter erected, and of all grounds pertaining thereto; and he shall be under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, who shall establish such rules in relation to said public buildings and grounds as in his judgement he may devise, and for his services as such superintendent shall receive an annual salary of one thousand dollars, to take effect from and after the passage of this act; and it shall be the duty of the secretary of said Territory, upon the convening of the legislature thereof, to administer the oath of office to the members elect of the two houses, and the officers thereof when chosen; and no other person shall be competent to administer said oath, save in the absence of the secretary, in which case any one member of either house may administer the oath to the presiding officer elect, and he shall administer the same to the members and other officers: Provided That the annual salary of the secretary of said Territory shall be two thousand dollars per annum from and after the first day of February, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC—No. 125.]

AN ACT to extend the laws of the United State relating to customs, commerce, and navigation over the territory ceded to the United States by Russia, to establish a collection district therein, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the laws of the United States relating to customs, commerce and navigation be, and the same are hereby, extended to and over all the mainland, islands and waters of the territory ceded to the United States by the Emperor of Russia by treaty concluded at Washington, on the thirtieth day of March, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, so far as the same may be applicable thereto.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That all of the said territory, with its ports, harbors, bays, rivers and waters, shall constitute a customs collection district, to be called the district of Alaska, for which said district a port of entry shall be established at some convenient point to be designated by the President, at or near the town of Sitka or New Archangel, and a collector of customs shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, who shall reside at the said port of entry, and who shall receive an annual salary of two thousand five hundred dollars in addition to the usual legal fees and emoluments of the office. But his entire compensation shall not exceed four thousand dollars per annum, or a proportionate sum for a less period of time.

SEC. 3 And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized to make and prescribe such regulations as he may deem expedient for the nationalization of all vessels owned by actual residents of said ceded territory on and since the twentieth day of June, anno Domini eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and which shall continue to have been so owned up to the date of such nationalization, and that from any deputy collector of customs upon whom there has been or shall hereafter be conferred any of the powers of a collector under and by virtue of the twenty-ninth section of the "Act further to prevent smuggling, and for other purposes," approved July eighteen, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, the Secretary of the Treasury shall have power to require bonds in favor of the United States in such amount as the said Secretary shall prescribe for the faithful discharge of official duties by such deputy.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the President shall have power to restrict and regulate or to prohibit the importation and use of fire-arms, ammunition and distilled spirits into and within the said territory. And the exportation of the same from any other port or place in the United States when destined to any port or place in the said territory, and all such arms, ammunition and distilled spirits, exported or attempted to be exported from any port or place in the United States, and destined for such territory, in violation of any regulations that may be prescribed under this section; and all such arms, ammunition and distilled spirits, landed or attempted to be landed, or used at any port or place in said territory, in violation of said regulations, shall be forfeited; and if the value of the same shall exceed four hundred dollars, the vessel upon which the same shall be found, or from which they shall have been landed, together with her tackle, apparel and furniture and cargo, shall be forfeited; and any person wilfully violating such regulation shall, on conviction, be fined in any sum not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprisonment not more than six months. And bonds may be required for a faithful observance of such regulations from the master or owners of any vessel departing from any port in the United States having on board fire-arms, ammunition or distilled spirits, when such vessel is destined to any place in said territory, or if not so destined, when there shall be reasonable ground of suspicion that such articles are intended to be landed therein in violation of law; and similar bonds may also be required on the landing of any such articles in the said territory from the person to whom the same may be consigned

SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That the coasting trade between the said territory and any other portion of the United States shall be regulated in accordance with the provisions of law applicable to such trade between any two great districts.

SEC. 6. And be it further enacted That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to kill any otter, mink, marten, sable or fur seal, or other fur-bearing animal, within the limits of the said territory or in the waters thereof; and any person guilty thereof shall, for each offense, on conviction, be fined in any sum not less than two hundred dollars nor more than one thousand, or imprisoned not more than six months, or both at the discretion of the court, and all vessels, their tackle, apparel, furniture and cargo found engaged in the violation of this act shall be forfeited Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury shall have power to authorize the killing of any of such mink, marten, sable or other fur bearing animal, except fur seals, under such regulations as he may prescribe; and it shall be the duty of the said Secretary to prevent the killing of any fur seal, and to provide for the execution of the provisions of this section until it shall be otherwise provided by law: Provided, That no special privileges shall be granted under this act.

SEC 7. And be it further enacted, That until otherwise provided by law, all violations of this act, and of the several laws hereby extended to the said territory and the waters thereof, committed within the limits of the same, shall be prosecuted in any district court of the United States in California or Oregon, or in the district courts of Washington, and the collector and deputy collectors appointed by virtue of this act, and any person authorized in writing by either of them or by the Secretary of the Treasury, shall have power to arrest persons and seize vessels and merchandise liable to fines, penalties or forfeitures under this and the said other laws, and to keep and deliver over the same to the marshal of some one of the said courts; and said courts shall have original jurisdiction, and may take cognizance of all cases arising under this act and the several laws hereby extended over the territory so ceded to the United States by the Emperor of Russia, as aforesaid, and shall proceed therein in the same manner and with the like effect as if such cases had arisen within the district or territory where the proceedings shall be brought.

SEC 8 And be it further enacted, That in all cases of fine, penalty or forfeiture mentioned and embraced in the act entitled "An act to provide for mitigating or remitting the forfeitures, penalties and disabilities accruing in certain cases therein mentioned" or mentioned in any act in addition or amendatory of said act, that have occurred or may occur in said collection district of Alaska, the Secretary of the Treasury be and he is hereby authorized, if in his opinion the said fine, penalty or forfeiture was incurred without wilful negligence or intention of fraud, to ascertain the facts in such manner and under such regulations as he may deem proper without regard to the provisions of the act above referred to, and upon the said facts so to be ascertained as aforesaid he may exercise all the power of remission conferred upon him by said act, as fully as he might have done had said facts been ascertained under and according to the provisions of said act.

SEC. 9. And be it further enacted, That the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe all needful rules and regulations to carry into effect all parts of this act, except those those especially intrusted to the President alone; and the sum of fifty thousand dollars is hereby appropriated from any unappropriated money in the treasury to carry this act into effect, and meet the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs within the limits of the said territory.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC No. 126.]

AN ACT Authorizing the Manufacturers' National Bank of New York to Change its Location.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Manufacturers' National Bank of New York, now located in the city of New York, is hereby authorized to change its location to the city of Brooklyn whenever the stockholders representing three fourths of the capital of said bank, at a meeting called for that purpose, determine to make such change, the President and Cashier shall execute a certificate under the corporate seal of the bank, specifying such determination, and shall cause the same to be recorded in the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and thereupon such change of location shall be effected and the operations of discount and deposit of said bank shall be carried on in the city of Brooklyn.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That nothing in this act contained shall be so construed as in any manner to release the said bank from any liability, or affect any action or proceeding in law in which the said bank may be a party or interested. And when such change shall have been determined upon as aforesaid, notice thereof and of such change shall be published in at least two daily newspapers in each of the counties of New York and Kings, in the State of New York, for not less than ten days

SEC 3. And be it further enacted, That this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

AN ACT Regulating Judicial Proceedings in Certain Cases, for the Protection of Officers and Agents of the Government, and for the Better Defense of the Treasury against Unlawful Claims

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That all the provisions of section eight of the act of July twenty eight, eighteen hundred and sixty six, entitled "an act to protect the revenue, and for other purposes," and the forms and modes by that section and the twelfth section of the act of March three, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, therein referred to; prescribed for prosecuting suits, withholding execution, and paying judgments against officers of the United States, or other persons engaged in executing the acts relative to captured and abandoned property shall extend and be applied to all suits and proceedings (except those in behalf of the United States) which have been brought, or may hereafter be brought, against any officer or agent of the Government, civil or military, for acts done during the rebellion while acting by virtue or under color of his office or employment; and every defendant in such suit or proceeding having made full defense thereto, and having notified the Attorney General of the United States to appear and defend the same, shall be entitled to the full benefit and protection provided in said section for officers and agents of the government engaged in the collection of the public revenue; and any defendant being aggrieved by any order or direction, certificate, ruling or judgment of any court made or had in any such proceeding, may except thereto and appeal therefrom to the Supreme Court of the United States and have the questions arising there heard and determined.

SEC 2. And be it further enacted, That no action or suit shall be maintained in any court of the United States, or of any State thereof, in the name or in the behalf or interest of any alien, against the United States, or any person, for or on account of any act done or omitted to be done by such person as an officer or agent of the United States, in the administration of the act of Congress entitled "an act to provide for the collection of abandoned property and for the prevention of frauds in insurrectionary districts within the United States," approved March twelve, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, or of the act of Congress entitled "an act in addition to the several acts concerning commercial intercourse between loyal and insurrectionary States, and to provide for the collection of captured and abandoned property, and the prevention of frauds in States declared in insurrection," approved July two, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, or in virtue or under color of the acts of Congress aforesaid, or any other acts of Congress relative to the said insurrectionary States, or to persons or property therein; and to any action or suit which may have been heretofore, or shall hereafter be, instituted by any alien against the United States, or any such person as aforesaid, on account of any act done or omitted to be done as aforesaid, the defendant may and shall plead or allege in bar thereof, that such act was done or omitted to be done, in the administration of one of the acts of Congress aforesaid, or in virtue or under color thereof, and such plea or allegation, if the fact be sustained by the proof, shall be, and shall be deemed and adjudged in law to be, a complete and conclusive bar to any suit or action: Provided, That this section shall not be construed so as to deprive aliens who are citizens or subjects of any Government which accords to citizens of the United States the right to prosecute claims against such Government in its courts, of the privilege of prosecuting claims against the United States in the Court of Claims, as now provided by law.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That it is hereby declared to have been the true intent and meaning of the act approved March twelfth, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, entitled "an act to provide for the collection of abandoned property and for the prevention of frauds in insurrectionary districts within the United States," that the remedy given in cases of seizure made under said act, by preferring claim in the Court of Claims, should be exclusive, precluding the owner of any property taken by agents of the Treasury Department as abandoned or captured property in virtue or under color of said act from suit at common law, or any other mode of redress whatever, before any court or tribunal other than said Court of Claims; and in all cases in which suits of trespass, replevin, detinue, or any other form of action may have been brought and are now pending, or shall hereafter be brought against any person for or on account of private property taken by such person as an officer or agent of the United States, in virtue or under color of the act aforesaid, or the act approved July second, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "an act in addition to the several acts concerning commercial intercourse between loyal and insurrectionary States, and to provide for the collection of captured and abandoned property, and the prevention of frauds in States declared in insurrection," the defendant may and shall plead or allege in bar thereof that such act was done or omitted to be done by him as an officer or agent of the United States in the administration of one of the acts of Congress aforesaid, or in virtue or under color thereof, and such plea or allegation, if the fact be sustained by the proof, shall be, and shall be deemed and adjudged in law to be, a complete and conclusive bar to any such suit or action; Provided, however, That no judgment, recovered in accordance with this act, shall be paid by the United States, unless the amount received by the defendant as the proceeds of the transaction which was the foundation of the suit shall have been paid into the Treasury, except upon an appropriation duly made therefor after a full examination of the claim upon its merits.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 41.]

A RESOLUTION Placing Certain Troops of Missouri on an Equal Footing with Others as to Bounties.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the troops recognized in an act entitled "an act making appropriations for completing the defences of Washington, and for other purposes," approved February thirteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-two, be, and are hereby, considered as placed on an equal footing with the volunteers as to bounties, and that all laws relating to bounties be applicable to them as to other volunteers.

Approved, July 13, 1868.

A RESOLUTION in relation to the Maquoketa river, in the State of Iowa.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the assent of Congress is given to the construction of bridges across the Maquoketa river, in the State of Iowa, with or without draws, as may be provided by the laws of the State of Iowa.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That dams and bridges may be constructed across the Iowa river, in the State of Iowa, above the town of Wapello.

Approved, July 13, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 43.]

JOINT RESOLUTION to extend the time for the completion of the West Wisconsin Railroad.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the time fixed and limited by an act entitled "An act granting lands to aid in the construction of certain railroads in the State of Wisconsin," approved May five, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, for the completion of the railroad from Tomah, in the county of Monroe, to Saint Croix river or lake, between townships twenty-five and thirty one, be, and the same is hereby, further extended for a period of three years to the West Wisconsin Railroad Company, a corporation established by the laws of the State of Wisconsin, and which, by the laws of said State, is entitled to the land grant made in the second section of said act: Provided, That if said railway company shall not have completed said railroad from Tomah to Black River Falls on or before the expiration of one year from the passage of this resolution, this act shall be null and void.

Approved, July 13, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 44.]

A RESOLUTION excluding from the electoral College votes of States lately in rebellion which shall not have been reorganized.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That none of the States whose inhabitants were lately in rebellion shall be entitled to representation in the electoral college for the choice of President or Vice President of the United States, nor shall any electoral votes be received or counted from any of such States, unless at the time prescribed by law for the choice of electors the people of such States, pursuant to the acts of Congress in that behalf, shall have, since the fourth day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, adopted a constitution of State government under which a State government shall have been organized and shall be in operation, nor unless such election of electors shall have been held under the authority of such Constitution and government, and such State shall have also become entitled to representation in Congress, pursuant to the acts of Congress in that behalf: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to apply to any State which was represented in Congress on the fourth day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

SCHUYLER COLFAX,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.
B. F. WADE,
President of the Senate pro tempore.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES,
July 20, 1868.

The President of the United States having returned to the Senate, in which it originated, the bill entitled "A resolution excluding from the electoral college votes of States lately in rebellion which shall not have been reorganized," with his objections thereto, the Senate proceeded, in pursuance of the Constitution, to reconsider the same; and

Resolved, That the said bill do pass, two-thirds of the Senate agreeing to pass the same.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The Secretary of the Senate was announced, asking concurrence in the following Senate bills—Nos. 244 and 246—and also informing the House that the Senate had concurred in House bill No. 231.

Under a suspension of the rules Mr. Evans offered the following:

House bill No. 252, joint resolution, which passed its first and second readings, and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Under a suspension of the rules Mr. Pierce, of Livingston, introduced House bill No. 255.

Passed its first and second readings, and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. Isabelle, of Orleans:

House bill No. 254.

First and second readings and referred to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. Burrel, of St. John the Baptist:

House bill No. 253, an act to enforce the thirteenth article of the Constitution of Louisiana.

An act to enforce the provisions of the thirteenth article of the Constitution of Louisiana.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That all persons shall enjoy equal rights and privileges upon any conveyance of a public character and all places of business or of public resort, or for which a license is required by either State, parish or municipal authority, shall be deemed places of a public character, and shall be open to the accommodation and patronage of all persons without distinction or discrimination on account of race or color.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, etc., That in case of violation of any of the provisions of the thirteenth article of the Constitution of this State as repeated and re-enacted in the first section of this act, any person injured thereby shall have his remedy in the courts by action at law; and for the enforcement of speedy justice, any suit brought under the provisions of this act shall be preferred upon the docket of the court in which it shall be instituted, provided that the right to demand trial by jury in such case shall not be infringed.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That all acts, parts of acts, and ordinances in force in this State contrary to the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed and of non-effect.

SEC. 3 Be it further enacted, etc., That this act shall go into effect from and after its passage.

First and second readings, and referred to the Committee on Judiciary.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Substitute for House bill No. 161, entitled "an act to protect the health of the city of New Orleans, to locate stock landing and slaughterhouses and to incorporate the Stock Landing and Slaughterhouse Company," being under consideration.

Mr. McVean, of Caddo, moved to adopt the substitute, and called for the previous question.

Main question ordered.

On the adoption of the substitute, Messrs. Noble and Abbot called for the yeas and nays, resulting as follows:

Yeas: Alexander, Antoine, Belot, Deslonde, Dewees, Dupart, Evans, Esnard, Guigonet, Garstkamp, Hill, Honore, Harper, Holland, Hall, Heidenhain, Isabelle, Le Blanc, Leroy, Morris, Mabier, McVean, Murrell, Melvin, Mathews, Pearce, Raymond, Reese, Sterrett, Simms, Taylor, Tureaud, Walsh, Washington, Wilson, William C. An act to take the sense of the qualified voters of the parish of Carroll as to the expediency of retaining the seat of justice at Floyd or removing the same either to the town of Providence or to Elton, on the Mississippi river, in said parish.

Joint resolution tendering the thanks of the General Assembly to Mr. E. Gotthiel for the able manner in which he represented the State of Louisiana at the late Paris Exposition.

An act levying a special tax to provide for the payment of the past due interest on the bonds of the State, outstanding warrants, certificates of indebtedness and convention warrants.

F. C. REMICK,
Private Secretary.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, State of Louisiana, New Orleans, September 30, 1868.

To the Speaker of the House of Representatives:

I am instructed by his Excellency, the Governor, to inform the House of Representatives that he has approved and signed:

An act to incorporate and establish the New Orleans News Association.

F. C. REMICK,
Private Secretary.

ORDER OF THE DAY.

Reports of the Committee on Elections and Qualifications being under consideration,

Mr. Curell, of Orleans, requested the House to postpone the further consideration of the reports until to-morrow.

Mr. McMillen, of Carroll, moved that the request be granted, and that further consideration of the reports be postponed until to-morrow.

Mr. Gair, of East Feliciana, moved to lay the motion on the table.

Carried.

The following majority report was read:

ROOMS OF COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS AND QUALIFICATIONS, House of Representatives, State of Louisiana, New Orleans, September 24, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned, composing a majority of your Committee on Elections and Qualifications, to whom was submitted the contested election case of the parish of East Baton Rouge, wherein V. M. Lange and Robert Lange contest the seats of B. E. Chaney and John S. Huguet, do report to your honorable body that they have carefully examined the evidence adduced, and have arrived at the following conclusions:

1. That B. E. Chaney received a majority of 758 votes over V. M. Lange; and John S. Huguet had an excess of 754 votes over Robert Lange, and sufficient evidence has not been presented to overcome these majorities.

2. The charges of intimidation, violence and fraud are disproven by the rebutting testimony.

3. The evidence presented shows that several colored voters testified that peace and order reigned on both days of election.

The committee overruled the exceptions of defendants to the trial of this cause, and all parties, by mutual consent, submitted the evidence as per printed report, and after more than twenty days had elapsed, the contestants demanded that the case be reopened for the purpose of allowing them to reject certain rebutting testimony, which they had already accepted, which was properly refused them according to law.

Hence, the premises considered, we are of the opinion that Messrs. B. E. Chaney and John S. Huguet were fairly elected, and we recommend that they be confirmed in their seats as Representatives of the parish of East Baton Rouge.

Respectfully submitted.
P. JONES YORKE,
Chairman;
AMOS KENT,
JAMES S. MATHEWS.

The following minority report, signed by Messrs. Lott, of Rapides, and F. C. Antoine, of Orleans, was read:

ROOM OF COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS AND QUALIFICATIONS, House of Representatives. State of Louisiana, New Orleans, September 24, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned, members of your Committee on Elections and Qualifications, to whom was committed the contested election case of the parish of East Baton Rouge, wherein Victor M. Lange and Robert Lange contest the seats of B. E. Chaney and John S. Huguet, beg leave to report to your honorable body that they differ with the majority report for the following reasons:

1. That the chairman of the committee would not allow Robert Lange, contestant, to appear to file exceptions to certain rebutting testimony.

2. That witnesses who were charged with fraud were allowed to come forward and purge themselves by their own oaths of said charges, which is contrary to law.

3. That the evidence of all colored men who testified in favor of Chaney and Huguet, and who made their mark, is inadmissible, by reason of said marks being unaccompanied by any attesting witnesses, and the law provides that two attesting witnesses shall sign in such instances in all contested election cases.

4. That the certificates of General Sykes and Lieutenant McGee are inadmissable by reason of not being sworn to according to law.

5. That the evidence shows clearly to our mind that immense frauds were perpetrated; and that Victor M. Lange and Robert Lange would have been elected had the election been conducted fairly and honestly.

And we feel justified for the foregoing reasons to recommend that the said Victor M. Lange and Robert Lange be allowed to take their seats in your honorable body as Representatives of the parish of East Baton Rouge.

Respectfully submitted.
HARRY LOTT.
F. C. ANTOINE.

The following minority report, signed by Mr. Burrel, of St. John Baptist, was read:

ROOM OF COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS AND QUALIFICATIONS, House of Representatives, State of Louisiana New Orleans, September 24, 1860.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned, a member of your Committee on Elections and Qualifications, feels it incumbent upon him to dissent from the two reports made to your honorable body in regard to the contested election case of V. M. Lange and Robert Lange versus B. E. Chaney and John S. Huguet of the parish of East Baton Rouge.

I am satisfied from the evidence presented that frauds and intimidation were practiced in all the wards of said parish.

I do not believe, consequently, that there has been a fair election, and am of the opinion that neither contestants or defendants are entitled to seats in the General Assembly, and respectfully recommend that your honorable body do order a new election for two Representatives in the aforesaid parish of East Baton Rouge.

Respectfully submitted.
DENNIS BURREL.

REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Claims submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

COMMITTEE ROOMS, October 1, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Claims would respectfully report that they have carefully investigated the claim for compensation submitted to them by Edward Gotthiel for his services as State agent and Chief Commissioner of Louisiana at the late Paris Exposition, and have duly weighed the reasons urged by his Excellency the Governor in his message to your honorable body of the second ultimo in behalf of an appropriation in favor of Mr. Gotthiel, which shall be a suitable remuneration for the expenses incurred and for his faithful and successful exertions in behalf of the State, and have come to the conclusion that justice requires that a bill for his relief should be passed by the General Assembly. From home and foreign journals, and especially from our own community, Commissioner Gotthiel has received the commendation due for his laudable, untiring and eminently successful labors for the material interests of Louisiana. The vote of thanks which recently passed both Houses of the General Assembly is but an evidence of the manner in which his efforts are appreciated by his fellow-citizens. Mr. Gotthiel, however, expended a large sum of money and devoted two years of steady exertion to secure a proper representation and recognition of the skill, industry and resources of the State at the Exposition. Governor Wells, who appointed him, did so with the assurance that the State would award him due remuneration for his services. Under these circumstances, considering so good a laborer to be worthy of his hire, and believing that the honor of the State requires that this justice should be done Mr. Gotthiel, we respectfully recommend the passage of the following bill.

J. H. McVEAN,
Chairman Committee on Claims;
JOHN GARSTKAMP.

House bill No. 263, an act for the relief of Edward Gotthiel.

Under a suspension of the rules, the bill was read twice, and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

The Committee on Ways and Means submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

The committee have considered the above named bill, recommending certain licenses. The licenses on photographers, tanners, soap and candle makers, retail grocers and confectioners, are provided for in the general revenue bill now before the House.

The licenses for Notaries Public and for Pension and Prize Agents, may be provided for in an amendment to the general revenue bill now before the Committee of the Whole of the House of Representatives.

FRANK MOREY,
Chairman pro tem. Committee of Ways and Means.

The bill was laid on the table subject to call.

The report was agreed to.

The Committee on Claims submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

COMMITTEE ROOMS,
October, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Claims, to whom was referred House bill No. 254, entitled an act for the relief of J. Edmondston, appropriating eleven hundred and thirty-three dollars ($1133), to pay a certificate of State indebtedness issued by the Auditor of Public Accounts, duly audited and settled by G. M. Wickliffe, with all the requisite vouchers on file at his office, is hereby favorably reported upon by said committee.

J. H. McVEAN,
Chairman.

The bill was referred to the Committee of the Whole.

The Committee on Enrollment submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

ENROLLMENT DEPARTMENT,
House of Representatives
New Orleans, October 3, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

Your Committee on Enrollment have the honor to report that the following bills have been duly engrossed, to wit:

House bill No. 230, joint resolution requesting the Senators and Representatives from Louisiana in Congress to propose an act repealing any laws now in force by Congress prohibiting the State from organizing a State militia.

House bill No. 215, an act to provide for the sale of the one million five hundred and eighty-six thousand dollars in bonds undisposed of, issued in accordance to the provisions of the act entitled an act to provide means for the construction of levees by the issue of bonds of the State for four millions of dollars and to provide for the redemption of said bonds, approved March 26, 1867, or to exchange any portion of such bonds at market price for Auditor's warrants issued under authority of the present General Assembly.

Respectfully, etc.,
O. H. BREWSTER,
Chairman Enrolling Committee.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE.

The select committee appointed to examine into the charge of violence in the contested election case of Lafayette parish, submitted the following reports, which were received and read:

MAJORITY REPORT.

STATE OF LOUISIANA,
House of Representatives,
New Orleans, September 21, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned, your select committee appointed in accordance with the following resolution, adopted September 10, 1867, to wit:

That a select committee of five be appointed by the Speaker of the House, who will proceed to the parish of Lafayette to examine into the charge of violence alleged by the contestant, and report the same to the House, respectfully make the following report:

That on Tuesday, the fifteenth instant, your Committee, in obedience to the above instructions, proceeded to the parish of Lafayette, and carefully examined the principal inhabitants of the town of Vermilionville and its surroundings, and took testimony, in order to arrive directly at the charges of violence, if any there were, which testimony we append to this report.

We found the utmost peace and order reigning in the parish, and found that no act of violence had been perpetrated by any one on account of political opinion, and the accounts so charged were purely a fabrication of Mr. Casey, the contestant, and were only the offspring of his imagination.

At the time of taking the testimony, both Messrs. Casey and Judice were present and attended all the sittings of your committee.

The testimony of the inhabitants of the parish "attached," clearly confirms what your committee herein states.

The affidavit of Mr. Alexander Raymond, colored, Justice of the Peace of the town of Vermilion, states that no impediment is thrown in his way to carry out the functions of the law in all its details, nor does he know nor has he heard of any violence committed at the polls at the election or during any period since.

Your committee appends the testimony of sixteen inhabitants of the parish, seven of whom are colored men, well known, and some holding official positions, and we suggest the careful examination of their statements.

Your committee is of the opinion that the contestant, Mr. Casey, could easily have taken evidence, had he so desired, as there was nothing to prevent him so doing, except that the evidence so taken would have been detrimental to him.

We would call the attention of the House to the testimony of Mr. Rice, agent of the Freedmen's Bureau of the parish, who acted as a judge of the election.

In closing our report, we beg to reiterate what we stated, that we found the parish of Lafayette, a law abiding section of the country, order reigning, and utmost peace existing therein.

We beg to return our thanks for the many courtesies extended to us by the Superintendent, Mr. G. W. R. Bayley, and the Conductor, Mr. H. P. Bayley, of the New Orleans, Opelousas and Great Western Railroad.

Respectfully submitted.
WILLIS PRESCOTT,
Chairman of Committee;
P. JONES YORKE,
J. H. DeGRANGE.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Having been appointed a member of the committee to proceed to the parish of Lafayette, to inquire into the facts in relation to the contested election case of Lafayette parish, I beg leave to report as follows:

That notwithstanding the apparent peace and quiet said to exist in the parish of Lafayette, and notwithstanding the apparently calm and unruffled surface of political affairs, I am clearly convinced that the loyal people of that parish are afraid to express their real sentiments; and I know from personal observation that the majority of colored men who testified before your committee were deterred from personal fear from telling the whole truth.

Mr. Judice had every facility for procuring witnesses, while the majority of witnesses whom Mr. Casey wished to summon resided in the country, and it is doubtful if they could have been prevailed upon to testify under the circumstances.

The colored man at whose house Mr. Casey boarded, informed me that five of his cows were killed and his two horses were stolen, because, as he justly believes, he boards Mr. Casey and Mr. Williams, the teacher of the colored school in Vermilionville.

The colored man above referred to, and also his wife, informed me that they live in daily expectation of the burning of the schoolhouse, as they were warned that such would be the case. They are afraid to take any steps leading to the recovery of their stolen property, as they believe their house would be burned down over their heads.

I conversed with more than fifty colored men in Vermilionville, and they assured me they were satisfied that if Mr. Casey had remained there much longer he would have been roughly handled, if not killed.

Mr. Williams, the school teacher, says he is satisfied that if the colored people should testify in Mr. Casey's behalf, they would be driven from their homes on the plantations, if not actually killed. I conversed with the colored man who was present when Mr. Casey was assaulted by white men on the highway, and he did not feel at liberty to testify to the facts.

However much I may regret that I can not coincide with the majority of the committee in their report, I am satisfied that the charges brought by Mr. Casey, the contestant, are fully sustained.

Respectfully submitted.
HARRY LOTT.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
State of Louisiana,
New Orleans, September 21, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—As a member of the committee sent by your honorable body to investigate certain acts of violence in the parish of Lafayette, I have the honor to submit the following report:

Witnesses, both white and colored, were examined by your committee in relation to the peace of the parish, and the reported acts of violence upon one Michael Casey.

The testimony of the white men, as will be seen by the affidavits, is favorable to peace and good order in the parish, and shows a non-interference with the said Michael Casey; but from observation and a knowledge of the class of people who constitute a majority of the people of that parish, and who are firm friends and supporters of the J. N. Judice who claims a seat in your honorable body, I am convinced that it was the intention of these people to have as good a report as possible from your committee, and with that idea their statements were as favorable to secure that object as their conscience would permit.

The affidavits of the colored men, as they will show, are almost a repetition of those made by the white men, but it is my firm belief that those men did not testify as they would desire for fear of violence after your committee left.

One colored man, before he was sworn, stated to me that if he was sworn he would not dare to tell the truth for fear of his life being taken. He was afterward sworn, and his statements were contrary to the statements he made to me previously.

I am firmly of the opinion that any person who advocates the principles of the Republican party openly and boldly would be in danger of violence from the opposite party. I do not believe there was any danger of Mr. Casey losing his life, but I believe he would have met with violent opposition had he endeavored to secure evidence in his behalf in the election case between Mr. Judice and himself.

From private information of creditable nature I am convinced that threats were made against Mr. Casey on account of his being obnoxious to those people as a politician, and there is no doubt that had he remained in the parish he would have met with violence.

I think that any person could live in that parish in perfect peace, provided he kept aloof from politics, but if he espoused the principles of the Republican party he would meet with that vile slander and abuse that is hurled upon the Republican party throughout the State, and would no doubt meet with violence from the disloyal element of that parish.

JAMES. S. MATHEWS.

On motion of Mr. Curell, of Orleans, the above reports were referred to the Committee on Elections and Qualifications.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The Secretary of the Senate was announced, asking concurrence in the following Senate bills:

REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTTEES.

The Committee on Immigration submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION,
House of Representatives of Louisiana.
New Orleans, October 5, 1868.

This committee, to which was referred that portion of the Governor's message of the third instant having reference to the subject of immigration, and the accompanying report of Mr. Edward Gotthiel, Chief Commissioner to the Paris Exposition, on the same subject, respectfully report as follows:

Foreign immigration is, in the opinion of the committee, a matter of the utmost importance to the people of this State, and we regard it as the surest means of adding to our wealth, prosperity and importance. No State in the Federal Union is so much in need of an annual influx of immigrants as Louisiana, and none is so capable of offering to them valuable inducements, and yet, strange to say, of the two hundred thousand immigrants who landed in the United States within the last twelve months, scarcely any are now to be found within the borders of this State. We fully agree with Mr. Gotthiel that, by the adoption of a proper system for the dissemination of information in Europe and for soliciting and inducing immigration hither, such as is now being successfully operated by other States, very great advantages will be certain to accrue to us, and we fully concur with him in the recommendation that something should at once be done to this end, and especially that a geographical and topographical map be at once prepared for dissemination abroad, showing the advantages of our gulf coast, the course of the Mississippi river and its many navigable tributaries, the locality of our valuable sugar, cotton and grain producing lands, and the railroads which connect us with the great thoroughfares of the continent, together with some statistical information as to our great resources and immense capabilities.

The proprietors of large tracts of land bordering on navigable streams and railroads, which are now unoccupied, should be induced to unite in some plan for bringing these lands into market by offering them by sale or lease to immigrants, on such terms as will prove to them an inducement to come and remain among us.

Your committee would further recommend that the Legislature extend liberal aid to any enterprise of this sort, in which our citizens may see fit to embark.

For the furtherance of these several projects your committee deem it necessary that the State at once employ some competent person to collect such statistics as may now exist bearing on this subject, and to further compile such as may be attainable, together with a geographical and topographical map such as is mentioned in Commissioner Gotthiel's report, and that the same be published together in one volume with translations of the same in such foreign languages as may be deemed necessary, and that measures be at once taken to have the same distributed among the people from whom we may expect valuable acquisitions.

Your committee is fully convinced that a person well acquainted with all that concerns our State and who is capable of explaining it in the languages spoken by the people from whence the immigrants may come, would be of the greatest advantage to Louisiana if employed in Europe to carry out such measures as may be deemed advisable in this connection.

Your committee further submit and recommend for adoption the accompanying bill entitled "an act to encourage immigration to the State of Louisiana, and for the appointment of a statistical and foreign agent of immigration."

HARRY LOTT,
Chairman Committee on Immigration.

On motion of Mr. Heidenhain, of Orleans, the House granted him until to-morrow to make a minority report.

Under a suspension of the rules, the bill reported by the Committee on Immigration passed its first and second readings, and was referred to the Committee of the Whole and 150 copies ordered to be printed.

The Committee on Enrollment submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

ENROLLMENT DEPARTMENT,
House of Representatives,
New Orleans, La., October 5, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

Your Committee on Enrollment begs leave to report as duly engrossed Senate bill No. 235, an act making appropriations for the general expenses of the State, for the unexpired term of the year ending the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight; and also duly enrolled House bill No. 176, an act to fix and determine the salaries of the Board of Police Commissioners of the city of New Orleans, establishing a Board of Police Commissioners for the city of New Orleans, approved July 9, 1868.

Respectfully submitted.
O. H. BREWSTER,
Chairman Committee on Enrollment.

Under a suspension of the rules, Mr. Morey, of Ouachita, introduced:

House bill No. 269, an act appropriating the sum of $100,000 for the mileage, per diem and contingent expenses of the General Assembly.

First and second readings, and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Under a suspension of the rules Mr. Isabelle, of Orleans, introduced:

House bill No. 271, an act amending the first section of an act entitled an act making a new division of the State of Louisiana into five Congressional Districts.

First reading.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Senate bill No. 68, an act requiring a special term of the Supreme Court, to be holden at Monroe, Louisiana, and fixing the term thereof, which was under consideration when the House adjourned on Saturday, was taken up and read.

Mr. Morey moved to amend by striking out in the first section, after the words on the, "first," and insert "third."

The amendment was adopted and the bill as amended placed on its third reading, final passage and notice of the amendment ordered to be sent to the Senate.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
State of Louisiana
New Orleans, October 5, 1868.

To the Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

I am instructed by his Excellency, the Governor, to inform the House of Representatives that he has approved and signed:

An act to provide for the sale of one million five hundred and eighty-six thousand dollars in bonds undisposed of, issued in accordance to the provisions of the act entitled an act to provide means for the construction of levees by the issue of bonds of the State for four millions of dollars and to provide for the redemption of said bonds, approved March 26, 1867, or to exchange any portion of such bonds at market price for Auditor's warrants issued under warrants issued under the authority of the present General Assembly.

F. C. REMICK,
Private Secretary.

BILLS ON THIRD READING.

House bill No. 239, an act for the relief of certain bondholders, authorizing the issue of new bonds providing for their payment and declaring invalid certain treasury notes issued in aid of the rebellion.

Mr. Dewees, of Bienville, moved that the reading in detail be dispensed with.

Mr. McMillen moved to lay the motion on the table.

The motion to postpone was laid on the table.

The motion that the bill be considered engrossed was lost by a rising vote of nine yeas, eleven nays.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Mr. Ray, from the Judiciary Committee, made the following report:

The Committee on Judiciary have had under advisement the question submitted to them by resolution of the Senate as to when the present session of the General Assembly would come to a close by constitutional limitation.

The first question that arises in this inquiry is, when did the present session commence?

According to the provisians of articles 157 and 159 of the Constitution, the General Assembly is required to hold its first session on the third Monday after the official promulgation made by the chairman of the Committee of Seven, appointed by the Convention, of the result of the election.

The twenty-second June last was the third Monday after the promulgation of the result of the election, and the members of the General Assembly were notified to convene in the city of New Orleans on the twenty-second day of June, and most of the members were present in New Orleans on that day, ready to enter on the discharge of their duties, but were prevented from doing so on account of a military order issued by the military commander of this district.

Under the provisions of an act of Congress passed about that time, the Governor was authorized to convene the General Assembly by proclamation, and in pursuance to this law the Governor issued his proclamation convening the General Assembly on the twenty-ninth June, on which day the members of the General Assembly convened and commenced their organization and have been in session ever since.

It is clear, the session of the General Assembly is to be counted from the one of those dates, either the twenty second or twenty-ninth June. Under the provisions of the Constitution they should have convened on the twenty-second June. At least, if they did not organize on that day, but did organize on some subsequent day within the one hundred and twenty days, it appears to us the one hundred and twenty days should be counted from the day the General Assembly should have convened. But inasmuch as by the act of Congress the State was under a military or provisional Government until the organization of the State Government under the Constitution, and that organization was not effected until the twenty-ninth June, which was the earliest day it was possible to convene without resistance to military orders. We therefore come to the conclusion that the present session of the General Assembly commenced its session legally on the twenty-ninth June, and that the one hundred and twenty days it is authorized by the thirty-ninth article of the Constitution to sit are to be counted from that day.

The thirty-ninth article of the Constitution amongst other things provides that "no session (of the General Assembly) shall extend beyond the period of sixty days, to date from its commencement; and any legislative action had after the expiration of said period of sixty days shall be null and void; but the first General Assembly that shall convene after the adoption of this Constitution may continue in session for one hundred and twenty days." It will be observed that the first clause of the above quotation speaks of a "period of sixty days to date from its commencement." The interpretation of similar provisions of previous Constitutions was that the sixty days were to be counted from the commencement of the session, counting Sunday and holidays, as well as the days of actual session.

The latter part of the above quotation authorizing the present session to "continue one hundred and twenty days," seems to us as applying to the period of one hundred and twenty days from the commencement of the session, counting Sundays and holidays, as well as days of actual session.

There arises another question which it may be as well to discuss; that is, can the General Assembly take a recess under the provisions of the Constitution? That is, when they have sat thirty days, can they take a recess for say seventy days, and then meet and fill out the period they might have sat in the first instance? We do not find any warrant in the Constitution to justify taking a recess. The article thirty-eight of the Constitution prohibits either House from adjourning for more than three days without the consent of the other House. It seems to us that the General Assembly has no constitutional right to take a recess during the period they may sit, to go beyond that period.

The committee recommend the following joint resolutions:

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That the session of the present General Assembly is to be counted as commencing on the twenty-ninth day of June, 1868, and that by constitutional limitation it will expire on the twenty-sixth day of October, 1868, and that it is not competent for the General Assembly to take a recess that will enable them to sit after the period of one hundred and twenty days, counting from the twenty-ninth day of June.

Sec. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That the General Assembly do close its present session on Monday, the twentieth day of October, A. D. 1868.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN RAY,
Chairman Committee on Judiciary.

Mr. Ray: I move that the rules be suspended in order that the report be received.

Rules suspended and the report received.

Mr. Ray: I ask for a suspension of the rules to put the annexed joint resolution on its first reading.

Nays: Poindexter, Smith, Whitney—3.

The rules were suspended and the bill read.

Mr. Ray: I move that this bill be considered engrossed.

Adopted.

Under a further suspension of the rules, the bill was read a third time and finally adopted with its title.

Mr. Poindexter, from the Enrollment Committee reported as duly enrolled Senate bills Nos. 231, 162, 285 and Senate joint resolution No. 28.

Mr. Campbell, from the Committee of the City Delegation, presented the following report:

SENATE CHAMBER,
New Orleans, October 17, 1868.

To the Honorable President and Members of the Senate:

The undersingned Senators from the parish of Orleans and Jefferson, and to whom was referred the bill entitled "An act to aid in the construction of the New Orleans and Ship Island Canal, for the purpose of more effectually leveeing, draining and reclaiming swamp land in the rear of the city of New Orleans," beg leave to submit the following report thereon:

The proposed canal follows natural depression of the surface to the Bayou Gentilly, and thence to the Rigolets, and it is the most comprehensive and practicable route whereby the drainage of the city can be efficiently and economically accomplished.

The present drainage system is unscientific, impracticable and expensive, and so far promises nothing but an indefinite succession of enormous taxes with no benefits resulting therefrom. The proposed canal will drain the whole area from the river to the lake as it can never be done otherwise, at no greater expense to the city than its present useless system, while the aid thus given to it will be reimbursed by an expenditure of millions of foreign capital, and by large Congressional appropriations which which we have reasonable assurances will be given to an improvement of such great national importance.

The reclamation of the swamp lands of the city, the extension of this metropolis to the lake, the immense addition to its wharf and shipping front, the increased facilities for the reshipment of Western produce, and the diminution of the present injurious charges upon sea-going vessels to be effected by this great enterprise, afford arguments for the bill which are self-evident. The achievement of these great results will constitute New Orleans, for the first time, in fact, what she was destined by nature to be, the great commercial and financial centre of the Mississippi Valley, and the distributing point for all that magnificent territory of European commerce.

When to the foregoing consideration is added the fact that no part of the revenues appropriated by the bill can be received by the company until their entesprise is an accomplished fact, and the canal, as to the purposes of drainage, entirely completed, the undersigned believe that no reasonable or valid objection to the bill can be urged, and they therefore recommend its passage.

All of which is respectfully submited.

HUGH J. CAMPBELL,
A. B. BACON,
T. V. COUPLAND,
C. C. PACKARD,
P. B. S. PINCHBACK,
SAM. M. TODD,
J. J. MONETTE.
MORTIMER F. SMITH,
G. H. BRAUGHN.

Mr. Wittgenstein: I ask for a suspension of the rules to receive the report.

Rules suspended by a rising vote of 18 yeas, 1 nay.

Mr. Bacon: I move that the bill be printed.

Lost.

Mr. Campbell: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up the bill.

Rules suspended and the bill read.

The bill was taken up section by section.

The first section was read.

Mr. Ray: I move that the bill be referred to the Committees on Internal Improvements and of the city delegation jointly, by them to be printed, and that it be made the special order for next Tuesday.

Adopted.

Mr. Wittgenstein, from the Enrollment Committee, reported as duly engrossed House bill No. 283, Senate bill No. 279 and Senate joint resolution No. 34.

Mr. Smith, from the Committee on Elections and Returns, presented the following report:

A majority of your committee, after a careful revision of the evidence herewith submitted, taken in the case of George W. Ragan, who contests the seat of R. H. Day, respectfully submit the following as the conclusion arrived at, and ask that your honorable body adopt the resolution appended to this report. It appears from the official report of Major General Buchanan, then commanding this military district, that R. H. Day received two thousand and sixty-four (2064) votes, and that George W. Ragan received thirteen hundred and fifty-seven (1357) votes, and that R. H Day was elected by seven hundred and seven (707) majority. It also appears by the official returns, taken from the books at headquarters of this military district, that eighteen (18) white and thirteen hundred and thirty-three (1333) colored voted for the Constitution, and that twelve hundred and sixty-nine (1269) white and eight hundred and forty five (845) colored voted against the Constitution, and that the majority against the Constitution was seven hundred and sixty-three (763 )

It also appears by the evidence that the number of registered voters in the parish of East Baton Rouge were three thousand (3000) colored and fifteen hundred (1500) white. Total registered voters forty-five hundred (4500). Total votes cast thirty-four hundred and sixty-five (3465). This therefore shows that ten hundred and thirty-five (1035, registered voters, who had a right to vote did not vote in the election on the seventeenth and eighteenth days of April last, at which the two candidates were voted for. It is also shown that George W. Ragan, received six more votes than the Constitution, and any pretence that he was an unpopular candidate is refuted by the vote above given for the Constitution, and that he even run ahead of his ticket.

Your committee can not resist the conclusion that, had a fair election been held, and no intimidation or violence been used, and the colored voters been allowed a fair chance to go to the polls and vote as they desired, that George W. Ragan would have been elected Senator from the parish of East Baton Rouge.

Resolved, That the Hon. R H. Day is not entitled to his seat in this body by reason of the fraud and violence used at the election on the seventeenth and eighteenth days of April last, and that the contestant, George W. Ragan, be and he is hereby declared entitled to take his seat as Senator from the Thirteenth Senatorial District, State of Louisiana, and that he be sworn to fulfill the duties of the above named office.

MORTIMER F. SMITH,
GEORGE Y. KELSO.
ROBERT POINDEXTER,
JAMES B. LEWIS.

Mr. Thompson: I ask for time to make a minority report in the same case.

Time granted.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Mr. Lynch:

The yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Wittgenstein—1.

Nays: Anderson, Antoine, Bacon, Coupland, Day, François, Jenks, Jewell, Kelso, Lewis, Lynch, Monette, Packard, Poindexter, Pollard, Ray, Todd, Wilcox—19.

The motion to postpone was lost.

The first and second sections were read and adopted.

The third section was read.

Mr. Wittgenstein: I move to strike out the section.

Lost by a rising vote of one yea to nineteen nays.

Section three was adopted.

Section four was read and adopted.

The bill was adopted as a whole.

The bill was considered engrossed.

Mr. Packard: I ask for a suspension of the rules to put the bill on its third reading.

Mr. Wittgenstein: I call for a division.

The rules were suspended by a rising vote of nineteen yeas, one nay, and the bill was read a third time and finally adopted with its title.

Mr. Ray: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up Senate bill No. 281, an act to exempt from taxation the Workingmen's Mutual Life Insurance Society of Louisiana.

Rules suspended and the bill read.

The bill was considered engrossed.

Under a further suspension of the rules the bill was read a third time, and finally adopted with its title.

Mr. Anderson: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up Senate bill No. 252, an act for the relief of Wm. G. Bell, of the parish of St. Landry.

Rules suspended and the bill read.

The bill was considered engrossed.

Under a further suspension of the rules the bill was read a third time and finally adopted with its title.

The following message from the Governor was read:

JOURNAL OF THE SENATE.

Ninety-Sixth Day's Session.

MONDAY, October 19, 1868.

The Senate was called to order by the President at twelve o'clock M.

The roll was called; present, the following members:

Anderson, Antoine, Bacon, Beares, Braughn, Campbell, Coupland, Darrall, Day, Foute, François, Futch, Jenks, Jewell, Kelso, Lewis, Lynch, Monette, Ogden, O'Hara, Packard, Pinchback, Poindexter, Pollard, Ray, Smith, Todd, Whitney, Wilcox, Witgenstein—30.

Prayer by Rev. Mr. Clark.

On motion of Mr. Ray, the reading of the minutes was dispensed with.

Mr. Ray, from the Committee on the Judiciary, reported unfavorably upon Senate bill No. 151, an act for the relief of W. W. Handlin.

Mr. Darrall, from the Enrollment Committee, reported as duly enrolled Senate bill No. 235.

Mr. O'Hara, from the Committee on Elections and Returns, presented the following minority report:

To the Honorable President and Members of the Senate of Louisiana:

In the case of George W. Ragan vs. R. H. Day, the undersigned can not agree with the majority of the committee, and begs leave to submit the following minority report:

From the evidence adduced, the undersigned is fully convinced that no fair and impartial election took place at Baton Rouge on April the seventeenth and eighteenth, 1868. It is in evidence that the ballot boxes, police and others had been controlled by parties in the interest of the Mayor and Sheriff Bird, the Mayor (J. E. Elam) being then in office and a candidate for re-election. It is also proven that more than one thousand voters were prevented by intimidation from voting. The undersigned can not agree with the majority in the presumption that the said one thousand voters would have voted for G. W. Ragan. The undersigned, therefore, recommends to this honorable body that the election be set aside, and the seat of R. H Day be declared vacant and that the Governor be instructed to order a new election.

PATRICK O'HARA.

Mr. Thompson, also from the Committee on Elections and Returns, presented the following minority report:

ROOMS SENATE COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS,
New Orleans, October 19, 1868.

To the Honorable President and Members of the Senate of the State of Louisiana:

The undersigned, a member of the Senate Committee on Elections, having examined with all the care to which, from its importance, it is entitled, the evidence submitted by George W. Ragan, contesting the seat of the Hon. R. H. Day, as well as that presented by Dr. Day himself, and differing, and honestly differing, with the majority of his colaborers in the work assigned them by your honorable body, submits the following minority report:

A careful examination of the immense mass of testimony taken in this case presents the following:

1. That the list of registered voters in the parish of East Baton Rouge amounted in round numbers to—

|---|---|
| White | 1500 |

That the large amount of more than 1000 votes were not polled on the seventeenth and eighteenth days of April, and yet that Dr. Day received a majority of more than 700 votes over his competitor for Senatorial honors.

The whole current of testimony shows that this contest was conducted with a vigor unusual in such cases.

Gentlemen of the very highest respectability in Louisiana have testified in behalf of the sitting member, and the certain and consentaneous opinion of the whole is that the election was conducted as fairly as any election at which they were ever present, and they witnessed many in the city of Baton Rouge and East Baton Rouge. That if fraud of any description was practiced it wholly escaped their attention; and they further state that they were at all times in a position to have seen it had such been the case.

In addition to the testimony of civilians, we have the testimony of the distinguished commander of the post of Baton Rouge and his officers, completely negativing the charge of intimidation with which it is charged the election is tainted. The flattering vote received by the contestant, a comparative stranger, is an evidence of the high esteem in which he was held by the Republican party of his district, but both the witnesses for the contestant and Dr. Day assure us that many of the leading colored men of Baton Rouge were the warm friends and active supporters of the doctor; regarded by them as conservative in his notions, known to them intimately and enjoying a measure of popularity with the colored population of his district, based as the witnesses declare upon the kindliness of his disposition, his attention to them when sick and his habit of bonding them when imprisoned for alleged violations of the criminal code of Louisiana. And it is to the above that some of the witnesses attribute, as well as the undersigned, the very large vote received by him, nay, in the language of one totally disinterested, of high respectability, and of the same political faith with contestant, whose testimony was taken by commission, in the State of Maine, in his answer to third and fifth interrogatories, page 182, he declares he voted for the Constitution, and on the same page, and in answer to tenth interrogatory, he declares "that G. W. Ragan could control a larger colored vote than Dr. Day, but that Dr. Day could influence a majority of all the voters in the parish," and the same witness declares that he expected some three hundred or more to vote for the doctor, and many of them afterward declared they had done so, and in confirmation of the deep hold of Dr. Day upon the affections of the colored people of the parish of East Baton Rouge, one witness (colored), a man of much influence, and very intelligent, page 126, declares that he was and is a Republican, voted the Republican ticket, except for Mr. Ragan, and through his influence at least three hundred colored voters, he thinks, cast their ballots for Dr. Day; and yet another, an old resident of the parish, declares, page 175, that if "Ragan were to run to-day against Dr. Day, the doctor would get a majority of the colored votes."

The undersigned would further state, and the testimony justifies the statement, that the changing or swapping of votes has always been regarded as a legitimate mode of electioneering, and has never been esteemed an act of fraud until very recently; but admitting it to be fraud, and such fraud as to the extent practiced would affect the result, you have from the contestant's own witnesses this statement developed, that at least sixty votes were thus exchanged by the active supporters of Dr. Day, leaving the sitting member at least six hundred and fifty majority. The undersigned can not agree with the majority that colored voters were denied the right of voting. Without doing violence to the testimony of General Sykes, a part of whose command was near the polls for the preservation of peace and order—as well, perhaps, to secure to all their rights under the law—as well as the highly respectable gentleman who, under the solemn sanctity of an oath, declared that from time to time public proclamation was made inviting all who were entitled to do so to approach the ballot box and cast their votes.

The undersigned would further state to the Honorable the Senate of Louisiana, that this report has been made, not in the spirit of a partisan, but from a sincere desire so to present the leading features of the evidence as to vindicate the judgement rendered by the voters of the parish of East Baton Rouge on the seventeenth and eighteenth of April, 1868.

For the reasons above stated the undersigned concludes that the contestant, George W. Ragan, has totally failed to establish the charges exhibited in his protest against the Hon. R. H. Day, and that the said Day is clearly and unmistakably entitled to his seat in your honorable body.

Respectfully submitted,
W. L. THOMPSON.

Mr. Lynch, from the Finance Committee, reported back the following bills with the recommendation that they be indefinitely postponed:

Senate bill No. 86, an act extending the collection of the Convention tax, and providing for the final settlement thereof.

Senate bill No. 259, an act to require State Tax Collectors to receive certain State warrants in payment of taxes due the State, and authorizing them to take up said warrants.

House bill No. 105, an act to provide means for the relief of the treasury of the State.

House bill No. 209, joint resolution providing for the payment of members and employes, and prohibiting speculation in warrants for the payment of the contingent expenses, etc.

House bill No. 244, an act to make the warrants of the General Assembly of 1868 receivable for State lands.

House bill No. 163, an act authorizing the Tax Collectors to receive the warrants of members and employes of the General Assembly in payment of State taxes by preference.

Mr. Lynch: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up the report just made by the Finance Committee.

Rules suspended, report adopted, and the bills indefinitely postponed.

Mr. O'Hara, from the Committee on Claims, reported unfavorably upon the petition of D. H. Haynes and the petition of J. Madison Wells, both asking for relief.

Mr. Lynch: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a bill to be entitled an act to supply deficiency of appropriations for the year ending December 31, 1868.

Rules suspended and the bill read.

Mr. Lynch: I ask for a suspension of the rules to put the bill upon its second reading.

Rules suspended and the bill read.

The bill was considered engrossed.

Under a suspension of the rules, the bill was read a third time and finally adopted with its title.

Mr. Darrall: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a bill to be entitled an act appropriating the sum of ten thousand dollars for the arrest of the assassins of H. H. Pope and Valentine Chase, of St. Mary parish.

Rules suspended and the bill read.

Mr. Darrall: I ask for a suspension of the rules to put the bill on its second reading.

Rules suspended and the bill read.

The bill was considered engrossed.

Under a further suspension of the rules the bill was read a third time and finally adopted with its title.

Mr. Bacon, from the special joint committee to inquire into the unauthorized alterations to Senate bill No. 23, presented the following report:

SENATE CHAMBER,
New Orleans, October 19, 1868.

To the Honorable the Senate of the State of Louisiana:

Your committee, appointed to examine into and inquire as to how the alterations which were not agreed to by either House were made in the engrossed copy of the Senate bill No. 23, which passed into an act, respecting imprisonments and fines, and as to the person or persons by whom they were made, beg leave to report that they have examined the Secretary and the Assistant Secretary of the Senate, and the Chief Enrolling Clerk thereof, and the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee and Chief Clerk of the House.

All agree that the bill was engrossed as it passed the Senate, containing the words respecting the powers of recorders and other magistrates and courts that it "shall not be competent" for them to remit fines or imprisonments, and that the words "be discretionary," found in lieu thereof, being interlined in pencil, and the other words erased, were not in it when it went to the House, but the latter were found in it when the Enrolling Clerk of the Senate undertook first to enroll it, and the former words were erased. The same is reported to us as to the word "nor" in the eighteenth line. The supposed fourth section was also supplied in pencil after the bill left the Senate.

The House referred the bill to its Judiciary Committee, and that committee reported it back with the indorsement, "favorably," in pencil, and as thus reported it passed. The Clerk of the House has formally and officially reported to us by indorsement on the bill, by the direction of the House, "that the House concurred without amendments," and that the words "not be competent" were not stricken out by the House, nor the words "nor to" in the eighteenth line, and that the additional section was not added by the House.

The Hon. Peter Harper, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, declares to the best of his recollection the Judiciary Committee of the House reported the bill back favorably and without amendments.

Your committee have had an opportunity of observing a very reprehensible practice, which may have been practiced heretofore in both Houses, but which should be abandoned—that of making scratches and alterations of bills sent by one House to another, when it desired to amend them.

A bill which originated in and passed the Senate, to be entitled an act relative to attachment, was returned to the Senate by the Clerk of the House as having been concurred in without amendment, but was found to have an important clause stricken out, with pencil, and this it was afterward found the House intended to have stricken out, but which should have been done by separate amendment to that effect, to have been engrossed on another piece of paper, to be sent back to the Senate with their bill unmutilated.

NO NIGHT THERE.

BY REV. DWIGHT WILLIAMS.

"There shall be no night there:"
City of the pearly gates,
O'er death's dark and stormy straits,
Girt with holy mountain's sound,
Built upon enchanted ground;
Sweeter light than sun or star,
Gilds thy palaces afar,
Tranquil calm,
Pure as angel's softest psalm.

"There shall be no night there;"
Everlasting fountain's play
In the splendors of the day;
Rainbows of celestial light
Gleam on saint and angel sight;
Morning glories gild the sky,
Beauty crowns the canopy
Falling there,
On the song enchanted air.

"There shall be no night there;"
Fields of beauty stretch away
In the mellow light of day:
Silver lakes of beauty lie
Mirrors of the tranquil sky;
Mountains rise gorgeous and grand
In the fair and cloudless land,
Heights of praise
Where the angels tireless gaze.

"There shall be no night there;"
Light of love it is that gleams
O'er those happy vales and streams;
Eye to eye looks love alone,
Love beams ever from the throne;
Height to height, its flashes dart
Answering from heart to heart,
Evermore,
Flows love's fountain o'er and o'er.

"There shall be no night there,"
Where the Lamb leads out his own
Into pastures new, unknown;
Where his sweetest fountains flow
And his choicest dainties grow;
These are they that followed him
Through the earth, night sad and dim;
These he won
By his blood and tears alone.

"There shall be no night there;"
City of the pearly gates—
There a mansion thee awaits,
Lonely pilgrim of the night
Struggling toward the mount of light;
Sin shall darken thee no more,
Thou shalt rise and ever soar,
And thy hymn,
Blend with song of Seraphim.

THE ANSWER.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Spare me, dread angel of reproof,
And let the sunshine weave to day
Its gold-threads in the warp and woof
Of life so poor and gray.

Spare me a while; the flesh is weak,
These lingering feet, that fain would stray
Among the flowers, shall some day seek
The straight and narrow way.

Take off thy ever-watchful eye,
The awe of thy rebuking frown;
The dullest slave at times must sigh
To fling his burdens down;

To drop his galley's straining oar,
And press, in summer warmth and calm,
The lap of some enchanted shore
Of blossom and of balm.

Grudge not my life its hour of bloom,
My heart its taste of long desire;
This day be mine: be those to come
As duty shall require.

The deep voice answered to my own,
Smiting my selfish prayers away;
"To-morrow is with God alone,
And man hath but to day.

"Say not thy fond, vain heart within,
The Father's arms shall still be wide,
When from these pleasant ways of sin
Thou turn'st at eventide."

"Cast thyself down," the tempter saith,
And angels shall thy feet upbear,"
He bids thee make a lie of faith,
A blasphemy of prayer.

Though God be good and free be Heaven,
No force divine can love compel;
And though the songs of sins forgiven
May sound through lowest hell,

The sweet persuasion of His voice
Respects thy sanctity of will.
He giveth day; thou hast thy choice
To walk in darkness still;

As one who, turning from the light,
Watches his own gray shadow fall,
Doubting upon his path of night,
If there be day at all!

No word of doom may shut thee out,
No wind of wrath may downward whirl,
No swords of fire keep watch about
The open gates of pearl.

A tenderer light than moon or sun,
Than song of earth a sweeter hymn,
May shine and sound forever on,
And then be deaf and dim.

Forever round the Mercy seat
The guiding lights of Love shall burn;
But what if, habit-bound, thy feet
Shall lack the will to turn?

What if thine eye refuse to see,
Thine ear of Heaven's free welcome fail,
And thou a willing captive be,
Thyself thy own dark jail?

O doom, beyond the saddest guess,
As the long years of God unroll
To make thy dreary selfishness
The prison of a soul!

To doubt the love that fain would break
The fetters from thy self-bound limb;
And dream that God can thee forsake
As thou forsakest Him!

Robert Bonner, editor and publisher of the New York Ledger, has just contributed $10,000 with which to erect and furnish a gymnasium for the college of New Jersey, at Princeton. Another gentleman, named Marquand, has given a like sum for the same purpose. A remark in the recent inaugural address of Dr. M'Cosh, the new President, brought these contributions.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, November 19.

Among the bills to be introduced at an early period of the approaching session of Congress, there will be one providing for another constitutional amendment to this effect, viz: "No State shall deny the right of suffrage on account of race or color." So far as the press of the country has spoken, it is favorable to such an amendment, and why should not the whole country favor it? The treaty recently made between our Government and China grants suffrage to the Chinese residing or citizenized here; no absurd hue and cry is raised against it, though the Chinese are not to be compared in point of fitness with our colored population to exercise such a right; in addition to the laziness and ignorance of the Chinaman, he is a gross idolator. Universal suffrage, if adopted, will be found to be so great an absurdity that it will reflect; but still it may be the more speedy method of bringing about a suffrage based on intelligence and morality, the only true and solid foundation on which it can rest. The naturalization frauds connected with the late elections, indeed with all our elections for years past, demonstrate the necessity for quallified suffrage. The only qualification heretofore required was a white skin; this distinction was not as silly as it was wicked and unjust: these qualities, wickedness and injustice as connected with this distinction imply incalculably more than is expressed, clear and appalling as that expression may be. And it is this enormous injustice that lies at the foundation of our national troubles, nor will it be otherwise till all legislation shall embrace more of the morals of the divine law, and less of politics. If, in dealing with nations, the Deity has taught one lesson with more terror than another, it is this—that injustice in the form of oppression, has brought upon the oppressor the withering curse of Heaven; no matter how long it seemed to slumber, while injustice banquetted in blood wrung from the weak, nor how mysterious the agents employed, whether the mighty should chastize the more feeble, or the strong should turn their swords against each other instead of a common foe; when the cup of a people's iniquity was full, insulted Heaven unsheathed the sword of justice and smote the oppressor, and no nation guilty of that sin, but bears the impress of vengeance on its history. The sooner our country understands this feature in the divine government, the sooner will the troubled sea become calm. Whatever is necessary to vindicate the oppressed, God in his wisdom will demand of this country, and woe to the nation till that demand is met.

Should the amendment under consideration be adopted by a sufficient majority of the States, rumor says, General Grant will favor a special session of Congress, that the enfranchized under that law, may participate in the election of the next Congress, as well as in the next Presidential election; but for the truth of this rumor we can not vouch.

When Congress fixed the present tax on whisky, we predicted the failure of the officers of the revenue to collect it more successfully than when the rates were higher; such is now the fact; when virtue flows from the dance, and justice from the gambling saloon, or pleasant breezes from Tophet, then may honesty be expected from a "whisky ring."

The annual reports of the different bureaus and heads of departments have been prepared and laid before the President, preparatory to his message to Congress. These documents are of general inrerest, but too voluminous for even a synopsis in a letter.

Rev. Mr. Green, of the Church South, has been here, returning from the North; he is acting as emigration agent for the State of Alabama; he states what everybody here knew before to be true, that in the North there is no bitterness of feeling toward the South; the people of the North are ready to emigrate to Alabama and enter the mining districts there, and aid in their development, but Mr. Green, can not, as an honest man, recommend them to go there in the present reign of violence and bloodshed.

With gratitude it should be again noted that the revival of Mr. Kendry is still progressing. More than seventy have united with that charge since the work began; each meeting for prayer has been marked by one or more conversions.

The Gorsuch church was re-opened on Sunday last. Drs. Brown and Gibson, of Baltimore, discoursed in the order named. in the morning and afternoon, and Mr. B. Newton Brown at night. The church is exceedingly neat, and was well filled at the services held; the contribution in aid of these repairs amounted to about five hundred dollars. The size and original finish of this church illustrates the mistake of the Methodists in this city of building small and unsightly places of worship and naming them "Chapels;" they have never succeeded, and it seems, can not, because it is not in the nature of such enterprises to succeed; if a Sunday school is needed, let it be built, and be so named and used; but let not churches colonize, till parent and offspring can flourish apart. The rapid advancement of the city demands at least three more Methodist churches, and favorable locations secured for as many more, while the ground can be had at low figures, and in commanding positions; but nothing is doing in this line, except in the "East Washington" charge, it will be regretted when too late to remedy.

This may be called the season of earthquakes; the shock of one was felt for several seconds this week in New Jersey. Is there a moral is these terrible convulsions?

A few, and singularly fatal cases of diptheria have appeared in a certain locality of the city; in one family three children died at the same hour, and were laid side by side in the grave. What a crushing stroke to that mother's heart! And yet it was received without a murmur. The attending physician was also attacked with the same disease, and was obliged to be put under medical treatment.

Dr. J. P. Newman's appointment in "Foundry" Church, on Sunday next, has been looked to with great interest.

Noon-day Meeting at Water Street, New York.

Interest has been called forth far and near, about this meeting in the spot where Satan's seat is, and has been more powerfully.

We like to hear of results, and if any good has been effected equal to the labor—well. We listened to Dr. Ward, vice-president of the Howard Mission, who is the presiding person daily at the Water street prayer-meeting, relate statistics in his pleasing, cautious way; then it had been in progress about two months, and he thought the average of conversions had been equal to one per day.

One of the female missionaries laboring in that neighborhood had taken eleven poor fallen women up to the Magdalen Asylum, in the upper part of the city, not that they were converted, but desired to leave their vicious course, and took the twelfth one that day, and as she visited them, they all gathered about her with the utmost affection and thought the fortnight long since they had seen her. River thieves and burglars have been converted, and the conversions continue with increased power, for prayer is offered in closets and at family altars, for those who are led within that sacred influence.

Some poor women have returned to their families, and in the institution where they are received, their conversion is a special object in their treatment.

Slurs on Woman.

At a recent meeting in this city, at which no ladies were present, a man in responding to the toast on "Woman," dwelt almost solely on the frailty of the sex, claiming that the best among them were little better than the worst, the chief difference being in the surroundings.

At the conclusion of the speech, a gentleman present rose to his feet, and said:

"I trust the gentleman, in the application of his remark, refers to his own mother and sisters, and not to ours."

The effect of this most just and timely rebuke was overwhelming, the maligner of woman was covered with confusion and shame.

This incident serves an excellent purpose in prefacing a few words which we have for a long time had it in our mind to say.

Of all the evils prevalent among young men, we know of none more blighting in its moral effects than the tendency to speak slightingly of the virtue of women. Nor is there any thing in which young men are so thoroughly mistaken as the low estimate they form of the integrity of women—not of their own mothers and sisters, thank God, but of others, who, they forget, are somebody else's mothers and sisters.

As a rule, no person who surrenders to this debasing habit is safe to be trusted with any enterprise requiring integrity of character.

Plain words should be spoken on this point, for the evil is a general one, and deep rooted. If young men are some times thrown into the society of thoughtless or lewd women, they have no more right to measure all other women by what they see of these than they would have to estimate the character of honest and respectable citizens by the developments of crime in our police courts.

Let young men remember that their chief happiness in life depends upon their utter faith in women. No worldly wisdom, no misanthropic philosophy, no generalization, can cover or weaken this fundamental truth. It stands like the record of God himself—for it is nothing less than this—and should put an everlasting seal upon lips that are wont to speak slightingly of women.—Packard's Monthly.

The Oldest City in the World.

Damascus is the oldest city in the world. Tyre and Sidon have crumbled on the shore; Baalbec is a ruin; Palmyra is buried in a desert; Nineveh and Babylon have disappeared from the Tigris and Euphrates; Damascus remains what it was before the days of Abraham—a centre of trade and travel—an island of verdure in the desert—"a presidential capital" with martial and sacred associations extending through thirty centuries. It was near Damascus that Saul of Tarsus saw the light above the brightness of the sun; the street which is called Strait, in which it was said "he prayed," still runs through the city. The caravan comes and goes as it did a thousand years ago; there is still the sheik, the ass, and the water-wheel; the merchants of the Euphrates and the Mediterranean still "occupy" these "with the multitude of their wares." The city which Mahomet surveyed from a neighboring height, and was afraid to enter "because it was given to man to have but one paradise, and, for his part, he was resolved not to have it in this world," is to this day what Julian called the "eye of the East," as it was in the time of Isaiah, "the head of Syria." From Damascus came the damson, our blue plums, and the delicious apricot of Portugal, called damasco, damask, our beautiful fabric of cotton and silk, with vines and flowers raised upon a smooth, bright ground; the damask rose, introduced into England in the time of Henry VIII., the Damascus blade, so famous the world over for its keen edge and wonderful elasticity, the secret of whose manufacture was lost when Tamerlane carried off the artist into Persia; and that beautiful art of inlaying wood and steel with silver and gold, a kind of mosaic engraving and sculpture united—called damaskening—with which boxes and bureaus, swords and guns, are ornamented. It is still a city of flowers and bright waters; the streams of Lebanon and the "river of gold" still murmur and sparkle in the wilderness of Syrian gardens."

HOW TO WIN SOULS TO CHRIST.—No spiritual influence exerted by man upon his fellow-man exceeds in practical power that which results from personal conversation. It comes with more directness than any other, and sinks deeper into the soul. The few religious impressions which we never forget were made upon us by the direct address of some warm-hearted Christian who pleaded with us alone, and tenderly urged us to embrace the offers of salvation. Who can not recall a few such occasions during a lifetime, and bear witness to the strength of the impressions which were then made, perhaps by a godly father or a pious mother, or a faithful Sabbath school teacher, or pastor, or friend?

The difference between preaching to a congregation and talking earnestly to single persons, has been well likened to the difference between filling some hundred bottles with water by throwing it upon them from a bucket, and pouring it into them one by one with a pitcher. In the latter case they get the whole; in the former, only now and then a drop. If there is any time when an impenitent person becomes filled with truth so that he can contain no more, it is after he has been affectionately and tenderly exhorted by a godly friend to give heed to his eternal interests.

The person who would make such impressions upon his fellowmen must, however, be himself filled with the Spirit. He must glow with a piety which is seen and felt to be Christ-like, and which is not contradicted by any wretched inconsistency of life.

Christian reader, do you belong to this band of disciples who talk of Christ to their fellowmen, out of love to Christ, and with the purpose of winning souls to Christ? If not, why not?—Congregationalist and Recorder.

INCREASE.—The increase of the Methodist Episcopal Church the past year is nearly one hundred thousand.

A WORD TO THE WISE.—The Nashville Christian Advocate asks the following question: "What shall be said of the political harrangues which may still be heard from Northern pulpits, almost everywhere?" Our answer is, the editor has not been in the habit of listening to harangues from Northern pulpits very much of late, and knows very little about them one way or another. It would be well for him to know that political harangues are common in Northern pulpits, before he frets very much. We claim to have better opportunity of knowing the facts, and we deny the truth of the assertion from beginning to end, and challenge the editor to the proof. We do not use the ugly words so familiar to the Nashville editor; but we think this matter of representing the Methodists of the North as a set of political knaves has gone far enough. There is not a partisan allusion in a pulpit in the North, where there are fifty misrepresentations on this point made in the Southern pulpits and press. It is true that before the war the preachers of the North preached against the sin of slavery; but not more frequently than the Southern preachers labored to prove that slavery was a divine institution. It is also true that during the war the Northern preachers denounced the wickedness of rebellion, and inculcated the duty of loyalty; but this not more zealously than the Southern preachers advocated treason. And now that the war is over, the preachers in our section almost unanimously declare for peace, while in the South, both in the pulpit and in the press, the preachers keep alive the elements of discord, and exhaust themselves in denunciations of "Radicalism." Brother, it will be well for you not to provoke a comparison of facts on this subject.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

HARD ON BATCHELORS.—A gentleman who is rather given to story-telling, relates the following: "When I was a young man I spent several years at the South, residing for a while at Port Hudson, on the Mississippi river. A great deal of litigation was going on there about that time, and it was not an easy matter to obtain a jury. One day I was summoned to act in that capacity, and repaired to court to get excused. On my name being called, I informed his honor, the judge, that I was not a freeholder, and, therefore, not qualified to serve."

"Where do you reside?" inquired the judge.

"I am stopping for the time being at Port Hudson."

"You board at the hotel, I presume."

"I take my meals there, but have rooms in another part of the town where I lodge."

"Do you keep batchelor's hall?"

"Yes, sir."

"How long have you lived in that manner?"

"About six months."

"I think you are qualified," gravely remarked the judge, "for I have never known a man to keep batchelor's hall the length of time you name, who had not dirt enough in his room to make him a freeholder! The court doesn't excuse you."

---

MARRIAGE MAXIMS.—A good wife is the greatest earthly blessing.

Make marriage a matter of moral judgment.

Marry in your own religion.

Marry into a different blood and temperament from your own.

Never talk at one another, either alone or in company.

Never both manifest anger at once.

Never speak loud to one another, unless the house is on fire.

Let each one strive to yield oftenest to the wishes of the other.

Let self-abnegation be the daily aim and effort of each.

The very nearest approach to domestic felicity on earth is in the mutual cultivation of an absolute unselfishness.

Never find fault unless it is perfectly certain that a fault has been committed; and even then prelude it with a kiss, and lovingly.

Neglect the whole world beside rather than one another.

Never allow a request to be repeated. "I forgot" is never an acceptable excuse.

Never make a remark at the expense of the other; it is meanness.

Never part for a day without loving words to think of during absence; besides it may be that you will not meet again in life.

NUTMEGS.—Nutmegs are the fruit of a beautiful tree which grows in the Molucca islands, and in other parts of the East. All the parts of the tree are aromatic, but only those portions of the fruit called mace and nutmeg are marketable. The entire fruit is of oval form about the size of a peach. The nutmeg is the innermost kernel. It is surrounded by a skin, which, peeled off, constitutes the mace of commerce. The tree yields annually three crops. The first one, which is gathered in April, is the best. The others are gathered in August and December. Good nutmegs should be dense and heavy and free from worm-holes. When the worm-holes have been artificially filled up, the feeling of lightness in the hand is a means of detecting the fraud. An attempt has been made to cultivate nutmegs in the West Indies, but without success.

From the Churches.

Rev. P. Yarborough, writing November 11, from Clinton, Louisiana, reports having baptized two hundred and seventy-one persons during the past year.

In referring to Brother Ryan's letter from Africa, he says, I am glad to see, from Brother Ryan's letter, that he is on his native soil. He says they want Gospel ministers to convince the sixteen or seventeen millions of heathens there. But what are we to do with the four millions that are here. They must be convinced first. Seventeen millions there believe in Mohammed; there are four millions here that believe in dreams.

At one of my appintments I had thirty-three persons to baptize. I thought best to have an examination of them before proceeding. I asked them what the Lord had done for them. Some said that Christ had forgiven them their sins. I then asked how it was done. Some replied, I prayed and felt that the spirit of God took away my sins. But others said they saw God, and that Christ had baptized them in Jordan. I said, if Christ has baptized you, why should I baptize you again? I asked them what color was the water. None could answer. All were silent. No, said I, brethren, "No man hath seen God at any time." "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou heareth the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit." No, brethren, we can't see God, but we may feel his presence. He makes us happy.

Rev. Mr. Bryan writes from St. Martinsville, November 13:

I still remain at my post, trying to do something in the cause of man's salvation. Though the times have have been dark and gloomy, many of us have been praying much; none have yet got into any trouble, and I tell them in all my meetings to have nothing to do with politics. We thank God for his preserving care. Every Sabbath we have meetings; the membess come to town and we have good congregations. Last Sunday after preaching, a speaking meeting was held: about forty were present; we sang:

"And are we yet alive
And see each other's face,"

The hearts of the people seemed to witness with the words. Thanksgiving went up to God, for bringing them by his love, through many troubles. They spoke as if live coals from the altar, were burning upon their hearts. Many have since gone to sugar making, so they will not be able to come to church until it is over.

A letter from Lafayette informs me that the meetings in town had been broken up, but were held at Mr. Stephens's. None of our members there have been involved in the troubles. Mr. Williams still keeps up his school. They tell him not to come until times become more quiet. There is no school yet in St. Martinsville.

A correspondent in Rapides parish writes:

The election passed off tolerably quiet here, but the two following days were rather stormy in Alexandria. No riot occurred, though Ryan, the Congressman elect, tried his best to excite the people. He was violent in his denunciations of Republicans on account of being beaten in his own parish. I heard him in the sheriff's office threaten that officer's life, in the presence of the Parish Judge and others, saying he should not live there. He told Colonel Hawley, the Parish Clerk, he should not live in the parish or exercise the duties of his office, nor should any other Yankee or carpet-bagger live on their soil, using most profane language. He and a worthless fellow named Sullivan threatened to take out the supervisors of election and hang them. Their names are Hofner and Beman, and they are from New Orleans. Ryan says the State has gone Democratic, and now none who were elected by niggers shall hold office or exercise authority over "the people," as they were not elected by them. This remark was made in the presence of some sixteen white and colored persons. Such incendiary talk caused the destruction of our press, and is doing a great deal of harm. All the best citizens and property holders feel sorry for such conduct. Mr. Biosset, the Mayor and Democratic editor, has behaved very well. On election day he did not force or press any to vote the Democratic ticket; he wanted all to act freely. On the 4th the Sheriff, Mr. Delaeny, was assailed on the street by a man armed with a knife, but was not injured. The next day some infamous colored men were hired to go into his office and get up a riot, but they were dispersed without trouble. A renegade Republican, Andrew Jackson, a colored man, who was a while since expelled for drunkenness from the Methodist Church, was hired by Ryan to play the traitor among his colored neighbors. He, distributed nearly three hundred Democratic tickets at Cheuyville before the people found him out. The Republican tickets had been given to him, but he never gave out one. Some of the people found out the cheat and obtained ballots from others in time to vote. It was perilous to vote for Grant, for many threats were made, and a parcel of armed men were at the polls from St. Landry and Big Cane. They had rifles of the most improved make. Some shots were fired at colored men by Lod Compton and Fouche Compton. Ryan had Calhoun and all the commissioners of election at Plaisance arrested, and protested against the vote being counted, knowing he was beaten there over three hundred. We are hoping to see a brighter and better day, as Grant is triumphantly elected President. Court is now in session, with Judge Osborne presiding.

General Items.

Lucretia Mott, now a widow, is living near Philadelphia, in a substantial old Pennsylvania farm-house, with a surrounding of beautiful grounds, meadow and woodland.

Rev. Abel Stevens, LL. D., the eminent historian of Methodism, is reported to be engaged writing a "History of Mohammed—His Religion and His Followers."

John Allen, the so-called "Wickedest Man" of New York, has gone back into the horrible pit from which he was temporarily doing. He is said to be worse than before.

Eighteen inches of snow now covers the summit of Mount Washington. While the workmen near the present terminus of the railroad were engaged in removing some tools recently a number had their ears frost bitten.

A brick church on a high hill, eleven miles from Nashville, was literally blown away on Sunday, November 1, by a whirlwind. Many of the bricks were carried half a mile, and but four feet of the walls remain standing.

For the first time in its history, Garrett Biblical Institute, October 29, conferred, as merit of scholarship, the degree of D. D. on two of its graduates, Rev. J. W. Waugh, of India, and Rev. C. H. Fowler, of the Rock River Conference.

Upward of $300,000 have been spent on Long Island in establishing and stocking artificial fish ponds. The The business of selling eggs and small fish has assumed enormous proportions, and so have some of the fish.

Knox, a traveler in Siberia, says he saw portraits of our martyred President in that country frequently, and at a town in the Ural Mountains he saw a bust of Mr. Lincoln, cut from topaz, six inches high, for a wealthy Russian, who sent to this country for the model.

The United States Government have under consideration the proposition to send telegraphic messages for the people. Postmaster Burt, of Boston, proposes that the Government shall contract for the delivery of messages with the telegraph companies, on the same basis that it contracts for the carrying of the mails.

Captain Veitenheimer paraded his company in New York, Tuesday. There were seventy men in uniform, and none of them had beards less than a foot in length, the captain's extending to his knees. He must have been the original "Captain with his Whiskers."

The United States contains the following singularly named postoffices: Marrow Bones, Sorril Horse, Ti Ti, Toto, Why Not, Alone, Backbone, Carryall, Fame, Time, Stony Man, Sal Soda, Newborn, Yankee Jim's Rough, Rough and Ready, Pipe Stem, Shickshiny, Overalls, Snowshoes, Miracle Run, Simmer, Lookout, Paint, Last Chance, Ogunquit, Memory, Tally Ho, Spuyten Duyvil, Tred Creek and Our Town.

The island of Hawaii is sinking, especially toward the southeast. The subsidence has been observed at various points, and amounts to from eight inches at Hilo to six or seven feet between Kapalo and Kalae. Trees which of course grew on dry land now stand in several feet of water, and rocky islets which once stood five feet out of water are now submerged. The cause of this is supposed to be the recent earthquake.

The English and French press comment favorably on the result of our Presidential election. The Patrie, Paris, says General Grant is the man of the nation, not of a party. "He saved the Union, and will restore it to its former standing among the great powers." Americans throughout Europe are enthusiastic over the result. The London Morning Standard says: "The election establishes order and law, the highest aim of the United States." It also speaks of Grant as worthy successor of Washington.

As a means of replenishing the missionary treasury, Zion's Herald recommends that the venerable Corresponding Secretary of the Missionary Society, Dr. J. P. Durbin, resign, and allow the Board to fill the place with some half dozen younger men whom that paper names. In any one else this proposition, so soon after the General Conference determined to diminish the number of secretaries and elected Dr. Durbin, would appear presumptuous; but the deliberate action of the General Conference is not to be weighed against the wisdom of the editor at Boston.—Western Christian Advocate.

STATE OF LOUISIANA.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

JOURNAL OF THE SENATE.

MONDAY, October 19, 1868.

In the case of the bill respecting which your committee has been directed to inquire, it seems to be undoubted, for the House has formally so decided that the bill was passed by that body as it passed the Senate, unaltered, and has now been correctly enrolled and approved by the Governor and become a law; but we have much doubt on our minds whether there was not some inchoate attempt in the Judiciary Committee of the House to have it changed, but this never took shape by the action of the House itself, which adopted the bill as it went from the Senate.

Your committee have found it vain to attempt to find out who added the matter in pencil, or struck out the words which were in the bill as it passed, nor with any distinctness that they were placed there after final action on the bill. No one seemed to be able to give the slightest clue to it. But the bill passed both houses as it was originally engrossed, with no knowledge on the part of either that any such attempts at alteration had been made.

We would here simply add that it is the duty of the Committee on Enrollment to carefully scrutinize every bill sent them for enrollment, and to report no bill as correctly enrolled unless they have themselves compared it with the original. Had this been done with the bill in question, the mistake, or worse conduct, which placed us in a false position with the Governor and to ourselves, would have been discovered at once and no falsely enrolled bill would have gone before him.

Your committee deem further investigation on their part unnecessary, and therefore ask to be discharged.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

A. B. BACON,
Chairman;
JOHN RAY,
J. J. MONETTE.

The committee was discharged.

MOTIONS.

Mr. Wittgenstein: I move to reconsider the vote by which the Senate refused to consider engrossed Senate bill No. 8, an act relative to Notaries Public.

Mr. Ray: I move to lay the motion of Mr. Wittgenstein on the table.

Mr. Campbell: I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Anderson, Bacon, Beares, Braughn, Day, Foute, Futch, Jewell, Lynch, Ogden, Packard, Ray, Todd—13.

Nays: Antoine, Campbell, Coupland, Francois, Kelso, Lewis, Monette, O'Hara, Pollard, Smith, Wittgenstein—11.

The motion was laid on the table.

The different reports of the Committee on Elections and Returns, in the case of G. W. Ragan vs. R. H. Day were taken up.

Mr. Futch: I move the adoption of Mr. Thompson's minority report.

Mr. O'Hara: I move to substitute by adopting my minority report.

Mr. Lewis: I move that the reports be made the special order of the day to-morrow.

Mr. Braughn: I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion of Mr. Lewis was tabled.

Mr. Braughn: I call for the main question.

The main question was ordered by a rising vote of 16 yeas to 8 nays, and the reports taken up and read.

Mr. Campbell: I call for the yeas and nays on the motion to adopt Mr. O'Hara's minority report offered as a substitute to the motion to adopt the minority report of Mr. Thompson.

The yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Antoine, Campbell, Coupland, Darrall, Francois, Kelso, Lewis, Monette, O'Hara, Pinchback, Poindexter, Pollard, Smith—13.

Nays: Anderson, Bacon, Beares, Braughn, Foute, Futch, Jenks, Jewell, Lynch, Ogden, Packard, Ray, Wilcox, Wittgenstein—14.

Mr. O'Hara's substitute was lost.

On the motion to adopt the minority report of Mr. Thompson, the yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Anderson, Bacon, Beares, Braughn, Foute, Futch, Jenks, Jewell, Lynch, Ogden, Ray, Wilcox, Wittgenstein—13.

Nays: Antoine, Campbell, Coupland, Darrall, Francois, Kelso, Lewis, Monette, O'Hara, Packard, Pinchback, Poindexter, Pollard, Smith, Whitney—15.

The motion was lost.

The majority report being taken up, Mr. Campbell entered the following protest:

I protest against the decision of this important contest under the spur of the previous question. The report of the majority of the committee occupies one hundred and eighty-five pages of closely-printed matter. I have not had time to read it, much less to investigate it. If forced to vote, I must vote in total ignorance of the subject matter. I do not believe a Senator on this floor, except the members of the committee, has read this report. In my opinion it is unjust and impolitic thus to attempt to cut off deliberation upon this contest, but if compelled to vote I must vote in accordance with the finding of a majority of the committee. I say to the friends of the sitting member, that in forcing this question they have compelled some to vote against them who might after examination have voted with them, at least so far as to refer the whole matter back to the people.

HUGH J. CAMPBELL.

Mr. O'Hara: I call for a division of the question on the report of the majority of the committee, and I call for the yeas and nays on that portion of the report declaring vacant the seat of Senator Day.

By unanimous consent the matter was postponed until to-morrow.

Mr. Anderson: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up Senate bill No. 168, an act to provide for the payment of the annual salaries of the officers of the last General Assembly of Louisiana.

Rules suspended and the bill read.

Mr. Anderson: I move that the bill be considered engrossed.

Adopted.

Mr. Anderson: I ask that the rules be suspended to put the bill on its third reading

Mr. Lynch: I move that the bill be postponed indefinitely.

Mr. Anderson: I call for the yeas and nays:

The yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Messrs. Antoine, Campbell, Coupland, Kelso, Lewis, Lynch, Monette, O'Hara, Packard, Pinchback, Poindexter, Pollard, Ray, Smith, Whitney, Wittgenstein—16.

Nays: Messrs. Anderson, Beares, Braughn, Foute, Futch, Jenks, Jewell and Ogden—8.

The bill was postponed indefinitely.

RESOLUTIONS.

By Mr. Smith:

Resolved, That in view of the great discount upon State warrants, that the porters of the Senate be allowed the sum of eighty dollars each as an extra compensation.

Mr. Smith: I move the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Todd: I move to amend by including the doorkeeper and postmaster.

The amendment was accepted and the resolution adopted as amended.

A message from the Governor was received.

By Mr. Todd:

A resolution which lies over.

NOTICES OF BILLS.

Mr. Campbell: I give notice that on a future day I will introduce a bill to be entitled an act repealing an act entitled an act relative to Notaries Public, approved April 8, 1868.

The Clerk of the House of Representatives appeared with a message from that body, asking concurrence in House bill No 186, an act for the appropriation of $42,224, to pay the past indebtedness of the Louisiana State Penitentiary; and announcing that the House had concurred in Senate joint resolution appropriating one hundred dollars each to the members of the police force who have attended in their official capacity the sessions of the Legislature of 1868, with amendments; and in Senate bills No. 60, an act to amend and re-enact article 354 of the Code of Practice, with amendments, and No. 101, an act to incorporate the Loan and Pledge Association, without amendments.

Mr. Ray: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a bill to be entitled an act providing for more certain notice of the filling of accounts, etc.;

Rules suspended.

Read twice under suspension of the rules, and referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Braughn: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up Senate bill No. 268, an act for the purchase of a museum of medals, models, scientific library, etc.

Rules suspended and the bill read.

Mr. Todd: I move that the bill be postponed until the second Tuesday in January next.

Mr. Ray: I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Campbell, Day, Francois, Jenks, Lynch, Packard, Ray, Todd and Whitney—9.

Nays: Antoine, Braughn, Coupland, Futch, Kelso, Monette, Ogden, O'Hara, Pinchback, Poindexter, Pollard, Wittgenstein—12.

The Senate refused to postpone.

Mr. Ray: I move to indefinitely postpone the bill.

The yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Campbell, Day, Francois, Jenks, Kelso, Lynch, O'Hara, Packard, Pollard, Ray, Todd and Whitney—12.

Nays: Antoine, Beares, Braughn, Futch, Monette, Ogden, Pinchbach, Poindexter and Wittgenstein—9.

The bill was postpoued indefinitely.

The Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives appeared with a message from that body, announcing that the House had concurred in Senate joint resolution No. 34, relative to the adjournment of the General Assembly, with an amendment.

Mr. Ogden: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended, and the following read:

In view of the fact that the Legislature has been in session since the twenty-second of June, and that members of both Houses have drawn their warrants from that date; be it

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to wait on the Governor and inform him that as the one hundred and twenty days given by the Constitution for the session of the Legislature have expired, that the Senate will adjourn this evening, to meet at its next regular term, and that if he has any message to send in they are now prepared to receive it.

Lies over.

Mr. O'Hara: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up Senate joint resolution No. 34, relative to adjournment of the General Assembly, returned from the House with an amendment.

Rules suspended, and the amendment changing the date of adjournment from the twenty-sixth to the twentieth instant, was read.

Mr. O'Hara: I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

Mr. Lynch: I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Braughn, Darrall, Day, Futch, Jenks, Kelso, Lynch, Ogden, O'Hara, Pinchback, Poindexter, Pollard, Whitney—13.

Nays: Antoine, Bacon, Beares, Campbell, Coupland, Francois, Monette, Packard, Ray, Smith, Todd, Wilcox, Wittgenstein—13.

A tie.

The President: I vote nay.

The amendment was not concurred in.

Mr. Ogden: I move that the rules be susded to take up my resolution relative to adjournment.

Mr. Wittgenstein: I move to lay the motion on the table.

Adopted by a rising vote of 12 yeas, 8 nays.

Mr. Campbell: I ask for a suspension of the rules to report favorably, with amendments, upon House bill No. 132, an act to incorporate the Savings and Pawners' bank of New Orleans.

Rules suspended and the report received, on the yeas and nays being ordered and resulting:

Yeas: Messrs. Bacon, Braughn, Campbell, Coupland, Francois, Kelso, Monette, Ogden, O'Hara, Packard, Pollard, Smith and Todd—13.

Nays: Messrs. Day, Pinchback, Poindexter, Whitney, Wilcox and Wittgenstein—6.

Mr. Campbell: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up Senate joint resolution No. 33, appropriating one hundred dollars each to the members of the police force who have attended, in their official capacity, the session of the Legislature of 1868, returned from the house with amendments.

Rules suspended, and the amendment of the House adding the names of "P. Z. Canonge, J. W. Munday and William H. White" to the first section, was read.

Mr. Campbell: I move to concur in the amendment.

Adopted.

Mr. Campbell: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up the constabulary bill.

The Senate refused to suspend the rules.

Mr. Todd: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up the resolution relative to the extra compensation to employes of the Senate.

Rules suspended and the following read:

WHEREAS, In consideration of the faithful and efficient manner in which the clerks and employes of the Senate have discharged the duties incumbent upon them during the long and arduous session of this body; and

Whereas, By reason of the depreciation in value of warrants, their source of revenue, and the ruinous rates of discount to which they have been subjected, thereby increasing the expense of living, and in consequence burthensome and embarrassing to the many who have families dependent upon them for support; therefore

Be it resolved by the Senate of Louisiana, That the Warrant Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to draw his warrants on the State Treasurer in favor of the following clerks and employes of the Senate to be paid out of the contingent fund of the General Assembly: Secretary $500, Assistant Secretary $500, Chief Enrolling Clerk $500, Enrolling Clerks each $300, reporters of New Orleans Picayune $250, Crescent, REPUBLICAN and German Press each $250; Stone, Jones, Thompson and Downes, clerks Committee on Peace and Good Order of the State, each $300; and clerk Contingent Expense Committee, $300.

Mr. Bacon: I move to refer the resolution to the Finance Committee.

Mr. Braughn: I move to strike out the two last items.

Mr. Smith: I move to lay the motion to refer on the table.

Lost.

Mr. Bacon's motion to refer prevailed.

The order of the day was called.

BILLS ON FIRST READING.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, State of Louisiana, New Orleans, October 20, 1868.

To the Honorable President and Members of the Senate:

I am instructed by his Excellency the Governor, to inform the Senate that he has approved and signed:

Joint resolution relative to the adjournment of the General Assembly.

F. C. REMICK,
Private Secretary.

Mr. Bacon: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended and the following read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Commerce and Manufactures be permitted to sit after the adjournment of the General Assembly for the purpose of making inquiries into the means and measures best calculated to draw the trade of the West and North, as well as of foreign countries, to New Orleans, to relieve our commerce from its hindrances and burthens, to consider the subject of inspection, to digest and prepare general laws for the incorporation of elevator and other like companies, and to suggest whatever may seem to them, after consultation with men eminent in commerce and the arts, best calculated to promote commerce and manufactures in this State, to report upon the same at the next session of the General Assembly, and that they be permitted to draw their per diem for such days as they may sit and act in pursuance of this resolution, their warrants to be issued by the Warrant Clerk of the Senate upon the certificate of the chairman of the committee to such service.

Mr. Bacon: I move the adoption of the resolution.

Adopted.

Mr. Lynch: I ask for a suspension of the rules to present a favorable report upon House bill No. 278, an act for the relief of Victor Gerodias.

The bill was considered engrossed.

Under a further suspension of the rules

the bill was read a third time and finally adopted with its title.

Mr. Campbell: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended and the following read:

WHEREAS, By act of incorporation, approved October 5, 1868, the New Orleans and Ship Island Canal Company are required to construct a ship canal from the Mississippi river on the upper line of said city, thence a distance of five miles through the corporate limits of said city to the Bayou Gentilly, thence to deep water at the Rigoletts, in the direction of Ship Island; and

Whereas, Said canal will afford a water front, as wharfage, equal in extent to that afforded by the river, and safer and more desirable, as the canal will not be subject to a strong current, or the frequent rise and fall of the river; it will be more suitable for docks, navy yards, warehouses, or any work of permanent structure, besides preventing disasters to commerce during the frequent storms that visit this port; steamboats, barges, etc., from the river can be locked through into said canal, and steamships and vessels of large draft, when said canal is fully completed, have access from the sea, thus obviating the low water on the bar at the mouth of the river; vessels can find a safe harbor at the Ship or Chandelieur Islands, and will not require to be towed one half of the distance as now by the river, saving thereby a large amount to commerce annually; and

Whereas, Said canal, by connecting with the Mississippi river at New Orleans and Ship Island, in the Gulf of Mexico, and being required by said charter to be of large dimensions suitable for the vast commerce of the Valley of the Mississippi, and also foreign and coastwise commerce, it is therefore eminently a work of national importance; therefore, be it

Resolved, That our Senators and Representatives in Congress be and are hereby requested to ask the aid of the United States Government for the completion of said canal, in such form and manner, and in such amount as shall seem to them proper.

Mr. Campbell: I move the adoption of the resolution.

Adopted.

Mr. Campbell: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended and the following read:

WHEREAS, The Rev. Mr. John Turner acted in his ministerial capacity prior to his appointment as chaplain of the Senate; be it therefore

Resolved, That he is entitled to his per diem from the first day of the session, and that the Warrant Clerk be and he is hereby authorized and directed to draw a warrant in favor of the Rev. Mr. Turner upon the Treasurer of the State from the first day of the session, except for such time as already paid for, to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. Campbell: I move the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Pinchback: I move as a substitute that Mr. Turner be allowed $200 extra compensation for service rendered the Senate in his official capacity and that the Warrant Clerk be authorized to draw a warrant for that amount upon the Treasurer of the State in favor of Mr. Turner, to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Adopted.

Mr. Campbell: I ask for a supension of th rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended and the following read:

Resolved, That the President of the Senate be and he is hereby authorized to contract for the printing of five hundred copies of the debates of the Senate, for the use of its members, for this session in pamphlet form, the price thereof not to exceed five dollars per page; the same to be revised and prepared by the official reporter, for which he shall continue to receive his per diem for the time necessary for the preparation of said debates.

Mr. Campbell: I move the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Braughn: I move to amend by providing that the price per page shall not exceed "three dollars" instead of "five dollars."

Mr. Campbell: I accept the amendment.

Mr. Lynch: I move to amend by providing that the debates shall be printed in type known as "Long Primer solid."

Mr. Campbell: I accept the amendment.

The resolution was adopted as amended.

Mr. Campbell: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended and the following read:

WHEREAS, In view of the faithful and arduous services rendered by the messengers of the Senate and of the Senate committees; therefore

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of Louisiana, That the Warrant Clerk be and he is hereby authorized to issue a warrant in favor of Henry Taylor and Philip Perrin, Messengers, for the sum of eighty ($80) each, payable out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. Campbell: I move the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Anderson: I move to amend as follows:

Be it further resolved, That the Rev. Mr. Jackson, whose ministerial services have on several occasions been tendered to the Senate, be allowed a compensation of $60.

Be it further resolved, That the Sergeant-at Arms and his assistant be allowed each the sum of $80 as extra compensation for the efficient services in their official capacity, the whole to be paid in the same manner as provided for the two first-named employes included in this resolution.

Mr. Campbell: I accept the amendment.

The resolution was adopted as amended.

Mr. Wittgenstein: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended and the following read:

Be it resolved, That George W. Ragan, the contestant from Baton Rouge of the seat of Hon. R. H. Day, be and he is hereby allowed the amount of his per diem and milage from the commencement of this session.

Mr. Wittgenstein: I move the adoption of the resolution.

Adopted.

Mr. Antoine: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up a resolution presented yesterday.

Rules suspended and the following read:

Resolved, That the Committee on Elections and Returns be and are hereby authorized to continue in session during the time that may elapse between the adjournment of this and the next session of this Senate, for the purpose of taking evidence in the contested election cases now before that committee, with a view to be prepared to report on same at an early day of the next session of this body; Provided, No member shall receive any per diem for any day the committee are not actually in session; and that the Warrant Clerk is hereby authorized to draw his warrant for the per diem of said members and clerks upon the Auditor in payment of such services, upon the certificate of the chairman of said committee.

Mr. Antoine: I move the adoption of the resolution.

Mr. Braughn: I move to amend by adding the following proviso:

"Provided a majority of the members of the committee sit at least three hours per day."

Mr. Antoine: I accept the amendment.

The resolution was adopted as amended.

The following communication, received by the President, was read:

OCTOBER 20, 1868.

Hon. Oscar J. Dunn, Lieutenant Governor and President of the Senate, State of Louisiana:

The following communication was read:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, State of Louisiana Office Chief Clerk, New Orleans, Monday, October 19, 1868.

To the President and Members of the Senate:

GENTLEMEN—I am directed by the Speaker to state that House bill No. 154, an act to authorize and require the Mayor and Common Council of the city of New Orleans to issue bonds for the redemption of the city notes and for the liquidation of other indebtedness, vetoed by the Governor, was called up and reconsidered.

The Speaker put the question: Will the House agree upon reconsideration to pass the bill?

Yeas and nays ordered, resulting as follows: yeas 50, nays 27.

There not being two-thirds of the members voting in the affirmative, the veto was sustained.

Mr. Pierce moved to reconsider the vote.

The Speaker decided that a vote upon the passage of a veto bill could not be reconsidered according to Barclay's Manual (page 191).

Appeals from the decision of the Chair were taken and withdrawn, and the motion to reconsider was withdrawn.

TUESDAY, October 20, 1868.

Mr. Pierce, of Livingston, moved to reconsider the vote whereby the Governor's veto was sustained and called the previous question.

Main question ordered.

Mr. D. H. Reese in the chair.

The Speaker pro tempore decided the question in order.

Mr. Kent raised the following point of order:

That a Speaker pro tempore could not reverse a prior decision made by the Speaker of the House on the same question.

The Speaker having resumed the chair, decided that the point of order of Mr. Kent, of St. Helena, was well taken.

Mr. Pierce and Mr. Dewees appealed from the decision of the Chair.

Yeas and nays called, resulting as follows:

Yeas 24; nays 49.

The decision of the Chair was not sustained.

Then the vote to reconsider was put, resulting as follows:

Yeas 48; nays 25.

The motion to reconsider prevailed.

The Speaker then stated that by order of the House he would again put the question to the House: Will the House, upon reconsideration, agreee to pass the bill?

Yeas and nays were called, resulting as follows:

Yeas 53; nays 19.

There being a two-thirds vote cast, the veto was not sustained, and the bill passed, and notice was ordered to be sent to the Senate.

WM. VIGERS,
Chief Clerk House of Representatives.

The Senate went into executive session.

The executive session being raised—

Mr. Wittgenstein: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up the veto of the Governor on House bill No. 154, an act to authorize and require the Mayor and Common Council of the city of New Orleans to issue bonds for the redemption of city notes, and for the liquidation of other indebtedness.

Rules suspended and the following message read:

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, State of Louisiana New Orleans, October 17, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

I return to the House of Representatives an act entitled "An act to authorize and require the Mayor and Common Council of the city of New Orleans to issue bonds for the redemption of city notes, and for the liquidation of other indebtedness," without my signature, for the following reasons:

My first objection to the bill is that the city may be forced to sacrifice one million dollars in six per cent gold interest bearing bonds in order to redeem the city money, which is not now in circulation, but held by speculators. There is no reason why these bonds should be disposed of at less than par, thus saving the city one million dollars, which, added to the half of one per cent given to the financial agent for his services, would be a total saving to the city of one million twenty-five thousand dollars.

Secondly—The city of New Orleans can not affor to pay interest in gold. This bill provides for the payment of three hundred thousand dollars in gold annually. The city has no gold revenue and must rely upon purchase for the gold it obtains to meet the interest on these bonds. Gold is selling at a lower rate to-day than it has for months past and it may be twenty per cent higher two months hence. There is no certainty as to price of coin, so that the city may be able to buy at 138 to-day and thus pay four hundred and fourteen thousand dollars for interest in currency, the present equivalent of three hundred thousand dollars in gold; but next year specie may be twenty per cent higher, and the city compelled to exhaust the six hundred thousand dollars of taxes in order to meet the annual interest, leaving no fund with which to redeem the bonds twenty years hence. The bonds should bear interest in the currency of the country, then the property of the city would not be subjected to such enormous taxation, and the city government would always know the amount to set aside with which to meet the interest on the bonds.

Thirdly—The second section of the bill authorizes the Mayor and the financial agent, in the event the bonds can not be sold at par, to negotiate a loan. It is objectionable for the reason that it does not limit the loan in amount, and does not indicate the security to be given by the city nor the length of time for which the loan may be effected. If the financial agent fails to sell the bonds at not less than eighty cents on the dollar, what is there in this bill to prevent him from borrowing two or three millions of money, and pledging the whole issue of bonds as collateral to be paid in ninety or one hundred and twenty days. This might be, in the present straightened condition of the city government, considered a good arrangement for the time being, but when we remember that there is nearly four millions of this money in the hands of speculators, and that this bill does not prohibit its receipt for taxes and other dues to the city, who can say but that these bonds may, by sale under this pledge, be sacrificed for less than fifty cents on the dollar.

This authority to negotiate a loan should be so hedged in by restrictions that the city may not be at the mercy of the opinions or interests of only two gentlemen, however honest and capable.

Fourthly—There is too much power conferred upon the Mayor in the appointing of the financial agent, and the amount of bond furnished by the latter should be rather five millions than fifty thousand dollars. There should either be no security exacted at all, and the whole matter intrusted to the honor of the officer, or a bond should be exacted sufficiently large to secure the city from loss.

Fifthly—The bill does not give immediate relief. It will be, in my judgment, impossible to sell at this time these bonds for eighty cents on the dollar. The best securities of the State, with only $6,500,000 of debt and $240,000,000 of taxable property, can not be sold for sixty cents on the dollar. Such being the case, is it to be assumed that these bonds, $5,000,000 in amount, can be sold at eighty cents when the debt of the city is over $14,000,000, and the taxable property less by over $100,000,000 than that of the State? What will be the consequence then? Either the Mayor and financial agent will effect a loan, and hypothecate the bonds at the risk of the most ruinous sacrifice, or the agent will be forced to exchange the bonds at twenty per cent discount for city money at par, which the holders have purchased at from thirty to fifty cents discount, which will, whether sold for greenbacks at eighty cents, or exchanged for city money, be giving five millions of gold interest bearing bonds for four millions of city money, besides a loss of $25,000, which is to be paid the financial agent. The provisions of this bill are neither demanded by necessity nor by any just conviction of duty to the holders of city money.

A very little, if any, is in the hands of the people; it is all held by speculators, who have taken it at ruinous rates of discount, and who were fully apprised of the doubtful legality of its issue. They knew that there was no authority in the charter of the city for it, and that it was only tolerated for the reason that it gave the people a currency when they had none and supplied the deficiencies of the treasury arising from unpaid taxes. They knew that on the twentieth of November, 1867, the then Mayor denounced $1,164,230 of it as having been issued by "city officials clandestinely, fraudulently and without color of law or right." With this evidence before them, the holders can not complain at some delay of the city in redeeming this money, which has cost the taxpayers double its value already in the increased prices fixed upon everything bought by, or labor done for the city.

I advocate the redemption of this money and desire it to be effected at an early day, but I can not give my assent to a bill which fixes upon the city over a million more debt than is necessary, and oblige it to pay on that debt $6,000,000 interest in gold, or at the present rate of gold $8,280,000 in currency, and a total sum of $13,280,000 in twenty years.

In my judgment the remedy is simple and within the control of the Legislature.

First—The city should be authorized to issue its bonds bearing not more than six per cent interest in currency, payable in five or ten years, at the option of the city, and exchanged at par for city money. A tax of one-third of one per cent should be collected to meet the interest and supply a fund to pay the principal.

Second—One-sixth of the gross receipts of the city treasury should be set aside each month and applied to the redemption of the notes of those who prefer to wait than to exchange for the bonds of the city as above indicated.

Third—The Treasurer should be prohibited from paying out any more of the city notes, and those now in the treasury should be destroyed and any further issue prohibited.

Fourth—The law should provide that United States currency only should be received for taxes and other obligations due the city.

To the last proposition it may be said that the city can not refuse to receive its notes for debts due it, but that question involves the legality of the issue in the first place, and the right of the State to intervene to protect its people from the abuses of its creature, the corporation of the city of New Orleans.

With great deference for the opinion of the gentlemen of the Legislature who passed this bill, I can not refrain from saying that I can hardly conceive the provisions of a bill on this subject, which could be more objectionable to the taxpayers of the city of New Orleans than the one before me. It would be by far preferable to levy a direct tax of three per cent on the property of the city and collect it at once, than to enforce the provisions of this bill.

Respectfully,
H. C. WARMOTH,
Governor of Louisiana.

Mr. Ray: I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill finally passed, and call for the main question.

Mr. Lynch: I call for the yeas and nays on ordering the main question.

The yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Beares, Braughn, Foute, Ogden, O'Hara, Ray, Smith, Whitney, Wilcox, Wittgenstein—10.

Nays: Anderson, Antoine, Bacon, Campbell, Darrall, Day, François, Futch, Jenks, Jewell, Kelso, Lewis, Lynch, Monette, Offutt, Pinchback, Poindexter, Thompson—18.

The Senate refused to order the main question.

The Chief Clerk of the House appeared with a message from that body, announcing concurrence in the following Senate bills:

Joint resolution No. 28, relative to the sitting of the joint committee on the late election and the condition of peace and good order in the State during the recess or adjournment of the General Assembly.

No. 252, an act for the relief of William G. Bell, of the parish of St. Landry.

No. 284, an act to secure the collection of taxes of the city of New Orleans for the year 1867; and

No. 179, an act supplementary to an act entitled an act to incorporate Amite City, in the parish of St. Helena, approved March 7, 1861.

Also asking concurrence of the Senate in House bill No. 279, an act for the relief of Geo. W. Sizer.

Mr. Lynch objected to and protested against the passage of the bill over the veto, and asked that the following note, which was handed to him by a third person, be read:

NEW ORLEANS, October 20, 1868.

I hereby agree to pay to bearer the sum of two thousand dollars out of the profits of H. B. 154, to be paid when bonds are sold and city money purchased.

(Signed) JNO. B. HOWARD.

Mr. Lynch stated that the individual whose name was affixed to the note was unknown to him.

Mr. Braughn: I move that a special committee be appointed to investigate the matter.

Adopted.

The President appointed Messrs. Braughn, Bacon and Lynch on the special committee.

The Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives appeared with a message from that body, announcing concurrence in the following Senate bills:

No. 279, an act to regulate the appointment of deputy sheriffs in the parishes of Orleans, Jefferson and St. Bernard, and to restrict the powers of sheriffs in the metropolitan police district to the discharge of the duties imposed on them by law.

No. 277, an act defining more fully the duties of the police juries of the several parishes in this State wherein there are levees or other public works to be built or repaired in their respective parishes in connection with the general duties of the Board of Public Works.

And No. 241, an act to form a new parish to be called the parish of Iberia.

And Senate joint resolution No. 36, respecting joint committees of the respective Houses of the General Assembly.

Action on the veto message on Senate bill No. 154 was resumed.

Mr. Braughn, from the special committee appointed to investigate the question of the attempted bribery, presented the following verbal report:

Mr. Braughn: As chairman of the specia committee appointed to investigate the matter of the note referred to by Senator Lynch in his remarks, I have the honor to report that Senator Lynch and myself—Senator Bacon refusing to accompany us—went into the hall and there found Mr. Mader, who was identified by Senator Lynch as the party that handed him this communication, which reads as follows:

NEW ORLEANS, October 20, 1868.

I hereby agree to pay the bearer the sum of two thousand dollars out of the profits of H. B. 154, to be paid when bonds are sold and city money purchased.

JNO. B. HOWARD.

Mr. Braughn: Mr. Mader stated that a Mr. Howard handed him this paper. We then, sir, after some search, found Mr. Howard in the Governor's parlor. The paper was shown to Mr. Howard and he said that it was neither his writing nor his signature. To the question by the committee whether he had handed this paper to Mr. Mader—Mr. Mader being present—Mr. Howard replied that he would necessarily have to enter into some explanation; that he was largely interested in city money, etc.; but the committee declined to hear any explanation," and not being definitely answered whether he had handed the paper to Mr. Mader, the committee retired. The other paper which I hold in my hand was handed me by the private Secretary of the Governor, and reads as follows:

NEW ORLEANS, October 15, 1868.

I, Jonn Newman, of New Orleans, Louisiana, hereby agree with John B. Howard, attorney-at-law of said city, to pay to the order of said Howard one interest in the profits to be derived from the negotiation of $5,000,000 city bonds, to be issued by the city of New Orleans, under authority of the General Assembly, and for the redemption of city indebtedness, said interest not to be less than ($50,000) fifty thousand dollars, to be paid out of the profits of House bill No. 154, as soon as said profits are realized. This in consideration of legal services rendered in the preparation and management of said bill, and on condition of sale and negotiation by (said Newman) me as financial agent of the city of New Orleans.

JOHN NEWMAN.

This is indorsed by John B. Howard, and I believe the committee agree that the signature attached to the first document and the indorsement on the order or bill of exchange are the same.

Mr. Antoine: I call for the previous question.

Mr. Ray withdrew his motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed.

Mr. Bacon: I move that the question be put: Shall the bill pass, the objections of the Governor notwithstanding.

Mr. Lynch: I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Antoine, Day, O'Hara, Packard, Ray, Smith, Whitney, Wilcox, Wittgenstein—9.

Nays: Anderson, Bacon, Beares, Braughn, Campbell, Darrall, François, Futch, Jenks, Jewell, Kelso, Lewis, Lynch, Monette, Offutt, Ogden, Pinchback, Poindexter, Thompson—19.

The Senate refused to pass the bill over the veto.

Mr. Braughn: I ask for a suspension of rules to take up House bill No. 263, an act for the relief of Ed. Gotthiel.

Rules suspended and the bill read.

Under a suspension of the rules the bill was read a second time.

The bill was considered engrossed.

Under a further suspension of the rules the bill was read a third time and adopted with its title.

Mr. Darrall: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up Senate bill No. 288, an act appropriating the sum of $10,000 for the arrest of the assassins of H. H. Pope and Valentine Chase, of St. Mary parish, etc., returned from the House with the following amendments:

Strike out all after the word that, in the fourth line of the first section, and insert "the Governor of this State is hereby authorized to offer a reward of $10,000 for the arrest and conviction of the murderer or murderers of H. H. Pope and Valentine Chase," and to amend the title so that it will read: An act authorizing the Governor to offer a reward of $10,000 for the arrest and conviction of the murderer or murderers of H. H. Pope and Valentine Chase, of St. Mary parish.

Rules suspended and the bill read.

Mr. Darrall: I move that the Senate concur in the amendments.

Adopted.

Mr. Campbell: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up House bill No. 124, an act to amend an act entitled an act in relation to the trial of contested election cases in the parish of Orleans, returned from the House with the following amendment:

In seetion third amend by striking out the words "and that."

In the second line of the amendment to section three also strike out the word "and" after the word "interested" in the same line and insert the word "shall" before the word "call" in the third line so as to read: "Snould the Sheriff be interested, the Judge shall call call upon the Coroners."

Rules suspended and the amendments read.

Mr. Campbell: I move to concur in the amendments.

Adopted.

Mr. Beares: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up House bill No. 287, an act to repeal an act to amend the third section of an act entitled an act to establish the office of Inspector of Hay for the city and port of New Orleans.

The yeas and nays being ordered, resulted:

Yeas: Anderson, Bacon, Beares, Braughn, Darrall, Futch, Lynch, Ogden—8.

Nays: Antoine, Coupland, Day, François, Kelso, Lewis, Monette, O'Hara, Pinchback, Poindexter, Smith, Wittgenstein—12.

The Senate refused to suspend the rules.

Mr. Smith: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up the majority report of the Committee on Elections in the case of Ragan vs. Day.

The yeas and nays were ordered, resulting:

Yeas: Antoine, Darrall, François, Kelso, Monette, O'Hara, Pinchback, Poindexter, Smith, Whitney—10.

Nays: Anderson, Beares, Braughn, Coupland, Futch, Foute, Lynch, Ogden, Wittgenstein—9.

The Senate refused to suspend the rules.

Mr. Lewis: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up Senate bill No. 151, an act for the relief of W. W. Handlin.

No quorum voting upon a rising vote, thirteen yeas and five nays, and it being evident that the rules could not be suspended, the question was not put again.

Mr. Pinchback: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up House joint resolution relative to the appointment of a committee to wait on the Governor to inform him of the adjournment of the General Assembly sine die.

Rules suspended and the resolution read.

The rules being suspended, the resolution was read a second time.

The resolution was considered engrossed.

Under further suspension of the rules the bill was read a third time and finally adopted with its title.

The President appointed Messrs. Pinchback and Anderson on the committee.

Mr. Braughn: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

The President appointed Mr. Whitney as the committee provided for a bill relative to the Bayou Manchac.

Mr. Day: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended and the following read:

Resolved, That the President of the Senate be requested to appoint Hon. Thomas C. Anderson on the Committee on Public Lands and Levees.

Mr. Day: I move the adoption of the resolution.

Adopted.

Mr. Braughn: I move to reconsider the vote by which was adopted Senate resolution authorizing the President to contract for the printing of the debates of the Senate.

Rules suspended and the resolution read.

Mr. Braughn: I move to amend by inserting "four dollars per page" instead of "three dollars per page," in line seven.

Adopted.

The resolution was adopted as amended.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

House bill No. 201, an act for the relief of J. C. Kathman was read.

Mr. Wittgenstein: I move that the bill be considered engrossed.

Adopted.

Under a suspension of the rules the bill was read a third time and finally adopted with its title.

Mr. Bacon: I ask for a suspension of the rules to present a report.

Rules suspended and the following read:

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Senate Chamber, New Orleans, October 20, 1868.

To the Senate:

Your Committee on Commerce and Manufactures beg leave to report in favor of the passage of House bill No. 73, to be entitled an act to amend sections first and fifteenth of an act entitled "an act relative to pilots," approved April 7, 1865. The necessity of having no persons acting as pilots but such as are in all respects competent, is so great that your Committee believe that this bill, which confines the number to be appointed to forty, which has been found by long experience to be sufficient, and to form a sufficient inducement for men of tried experience to confine themselves to the employment; and as the bill displaces none of those now holding positions as pilots, but permits their places to remain filled by them until vacancies arise from death or resignation, the bill can do no injustice to any one.

We recommend the passage of the bill.

A. B. BACON,
C. C. ANTOINE.

Mr. Bacon: I ask for a suspension of the rules rules to take up the bill.

The Senate refused to suspend the rules by a rising vote of thirteen yeas to seven nays.

Mr. Coupland: I ask for a suspension of the rules to present a report.

Rules suspended and the following read:

COMMITTEE ON COMMERCE AND MANUFACTURES, New Orleans, La., October 19, 1868.

To the Honorable President and Members of the Senate:

Your committee, to whom was referred "an act for the protection of commerce and of the cotton planting interest of the State of Louisiana," have had the same under consideration, and the undersigned members, constituting a majority of said committee, beg leave to report unfavorably upon the same.

Very respectfully,
T. V. COUPLAND,
Chairman;
A. B. BACON.

Mr. Anderson: I move that the bill be postponed indefinitely.

Adopted.

The Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives appeared with a message from that body, announcing that the House had concurred in Senate bill No. 236, an act to authorize the erection of the necessary buildings and procuring machinery for the State penitentiary, employment of an engineer to superintend the erection of the same and to provide means to pay for the same, and to ratify the lease with J. M. Huger and Charles Jones;

Senate bill No. 248, an act for the relief of J. M. Huger and Charles Jones, lessees of the Louisiana State Penitentiary;

Senate bill No. 263, an act relative to Presidential Electors.

Senate bill No. 228, an act to authorize attorneys-at-law from other States to practice in the courts of this State;

Senate bill 257, an act to annull an act to regulate the practice and the dispatch of business in the District Courts of the parish of Orleans.

Senate bill 267, an act to regulate appraisements of property under seizure, or of successions in the parishes of Orleans and Jefferson:

And Senate joint resolution No. 35, authorizing the joint committee to investigate the charge of the Grand Jury of the parish of Orleans in regard to Eugene Macarty, Fifth Justice of the Peace of Orleans, right bank, to sit during the interval of this and the next regular session of the General Assembly. The same officer announced that the Speaker of that body had appointed Messrs. Crawford, Kent and Kief the committee provided for by the joint resolution to inform the Governor that the General Assembly was ready to adjourn sine die; and also that Messrs. Pierce and Demarest had been appointed on the joint committee on the part of the House on the bill relative to Bayou Manchac.

Mr. Packard: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up Senate joint resolution relative to the sitting of the committee appointed to investigate the charges of the Grand Jury against Eugene Macarty, Fifth Justice of the Peace, Orleans, right bank, returned from the House with the following amendment: After the words "General Assembly" insert "without per diem."

Mr. Packard: I move to concur in the amendment.

Adopted.

Mr. Ogden: I ask for a suspension of the rules to take up House bill No. 270, an act for the relief of George W. Sizer.

Mr. Lynch: I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were called, resulting:

Yeas: Anderson, Antoine, Beares, Braughn, Coupland, Darrall, Futch, Jewell, Ogden, O'Hara, Packard, Poindexter, Smith, Wilcox, Wittgenstein—15.

Nays: Campbell, François, Kelso, Lynch, Monette, Pinchback—6.

The Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives appeared with a message from that body, announcing concurrence of the House in Senate bill No. 75, an act to repeal an act entitled an act relative to the publication of judicial advertisements in the French language, approved February 21, 1866.

No. 250, an act to provide for the preservation of the records of the office of the Recorder of Conveyances of the city of New Orleans, and appropriating five thousand dollars for that purpose.

No. 260, an act to confer additional powers upon the District and Parish Judges

Mr. Poindexter: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended and the following read:

Resolved, That the clerks of the Committee on Elections and Returns, Messers Richardson and Jones, be and they are hereby allowed the sum of $100 each as extra compensation.

Mr. Poindexter: I move, the adoption of the resolution.

Adopted.

Mr. Wilcox was called to the chair.

Mr. Anderson: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended and the following read:

Be it resolved, That the thanks of the Senate be and are hereby cordially tendered to the Hon. Oscar J. Dunn, for the able, efficient and uniformly impartial manner in which he has discharged the duties of presiding officer of this body.

The resolution was adopted unanimously.

Mr. Smith: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended and the following read:

Resolved, That the clerk of the Committee on Claims of this Senate be and he is hereby allowed the sum of one hundred ($100) dollars as extra compensation.

Adopted.

The President resumed the chair.

Mr. O'Hara: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a memorial from Mrs. Lelia Talbot, asking for relief.

Rules suspended and the memorial read.

Mr. O'Hara: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce Senate joint resolution for the relief of Mrs. Lelia Talbot.

Rules suspended and the resolution read.

Under suspension of the rules the resolution was read a second time.

The resolution was considered engrossed.

Under further suspension of the rules the resolution was read a third time and finally adopted with its title.

Mr. Packard: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended and the following read:

Resolved, That Senator Pinchback be appointed by the President a member of the Committee on Commerce and Manufactures.

Mr. Packard: I move the adoption of the resolution.

Adopted.

Mr. Anderson: I beg leave to inform the Senate that Mr. Pinchback and myself, as the committee on the part of the Senate, have called upon the Governor and informed his Excellency that the Senate was ready to adjourn.

The Governor has no further communication to make to this body.

Mr. Wittgenstein: I move that the Secretary of the Senate be directed to inform the House of Representatives that the Senate is ready to adjourn.

Adopted.

Mr. Wilcox: I ask for a suspension of the rules to introduce a resolution.

Rules suspended, and the following read:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Senate be and are hereby tendered to the Secretary, Assistant Secretary, Minute Clerk, Representatives of the Press, Sergeant-at-Arms and Assistant, Doorkeeper and Messengers, Porters and Pages of the Senate, for the faithful and efficient services rendered by them during the past arduous and protracted session of the Senate.

Mr. Wilcox: I move the adoption of the resolution.

Unanimously adopted.

Mr. Darrall, from the Enrollment Committee, reported as duly enrolled Senate bills Nos. 277, 227, 28, 279 and 189, and Senate joint resolution No. 36.

The Clerk of the House appeared with a message, announcing that the House had concurred in Senate joint resolution No. 23, relative to a joint committee to examine for a suitable State House and a location, etc., and as concurred in Senate bill No. 265, an act to amend and re-enact article 2260 of the Civil Code of Louisiana and to repeal an act to amend an act entitled an act to amend and re-enact article 2260 of the Civil Code of Louisiana, approved March 13, 1867; and Senate joint resolution No. 37, for the relief of Mrs. L. Talbert, and that the House was now ready to adjourn sine die.

Mr. Wittgenstein: I move that the Senate adjourn sine die.

Adopted.

The President of the Senate then announced that the Senate for this session stood adjourned sine die.

C. H. MERRITT,
Secretary of the Senate.

JOURNAL OF THE HOUSE.

Young—52.

Prayer by Rev. Mr. Satchell.

On motion of Mr. Gair, of East Feliciana, the reading of the journal was dispensed with.

On motion of Mr. Kent, of St. Helena, ten days leave of absence was granted to Mr. Holland, of Tensas.

Mr. Isabelle, of Orleans, under a suspension of the rules, presented petition of Messrs. H. Millspaugh and Paul Deverges, praying for compensation as Assessors during the year 1866.

Referred to the Committee on Claims.

On motion of Mr. Alexander, and under a suspension of the rules, Senate joint resolution No. 27, appointing a committee to investigate the report of the Grand Jury of the parish of Orleans concerning Eugene Macarty, Fifth Justice of the Peace, Orleans, Right Bank, passed its first, second and third readings, final passage, title adopted, and notice ordered to be sent to the Senate.

REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEES.

The Committee on Judiciary submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

JUDICIARY COMMITTEE ROOM, October 7, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—In case of Senate bill No. 160, an act to exempt parties from giving security in certain injunction cases, your Committee on Judiciary report favorably, with the following amendment, viz:

Annex to section one the words, "Provided, however, that this act shall not apply to causes wherein any officer is enjoined from proceeding with any seizure or sale of property."

P. HARPER,
Chairman Judiciary Committee;
ISAAC H. CRAWFORD.

The amendment was adopted, and the bill ordered to be placed on the calendar for a third reading.

The Committee on Elections and Qualifications submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1868.

Religious services will be held in Dr. Newman's Church, on Sunday morning at eleven o'clock, and in the chapel on Sunday evening at seven o'clock.

Burnett's Standard Extracts.—The attention of Confectioners, hotel keepers and families is respectfully invited to Burnett's flavoring extracts. New York depot, 592 Broadway.

Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas Conferences.—The Texas Annual Conference will convene on January 2, the Louisiana Conference January 13, and the Mississippi Conference January 21.

Increase in the Methodist Episcopal Church.—Reports from all the conferences have been sent in. The total increase of ministers and members in this church the past year, is found to be one hundred and nine thousand four hundred and seventy-nine. The increase in churches and parsonages is about seven millions of dollars in value.

Rev. Dr. Newman, who has been absent at the North for two or three weeks, to attend the meeting of the Church Extension Society, is expected to arrive in this city in time to preach in his church, at the corner of St. Charles and Calliope streets, on Sunday, the twenty-ninth instant, at eleven o'clock.

Explanatory.—The individual requested by the editor, before his departure for the North, to furnish something political for the editorial columns of the Advocate has come down upon us like an avalanche this week. Hereafter our editorial columns will contain more religious and literary matter, and matter of general interest.

The Tribune.—We welcome back to its high place among the journals of New Orleans, this able paper. It can be an efficient aid to Republicanism in this State. It can not oppose it. Republicanism is the only salvation of its race. Its race is so attached to Republicanism, that it will follow not support any paper which opposes it. We, therefore, wish the Tribune a l success.

Orange Groves.—The orange groves below the city now present a beautiful appearance. The rich golden fruit with which the trees are loaded presents a striking contrast with the dark green foliage.

Strangers in the city who have never seen one of these groves can gratify their desire in this direction by crossing the ferry to Algiers and proceeding down the river about a mile below the town, just below where the monitors are lying.

The Grecian Bend.—We are pleased to say that we have noticed but few of these human kangaroos on the streets of our fair city, and we think it is greatly to the credit of the feminine portion thereof that no more are seen. It scarcely seems that any lady of respectability, of good sense, and a pure mind, would ever think of appearing in public so shamelessly deformed. Whoever thus expose themselves to the rude remarks of the crowds of vulgar men and boys on the street corners are unworthy of sympathy, if from the epithets that greet their ears they learn that they are taken for doubtful characters.

Absurd.—In Tuesday's dispatches to the Associated Press, we notice in the Republican, that it was stated that Simon Jones was to contest for a seat in Congress, in place of Mr. Mann, deceased.

We suppose that somewhere in the interior of Pennsylvania is the Democrat that run for Congress against Thaddeus Stevens. Now that the latter is dead, it is just as probable that the former will succeed in securing the seat of the great Radical, as that Mr. Jones will obtain the seat made vacant by the decease of Mr. Mann.

We do not believe that the Republican party would for a moment countenance such an absurd claim, even were the applicant in every way worthy.

Ho for Africa!

As some of the members of our church, and one of our ministers, Rev. Hardy Ryan, have emigrated to Africa, and as there is a growing interest in their fatherland on the part of many colored people, we have thought best to give some information in regard to the State of Liberia, in Africa.

In the year 1820 the first emigrant ship from this country reached there. It was but a small colony, but since then the Colonization Society have been instrumental in sending there about fourteen or fifteen thousand persons.

This State has now about two hundred thousand inhabitants, many of whom are natives, who have become enlightened and Christianized. Many are the little towns and villages that are springing up throughout the country. There are fifty churches, with three thousand communicants. The schools are on the same plan as those in our Northern States. Besides the common district schools there are three academies and a college in a prosperous condition.

The government is conducted wholly by colored men of ability and education. They have made treaties with fifteen European and American governments.

During the years 1865, 1866 and 1867 the Colonization Society paid the passages of fourteen hundred and thirty-five emigrants to Liberia. At the first of last March three thousand other applicants were waiting to be sent, but the society had not the means to send them. They continue, however, to assist as many as possible in reaching there. As applications continue to come in, the society are seeking aid from every quarter. Efforts have been made to start a regular line of steamships between this country and Liberia, and it is hoped that they will ere long succeed. The voyage will then consume but a few days. Now, by sailing vessels, it takes several weeks. The Colonization Society own a vessel which will carry comfortably six hundred and fifty persons. They have agents and physicians in Liberia, and for six months emigrants are provided with houses and provisions without charge, if necessary. By that time they will, of course, be able to support themselves easily. Each family is provided with twenty-five acres of land; an unmarried man receives ten acres. It will be seen, therefore, that those going to Liberia, do not go into a wilderness, and among those who have no sympathy with new comers. On the contrary, they go to a well cultivated country, where friendly hearts greet them on their arrival with words of welcome and provide for their wants.

We shall endeavor soon to give information in regard to the climate, soil and productions of Liberia, all of which we understand to be favorable.

O what a glorious period in which to live is this for the colored man. A period when he sees the shackles stricken from millions of his race, and the rights of citizenship bestowed upon them. A period when a strong State Government has been organized in his own fatherland, and kindly hands are stretched forth to greet and protect him as he turns his steps thereto.

Africa was far back in heathenish darkness, and the Lord allowed stronger men of a civilized nation to bear thousands of these benighted heathen across the sea, into the midst of a Christian nation; men brought them for selfish purposes, but a God of infinite wisdom and power is to overrule the wickedness of men and bring glory to himself. While suffering a cruel bondage they increased to four millions in number, and then, by a power above man's, they were freed. Their bondage has tended to make them feel their dependance on God and to seek after him. Now will their thoughts naturally turn to the land from which their fathers came, and we may surely believe that teachers and preachers are to rise up in America by the ten thousand to go to Africa to elevate, enlighten and Christianize the millions of their own benighted race. And to-day

"Where Afric's sunny fountains
Roll down their golden sands
They call us to deliver
Their land from error's chain."

Will you go, or will you at the least teach your children that it is their duty to go after they are grown and educated? Keep the evangelization of their fatherland continually before them. Awaken their ambition and impress upon them the imperative duty of doing everything possible for the speedy enlightenment thereof. Let these teachings be constantly instilled into the minds of the colored people of America throughout the years to come, until Africa,

"The earth's remotest nation
Has learned Messiah's name."

Extravagance in the City Government.

The extravagance displayed in maintaining the government of the city of New Orleans has ever been a notice able fact to people coming from Northern cities. There they study economy, and here they endeavor to excel in extravagance. There they place a man in office to do the work, as far as possible, of the office to which he is elected. Here they elect a man to hold a commission, or receive the honor and emoluments of office merely, and give him three or four grades of clerks to do the work which a single clerk might do. If an officer calls around occasionally and have the clerks give an idea of what they are engaged in, that is doing a great deal for a New Orleans official.

Including officers and clerks, there are on an average, about three employed to do the work that one could well do. And no officers elected, whatever be their party, seem desirous of retrenching, but employs all the clerks allowed, in order to give "soft places" to as many of his friends as possible.

There should be a complete revision of the city government, cutting down the number of officers about one-half, and dismissing from one-half to two-thirds of the clerks. The large salaries should be cut down, paying the same, however, in good currency. We have heard it stated that the office of sheriff of the city and parish, has previously been worth one hundred thousand dollars a year. The present Legislature, however, divided the duties between two, having now a criminal and a civil sheriff. Such extravagance would not be tolerated in the North for a moment. The sheriff would be paid a reasonable salary, say five or six thousand dollars, and the balance of fees and emoluments would go to the city or county.

When all this extravagance in the various departments of the city and parish government shall end, the credit of the city will quickly be restored, and before many years it would be entirely free from debt.

The above remarks apply equally to the State Legislature, in their efforts to create positions for lazy office-seekers, and in unnecessary expense in other directions.

The Hon. John Lynch.

We were glad to welcome in our sanctum this distinguished citizen, on his late flying trip to New Orleans.

John Lynch is a man who would be an honor to any State. He is the "noblest Roman of them all." A man of ample means, who has invested them in Lonisiana and settled here for life, whose honor and integrity are without even the tarnish of a breath, and whose influence and circle of acquaintance is as wide as the Union, he is, nevertheless, in the parlance of the "Turkey Cock," a carpet-bagger. He can bring more people to settle in Louisiana and more money to build up its waste places, than all the "Turkey Cocks" and Knights of the White Camelia in New Orleans combined. And yet he is one of the class whom the "Turkey Cock" orders to leave the State, and whom the Knights of the White Camelia brand as "enemies." We tell you, "Turkey Cock," the day will come when you will not be deemed good enough, even in Louisiana, to tie the shoe-strings of John Lynch.

Senator Lynch goes to New York to negotiate the bonds of this State. If the "Turkey Cock" and the Knights of the White Camelia will dispense with their riots and nigger hunts for a few days, he will get some money to build our levees.

What will you take to keep quiet?

What Folks Think of Us.

The Philadelphia North American has the following forcible and truthful exposition of the state of things here:

New Orleans has throughout been the worst rebel community in the entire South. It has uniformly persecuted Union men, both white and black. Its people deserve no consideration whatever at the hands of the Government, and we trust that they will receive none. When they were kept down by force they were most orderly and submissive. The moment the military power was lightened, they began to establish the reign of terror. One might about as well undertake to argue with wild beasts as with some of these desperadoes. The murders they have committed, and outrageous crimes against the Union men and Republicans, demand punishment, and we trust that a day of reckoning is not far distant. These outlaws fancy that they are beyond the power of Congress, but they will have to learn a different lesson, we trust, before the Government is through with them.

Apropos to which the Times indulges in the following characteristic Southern rebel rhetoric. It calls the editor of the North American a "decimal personage," styles his article "pigmy thunder," and characterizes his manner as "Turkey Cock" fashion.

Now, dear Mr. Bigny, why "decimal?" If it is wrong to be a "decimal" personage, what ought you to be? And why do you hate "decimals" so fiercely? Because they are aids to close calculation? Don't like those folks at the North to figure so closely on all your naughty doings? eh!

Now "pigmy thunder." How "pigmy?" We have heard of many kinds of thunder, rolling, bursting, deafening, rattling, faint, muffled, and all that, but we never heard the epithet pigmy applied to that article before.

It sounds Homeric though, and Bigny knows all about Homer, Shakspeare, Dryden and all those fellows.

But then, Mr. Bigny, you conclude: "Desperadoes," "wild beasts," "murders" and "outlaws," are epithets the use of which is not likely to beget unity or "assuage bad feelings," but, on the contrary, is more likely to beget prompt retaliation. The Times, however, takes into consideration the weight of the assailant. It might answer the roar of the lion, but the bray that comes from the dead skin is scarcely worth noticing.

Now, what do you mean by "prompt retaliation?" Not more Ku-kluxing, White Camelia, nigger hunts, massacres and carpet-bagger shootings, like Colonel Pope's.

Oh, no! That would be so utterly at variance with all your previous lamb-like course! You must mean to retaliate by calling the North American and the North American people hard names, in return for their rather candidly expressed opinions of you.

The Times on the K. W. C.

The Times foams at the mouth over our exposé of the "Knights of the White Camelia." It does so, however, without denying one single assertion of our article. It even admits that there may be such an organization.

Did Mr. Lardner write that editorial?

Now we have one word to the Times. If it will dare to publish each article which we will print on this subject, including our last one, we will furnish it the documentary proof of each one of our assertions, on the condition that it will also publish that. This documentary proof will contain the number and place of meeting of all the councils, a list of members, the ritual and oaths, the number of armories and arms belonging to the organization, where some of them come from, and the names of the merchants from whom bought, and to whom consigned in New Orleans, and a list of the condemned ones who are to be killed in the first row.

What do you say, "Turkey Cock?" We will come back at you every time.

The Know-Nothing stink is nothing to the odor which your "White Camelia" will emit, when we have crushed it. It is a tropical flower of large growth, but like most similar vegetation, its perfume is rank, fetid and baleful.

The odium of Know Nothingism has now stuck and stunk to its originators for fourteen years. It will never leave them. That of "White Cameliaism" alias Ku-Kluxism, will last and plague its inventors ninety-nine years, and then descend a fatal legacy to their children. The former was simply a political, the latter is an armed military conspiracy. "Come out my people" from its folds before it is crushed and you with it.

Prosecution of the Franklin Murderers.

We have received information that the Illinois Legislature has taken in hand the matter of bringing to justice the villains who murdered Colonel Pope and Judge Chase, of Franklin. The reward offered by that Legislature, together with the ten thousand dollars offered by the State of Louisiana, will no doubt prove a sufficient inducement to lead competent parties to undertake the task of bringing these guilty wretches to punishment.

We hope the subscription fund for the prosecuting of the trial will continue to receive additions. There need be no fear of having too much, as only a certain per centage of the subscription of each will be called for, as funds are needed. And all true friends of law and order, of truth and justice, desire to contribute something to so worthy an object.

There are competent witnesses that can be procured when needed, witnesses of whom the murderers themselves are not aware. It will be seen in this case that the old proverb will prove true, "Murder will out." Of course we can neither mention their names nor their whereabouts; for should the information reach the assassins who murdered these innocent men in cold blood they would not hesitate, of course, to shield themselves by murdering the witnesses.

We hope that not only those who fired the shots, but those also who instigated the murders may be made to suffer the severest penalty of the law.

It might as well be settled now, by this case, that a man in the South, as well as in the North, has the right to hold and express such political opinions as he pleases, and that no secret organizations, whether called Seymour Knights, or Ku Klux Klans, or Knights of the White Camelia, shall murder him with impunity.

Is It Unreasonable?

The Southern press is continually harping on the unreasonableness of the national Government. Really, what is it so unreasonable that they require of the South? It may be summed up in a few words. The people of the South forfeited their citizenship by rebellion and by declaring allegiance to another Government, the Confederate States of America. But now, through the unheard of magnanimity of their conquerors, they have all the rights of citizens bestowed upon them again.

This unreasonableness of the Government of which they complain is manifested in this, that it continues to insist that the pardoned ones cease their efforts to deprive the newly enfranchised citizens of these rights which it, the Government, has bestowed upon them also, and which, of course, its honor is pledged to maintain.

How can a Republican Government be so unreasonable?

The Republican.

We give a hearty greeting to the new occupant of the editorial tripod of this staunch Republican newspaper.

With a most prominent position among the political leaders of this State, with a high national reputation as a statesman, with an unfaltering courage and a tried fidelity to the principles of Republicanism, with experience and learning which will give weight to his advice, and with literary talents of the highest order, Governor Hahn unites the confidence and esteem of all sections of his party, and the respect of the whole people of Louisiana. We wish him success in the arduous career of a journalist, while we congratulate the Republican upon its securing for its editorial conduct, the services of so distinguished and able a gentleman.

Governor Warmoth.

We are astonished at the Governor. The "Turkey Cock" told him to resign to leave, to "git up and git." And he didn't. He is still Governor. He doesn't mind the "Turkey Cock" a bit. His firm and consistent course has been justified by events, and has won the warm approval of all true Republicans. His personal courage in the midst of threats of assassination and violence has won even the respect of his opponents.

We think he will be Governor for four years.

Grant will be President twelve years. Don't you think you will die or shed some of your feathers before that time is out?

Refractory.

We have been requested to publish the following resolution of the Annual Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church:

Whereas, Wm. P. Forrest has been expelled from the African Methodist Church, therefore

Resolved, That it shall be the duty of the pastor at St. James Chapel to demand his credentials, and in the event that he, Forrest, shall refuse to give them up he shall be published as a refractory preacher.

Having demanded his credentials, and they being refused, the above publication is made.

M. M. CLARK, Pastor.
New Orleans, Nov. 24, 1868.

Mrs. Pope vs. the Village of Franklin.—We understand that besides the efforts to bring the murderers of Colonel Pope to justice, Mrs. Pope, backed by sufficient power, is to bring suit in the United States Court against the village of Franklin for the murder of her husband by the citizens of that place.

On examination it is found that the matter can be brought before the above mentioned tribunal, where there is a better prospect of getting justice than in the parish courts.

Mississippi Methodist Episcopal Annual Conference.—This Conference will be held, in accordance with the decision of the presiding elders, at Canton, Mississippi. The day will be announced hereafter. It is earnestly hoped that all the preachers in the district will be in readiness for Conference. The brethren will please have full reports, and as many of their Conference collections as possible.

We will want to publish about one thousand copies of the Conference minutes, which will cost not less than eighty dollars. It is suggested that each pastor raise a proportion of this amount. The minutes will be sold at ten cents a piece, and the money will thus be returned.

It is important that our minutes should have a large circulation.

JAMES LYNCH.
Yazoo City, November 17, 1868.

The above mentioned Conference will convene on January 21.—Ed.

Beecher's Sermon's in the "Church Union."—Many papers having announced that these sermons would not be printed in the Church Union, we take pleasure in stating that the sermons of this preacher do appear in every issue of this paper, and that they are to be printed hereafter at twelve o'clock on Monday, getting the sermon of Sunday out the next day. We understand the publisher of the Church Union promises to print Mr. Beecher's sermons so long as they are acceptableto the church, and requests all other papers to publish them from his own pages freely.

If our friends want a wide-awake religious paper, unsectarian, and full of interesting matter, the largest paper in the world, let them send to Henry E. Child, 41 Park Row, for a copy of this paper, enclosing ten cents.

Baptism.—Sunday, November 1, Rev. H. W. Beecher announced from the pulpit that his "official board" had instructed him not to administer baptism to a child unless both parents were Christians. He remarked that inside his own church he would conform to the order, but outside would baptize if but one of the parents was professedly a Christian.

The Knights of the White Camelia.

We promised in our last to give a full expose of this conspiracy against the Government in the South. We in this article give the ritual and the signs. We do this just to let them know that we are in earnest and mean what we say when we promise, with the help of God, to expose the whole organization.

We are glad to learn that what we have already said is having its effects in the council meetings. We assure Dr. ——— that what we say is not merely a threat of Dr. Newman. He is in Washington, you know, telling General Grant all about you. He is not the "chief" that's after you. And even if he was, you would not dare to put in execution the threats which some members of council, four, indulged in after the meeting.

If you would kill him it would show too plainly, you know, who did it. Besides, too many people North know, love and respect him. It would be worse than July, 1866, to kill Dr. Newman. Then, as to the rest of us carpet-baggers, you can not afford to assassinate too many Colonel Popes all at once.

The folks at home don't forget the boys that are "awa." They might get mad, you know, and then what a swarm of carpet-baggers you would see!

We are'nt near as bad as "them other fellows" we left behind us.

But to resume our text.

The following is the ritual of the Knights of the White Camelia as administered in the first or lowest degree. When it is remembered that there is above all the councils a secret conclave whose names are not known to the subordinates, and who plan and order all the actions of the council, and whose mandates their inferiors are bound to execute, the full significance of the oaths and ritual will be comprehended.

In addition to this it must be remembered that the councils drill with arms:

The candidates are blindfolded and taken into the council room in charge of the Grand Conductor. As soon as they have entered they are challenged by the person who is at the head of the council, and known as Grand Commander, viz:

By Grand Commander: Who comes there?

Answer by Grand Conductor: Friends of our race.

Q. What do they want?

A. Peace and order, and the observance of the laws of God and the maintenance of the Constitution framed by our forefathers in 1776.

Q. To do that what must we do?

A. We must be joined together as brothers and united as are the flowers that grow upon the same stem.

Q. Are they willing to join us?

A. They are here to answer for themselves under oath.

The candidates are then seated and addressed by the Grand Commander as follows:

By Grand Commander: My friends, it becomes my duty to propound to you certain questions which you must answer truthfully. Your admission into this order depends upon your reply.

Q. Do you belong to the white race?

A. I do.

Q. Do you believe in the superiority of the white race?

A. I do.

Q. Did you ever marry any woman that did not or does not belong to your race?

A. No.

Q. Will you promise never to marry any woman unless she belongs wholly to the white race?

A. I will.

Q. Are you opposed to allowing the political affairs of this country to go, in whole or in part, into the hands of the negro or African race?

A. I am.

Q. Will you do everything in your power to prevent its going into the hands of any inferior race, and especially that of the African race?

A. Yes.

Q. Will you promise, under oath, never to fail to cast your vote at any election for a white man attached to our principles, when he is opposed by a negro or one attached to negro principles, unless prevented by severe illness or other disability?

A. I will.

Q. Will you promise to defend and maintain the principles of this order against all enemies, and at all times and places to observe a marked difference between the white and the negro or African races?

A. I will.

By the Grand Commander: You have answered the questions satisfactorily. It now becomes my duty to administer to you the oath that we have all taken.

The Oath.—You solemnly swear in the presence of these witnesses that henceforth you will maintain and defend the superiority of the white race upon this Continent, and at all times observe a marked difference between the white and negro or African races; that you will do all in your power to prevent the political affairs of this country, in whole or in part, passing into the hands of negroes or other inferior race; that you will never fail to cast your vote against a person opposed to our principles, who may be a candidate at any election for any office of honor, profit or trust, unless prevented by severe illness or other disability; that you will never marry any woman that does not belong to the white race; that you will obey the orders of those who by our statutes have a right to give orders; that you will at all times and in all places respond, if at the peril of your life, to a sign of distress or cry of alarm coming from any fellow-member of this order, and that you will defend and protect them, and will do all in your power to assist them, through life; that you will never reveal to any one, without authority, the existence of this order or its signs of recognition, its pass word, its signal of alarm or distress, or the name or names of any of its members, or anything whatever that you may see, hear or know concerning this order; you further swear that you will always cherish those grand principles and use your influence, your intelligence and power to instil the same into the minds and hearts of others. For the faithful keeping and performance of this oath you pledge your life and sacred honor.

By virtue of the power in me vested, I now pronounce you "Knights of the White Camelia."

At this point the newly initiated are turned over to the Lieutenant Commander, who proceeds to instruct them in the secrets of the order, viz:

The sign of recognition is made by carelessly drawing the index finger of the left hand across the left eye, (all the other fingers of that hand closed). If the person addressed be a member of that order he will respond in a like manner. If either party have any doubts he will ask the question, "Where was you born?" The answer is, "On Mount Caucasus." Q. "Are you free?" A. "I am." Q. "Were your ancestors free?" A. "They were." Q. "Are you attached to any order?" A. "I am." Q. "To what order?" A. "To the order of the Knights of the White Camelia." Q. "Where does it grow?" A. "On Mount Caucasus."

The order has a signal of alarm, which is giving four raps with the hand upon the door of the council for entrance. The same number of raps are given upon the bells for a grand alarm.

Now, "Turkey Cock," give another groan. How many colored votes do you think you will get at the next election?

They will know all about your nice little plot.

By the way, the next election will be rather different from the last one. It will be free. General Grant will get his dander up if you keep on "behaving." General Reynolds will be Secretary of War, and he likes the Ku Klux so much! He knew them in Texas. Carpet-baggers will be protected in free speech, and that's what you hate, "Turkey Cock," would than red flannel, don't you?

The following application was made to his Honor, Governor Warmoth, about three or four weeks since:

Parish of St. Mary, Nov. 5, 1868.
To His Excellency H. C. Warmoth, Governor of Louisiana:

The undersigned most respectfully represents, that on the seventeenth day of October last, a mob went to the residence of Colonel H. H. Pope, in Franklin, parish of St. Mary, and killed him and Valentine Chase. On the night of the twenty-eighth of the same month, a mob, comprised in part of the same persons, went to the plantation of Mr. James Baldwin, near Franklin, and tore down the doors of the cabins, and drove all the colored people from the plantation. Women, with little children in their arms, had to leave their homes and hide in the woods and swamp to save their lives. They then broke down the gate that led into the yard inclosing Mr. Baldwin's residence, and tried to get into his house, but failed; they left with curses, threatening to return again. From the violence and threats used, Mr. Baldwin did not deem it safe for him or his family to remain there. They left the plantation and a large crop of sugar-cane. The only excuse they gave for murdering Colonel Pope and Judge Chase was because they had the presumption to hold office (one as sheriff and the other as parish judge) under the constitution adopted under the reconstruction act. The only reason they had for wanting to murder Mr. Baldwin and his family was because Mr. Baldwin had donated twenty thousand dollars toward the building of an institution for the education of "niggers." The murderers are at large, and bid defiance to the civil authorities. They have killed or run every officer from the parish that held office under the present constitution except myself, and they threaten to kill me if I issue a writ for their arrest. Nearly all the white men who would not join in the conspiracy against the new State government, and all the leading colored men, have been killed, or to save their lives have had to flee from the parish. When the white mob appears at the negro quarters, if they do not run, they are accused of inciting a riot and are shot down without mercy; if they run and hide to save their lives, they are branded as cowards. A great number, both white and colored, are now refugees and dare not return to their homes.

In consideration of the above facts, I most respectfully solicit your aid, as the executive officer of the State, in procuring troops from the United States Government, to aid the civil authorities of this parish in arresting the murderers and in bring them to trial. Yours respectfully,

JOSIAH FISK,
Justice of the Peace, Third Ward, Parish of St. Mary.

Something New.—A firm of Philadelphia builders are erecting a hotel at Kane, near Erie, Pennsylvania, in which thick, strong paper is used to form the walls and ceilings, in lieu of lath and plaster. Another improvement is introduced to supercede the common walls and ceilings—panels or wainscoting made of fibrous slabs or composition boards, composed of fibre mixed with clay, cement or plaster of Paris, or other similar substance, and rosin, size, or other adhesive matter, the sheets being pressed under hot calendar rolls, whereby the materials are compressed into a solid form, and the sheets are pressed into a hard, smooth, finished surface. The fibrous slabs are made to fit close together—the whole being covered with ornamental wall paper. The slabs are about one-sixth of an inch in thickness, the fibre used being cheap cane fibre, disintegrated by the explosive force of steam. The new material is estimated not to cost more than ten dollars per ton.

Address of the Republican State Campaign Committee,

CONSISTING OF S. B. PACKARD, M. A. SOUTHWORTH, W. B. ARMSTRONG, L. A. DELASIZE AND W. S. MUDGETT.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 10, 1868.

The Republican State Committee congratulates the law-abiding citizens of Louisiana on the success of the National Republican party. They can now confidently anticipate the time when all will be protected in their rights, the law be enforced, and the guilty be punished. With the inauguration of General Grant as President of the United States, a new era of peace and prosperity will dawn upon Louisiana, in which men can fearlessly express their political sentiments and vote as their conscience dictate.

But while this Committee congratulate the good citizens of Louisiana on the election of our national candidates, it, in common with them, deplores the lawlessness, violence and intimidation which have disgraced our State and country, and made the election in Louisiana little better than a farce.

Believing there was danger of collision between the clubs and members of the opposing parties, this Committee, about the first of October, proposed that both parties should abstain from mass meetings and parades until after election. It also invited the Democratic Executive Committee to select three days of the week for the mass meetings and parades of the Democratic party, the Republican party to use the three remaining days of the week, and neither party to encroach on the days allotted to the other. Neither proposition was accepted; and it is the agreeable duty of this Committee to state that not one instance of conflict has come to its knowledge in which a Republican club has been the aggressor.

Our colored citizens have sought to exercise the rights bestowed upon them by the laws and Constitution of the United States and of this State and guaranteed to them by the good faith and honor of the nation; the right to peaceably assemble in political meetings, to vote as they chose, and to hold office if duly elected or appointed thereto. The ex-rebel and Democratic party opposed their exercise of these rights unless in accordance with its own interests and policy.

It was evident from the election in April last, and the organization and strength of the Republican party, that colored voters would not be deceived or persuaded into following the opponents of reconstruction back to the borders of slavery, but that if left free to exercise their rights they would vote solidly to sustain the principles and policy of the Republican party. It was found that colored men would earn and receive money for marching in Democratic processions and contribute it to Republican clubs; that members of so-called Democratic colored clubs were generally members of, and in full sympathy with, Republican organizations; and that large sums of money expended to make "colored Democratic converts" failed to make of them reliable Democrats.

When the campaign commenced the Democratic colored clubs disappeared like mist at sunrise. Our colored citizens rallied around the Republican party, and it was evident that it could carry this State by more than twenty thousand majority.

But the teachings of the Democratic candidate for Vice-President and of the copperhead press of the North, were repeated by the Democratic leaders and incendiary press of the South, and were believed by a party and class confident in their strength, and anxious for any pretext to repudiate Congressional reconstruction, and resist the constituted authorities of the State.

By falsehoods and misrepresentations the Democratic masses were made to believe that the predominance of the Republican party would lead to "negro supremacy" and "social equality" and financial ruin; that our State Constitution and laws made thereunder were null and void; that our State Government was a usurpation, and that offices filled by Republicans must be relinquished to Democratic aspirants. They were told that "Louisiana must be redeemed from Republican control at all hazards and at whatever cost," and the terrible events of the last month prove that only too well have they followed the instructions of their reckless leaders.

The secret semi-military organizations of the Democratic party in this city alone number eighteen thousand armed and drilled men, and similar organizations exist in every parish of the State. That party also embraces the greater part of the wealth and learning of our people, and it had an almost unlimited amount of money at its command. It also had the avowed sympathy of Major Generals Rousseau and Buchanan, and the moral support of their association and countenance.

On the contrary the Republican party, the party which has accomplished and adheres to Congressional reconstruction, in this State, was poor and unarmed, and unable to obtain arms for self defense. A majority of its members were not only unaccustomed to the duties and responsibilities of citizenship, but were habituated to violence and persecution, and the relinquishment of individual rights.

This committee was able to expend only about eleven thousand dollars in the late campaign, while it is believed the Democratic party expended several hundred thousand dollars. Nevertheless, our organization was as perfect as theirs until that party inaugurated its policy of lawlessness, violence and intimidation, which the Republican party was unprepared and unable to resist. During the last month of the campaign this Committee has employed more than one hundred canvassers; it has published 80,000 copies of a campaign paper and various circulars and addresses; it has distributed more than 300,000 campaign documents; it has printed and sent throughout the State 425,000 tickets, and it is satisfied that with a fair election the result would not have been doubtful. But the rebel Democracy determined that they would carry and control Louisiana by whatever lawlessness, violence and intimidation might be necessary to that end; and because of facts which we have previously stated, and because a United States law forbids the organization of a militia in this State, they have been able to dishonor the principles of free government, and prevent our election from being an expression of the will of the people.

Previous to the election it was evident that the active and aggressive portion of the Democratic party had determined that if colored men would not vote with their party, they should not be allowed to vote at all; and it was also evident that an attempt to cast a full Republican vote in this city and in more than half the parishes would result in general rioting and massacre. Under these circumstances there was but one proper course for Republicans, viz: To vote where it could be done and to abstain from the attempt to vote where it would result in violence and murder. And this course has been very generally pursued.

In some of the planting parishes where employers greatly needed the labor of colored men, and where there were fewer outrages and murders than in other localities, the full Republican vote has been cast. In Concordia parish, where 1644 Republicans registered, 1554 Republicans voted; in St. James parish, where 2389 Republicans registered, 2161 Republicans voted; in Iberville parish, where 2150 Republicans registered, 2086 Republicans voted; and the result has been the same in parishes equally peaceable and orderly.

On the contrary, in the city of New Orleans, of 18,000 colored citizens who registered but about 100 voted, and including about 3000 white Republicans who registered, the whole Republican vote in the city was but 276. Probably more white Republicans might have voted if they could have condescended to accept the "protection" so ostentatiously offered by political opponents, or to recognize the pretended and unreal peace of election day as a reality, or to exercise a right denied to the great majority of their party. In the parish of St. Landry, where more than two hundred negroes were killed during October, out of a registration of probably more than 2000 Republicans, not one Republican vote was cast. In each of the parishes of Bossier, Morehouse and Caddo, with each a registration of about 2000 Republicans, one Republican vote was cast, probably by Democrats, and the election has similarly resulted in other lawless parishes.

The extent of the violence and intimidation which have been used, and the number of murders which have been committed to insure this result will probably never be known, and can be imagined only by those who know the priceless estimation in which our colored citizens held their newly acquired rights of citizenship and franchise.

The only true accusation brought against colored men by our opponents is that they have sought to exercise the rights bestowed upon them by United States laws according to their own judgments and consciences, and if this has been politically or morally wrong, surely the responsibility does not rest upon them. No disinterested man in Louisiana believes or can be made to believe that colored men have originated the disturbances in which they have been almost the only sufferers. The characteristics of the colored race and their history in Louisiana are alone sufficient to refute the charge, and the facts of the case make the accusation infamous and contemptible.

There need be no question as to what party and class of citizens are responsible for the riots and tumults which have disgraced our State. Colored and white Republicans have been almost the only victims; hundreds of them have been killed to one of their political opponents. Only Republican churches, school houses, club rooms and residences have been sacked by lawless mobs. Over more than half the area of the State peaceable political meetings of Republicans have been prevented or dispersed, prominent Republicans killed or driven from their homes, and a reign of terror inaugurated unsurpassed by that of the rebellion. Armed bands of Democrats, frequently disguised, have patrolled the roads in the country and streets of our cities, committing numberless outrages and killing Republicans with entire impunity. Colored ex-soldiers of the United States have been robbed of the arms which they carried in the field and purchased of the United States Government, and colored Republicans have been "disarmed" in most of the parishes of the State, and in not one instance have lawless bands of whites been deprived of their arms.

The parish of St. Bernard affords a fair illustration of what has occurred in many other parishes. In that parish the blacks killed but one white man, while the whites killed thirty-five colored men, according to Democratic authority, and probably more than fifty colored men, and one white ex-United States soldier, who was acting as an officer of the peace; nevertheless the blacks have been "disarmed," and in the presence of United States soldiers, while armed white desperadoes have been allowed to patrol the parish.

Colored men have been robbed in numberless instances of their hard earned money, provisions, and clothing by armed patrols of Democrats claiming to be "conservators of the public peace." In St. Landry, Washington, and many other parishes, armed bands of Democrats killed many Republican canvassers, and drove the others from their parishes. They robbed colored men of their Republican tickets, and with violence and threats drove them to the polls, and forced them in peril of their lives to vote the Democratic ticket.

It is also evident that the frauds perpetrated by "Democrats," in casting and counting thousands of illegal Democratic votes, are unparalelled in the history of Louisiana, and are sufficient alone to invalidate the election in many localities.

Indisputable evidence of all the facts we allege will soon be laid before the public, and Congress will be asked not to allow our opponents to reap advantages from their lawless and wicked acts.

The instigators of these riots and tumults and perpetrators of these numberless outrages and murders are too numerous to be generally reached by the civil law, and like the perpetrators of the "July massacre," they will probably escape merited punishment; but an all-seeing and just God and the civilized world will hold them responsible for acts which have disgraced the Christianity, civilization and manhood of this age. Chivalry, courage and manliness lead men to defend the innocent and protect the weak; not to outrage the laws of God and man by assailing the unprotected and killing the defenseless.

The Democratic party is responsible for the terrible wrongs we have enumerated and the present condition of our State. Its press and orators, and many of its leading men have invited, encouraged and commended forcible resistance to laws and the constituted officers of the law. By incendiary articles and harrangues, and by persistent misrepresentations and falsehoods, they have instigated lawlessness, riots, and murders, and inflamed the bad passions of the people until this city and State were on the verge of anarchy and civil war.

The Democratic party of Louisiana has created an antagonism between capital and labor.

It has paralyzed our commerce and all efforts to develop the resources of the State.

It has prostrated our business, and driven capital from our borders.

It has kept from us the emigrants and wealth of other States and of foreign countries.

It has dishonored the principles of free government, and polluted the ballot box by numberless frauds.

It has corrupted the moral sentiment of our people by excusing, countenancing and commending lawlessness, violence and murder.

It has disgraced our State in the opinion of the civilized world.

We ask the property holders, the thinking men, and the respectable citizens of Louisiana, if these statements are not true? And we appeal to them no longer to give countenance or support to that party which is responsible for these things, and which seeks to accomplish its aims through proscription, intimidation and violence.

The Republican party has just chosen for President a man whose motto is PEACE. He has the confidence of the people of the whole country. He has the purpose and will have the power to protect every citizen in the enjoyment of his rights, and the free expression of his opinions. He will preserve the public peace, and enforce the laws of the land throughout this whole country.

The time is very near when Republican club rooms can be reopened, and Republican speeches be heard, in every parish in Louisiana.

The State Committee recommends that where it can be safely done Republican clubs and parish committees perfect and retain their organizations; and that in parishes where they have been completely broken up they be reorganized as soon as practicable without endangering the lives of Republicans; and that the Presidents of clubs and of committees immediately communicate with the President of the State Central Committee.

To Republicans the Committee says, be of good cheer. The verdict of the nation has established the principles of our party. The days of our troubles and tribulations are rapidly passing away. A new era of liberty and justice, of peace and prosperity is dawning upon Louisiana. The Democratic party has been disorganized and weakened, and our party consolidated and strengthened by the events of the last month. Those who, under duress, voted the Democratic ticket are but better Republicans because of the violence they have suffered; and when we have a peaceable and fair election, our majority in this State will be larger than ever before.

S. B. PACKARD, President.

Important to Passengers for Cuba.

STATE OF LOUISIANA,
Office of Secretary of State,
New Orleans, November 19, 1868.

MR. EDITOR:

Citizens of the United States visiting foreign countries are liable to serious inconvenience if unprovided with authentic proof of their national character. The proper safeguard is a passport certifying the bearer to be a citizen of the United States.

Passports are issued only to citizens of the United States, upon application, supported by proof of citizenship. Applications may be made at the office the Secretary of State, eight or ten days previous to departure, where all necessary information will be give. I herewith transmit a copy of circular recently received at this office.

Respectfully,
GEORG E. BOVEE,
Secretary of State.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, September 4, 1868.

Official notice has been received at this Department that the Spanish authorities of the Island of Cuba have adopted a new regulation concerning passports. That regulation requires all passengers arriving at the ports of that Island, to present authentic official passports, properly vised by the Spanish Consul in the ports of departure, and that in case of passengers failing to exhibit such passports so required, they will not be permitted to land without compliance with special conditions, which will be found very inconvenient in many cases, and impossible in others. Notice has been received at this Department that the passes, purporting to be passports issued by the Mayor of New Orleans, and vised by the Spanish Consul there, are rejected under the before-mentioned regulations.

Notice has also been received that persons residing in the United States seaports, who call themselves "passport agents," are in the habit of giving certificates, in which it is stated that they have applied to the Department of State for passports, and those those certificates being vised by the Spanish Consul, are presented as passports in Cuban ports, and are rejected there under the same regulation beforementioned.

WM. H. SEWARD.

Book Notices.

THE WOMAN'S KINGDOM, a love story, by the author of "John Halifax, Gentleman," "A Noble Life," "The Ogilvies," "A Life for a Life," &c., &c. This work arrived too late for us to give it a sufficient examination to pronounce upon its merits. We therefore give the words of another concerning it, who says: "This novel is a most admirable and popular work. It is marked by faithful delineation of character and by naturalness and purity of sentiment, by the dramatic interest of its plot, its beauty and force of expression, and its elevated moral tone."

This work, which contains nearly two hundred pages, is profusely illustrated, and bound both in paper and cloth. As to its typography, paper, &c., it is enough to say that it is gotten up by Harper & Brothers, New York, to know that it is well nigh perfect. For sale by Krull & Dickey, 106 Canal street, New Orleans.

THEATRICAL MANAGEMENT FOR THIRTY YEARS, with annecdotal sketches, by Sol. Smith, a retired actor, with fifteen illustrations. The scenes that have transpired under the observation of the author, with most of which he was personally connected, and which occurred in most of the States of the Union are portrayed in a vivid and decidedly humorous manner. In fact, if one wishes for a right good laugh to aid digestion, all that is necessary is to open and read a portion of this work. As many of the scenes transpired in New Orleans, Mobile and other places in the South, and the names, localities, &c., being somewhat known here, we have no doubt that the work will have an unusual sale throughout the city and State.

Published by Harper and Brothers, New York, and for sale by Krull & Dickey, 106 Canal street, New Orleans.

Notices of Periodicals.

HARPER'S MONTHLY.—that immense magazine, of 160 pages, contains, in its December number, articles on the following subjects: "A Pilgrimage upon the Rhine;" "Explorations in Lower California;" "South Coast Saunterings in England;" "The Old Man's Song in Autumn;" "The Woman's Kingdom—a Love Story;" "A Stroke of Business;" "A Report of Outrages;" "Constitutionality of the Legal Tender Act;" "The Confessions of a Reformed Planchettist;" "The Man whom Everybody Snubbed;" etc. Four dollars per year. Address Harper & Brothers, Publisers, New York.

THE SCHOOL DAY VISITOR,—In the December number of this magazine for the youth, we notice "Adventures of Tom Roper:" "Flowing Fountain;" "A Visit to Jupiter;" "Frightened at Nothing—a dialogue;" "On the Ice," etc. Terms, $1 25 per year. Address Daughaday & Becker, 424 Walnut street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

THE FREE TRADER.—A monthly of about a dozen pages. The title gives the nature of its contents and its mission. Published at 72 Broadway, New York, by the Free Trade League, of which William Cullen Bryant is President.

THE PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL for December contains a great variety of interesting matter, illustrated and otherwise, of which the following is a sample: "Henri Rochefort, editor of the Paris Lanterne;" "Dr. Francis Williamson;" "Frau Marie Simon and her work on the battle-field;" "Archbishop Manning, the English Roman Primate;" "Rev. Dr. Stockton;" "Phrenology in the School Room;" "The Body, what is its King?" "Earing a Wife;" "Notes on the Inhabitants of Brazil," "Miraculous Healing," &c., &c.

Terms $3 a year, or thirty cents a number. Address S. R. Wells, 389 Broadway, New York.

THE GALAXY.—Contents for October: "Cipher," a novel; "Poe and Hawthorne;" "The Confederate Congress," by Edward A. Pollard; "One too Many;" "Women as Physicians;" "Tied up by the Thumbs;" "Mrs. Frances Anne Kemble," with portrait; "Acquitted;" "Words and their Uses;" "The Galaxy Miscellany;" "Soft Brown Smiling Eyes;" "Drift Wood;" a chapter on "Literature and Art;" "Nebulae," by the editor, &c. $4 a year. Address Sheldon & Co., 500 Broadway, New York.

PUTNAM ON NEW ORLEANS.—We recommend Putnam to the distinguished consideration of the "Turkey Cock." It gives the record of New Orleans for the last two months. Putnam states plain facts. So many negroes killed; so many carpet-baggers "disappeared;" so many massacres; so many churches burned; so many Grant and Colfax club rooms gutted; so many votes for Seymour and Blair. Just call Putnam a "decimal;" call him "pigmy thunder." Tell him you'll "retaliate promptly." Bad fellow, isn't he?

At Unionville, New York, Rev. S. H. Switzer, pastor, a precious revival has been in progress for about four weeks. Up to November 2, fifty had professed conversion, most of them heads of families. The altar was still crowded with seekers. The pastor has our thanks for his interest in the circulation of the "old Advocate."

Religious Items.

The Methodist Episcopal Church at Ava, Black River Conference, is enjoying a remarkable work. Up to last week over one hundred conversions were reported. Rev. Adam Flint, a local preacher, has rendered important service in carrying forward the meetings.

Rev. Edward Payson Hammond is still in England, continuing his labors as an Evangelist. His meetings are largely attended.

Twelve persons at Second Street Church, in this city, last Sabbath evening asked the prayers of Christians. Three of them in the evening professed to find pardon.

Thirty-one persons were received into full connection in the Methodist Episcopal Church in Drakeville, Iowa Conference, August 23, by the pastor, Rev. O. Burgess.

ANOTHER FREE CHURCH.—Some months since the Presbyterian Church, corner of Fourth and Main streets, Cincinnati, resolved on abolishing the "pew" system. The working of the experiment has been so favorable that another Old School church, the Fifth Presbyterian, corner of Clark and John streets, has just inaugurated free seats. The voluntary subscriptions, based on the change of policy, has added to the finances of the church an increase of over one-third.

OPEN COMMUNION.—President Caswell, of Brown University, has published an article in the Watchman and Reflector, defensive of his open communion views, which is causing some excitement in Baptist circles. It is rumored that he may yet be driven from the University. Drs. Neal and Stowe have both favored open communion, but they dare not advocate it. At the recent Ohio Baptist State Convention, Cleveland, the only delegate, we believe, who voted against the close communion resolutions adopted, was H. Thane Miller, Esq., of Cincinnati.

OUR LITERARY INSTITUTIONS.—There are one hundred and sixty pupils in Wesleyan Female College, Cincinnati. Of these fifty are in the College department proper. This institution, it will be remembered, was recently opened under the presidency of Rev. L. H. Bugbee, late of the Northwestern Female College.

The Trustees of the Illinois Wesleyan University, at Bloomington, Ill., have just completed the basement of the new college building, which is to be a hundred and thirty-six feet long by seventy-four feet wide, and four stories in height, with Mansard roof and towers on two corners. The building when completed will rank among the finest college buildings in Illinois.

M'Kendree College has opened with over 140 students.

CHEERFUL WORK.—One of the most valuable, and one of the most infectious examples which can be set before the young, is that of cheerful working. Cheerfulness gives elasticity to the spirit. Spectres fly before it; difficulties cause no despair, for they are encountered with hope, and the mind acquires that happy disposition to improve opportunities which rarely fails of success. The fervent spirit is always a healthy and happy spirit; working cheerfully itself and stimulating others to work. It confers a dignity on even the most ordinary occupations. The most effective work, also, is always the full hearted work—that which passes through the hands or the head of him whose heart is glad.

TO POLISH FURNITURE.—The Scientific American says: "We can highly recommend the following recipe for paste for polishing furniture: Three ounces of white wax, half ounce of Castile soap, one gill turpentine. Shave the wax and soap very fine, and put the wax to the turpentine; let it stand twenty-four hours; then boil the soap in one gill of water, and add to the wax and turpentine."

How to Have a Cheap Hot Dinner.

This is an age of invention and progress, as the following article from the Scientific American illustrates:

We happened to be present in May last at the Polytechnic Institute of London while Professor Pepper was conducting some very interesting optical experiments to a crowded and appreciative audience.

This Institute is one of the most valuable and instructive in London, and we trust that in due time we shall have something like it, and even better, in this city.

A large hall in the building is devoted to the exhibition of novel inventions, many of which were remarkable for their ingenuity. At the time of our visit a very voluble little personage was summoning the visitors to examine a small contrivance which he called the Norwegian Cooking Apparatus. It consisted of a tin vessel or stew-pan, having a closely-fitting cover, and into which a piece of mutton or beef, potatoes and other vegetables, are placed in water at the boiling point. The vessel is covered so as to be water-tight, and then carefully inclosed in a felted box and the lid sealed. The apparatus before us had been shut up nearly three and a half hours, and when opened in our presence, we were invited along with other half-hungry visitors to eat of the viands thus prepared, which we found well cooked and very palatable. The lecturer on the cooking apparatus remarked that the peasants of Norway, wise in their generation, were great eaters of porridge. They found that by boiling their mess for only five minutes and then immediately inclosing the sauce-pan, all hot, in a little felted box, the acquired heat was sufficient to complete the cooking of the porridge and to keep it hot for many hours.

The Norwegian Government, it appears, took a leaf out of the peasants' book, and adopted the same plan of cooking for the navy, which has proved a success.

The lecturer went on to say that two gentlemen—perhaps himself was one of them—started from Paris with one of these little felted saucepans full of mutton, and upon reaching London, after twelve hours' ride, the felt covering was removed, the stew opened, and the inner man regaled with as choice a morsel as ever Englishman ate, assisted, of course, by a generous pot of beer, to which it is said Englishmen are somewhat partial.

Now, for a workingman there is nothing like a good hot meal. It adds force and power to human muscle. Therefore, in every farm, in every cottage, let the kettle be boiled every morning; let the saucepans containing the provisions for the day's dinner be placed to boil for five minutes, and then shut up, piping hot, in a wood box, well fitted inside with cheap felt, and the family need concern themselves no more till the dinner hour arrives. At that time the food will be found nicely cooked, and with the addition of some salt and pepper it will constitute a dish fit to set before a king. The laborer can as easily carry the little Norwegian stew-pan to the field as he can his little tin pail.

SOUTHERN MAIL SERVICE.—We copy from the last number received here of the New York Tribune the following article relating to the cost of Southern mail service:

An interesting table, showing the cost o mail service in the Southern States, is given among our Washington dispatches to-day. It appears that the cost of carrying the mails in the States of Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas, for the past year, has been $2,168,459—nearly double the cost in 1866, which was $1,086,527. The excess of the price of contracts over the receipts, in the same States, is about $650,000, and to this amount must be added the salaries of postmasters and assistants to get the aggregate of the burden which the Southern mail service imposes on the country. The excess of the contract prices over receipts of the service to California, Oregon and the Territories is not less than $2,300,000.

GOLD IN SOUTH AFRICA.—Recent reports from Natal afford good grounds for believing that there are vast unexplored gold fields in Southeast Africa. Carl Mauch, the Governor, expressed an opinion to this effect some time ago. Numerous exploring parties during the past year left Natal in search of the precious metal. A member of the Legislative Council of Natal writes: "There can now be scarcely a doubt that a large region, bordering and extending to the Northward of the river Limpope, has for ages yielded gold to the natives, who have obtained the precious metal by means of the simplest processes and the rudest appliances."

OBITUARY.

WILLIAM F. HENRY, aged twenty-three years, four months and twelve days, died in this city, on Thursday, November 12, 1868, of congestive chills, contracted while engaged in teaching a freedmen's school at Tigerville, parish of Terrebonne, Louisiana.

He was a young man of excellent character, ingenuous, industrious, beloved by all who knew him. His deep interest in the welfare of the colored people was evinced by the devotion of his time and the sacrifice of his life for their elevation. The remains were forwarded to Washington, Iowa, where an honored father, a minister of the Gospel, will mourn his early death; and only brother and fond sisters are mourning their sad bereavement.

PRANG'S AMERICAN CHROMOS
IN OIL AND WATER COLORS.

PRANG'S AMERICAN CHROMOS are fac simile re-productions of oil and water color paintings; so faithfully and skillfully done that it requires the experience of an expert to detect the difference between them and the originals.

For every purpose of decoration, for parlors, sitting rooms, nurseries, or chambers, nothing so exquisitely beautiful as these Chromos can be obtained for the same amount of money. No other ornaments of the same cost are so admirably calculated to adorn home, to cultivate a love for art among the people at large; to brighten up the dwellings of every class of our citizens, and to teach the rising generation, by their silent yet refining influence, to love the beautiful in Art and Nature. Hitherto Art has been aristocratic in its associations, none but the wealthy classes could afford to buy fine works of art; but chromo-lithography has changed all that, and brought exquisite paintings within the reach of every family. It is doing for Art what the printing press did for Literature. Let no family, henceforth, be without a few classical books and one or two masterly painting. Both should be regarded as indispensable to complete a home.

Ask for them at the art stores and book stores.

Our Chromos are sent free to any address within the United States east of the Mississippi, on receipt of price. Our journal of Popular Art, explaining how Chromos are made, mailed free. Send for a copy.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Elections and Qualifications, to whom was committed the contested case of the parish of St. Landry, wherein Noe Douglass claims the seat of M. D. Kavanagh, reports to your honorable body that after considering the evidence presented, they have concluded,

That had voters been allowed to cast their votes as they had a legal right to do, Mr. Noe Douglass would have been elected by at least 138 votes majority, and they recommend that said contestant, Noe Douglass, be admitted as a Representative of the parish of St. Landry in place of M. D. Kavanagh.

MORTIMER CARR,
Chairman. pro tem:
JAMES S. MATHEWS,
DENNIS BURREL,
F. C. ANTOINE,
HARRY LOTT.

Mr. Kent, of St. Helena, asked that the consideration of the report be postponed until to-morrow, in order to allow him time to make a minority report.

Request granted.

Mr. McMillen, of Carroll, chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, submitted the following minority report:

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

The Committee on Ways and Means beg leave to report that said committee have had, by order of the House, Senate bill No. 246, entitled an act to authorize State Tax Collectors to receive State warrants in payment of certain taxes and directing the State Auditor to issue warrants in sums to suit holders of claims under consideration and, failing to agree, submit two reports.

The undersigned reports in favor of passing said bill, with the accompanying amendment to section first, and after striking out the whole of section third.

W. L. McMILLEN,
Chairman.

An act to authorize State Tax Collectors to receive State warrants in payment of certain taxes, and directing the State Auditor to issue warrants in sums to suit holders of claims.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That the Tax Collectors throughout the State are hereby authorized and required to receive, in payment of the taxes due the State, all warrants issued or to be issued by the Auditor of Public Accounts, against appropriations made by this or any previous Legislature: Provided, That this section shall not be construed to apply to taxes due for the Convention, levee or school funds.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That the Tax Collectors in settling their tax accounts with the State Treasurer shall be required to indorse on the warrants so received by them, the date, from whom received, and the amount of taxes paid by each taxpayer; they are further required to file with the State Treasurer at the time of their settlement, an affidavit setting forth the facts that they have paid into the treasury the identical warrants received by them and that they have not purchased or speculated in warrants in any way, directly or indirectly, and that they received said warrants at their face value.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of the Auditor to issue warrants for debts due by the State in sums of not less than fifty dollars, except when the claim is less than fifty dollars, or in sums above fifty dollars, as may be demanded by the holder of the claim.

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted etc., That all laws or parts of laws contrary to the provisions of this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall go into effect from and after its passage.

Amendment of Mr. McMillen to Senate bill No. 246:

Strike out all after the enacting clause in section first, and inserting the following:

That tax collectors throughout the State are hereby authorized and required to receive in payment of the taxes due to the State all matured coupons of interest of bonds issued prior to January 1, 1861, and subsequent to January 1, 1864, all certificates of indebtedness issued under and by authority of act No. 5 of the General Assembly of 1866, approved February 9, 1866, all warrants or certificates of indebtedness issued by the Constitutional Convention of 1868, or by the Board of Registration appointed by said Convention all warrants issued or to be issued by the Auditor of Public Accounts against appropriations made by this or any previous Legislature: Provided, That this section shall not be construed to apply to taxes due for the Convention, levee or school funds.

The following majority report was submitted on Senate bill No. 246, and House bill No. 268:

ROOMS COMMITTEE ON WAYS AND MEANS, October 7, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committe having under consideration Senate bill No. 246, and House bill No 268, failing to agree on a report, the undersigned members hereby beg leave to report back to the House the following substitute for House bill No. 268, and recommend its passage.

J. H. McVEAN,
C. RODNEY MAY,
P. L. DUFRESNE,
A. TUREAUD.

House bill No. 268:

An act to make State notes, State warrants or any other redeemable State paper payable for all licenses, taxes due the State, prior to the year 1865.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That all taxes and licenses due the State of Louisiana prior to the year 1865 shall be payable in State notes, State warrants, or any other redeemable State paper.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That all licenses and taxes due the State of Louisiana since the year 1864, and that may hereafter become due, shall be payable in United States national currency: Provided, That all warrants issued by the State Auditor since the twenty-second day of June, 1868, for the expenses of the State in any department, shall be receivable for all taxes and licenses.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act take effect from and after its passage.

Bill reported by the majority of the Committee on Ways and Means, recommending its passage.

An Act to Regulate the Collection and Payment of Taxes.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That all taxes and licenses due the State of Louisiana prior to the year 1865 shall be payable in State notes, State warrants, or any other redeemable State paper.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That all licenses and taxes due the State of Louisiana since the year 1864, and that may hereafter become due shall be payable in United States currency: Provided, That all warrants issued by the Auditor of Public Accounts since the twenty-second day of January, 1868, for the expenses of the State in any department shall be receivable for all taxes and licenses.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That the State Collectors, in settling their accounts with the State Treasurer, shall be required to file with him at the time of their settlement an affidavit setting forth the facts that they have paid into the Treasury the identical warrants received by them, and that they have not purchased or speculated in any manner, directly or indirectly, in such warrants, and that they received said warrants at their face valuation.

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted, etc., That the State Tax Collectors are hereby authorized and directed to pay to the members and employes of the General Assembly on presentation in person their warrants at their face value out of any funds in their possession, and that the State Treasurer is hereby authorized and directed to receive said warrants in settlement of accounts of State Tax Collectors, upon said warrants being duly indorsed by the payer and affidavit being made that they received said warrants from members and employes of the General Assembly.

SEC. 5. Be it further enacted, etc., That the time for paying State taxes be and is hereby extended for thirty days beyond the time now allowed by law, during which time State Tax Collectors are hereby authorized and directed to receive and collect taxes due the State without any additional cost to taxpayers.

SEC. 6. Be it further enacted, etc., That all laws or parts of laws in conflict with this act be and the same are hereby repealed, and that this act shall take effect from and after its passage.

On motion of Mr. McVean, of Caddo, the consideration of the above report and bills was postponed until to-morrow at one o'clock.

Mr. Heidenhain, of Orleans, submitted the following minority report from the Committee on Immigration, which was ordered to be printed and considered at the same time with the majority report:

COMMITTEE ON IMMIGRATION, House of Representatives of Louisiana, New Orleans, October 7, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members House of Representatives:

Your committee fully agrees with the opinion expressed in the commencement of the report of the majority, dated October fifth instant, and signed by the Hon. Harry Lott, viz: "that foreign immigration is a matter of the utmost importance to the people of this State." Such, however, were not the views of the slaveocracy before the war, who encouraged but one kind of immigration—that of negroes from Africa. Therefore the whole stream of white immigrants was easily attracted toward the North, while the Mississippi Valley remained entirely neglected. Through the abolition of slavery, a radical change having been effected in the relations between labor and capital, no wonder that the Legislatures of 1865 and 1866 passed an act to organize a "Bureau of Immigration," approved May 17, 1866, by J. Madison Wells, then Governor of the State of Louisiana, and providing for the printing and publishing of information in English, French, German, and other languages, as well as for the appointment of agents, at the rate of five hundred dollars per annum, in different foreign countries, in order to replace black hands with white hands.

This Bureau having absorbed, within the short time of two years, not less than thirty thousand dollars, has, under its present system of management, showed itself a radical failure for different reasons:

First—On account of the so-called contract system, by which immigrants were bound to work for their passage money on the plantations where they generally died shortly after their arrival, and which system was unanimously criticised and condemned by the whole press of Europe.

Second—On account of the discouraging, disturbed state of our country.

Third—For the want of suitable buildings, giving temporary shelter to immigrants, and so competing against that famous circus-theatre called Castle Garden, in New York.

The principal features in the act introduced by the minority, and which is submitted to your earnest attention, are nearly analogous with those contained in the act of 1866. There is but one important point left out in both, and that is the co operation of all the German societies since many years ago throughout the United States. In New York, the president of the German Society is ex-officio member of the permanent State Committee or Bureau of Immigration; such also should be the case here in Louisiana. There are not less than fifty well organized German societies in the principal cities on this continent, which are holding yearly conventions, where all important points in relation to immigration are freely debated. These societies are in continual correspondence with Europe, and can powerfully assist our agents on that continent. We must try to compete against New York by creating New Orleans, the principal port for immigrants to Louisiana, Texas, Missouri, Tennessee, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Wisconsin and all the Western States along the banks of the tributaries of our great Mississippi river. Let us further change the Belleville foundry of Algiers into a suitable receptacle for immigrants arriving from all parts of the world.

With these views your minority, the author of the act aforesaid, proposes the following amendment to act No. 235.

SEC. 7. Be it further enacted, etc., That the President and Vice President of the German Society (Deutsche Gesellschaft) shall be ex-officio members of the Board of Immigration.

Respectfully submitted,
H. HEIDENHAIN.

Messrs. Prescott, of St. Landry, and DeGrange, of Orleans, submitted the following:

NEW ORLEANS, October 5, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—We herewith beg to submit one additional testimony to the report made by your Committee on the twenty-first September, 1868, and ask the reading of the same that it may also be referred to Committee of Elections and Qualifications as the other.

Very respectfully,
WILLIS PRESCOTT,
Chairman;
J. H. DEGRANGE.

STATE OF LOUISIANA, Parish of Lafayette.

Before me, the undersigned authority, personally came and appeared Alexander Marrignette, and after being duly sworn, deposeth and saith: That the letter of Michael Casey, dated the twenty-first September, 1868, and published in the New Orleans Republican of the twenty-third of September, 1868, is totally false and untrue, in this, that I never have been, nor am I now under any persecution on his account; that I never was afraid to appear before the House Committee that was sent to the parish of Lafayette to investigate his contested case; and the reason why I did not appear before the said committee was that I did not wish to do so. I did state to Mr. Harry Lott, a member of the committee, that some person to me unknown, white or black I could not say, had lately killed five cows and stolen two horses belonging to me, but never said that the fact of Mr. Casey's living with me was the cause of the outrage. I never stated to Mr. Lott that my life was threatened if I allowed Mr. Casey to remain at my house. Neither did I ever state that I believed that I would be killed for testifying to any of the facts alleged in Mr. Casey's letter, all of which, as far as I am concerned, are utterly groundless, with the exception of this solitary fact, the killing of five cows and the stealing of the two horses belonging to me.

ALEXANDER ⋈ MARRIGNETTE.

Given under my hand this the third day of October, A. D. 1868.

ROOM OF COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS AND Qualifications, House of Representatives, State of Louisiana, New Orleans, October 8, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned, members of your Committee on Elections and Qualifications, to whom was referred the report of the select committee to investigate the contested election case of Michael Casey versus J. N. Judice, of the parish of Lafayette, do report to your honorable body that they have carefully examined the testimony presented by said select committee, as well as the original evidence filed with your committee, and are of opinion that the said J. N. Judice was fairly elected, and do recommend that he be confirmed in his seat as Representative from the parish of Lafayette.

MORTIMER CARR,
Chairman pro tempore;
AMOS KENT,
JAMES S. MATHEWS.

MINORITY REPORT.

ROOM OF COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS AND QUALIFICATIONS, House of Representatives, State of Louisiana, New Orleans, October 8, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—The undersigned, a member of your Committee on Elections and Qualifications, to whom was referred the report of the select committee to investigate the contested election case of M. Casey versus J. N. Judice, of the parish of Lafayette, reports to your honorable body that he is firmly of the opinion that had not frauds and intimidation been practiced in said parish when said election was held M. Casey would have been elected; that he considers him entitled to his seat, and recommends that he be admitted as Representative from said parish in place J. N. Judice.

HARRY LOTT.

On motion of Mr. Carr, of Orleans, the consideration of the reports was postponed until to-morrow.

Mr. Kent, of St. Helena, submitted the following minority report in the contested election case of Noe Douglass vs. M. D. Kavanagh:

ROOM OF COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS AND QUALIFICATIONS, House of Representatives, State of Louisiana, New Orleans, October 8, 1868.

To the Honorable the Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—As a member of your Committee on Elections and Qualifications, to whom was committed for examination and report the contested election case of N. Douglass versus M. D. Kavanagh, of the parish of St. Landry, I feel it my bounden duty to differ with the majority report in this case, which recommends the admission of the contestant.

I do not believe, under any circumstances whatever, that a minority candidate should be seated; for if fraud was proven at all, the matter should be sent back to the people for a new election.

I can not discover in the evidence sufficient fraud to justify the report of the majority of your committee.

According to the official report of the Secretary of State, M. D. Kavanagh had a majority of 257 votes over N. Douglass.

The number of votes cast for the Constitution was 2309, of which 32 were those of white voters and 2277 were those of colored voters.

The number of votes cast against the Constitution was 2624, of which 2266 were those of white voters and 358 were those of colored voters.

The majority against the Constitution was 315 votes.

Hence, the prima facie evidence of the returns shows that if there were any frauds, they were not sufficient to defeat Kavanagh's election.

Therefore I recommend that M. D. Kavanagh be confirmed in his seat as Representative of the parish of St. Landry.

Respectfully submitted,
AMOS KENT.

Mr. Simms, of St. Landry, moved to adopt the majority report.

Mr. Kent, of St. Helena, moved to postpone further consideration until to-morrow, and that the report be printed in the journal.

Mr. Simms, of St. Landry, moved to lay the motion on the table.

Carried.

Mr. Lee, of St. Bernard, offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That neither M. D. Kavanagh, of St. Landry, nor Noe Douglass, of the same parish, are entitled to seats in this body, and that the seat claimed by them is hereby declared vacant.

On motion of Mr. Gair, of East Feliciana, the resolution was laid on the table.

Mr. McMillen, of Carroll, moved that the House instruct the Committee on Elections and Qualifications to furnish him with the testimony given before said committee in the contested election case of Noe Douglass vs. M. D. Kavanagh.

Lost.

Mr. Burrel, of St. John Baptist, moved to postpone further consideration of the report until Monday at one o'clock, and that the testimonies given before the Committee on Elections and Qualifications be printed.

Carried.

The Committee on Enrollment submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

House bill No. 174, an act to prevent the issue of false receipts or bills of lading, and to punish fraudulent transfers of property by cotton presses, wharfingers and others.

Respectfully submitted.
O. H. BREWSTER,
Chairman Committee on Enrollment.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The Secretary of the Senate was announced, informing the House that the Senate had concurred in House bill No. 212.

Also, asking concurrence in Senate bills Nos. 263 and 267, and announcing a communication from the Senate.

A communication from the State Auditor was received and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SPECIAL ORDER OF THE DAY.

Reports of the Committee on Ways and Means were taken up.

Mr. Garstkamp, of Jefferson, moved to postpone further consideration until to morrow at one o'cleck.

Carried.

On motion of Mr. Washington, of Assumption, ten days leave of absence was granted to Mr. Mollere, of Assumption.

REPORT OF SELECT COMMITTEE.

The select committee appointed to investigate whether the registration office in the parish of Orleans had been closed, etc., submitted the following report, which was received and accepted, and on motion of Mr. Heidenhain, of Orleans, ordered to be printed in the journal, and made the special order of the day for to-morrow at one o'clock P. M.:

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana:

The undersigned, members of your special committee appointed to investigate and report if in the parish of Orleans any offices for the registration of electors under the law have been closed, whether temporarily or permanently, and if yea, by what authority they have been closed, have the honor to report that they have investigated and found:

That a number of the Supervisors appointed by the Board of Registrars did, on the eighth and ninth instant, close their offices, after consultation with and by the advice of Messrs. Baker and Ferguson, members of said Board, and contrary to the advice and instructions of the other member thereof, Mr. Geo. A. Fosdick. The reason alleged for the closing of said offices is that the injunction issued to the Supervisors from the Sixth District Court of New Orleans was in direct conflict with the instructions from the Board of Registrars, and that the Supervisors could not continue registering under the instructions without incurring the penalties attached to a contempt of court for disobeying the order of Judge Cooley, of the Sixth District Court.

Your committee in justice must premise that although the act to create a Board of Registration to superintend the registration of the qualified electors of the State gives the Supervisors concurrent powers with the Registrars, fixed their term of office, and therefore makes them independent of and not liable to removal by the Registrars, yet the construction placed by some of the Supervisors upon section first of the act "to define more fully the powers and duties of the Board of Registration and supervising thereof, for the registration of the qualified voters of the State," is such that we believe that many of them in all candor thought themselves liable to removal if they disobeyed the instructions of the Registrars, whether said instructions were legal or illegal. At any rate they thought they should be guided in their actions by the Board's interpretation of the law, and upon receiving the injunction from the Sixth District Court they thought themselves in a dilemma from which they could only extricate themselves by closing their offices. Though our construction of the law is different, we are disposed to give many of them credit for honest motives. We must add, however, that when they applied for advice and instructions to the Board of Registrars, they should have been told to keep their offices open under the rules laid down for their guidance by the proper tribunal for the interpretation of laws.

We have already said that the alleged cause for the closing of the offices was the conflict between the rules or instructions of the Board of Registrars and the order of Judge Cooley. Although we think that the mandates of courts of justice should be obeyed implicitly by all executive and ministerial officers, and we doubt the right or propriety of this House questioning the validity of these mandates or the correctness of the judicial officer who issues them, except by the manner prescribed by law or the Constitution, yet your committee, to meet the objects of this investigation, have thought proper to sift the merits themselves of the question in order to throw the blame where it should justly fall.

Granting that the word rules in section first of the act "to define more fully, etc.," quoted above can be construed to mean instructions on the proper interpretation of the original law, which some of your committee deny, yet, the same section says that these rules shall be accompanied with a transcript of the constitutional, naturalization and other laws pertaining to the qualification of electors, upon which said rules shall be based.

The first rule or instruction of the Registrars, which Judge Cooley's order enjoins the Supervisors from executing, is contained in the following words, beginning at the page five of said rules:

Quite a large number of naturalization papers have been issued from the District Courts of New Orleans since July 4, 1868, during the recess of the court when the court only sat in chambers. Application for citizenship must be made in open court. Evidence must be taken by oral examination of witnesses, not by previously prepared affidavits. Such is the decision of the United States Supreme Court. The Board is, therefore, of opinion that all naturalization papers issued from the District Courts during vacation, except the Second District Court, were illegally issued. The District Courts adjourned from July 4 to November 1, 1868, and no naturalization papers issued in that interval ought to be recognized.

Your committee would here state that they have, in person, consulted the Attorney General of the State upon this question, as well as the others involved in this matter, and at his own request report that he is emphatically of opinion that the above instructions just quoted are contrary to law. For the purposes of naturalization, the Constitution and legislation of the United States (see Constitution of the United States and acts of 1802) gives to the Courts of Record of this State and the other States of the Union powers which could not be affected by any State legislation, and even if the District Courts issued naturalization papers in chambers, as is stated by the Registrars, their power to do so could not be questioned. It is well known, however, that the naturalization papers alluded to were issued in open court, by tribunals whose rights to issue them can not be questioned. These certificates of naturalization are moreover judgments which can not be questioned by a Board of Registrars or Supervisors, but must be attacked by action for nullity or reversed upon appeal to proper tribunal. The Board of Registrars had therefore no right to issue such a rule or instruction to the Supervisors, and by so doing are responsible for placing them in the embarrassing dilemma of which they complain.

The other rule made for the governance of the Supervisors, and which involved them in their difficulties, is the one relative to form three, as styled by the Registrars in their instructions on page three. They say:

Form No. 3 is for those who take the benefit of the proviso of article ninety-nine of the Constitution, in which they claim "that prior to the first of January, 1868, they favored reconstruction and openly and actively assisted the loyal men of the State to restore Louisiana to her position in the Union."

This oath is, in its terms, very explicit, if read carefully. A large number of persons will probably propose to take it, but it must be remembered that the words of the oath are, "openly and actively assisted in restoring the State to her position in the Union." Taking an active part for the purpose of defeating the adoption of the Constitution of the State does not meet the case; nay, even voting for the Constitution does not meet it. The aid must have been given openly and actively before January 1, 1868.

It must be borne in mind that the only way in which any person could have aided reconstruction prior to January 1, 1868, was by favoring and voting for a Convention to revise the Constitution of the State at the election held on September 27 and 28, 1867. Those who opposed and voted against a Convention did not aid reconstruction, for had a majority of the people voted against it, this State would no more have been reconstructed than is Mississippi at the present time. Under these instructions the Supervisors, or some of them, have seen fit to interrogate persons applying for registration after they have taken the oath prescribed in the registration act (section five) for those who "claim to be relieved from disabilities contained in the second clause of the aforesaid affidavit, under the proviso to article ninety-nine of the Constitution;" the purport and object of their interrogations being as to the manner in which they aided reconstruction—whether they had voted for or against a Convention, for or against the Constitution, etc.

In support of its conclusions upon this question, your committee is again authorized to use the opinion of the Attorney General of the State. The act prescribes the necessary affidavit for those who though previously disfranchised became re-enfranchised by the assistance which they gave, or attempted to give in the reconstruction of the State, and the penalty prescribed in the section was evidently considered sufficient to deter any one disqualified from subscribing to a false oath.

The words of the same section, five, which have sometimes been quoted in defense of the instructions of the Registrars, and which reads: "That taking and subscribing the affidavits required by the preceding part of this section shall not prevent the Registrars or Supervisors from receiving other evidence, showing that the party applying for registration is not entitled to register, and they shall have a right to examine under oath, to be administered by themselves, or other competent authority, any witness to prove any fact pertinent to the right of any one to register, and shall decide from the evidence whether the party so applying is entitled to register, subject to appeal to the Board of Registration, which Board shall have power to hear and determine such appeals," do not apply to the case in point, as the requirements of the oath in question, in the contingency which we are now discussing, follows the paragraph just quoted, and has, therefore, no connection with it. As we have already shown, the law-maker provided such a penalty as he thought would be sufficient, and did not leave it discretionary with the Supervisors whether to accept the affidavit as final or not. The applicant should be registered without any further examination, subject to a prosecution for perjury if he has sworn falsely.

Even, however, if the Supervisor, after the applicant has taken the oath, could receive other evidence showing that he is not entitled to register, the Constitution of the United States, first amendment, article five, forbids that any person should in a criminal matter be made a witness against himself, and would therefore prohibit the investigation prescribed by the Board of Registrars into the qualifications of an applicant who, if he has sworn falsely, can be prosecuted for perjury.

Your committee are therefore of opinion that the Board of Registration (or rather the majority thereof) whatever may have been their motives, however commendable or censurable they may be, have exceeded their powers in issuing to the Supervisors rules not based upon the constitutional, naturalization and other laws pertaining to the qualification of electors, and would recommend the repeal of section one, in the act to define more fully the powers and duties of the Board of Registration and Supervisors thereof for the registration of the qualified voters of the State, and also the repeal, if necessary, of the instructions or rules already issued by the Board of Registrars.

Respectfully submitted.
JAMES R. CURELL,
Chairman;
E. W. DEWEES,
JERRY A. HALL.

REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTEES.

The Committe on Claims submitted the following report, which was received and accepted:

COMMITTEE ROOMS, October 11, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

GENTLEMEN—Your Committee on Claims beg leave to report favorably by substitute, on House bill No. 204, an act for the relief of Victor Gerodias, for money necessarily disbursed by him for extra stationery, books and clerk hire, to effect the collection and settlement of State taxes for the years 1861, 1862, 1863 and 1864, it being clearly proven to your committee that the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars was actually and necessarily paid out by said Victor Gerodias, respectfully recommend the passage of the following act, substituted for House bill 204.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT, State of Louisiana, New Orleans, October 13, 1868.

To the Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

I am instructed by his Excellency, the Governor, to inform the House of Representatives that he has approved and signed:

An act fixing the time and prescribing the manner of holding general elections for Representatives in Congress.

F. C. REMICK,
Private Secretary.

REPORTS OF STANDING COMMITTTEES.

The Committee on Claims submitted the following report which was received and accepted:

ROOM COMMITTEE ON CLAIMS, New Orleans, La., October 10, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

Your Committee on Claims to whom was recommitted the claim of B. Weil for $140,844 32-100, beg leave to again report favorably for the payment of the same. After a careful examination of the claim they have been unable to find any cause why the claim should not be paid. It is shown by evidence that the goods were delivered to the State of Louisiana for the sole benefit of her destitute and suffering citizens who actually received them, and that the State in turn collected cotton which was set apart for the payment of the above mentioned claim, but owing to the treachery of the State agent, Colonel McRay, the cotton which belonged to the State was released and given up to Messrs. Ball, Hutchings & Co., parties who had no right or claim to it, and who had it shipped to Liverpool, thereby losing to the State the amount which should have liquidated the said claim of B. Weil, who, afterward presented his claim to the Legislature of Louisiana of 1866, where it was referred to three standing committees of the House of Representatives, viz: Committee on Claims, Committee on Judiciary, and the Committee on Finance, all of whom, after a careful examination of the whole matter, reported favorably to the payment of the said claim. The House then passed an act making the appropriation and sent it to the Senate for concurrence, but owing to the lateness of the time when it was received by the Senate, who were on the eve of adjournment, they were unable to reach the case although the session continued until midnight, consequently the act did not become a law. The claim was next presented to the Auditor of Public Accounts, who settled the same by issuing fifteen certificates of indebtedness o the State of Louisiana for a much less amount than was claimed by the said B. Weil, which certificates were duly approved by the Governor.

Your committee therefore recommend that an appropriation be made to pay said claim; and as the amount is large, and considering the financially crippled condition the State, would recommend that bonds be issued by the passage of the following act.

J. H. McVEAN,
Chairman on Claims.

An act for the payment of fifteen certificates issued to Benjamin Weil.

Bill read.

Mr. Pratt, of Claiborne, moved the indefinite postponement of the bill.

Messrs. Noble and Heidenhain called for the yeas and nays, resulting as follows:

Yeas: Abbot, Adolphe, Buckingham, Belot, Brewster, Barbee, Burrel, Bergeron, Collins, Crawford, Dufresne, Dupart, Evans, Esnard, Guigonet, Gray, Guidry, Hill, Honore, Harper, Morris, McMillen, Murrel, Melvin, Mansion, Pearce, Pratt, Pierce, Raymond, Rey, Rengstorff, Slaton, Sterrett, Simms, Umphreys, Walsh, Wren, H. Williams, Zoelly—39.

Nays: Cuny, Eager, Faulkner, Hanlon, Heidenhain, Kent, L'Hoste, McVean, May, Mathews, Magee, Noble, Prejean, Reese, Waters, Wiltz—16.

The bill was postponed indefinitely.

ENROLLMENT COMMITTEE ROOMS, House of Representatives, New Orleans, October 13, 1868.

To the Honorable Speaker and Members of the House of Representatives:

Your Committee on Enrollment begs leave to report as duly engrossed:

House bill No. 249, an act making an appropriation of $100,000 for the General Assembly.

House bill No. 248, an act for the relief of Martha Waters.

House bill No. 275, an act appropriating one hundred thousand dollars for the payment of registration.

House bill No. 283, and act to regulate the collection and payment of taxes.

Respectfully,
O. H. BREWSTER,
Chairman Enrolling Committee.

Mr. McMillen, of Carroll, moved that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole, to complete the consideration of Senate bill No. 235, an act making appropriations for the expenses of the State for the unexpired term of the year ending the thirty-first day of December, 1868.

Carried.

The House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Carr, of Orleans, was called to the chair.

Senate bill No. 235 under consideration.

After a lengthy debate, the committee agreed upon recommending the passage of the bill with amendments.

On motion of Mr. Lee, of St. Bernard, the committee rose.

The Speaker resumed the chair.

The committee, through its chairman, reported that Senate bill No. 235 had been considered in Committee of the Whole, and recommended its passage with amendments.

The report was accepted.

On motion of Mr. McMillen, of Carroll, the further consideration of the bill was postponed until to-morrow, and was made the special order of the day at one o'clock P. M.

On motion of Mr. Holland, of Tensas, the House adjourned until to-morrow at twelve o'clock M.

WM. VIGERS,
Chief Clerk House of Representatives.

JOURNAL OF THE HOUSE.

LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Passed at the Second Session of the Fortieth Congress.

[PUBLIC—No. 106.]

AN ACT to amend section one of "An act to prevent and punish frauds upon the revenue, and for other purposes," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the act entitled "An act to prevent and punish frauds upon the revenue, to provide for more certain and speedy collection of claims in favor of the United States, and for other purposes," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, be, and the same is hereby amended by adding to section one thereof an additional proviso, as follows: And provided further, That in case of goods, wares, and merchandise imported from a foreign country adjacent to the United States, the declaration in this section hereinbefore required may be to, and the certificate indorsed by the consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent, at or nearest to the port or place of clearance for the United States.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC—No. 105.]

AN ACT to authorize the city of Washington to issue bonds for the purpose of paying the floating debt of the city.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the city of Washington be, and hereby is, authorized to issue, by vote of its councils, registered or coupon bonds in denominations of fifty dollars, one hundred dollars, five hundred dollars, and one thousand dollars, payable in ten years from the date of issue, bearing interest at the rate of six per centum per annum, payable semi-annually—principal and interest payable in lawful money of the United States. Said bonds shall be signed by the mayor and countersigned by the register of the city, and shall be payable at such place or places as may by them be deemed expedient, and may be issued and disposed of to an amount sufficient to pay and discharge the present floating debt of the city, not, however, to exceed the sum of eight hundred thousand dollars: Provided, That said bonds shall not be sold for less than their par value in lawful money of the United States, or in exchange for said matured and liquidated indebtedness: Provided also, That no greater amount of said bonds shall be disposed of than may be found necessary for the payment of said indebtedness.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the city councils upon issuing the bonds herein authorized to provide by taxation for the prompt payment of the interest thereon; also to provide for the redemption of the said bonds by establishing a sinking fund to be set apart annually to an amount not exceeding ten per centum of the amount of bonds issued, said sinking fund to be created from regular taxes levied for that purpose, and to be assessed and collected as other taxes.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said city councils are hereby authorized to pass any and all ordinances which may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act, and all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 57.]

A RESOLUTION relative to lighting the streets of Washington City, District of Columbia.

WHEREAS, The municipal authorities of the city of Washington have failed to carry out the arrangements for lighting the streets of said city, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the government," approved July twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six: Therefore

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the mayor and city councils of the city of Washington be and they are hereby authorized and directed to levy and collect a tax from the property holders of the city of Washington, sufficient to defray the expenses of lighting the avenue and street lamps of said city with six feet burners, twenty-one nights in each month, from dark until day light, and keep said lamps so lighted each year.

SEC. 2. And be it further resolved, That the mayor and city councils of the city of Washington be and they are hereby authorized to contract with the Washington Gas Light Company for the term of one year, and so from year to year until otherwise provided by law, at such rates as may be agreed upon not exceeding the maximum now fixed by law, for all the illuminating gas required for the avenue and street lamps and public offices of the city, and public grounds under the control of said city.

SEC. 3. And be it further resolved, That the mayor and city councils of the city of Washington be and they are hereby authorized and directed to increase from time to time, as the public good may require, the number of street lamps on any of the streets, lanes, alleys, public ways and grounds in the city of Washington, and to do any and all things pertaining to the well lighting of the city, and to levy and collect a tax from the property holders thereto.

SEC. 4. And be it further resolved, That in the event of the failure of the mayor and city councils to levy and collect the tax herein authorized, or to light the said city as herein directed, then the Secretary of the interior be and he is hereby authorized and directed to levy a tax upon the property of said city, and to collect the same, sufficient to light said city for the current year, and so from year to year, in case of such failure of said mayor and city councils to light as herein directed and to fully execute the provisions of this joint resolution in the place and stead of the said mayor and city councils.

SEC. 5. And be it further resolved, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to relieve the said Washington Gas Light Company from paying the internal revenue tax imposed by law.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 62.]

JOINT RESOLUTION giving the assent of the United States to the construction of certain wharves in the harbor of Oswego, New York.

WHEREAS, The common council of the city of Oswego, in the State of New York, by resolutions unanimously adopted April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, and May twelfth, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, in pursuance of the authority granted them by the Legislature of New York in the charter of said city, have given permission to the owners of lots eleven and twelve, also of lots thirteen, fourteen, eighty-one and eighty-two, and of lots fifteen, sixteen, seventeen and eighteen, in fortification block number two, in the first ward of said city, to construct wharves in front of said lots, seventy feet in width, and extending northerly so that the north end of said wharves may be on a line with the north line of the Ontario elevator pier, but not less than two hundred and fifty feet distant from the nearest point of the United States pier, which wharves will extend into the navigable waters of said harbor; Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the assent of the United States be and the same is hereby, given, so far as Congress has power to give the same, to the owners of the lots above mentioned, to construct said wharves in accordance with the terms of said resolutions, subject, however, to the approval of the engineer department of the army.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 63.]

A RESOLUTION to drop from the rolls of the army certain officers absent without authority from their commands.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following named officers of the army reported by the Secretary of War absent from their commands without authority, be, and they are hereby dropped from the rolls, with loss of all pay and allowances, viz: First Lieutenant D. H. Weiland, sixth infantry; First Lieutenant H. H. Lanty, fourth infantry; First Lieutenant A. J. McDonald, fifth artillery; First Lieutenant Richard Wilson, third artillery; Second Lieutenant J. W. Godman, sixth infantry; Second Lieutenant Guy Morrison, tenth infantry. This resolution to take effect from the dates at which they absented themselves from their regiments.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 64.]

A RESOLUTION joint resolution appealing to the Turkish Government in behalf of the people of Crete.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the people of the United States renew the expression of their sympathy with the suffering people of Crete, to whom they are bound by the ties of a common religion and by the gratitude due to the Greek race, of which the Cretans are a part; that they rejoice to believe that the sufferings of this interesting people may be happily terminated by a policy of forbearance on the part of the Turkish government, and they hereby declare their earnest hope that the Turkish government will listen kindly to this representation, and will speedily adopt such generous steps as will secure to Crete the much-desired blessings of peace and the advantages of autonomic government.

SEC. [2.] And be it further resolved, That religion, civilization, and humanity require that the existing contest in Crete should be brought to a close, and to accomplish this result the civilized powers of the world should unite in friendly influence with the government of Turkey.

SEC. [3.] And be it further resolved, That it shall be the duty of the President to instruct the Minister of the United States at Constantinople to co-operate with the Ministers of other powers in all good offices to terminate the sufferings of the people of Crete; and that it shall be the further duty of the President to communicate a copy of this resolution to the government of Turkey.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 66.]

JOINT RESOLUTION relative to the pay of the chief clerk in the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House.

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Clerk is directed to pay from the contingent fund of the House to the chief clerk in the office of the Sergeant-at-arms the difference between his present pay and the amount voted him by a resolution of the House, passed June twenty-fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, thereby fixing the salary of the clerk in the office of the Sergeant-at-arms at twenty-five hundred dollars per annum.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

Treaties and Conventions.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS a treaty of friendship, commerce, and navigation, between the United States of America and the Republic of Nicaragua, was concluded and signed by their respective plenipotentiaries, at the city of Managua, on the twenty-first day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty seven, which treaty, being in the English and Spanish languages, is word for word as follows:

TREATY OF FRIENDSHIP, COMMERCE, AND NAVIGATION BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE REPUBLIC OF NICARAGUA.

The United States of America and the Republic of Nicaragua, desiring to maintain and to improve the good understanding and the friendly relations which now happily exist between them, to promote the commerce of their citizens, and to make some mutual arrangement with respect to a communication between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, by the river San Juan, and either or both the lakes of Nicaragua and Managua, or by any other route through the territories of Nicaragua, have agreed for this purpose to conclude a treaty of friendship, commerce and navigation, and have accordingly named as their respective plenipotentiaries, that is to say: The President of the United States, Andrew B. Dickinson, Minister Resident and Extraordinary to Nicaragua, and His Excellency the President of the Republic of Nicaragua, Senor Licenciado Don Thomas Ayon, Minister of Foreign Relations, who, after communicating to each other their full powers, found in due and proper form, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

There shall be perpetual amity between the United States and their citizens on the one part, and the Government of the Republic of Nicaragua and its citizens of the other.

ARTICLE II.

There shall be between all the territories of the United States and the territories of the Republic of Nicaragua a reciprocal freedom of commerce. The subjects and citizens of the two countries, respectively, shall have full liberty freely and securely to come with their ships and cargoes to all places, ports, and rivers in the territories aforesaid to which other foreigners are or may be permitted to come, to enter into the same, and to remain and reside in any part thereof, respectively; also to hire and occupy houses and warehouses for the purposes of their commerce; and generally the merchants and traders of each nation, respectively, shall enjoy the most complete protection and security for their commerce, subject always to the laws and statutes of the two countries, respectively. In like manner the respective ships of war and post office packets of the two countries shall have liberty freely and securely to come to all harbors, rivers, and places to which other foreign ships of war and packets are or may be permitted to come, to enter the same, to anchor, and to remain there and refit, subject always to the laws and statutes of the two countries, respectively.

By the right of entering places, ports, and rivers, mentioned in this article, the privilege of carrying on the coasting trade is not understood; in which trade national vessels only of the country where the trade is carried on are permitted to engage.

ARTICLE III.

It being the intention of the two high contracting parties to bind themselves by the two preceding articles to treat each other on the footing of the most favored nations, it is hereby agreed between them that any favor, privilege, or immunity whatever, in matters of commerce and navigation, which either contracting party has actually granted, or may grant hereafter, to the subjects or citizens of any other State, shall be extended to the subjects or citizens of the other contracting party gratuitously, if the concession in favor of that other nation shall have been gratuitous, or in return for a compensation as nearly as possible of a proportionate value and effect, to be adjusted by mutual agreement, if the concession shall have been conditional.

ARTICLE IV.

No higher or other duties shall be imposed on the importation into the territories of the United States of any article being the growth, produce or manufacture of the republic of Nicaragua and no higher or other duties shall be imposed on the importation into the territories of the republic of Nicaragua of any article being the growth, produce or manufacture of the United States, than are or shall be payable upon the like articles being the growth, produce or manufacture of any other foreign country; nor shall any other or higher duties or charges be imposed in the territories of either of the high contracting parties on the exportation of any articles to the territories of the other than such as are or may be payable on the exportation of the like articles to any other foreign country; nor shall any prohibition be imposed upon the importation or exportation of any articles the growth, produce or manufacture of the territories of the United States, or the republic of Nicaragua to or from the said territories of the United States, or to or from the republic of Nicaragua, which shall not equally extend to all other nations.

ARTICLE V.

No higher or other duties or payments on account of tonnage, of light or harbor dues or pilotage of salvage in case of either damage or shipwreck, or on account of any local charges, shall be imposed in any of the ports of Nicaragua on vessels of the United States than those payable by Nicaraguan vessels, nor in any of the ports in the United States on Nicaraguan vessels than shall be payable in the same ports on vessels of the United States.

ARTICLE VI.

The same duties shall be paid on the importation into the territories of the republic of Nicaragua of any article being the growth, produce or manufacture of the territories of the United States, whether such importation shall be made in Nicaraguan vessels or in the vessels of the United States; and the same duties shall be paid on the importation into the territories of the United States of any article being the growth, produce or manufacture of the republic of Nicaragua, whether such importation shall be made in Nicaraguan or United States vessels. The same duties shall be paid, and the bounties and drawbacks allowed on the exportation to the republic of Nicaragua of any article being the growth, produce or manufacture of the territories of the United States, whether such exportation shall be made in Nicaraguan or United States vessels; and the same duties shall be paid, and the same bounties and drawbacks allowed on the exportation of any articles being the growth, produce or manufacture of the republic of Nicaragua to the territories of the United States, whether such exportation shall be made in the vessels of the United States or of Nicaragua.

ARTICLE VII.

All merchants, commanders of ships and other citizens of the United States shall have full liberty in all the territories of the republic of Nicaragua to manage their own affairs themselves, as permitted by the laws, or to commit them to the management of whomsoever they please, as broker, factor, agent or interpreter; nor shall they be obliged to employ any other persons in those capacities than those employed by Nicaraguans, nor pay them any other salary or remuneration than such as is paid in like cases by Nicaraguan citizens; and absolute freedom shall be allowed in all cases to the buyer and seller to bargain and fix the price of any goods, wares, or merchandise imported into or exported from the republic of Nicaragua as they shall see good, observing the laws and established custom of the country.

The same privilege shall be enjoyed in the territories of the United States by the citizens of the republic of Nicaragua under the same conditions.

The citizens of the high contracting parties shall reciprocally receive and enjoy full and perfect protection for their persons and property, and shall have free and open access to the courts of justice in said country, respectively, for the prosecution and defense of their just rights; and they shall be at liberty to employ, in all cases, advocates, attorneys, or agents of whatsoever description, whom they may think proper; and they shall enjoy, in this respect, the same rights and privileges therein as native citizens.

ARTICLE VIII.

In whatever relates to the police of the ports, the lading and unlading of ships, the safety of merchandise, goods, and effects, the succession to personal estates, by will or otherwise, and the disposal of personal property of every sort and denomination, by sale, donation, exchange, testament, or any other manner whatsoever, as also the administration of justice, the citizens of the two high contracting parties shall reciprocally enjoy the same privileges, liberties and rights as native citizens; and they shall not be charged in any of these respects with any higher imposts or duties than those which are or may be paid by native citizens, submitting, of course, to the local laws and regulations of each country, respectively.

The foregoing provisions shall be applicable to real estate situated within the States of the American Union, or within the republic of Nicaragua in which foreigners shall be entitled to hold or inherit real estate. But in case real estate situate within the territories of one of the contracting parties should fall to a citizen of the other party, who, on account of his being an alien, could not be permitted to hold such property in the State in which it may be situated, there shall be accorded to the said heir, or other successor, such time as the laws of the State will permit to sell such property. He shall be at liberty, at all times, to withdraw and export the proceeds thereof without difficulty and without paying to the government any other charges than those which would be paid by an inhabitant of the country in which the real estate may be situated.

If any citizen of the two high contracting parties shall die without a will or testament in any of the territories of the other, the minister or consul, or other diplomatic agent, of the nation to which the deceased belonged, (or the representative of such minister or consul, or other diplomatic agent, in case of absence), shall have the right to nominate curators to take charge of the property of the deceased, so far as the laws of the country will permit, for the benefit of the lawful heirs and creditors of the deceased, giving proper notice of such nomination to the authorities of the country.

ARTICLE IX.

1. The citizens of the United States residing in Nicaragua, or the citizens of Nicaragua residing in the United States, may intermarry with the natives of the country; hold and possess, by purchase, marriage, or descent, any estate, real or personal without thereby changing their national character, subject to the laws which now exist or may be enacted in this respect.

2. The citizens of the United States residents in the republic of Nicaragua, and the citizens of Nicaragua residents in the United States, shall be exempted from all forced or compulsory military service whatsoever, by land or sea; from all contributions of war, military exactions, forced loans in time of war; but they shall be obliged, in the same manner as the citizens of each nation, to pay lawful taxes, municipal and other modes of imposts, and ordinary charges, loans, and contributions in time of peace, (as the citizens of the country are liable), in just proportion to the property owned.

3. Nor shall the property of either, of any kind be taken for any public object without full and just compensation to be paid in advance; and

4. The citizens of the two high contracting parties shall have the unlimited right to go to any part of the territories of the other, and in all cases enjoy the same security as the natives of the country where they reside, with the condition that they duly observe the laws and ordinances.

ARTICLE X.

It shall be free for each of the two high contracting parties to appoint consuls for the protection of trade, to reside in any of the territories of the other party. But before any consul shall act as such, he shall, in the usual form, be approved and admitted by the government to which he is sent; and either of the high contracting parties may except from the residence of consuls such particular places as they judge fit to be excepted.

The diplomatic agents of Nicaragua and consuls shall enjoy in the territories of the United States whatever privileges, exemptions, and immunities are or shall be allowed to the agents of the same rank belonging to the most favored nations; and in the like manner the diplomatic agents and consuls of the United States in Nicaragua shall enjoy, according to the strictest reciprocity, whatever privileges, exemptions, and immunities are or may be granted in the republic of Nicaragua to the diplomatic agents and consuls of the most favored nations.

ARTICLE XI.

For the better security of commerce between the citizens of the United States and the citizens of Nicaragua, it is agreed, that if at any time any interruption of friendly intercourse, or any rupture, should unfortunately take place between the two high contracting parties, the citizens of either, who may be within the territories of the other, shall, if residing on the coast, be allowed six months, and if in the interior, a whole year, to wind up their accounts, and dispose of their property; and a safe-conduct shall be given to them to embark at any port they themselves may select. Even in case of rupture, all such citizens of either the high contracting parties, who are established in any of the territories of the other in trade or other employment, shall have the privilege of remaining and of continuing such trade or employment, without any manner of interruption, in the full enjoyment of liberty and property, so long as they behave peacefully and commit no offense against the laws and their goods and effects, of whatever description they may be, whether in their own custody, or intrusted to individuals or to the State, shall not be liable to seizure or sequestration, nor to any other charges or demands than those which may be made upon the like effects or property belonging to the native citizens of the country in which such citizens may reside. In the same case, debts between individuals property in public funds, and shares of companies, shall never be confiscated, nor detained, nor sequestered.

ARTICLE XII.

The citizens of the United States and the citizens of the republic of Nicaragua, respectively, residing in any of the territories of the other party, shall enjoy in their houses, persons, and property, the protection of the Government, and shall continue in possession of the guarantees which they now enjoy. They shall not be disturbed, molested, or annoyed in any manner on account of their religious belief, nor in the proper exercise of their religion, agreeably to the system of tolerance established in the territories of the high contracting parties: provided they respect the religion of the nation in which they reside, as well as the Constitution, laws, and customs of the country.

Liberty shall also be granted to bury the citizens of either of the two high contracting parties, who may die in the territories aforesaid, in burial places of their own, which in the same manner may be freely established and maintained; nor shall the funerals or sepulchres of the dead be disturbed in any way or upon any account.

ARTICLE XIII.

Whenever a citizen of either of the contracting parties shall be forced to seek refuge or asylum in the rivers, bays, ports, or dominions of the other with their vessels, whether merchant or war, public or private, through stress of weather, pursuit of pirates or enemies, or want of provisions or water, they shall be received and treated with humanity, and given all favor and protection for repairing their vessels, procuring provisions, and placing themselves in all respects in a condition to continue their voyage without obstacle of any kind.

ARTICLE XIV.

The Republic of Nicaragua hereby grants to the United States, and to their citizens and property, the right of transit between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans through the territory of that republic, on any route of communication, natural or artificial, whether by land or by water, which may now or hereafter exist or be constructed under the authority of Nicaragua, to be used and enjoyed in the same manner and upon equal terms by both republics and their respective citizens, the Republic of Nicaragua, however, reserving its rights of sovereignty over the same.

ARTICLE XV.

The United States hereby agree to extend their protection to all such routes of communication as aforesaid, and to guarantee the neutrality and innocent use of the same. They also agree to employ their influence with other nations to induce them to guarantee such neutrality and protection.

And the Republic of Nicaragua, on its part, undertakes to establish one free port at each extremity of one of the aforesaid routes of communication between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. At these ports no tonnage or other duties shall be imposed or levied by the Government of Nicaragua on the vessels of the United States, or on any effects or merchandise belonging to citizens or subjects of the United States, or upon the vessels or effects of any other country intended, bona fide, for transit across the said routes of communication, and not for consumption within the Republic of Nicaragua. The United States shall also be at liberty, on giving notice to the Government or authorities of Nicaragua, to carry troops and munitions of war in their own vessels, or otherwise, to either of said free ports, and shall be entitled to their conveyance between them without obstruction by said government or authorities, and without any charges or tolls whatever for their transportation on either of said routes: Provided, said troops and munitions of war are not intended to be employed against Central American nations friendly to Nicaragua. And no higher or other charges or tolls shall be imposed on the conveyance or transit of persons and property of citizens or subjects of the United States, or of any other country, across the said routes of communication, than are or may be imposed on the persons and property of citizens of Nicaragua.

And the Republic of Nicaragua concedes the right of the Postmaster General of the United States to enter into contracts with any individuals or companies to transport the mails of the United States along the said routes of communication, or along any other routes across the isthmus, in its discretion, in closed bags, the contents of which may not be intended for distribution within the said republic, free from the imposition of all taxes or duties by the Government of Nicaragua, but this liberty is not to be construed so as to permit such individuals or companies, by virtue of this right to transport the mails, to carry also passengers or freight.

ARTICLE XVI.

The Republic of Nicaragua agrees that, should it become necessary at any time to employ military forces for the security and protection of persons and property passing over any of the routes aforesaid, it will employ the requisite force for that purpose; but upon failure to do this from any cause whatever, the Government of the United States may, with the consent, or at the request of the Government of Nicaragua, or of the Minister thereof at Washington, or of the competent legally appointed local authorities, civil or military, employ such force for this and for no other purpose; and when, in the opinion of the Government of Nicaragua, the necessity ceases, such force shall be immediately withdrawn.

In the exceptional case, however, of unforeseen or imminent danger to the lives or property of citizens of the United States, the forces of said republic are authorized to act for their protection without such consent having been previously obtained.

But no duty or power imposed upon or conceded to the United States by the provisions of this article shall be performed or exercised except by authority and in pursuance of laws of Congress hereafter enacted. It being understood that such laws shall not affect the protection and guarantee of the neutrality of the routes of transit, nor the obligation to withdraw the troops which may be disembarked in Nicaragua directly that, in the judgment of the Government of the republic, they should no longer be necessary, nor in any manner bring about new obligations on Nicaragua, nor alter her rights in virtue of the present treaty.

ARTICLE XVII.

It is understood, however, that the United States, in according protection to such routes of communication, and guaranteeing their neutrality and security, always intend that the protection and guarantee are granted conditionally, and may be withdrawn if the United States should deem that the persons or company undertaking or managing the same adopt or establish such regulations concerning the traffic thereupon as are contrary to the spirit and intention of this treaty, either by making unfair discriminations in favor of the commerce of any country or countries over the commerce of any other country or countries, or by imposing oppressive exactions or unreasonable tolls upon mails, passengers, vessels, goods, wares, merchandise, or other articles. The aforesaid protection and guarantee shall not, however, be withdrawn by the United States without first giving six months' notice to the Republic of Nicaragua.

ARTICLE XVIII.

And it is further agreed and understood that in any grants or contracts which may hereafter be made or entered into by the Government of Nicaragua, having reference to the interoceanic routes above referred to or either of them the rights and privileges granted by this treaty to the Government and citizens of the United States shall be fully protected and reserved. And if any such grants or contracts now exist, of a valid character, it is further understood that the guarantee and protection of the United States, stipulated in Article XV of this treaty shall be held inoperative and void until the holders of such grants and contracts shall recognize the concessions made in this treaty to the government and citizens of the United States with respect to such inter oceanic routes or either of them, and shall agree to observe and be governed by these concessions as fully as if they had been embraced in their original grants or contracts; after which recognition and agreement said guarantee and protection shall be in full force; provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed either to affirm or to deny the validity of the said contracts.

ARTICLE XIX.

After ten years from the completion of a railroad or any other route of communication through the territory of Nicaragua from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, no company which may have been constructed or be in possession of the same shall ever divide directly or indirectly, by the issue of new stock, the payment of dividends or otherwise more than fifteen per cent per annum or at that rate, to its stockholders from tolls collected thereupon; but whenever the tolls shall be found to yield a larger profit than this, they shall be reduced to the standard of fifteen per cent per annum.

ARTICLE XX.

The two high contracting parties, desiring to make this treaty as durable as possible, agree that this treaty shall remain in full force for the term of fifteen years from the day of the exchange of the ratifications; and either party shall have the right to notify the other of its intention to terminate, alter or reform this treaty, at least twelve months before the expiration of the fifteen years; if no such notice be given then this treaty shall continue binding beyond the said time, and until twelve months shall have elapsed from the day on which one of the parties shall notify the other of its intention to alter reform or abrogate this treaty.

ARTICLE XXI.

The present treaty shall be ratified and the ratifications exchanged at the city of Managua, within one year, or sooner if possible.

In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the same, and affixed thereto their respective seals.

Done at the city of Managua, this twenty-first day of June in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven

TOMAS AYON, [L.S.]

And whereas the said treaty has been duly ratified on both parts, and the respective ratifications of the same were exchanged at the city of Granada, on the twentieth day of June last,

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America have caused the said treaty to be made public, to the end that the same, and every clause and article thereof, may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this thirteenth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred sixty-eight and of the independence of the United States of America the ninety-third.

[SEAL] ANDREW JOHNSON.

By the President:
W. HUNTER,
Acting Secretary of State.

CONVENTION BETWEEN THE GENERAL POST OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE GENERAL POST OFFICE OF THE UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

The general Postoffice of the United States of America and the general Postoffice of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland being desirous of establishing and maintaining an exchange of mails between the United States on the one side and the Straits Settlements and the British East Indies on the other, by means conjointly of the line of United States mail packets plying between San Francisco and Hong Kong and of the line of British mail packets plying between Hong Kong and Singapore, Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Aden, the undersigned duly authorized for that purpose have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

There shall be a direct exchange of mails between the offices of New York and San Francisco on the one part, and the offices of Singapore, Calcutta, Madras Bombay, and Aden, on the other, comprising letters, newspapers, prices current, book packets, and packets of patterns or samples originating in the United States and addressed respectively to the Straits Settlements, or to the British East Indies, or originating in the British East Indies or the Straits Settlements, respectively, and addressed to the United States.

These mails shall be conveyed by United States mail packets between San Francisco and Hong Kong via Yokahama, and by British mail packets between Hong Kong and Singapore or the Indian ports.

ARTICLE II.

The postage to be collected in the United States, upon paid correspondence addressed to the Straits Settlements or the British East Indies, shall be ten cents per single letter not exceeding half an ounce in weight, heavier letters being charged in proportion, two cents each on newspapers or prices current, and eight cents per four ounces on book packets or packets of patterns or samples; and the postage to be collected in the Straits Settlements or the British East Indies, upon paid correspondence addressed to the United States, shall be ten pence per single letter not exceeding half an ounce in weight, heavier letters being charged in proportion, and four pence per four ounces for newspapers, prices current, book packets or packets of patterns or samples.

The correspondence thus paid shall be delivered at the place of destination, whether in the United States or in the British Possessions, free from all charge whatsoever.

Letters posted in either country unpaid or insufficiently paid shall, nevertheless, be forwarded and shall be charged at the place of destination with a rate of postage of the same amount that would be chargeable on a letter of like weight, posted for dispatch in the opposite direction, together with a fine of six pence in the Straits Settlements or the British East Indies, or of twelve cents in the United States.

ARTICLE III.

The exchange of the correspondence referred to in Article II. preceding, shall not give rise to any accounts between the British and the United States postoffices. Each office shall keep the postage which it collects.

ARTICLE IV.

Every letter, newspaper, price current, book packet or packet of patterns or samples, dispatched from one office to the other, shall be plainly stamped in red ink with a stamp bearing the words "paid all" on the right-hand upper corner of the address, and shall also bear the dated stamp of the office at which it was posted.

ARTICLE V.

Dead letters, newspapers, etc., which can not be delivered from whatever cause shall be mutually returned, without charge, monthly, or as frequently as the regulations of the respective offices will permit.

ARTICLE VI.

The two offices may, by mutual consent, make such detailed regulations as shall be found necessary to carry out the objects of this arrangement, such regulations to terminate at any time on a reasonable notice by either office.

ARTICLE VII.

This convention shall come into operation on the first day of November, 1868, and shall be terminable at any time on a notice by either office of six months.

Done in duplicate and signed in Washington on the twenty-eighth day of July, A. D., 1868, and in London on the fourteenth day of August, 1868.

[SEAL.] ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.
[SEAL.] MONTROSE,
Postmaster General of the United Kingdom.

I hereby approve the aforegoing convention, and in testimony thereof I have caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Washington, July 28, 1868.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a treaty of commerce between the United States of America and her Majesty the Queen of Madagascar was concluded and signed by their respective plenipotentiaries at Antananarivo, the fourteenth day of February eighteen hundred and sixty seven, which treaty is word for word as follows:

TREATY BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND OF HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN OF MADAGASCAR.

Between Rainimaharavo, chief secretary of state, 16 vtra., Adriantsitohaina, 16 vtra., Rafaralahibemalo, head of the civilians, on the part of the government of her Majesty the Queen of Madagascar, and Major John P. Finkemeier, the commercial agent of the United States for Madagascar on the part of the government of the United States of America, all duly authorized to that effect by their respective governments the following articles of a commercial treaty have this day been drawn up and signed by mutual agreement:

ARTICLE I.

Her Majesty Rasoherina Manjaka, Queen of Madagascar, and his Excellency Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America, both desirous for the good and welfare of their respective countries, to enter into a more close commercial relation and friendship between the subjects of her Majesty and the people of the United States, hereby solemnly declare that peace and good friendship shall exist between them and their respective heirs and successors forever without war.

ARTICLE II.

The dominions of each contracting party, as well as the right of domicile of their inhabitants, are sacred, and no forcible possession of territory shall ever take place in either of them by the other party, nor any domiciliary visits or forcible entries be made to the houses of either party against the will of the occupants. But whenever it is know for certain, or suspected that transgressors against the laws of the kingdom are in certain premises, they may be entered in concert with the United States consul, or in his absence, by a duly authorized officer to look after the offender.

The right of sovereignty shall in all cases be respected in the dominion of one government by the subjects or citizens of the other. Citizens of the United States of America shall, while in Madagascar, enjoy the privilege of free and unmolested exercise of the Christian religion and its customs. New places of worship, however, shall not be builded by them without the permission of the government.

They shall enjoy full and complete protection and security for themselves and their property equally with the subjects of Madagascar; the right to lease or rent land, houses or storehouses for a term of months or years mutually agreed upon between the owners and American citizens; build houses and magazines, on lands leased by them, in accordance with the laws of Madagascar for buildings; hire laborers not soldiers and if slaves, not without permission of their masters.

Should the Queen, however, require the services of such laborers, or if they should desire on their own account to leave they shall be at liberty to do so, and be paid up to the time of leaving, on giving previous notice.

Contracts for renting or leasing land or houses or hiring laborers may be executed by deeds signed before the United States consul and the local authorities. They also shall be permitted to trade or pass with their merchandise through all parts of Madagascar which are under the control of a governor duly appointed by her Majesty, with the exception of Ambohimanga Ambohimanambola and Ampafarafaravato, which places foreigners are not permitted to enter, and, in fact, be entitled to all privileges of commerce granted to other favored nations.

The subjects of her Majesty the Queen of Madagascar shall enjoy the same privileges in the United States of America.

ARTICLE III.

Commerce between the people of America and Madagascar shall be perfectly free, with all the privileges under which the most favored nations are now or may hereafter be trading. Citizens of America shall, however, pay a duty not exceeding ten per cent on both exports and imports in Madagascar, to be regulated by a tariff mutually agreed upon, with the following exceptions: Munition of war, to be imported by the Queen of Madagascar into her dominions, or by her order. Prohibited from export by the laws of Madagascar are munition of war, timber and cows. No other duties such as tonnage pilotage, quarantine, light house dues shall be imposed in ports of either country on the vessels of the other to which national vessels or vessels of the most favored nations shall not be equally liable.

Ports of Madagascar where there is no military station under the control of a governor must not be entered by United States vessels.

ARTICLE IV.

Each contracting party may appoint consuls, to reside in the dominions of each other, who shall enjoy all privileges granted to consuls of the most favored nations, to be witness of the good relationship existing between both nations, and to regulate and protect commerce.

ARTICLE V.

Citizens of the United States who enter Madagascar, and subjects of her Majesty the Queen of Madagascar while sojourning in America are subject to the laws of trade and commerce in the respective countries. In regard to civil rights, however, whether of person or property, of American citizens, or in cases of criminal offenses, they shall be under the exclusive civil and criminal jurisdiction of their own consul only, duly invested with the necessary powers.

But should any American citizen be guilty of a serious criminal offense against the laws of Madagascar, he shall be liable to banishment from the country.

All disputes and differences arising within the dominions of her Majesty, between citizens of the United States and subjects of Madagascar, shall be decided before the United States consul and an officer duly authorized by her Majesty's government, who shall afford mutual assistance and every facility to each other in recovering debts.

ARTICLE VI.

No American vessel shall have communication with the shore before receiving pratique from the local authorities of Madagascar; nor shall any subject of her Majesty the Queen be permitted to embark on board an American vessel without a passport from her Majesty's government.

In cases of mutiny or desertion the local authorities shall, on application, render all necessary assistance to the American consul to bring back the deserters, and to re establish discipline, if possible, among the crew of a merchant vessel.

ARTICLE VII.

In case of a shipwreck of an American vessel on the coast of Madagascar, or if any such vessel should be attacked or plundered in the waters of Madagascar adjacent to any military station, her Majesty engages to order the governor to grant every assistance in his power to secure the property, and to restore it to the owner or to the United States consul if this be not impossible.

ARTICLE VIII.

The above articles of treaty, made in good faith, shall be submitted to both the government of the United States of America and her Majesty the Queen of Madagascar for ratification, and such ratifications be exchanged within six months from date of ratification at Antananarivo.

Should it at any future time seem desirable in the interest of either of the contracting parties to alter or add to the present treaty, such alterations or additions shall be effected with the consent of both parties.

Duplicate originals of this treaty, with corresponding text in the English and Malagasy languages, which shall be both of equal authority, have been signed and sealed at Antananarivo this day.

SUPPLEMENTARY ARTICLE TO § II.

P. S.—Should there be any business of the Queen requiring the services of such laborers, they shall be permitted to leave without giving previous notice. The sentence in article II, stating that previous notice must be given, refers only to laborers leaving on their own account.

ANTANANARIVO 14th February, 1867.

And whereas the said treaty has been duly ratified on both parts, and the respective ratifications were exchanged at Antananarivo, on the eighth of July last:

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America, have caused the said treaty to be made public to the end that the same and every clause and article thereof may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, a convention for the surrender of criminals between the United States of America and his Majesty the King of Italy was concluded and signed by their respective plenipotentiaries at Washington on the twenty-third day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, which convention being in the English and Italian languages, is word for word as follows:

CONVENTION FOR THE SURRENDER OF CRIMINALS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND HIS MAJESTY THE KING OF ITALY.

The United States of America and his Majesty the King of Italy, having judged it expedient, with a view to the better administration of justice, and to the prevention of crimes within their respective territories and jurisdiction, that persons convicted of or charged with the crimes hereinafter specified, and being fugitives from justice, should, under certain circumstances, be reciprocally delivered up, have resolved to conclude a convention for that purpose, and have appointed as their plenipotentiaries: the President of the United States, William H. Seward, Secretary of State; his Majesty the King of Italy, the Commander Marcello Cerruti, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary; who, after reciprocal communication of their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles, to wit:

ARTICLE I.

The government of the United States and the government of Italy mutually agree to deliver up persons who, having been convicted of or charged with the crimes specified in the following article, committed within the jurisdiction of one of the contracting parties, shall seek an asylum or be found within the territories of the other; Provided, That this shall only be done upon such evidence of criminality as, according to the laws of the place where the fugitive or person so charged shall be found, would justify his or her apprehension and commitment for trial, if the crime had been there committed.

ARTICLE II.

Persons shall be delivered up who shall have been convicted of, or be charged, according to the provisions of this convention, with any of the following crimes:

1. Murder, comprehending the crimes designated in the Italian penal code, by the terms of parricide, assassination, poisoning, and infanticide.

2. The attempt to commit murder.

3. The crimes of rape, arson, piracy, and mutiny on board a ship, whenever the crew, or part thereof, by fraud or violence against the commander, have taken possession of the vessel.

4. The crime of burglary, defined to be the action of breaking and entering by night into the house of another with the intent to commit felony; and the crime of robbery, defined to be the action of feloniously and forcibly taking from the person of another goods or money, by violence or putting him in fear.

5. The crime of forgery, by which is understood the utterance of forged papers, the counterfeiting of public, sovereign, or government acts.

6. The fabrication or circulation of counterfeit money, either coin or paper, of public bonds, bank notes, and obligations, and in general of all things, being titles on instruments of credit, the counterfeiting of seals, dies, stamps, and marks of state and public administrations, and the utterance thereof.

7. The embezzlement of public moneys committed within the jurisdiction of either party, by public officers or depositors.

8. Embezzlement by any person or persons hired or salaried, to the detriment of their employers, when these crimes are subject to infamous punishment.

ARTICLE III.

The provisions of this treaty shall not apply to any crime or offense of a political character, and the person or persons delivered up for the crimes enumerated in the preceding article shall in no case be tried for any ordinary crime, committed previously to that for which his or their surrender is asked.

ARTICLE IV.

If the person whose surrender may be claimed, pursuant to the stipulations of the present treaty, shall have been arrested for the commission of offenses in the country where he has sought an asylum, or shall have been convicted thereof, his extradition may be deferred until he shall have been acquitted, or have served the term of imprisonment to which he may have been sentenced.

ARTICLE V.

Requisitions for the surrender of fugitives from justice shall be made by the respective diplomatic agents of the contracting parties, or in the event of the absence of these from the country, or its seat of government, they may be made by superior consular officers. If the person whose extradition may be asked for shall have been convicted of a crime, a copy of the sentence of the court in which he may have been convicted, authenticated under its seal, and an attestation of the official character of the judge by the power executive authority and of the latter by the minister or consul of the United States or of Italy, respectively, shall accompany the requisition. When, however, the fugitive shall have been merely charged with crime, a duly authenticated copy of the warrant for his arrest in the country where the crime may have been committed, or of the depositions upon which such warrant may have been issued, must accompany the requisition as aforesaid. The President of the United States, or the proper executive authority in Italy, may then issue a warrant for the apprehension of the fugitive in order that he may be brought before the proper judicial authority for examination. If it should then be decided that, according to law and the evidence, the extradition is due pursuant to the treaty, the fugitive may be given up according to the forms prescribed in such cases.

ARTICLE VI.

The expenses of the arrest, detention, and transportation of the persons claimed shall be paid by the government in whose name the requisition shall have been made.

ARTICLE VII.

This convention shall continue in force during five (5) years from the day of exchange of ratification, but if neither party shall have given to the other six (6) months' previous notice of its intention to terminate the same, the convention shall remain in force five years longer, and so on.

The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications exchanged at Washington, within six (6) months, and sooner if possible.

In witness whereof, the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present convention in duplicate, and have thereunto affixed their seals.

Done at Washington, the twenty third day of March, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, and of the independence of the United States the ninety-second.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS an additional article to the treaty of navigation and commerce between the United States of America and the Emperor of Russia, of the eighteenth of December, 1832, was concluded and signed at Washington, by their respective plenipotentiaries on the twenty-seventh day of January, 1868, the original of which additional article is word for word as follows:

The United States of America and His Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, deeming it advisable that there should be an additional article to the treaty of commerce between them of the 6-18 December, 1832 have for this purpose named as their plenipotentiaries, the President of the United States, William H. Seward Secretary of State, and His Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias the Privy Councillor, Edward de Stoeckl, accredited as his Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States; and the said plenipotentiaries, after an examination of their respective full powers, which were found to be in good and due form, have agreed to and signed the following:

ADDITIONAL ARTICLE.

The high contracting parties desiring to secure complete and efficient protection to the manufacturing industry of their respective citizens and subjects agree that any counterfeiting in one of the two countries of the trade marks affixed in the other on merchandise to show its origin and quality, shall be strictly prohibited and repressed, and shall give ground for an action of damages in favor of the injured party, to be prosecuted in the courts of the country in which the counterfeit shall be proven.

The trade marks in which the citizens or subjects of one of the two countries may wish to secure the right of property in the other, must be lodged exclusively, to wit: the marks of citizens of the United States in the Department of Manufactories and Inland Commerce at St. Petersburg, and the marks of Russian subjects at the Patent Office in Washington.

This additional article shall be terminable by either party, pursuant to the twelfth article of the treaty to which it is an addition. It shall be ratified by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, and by his Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, and the respective ratifications of the same shall be exchanged at St. Petersburg within nine months from the date hereof, or sooner if possible.

In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present additional article in duplicate and affixed thereto the seal of their arms.

Done at Washington, the twenty-seventh day of January, in the year of grace one thousand eight hundred and sixty eight

WILLIAM H. SEWARD. [L.S.]
EDOUARD DE STOECKL. [L.S.]

And whereas the said additional article has been duly ratified on both parts, and the respective ratifications of the same were exchanged at St. Petersburg on the twenty-first day of September last by Cassius M. Clay, Esquire, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States, and Vladimir de Westmann, Acting Minister of Foreign Affairs of His Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, on the part of their respective governments:

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America, have caused the said additional article to be made public, to the end that the same, and every clause and part thereof, may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS a treaty concerning the citizenship of emigrants between the United States of America and his Majesty the King of Bavaria, was concluded and signed by their respective plenipotentiaries at Munich, on the 26th day of May, 1868, which treaty, being in the English and German languages, is word for word as follows:

His Majesty the King of Bavaria and the President of the United States of America, led by the wish to regulate the citizenship of those persons who emigrate from Bavaria to the United States of America and from the United States of America to the territory of the kingdom of Bavaria, have resolved to treat on this subject, and have, for that purpose, appointed plenipotentiaries to conclude a convention; that is to say: His Majesty the King of Bavaria, Dr. Otto Baron of Voelderndorff, Councilor of Ministry, and the President of the United States of America, George Bancroft, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary, who have agreed to and signed the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

Citizens of Bavaria, who have become, or shall become, naturalized citizens of the United States of America, and shall have resided uninterruptedly within the United States for five years, shall be held by Bavaria to be American citizens, and shall be treated as such.

Reciprocally: Citizens of the United States of America who have become, or shall become, naturalized citizens of Bavaria, and shall have resided uninterruptedly within Bavaria five years, shall be held by the United States to be Bavarian citizens, and shall be treated as such.

The declaration of an intention to become a citizen of the one or the other country has not for either party the effect of naturalization.

ARTICLE II.

A naturalized citizen of the one party on return to the territory of the other party remains liable to trial and punishment for an action punishable by the laws of his original country, and committed before his emigration, saving always the limitation established by the laws of his original country, or any other remission of liability to punishment.

ARTICLE III.

The convention for the mutual delivery of criminals, fugitives from justice, in certain cases, concluded between the United States, on the one part, and Bavaria, on the other part, the twelfth day of September, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, remains in force without change.

ARTICLE IV.

If a Bavarian, naturalized in America, renews his residence in Bavaria, without the intent to return to America, he shall be held to have renounced his naturalization in the United States. Reciprocally, if an American, naturalized in Bavaria, renews his residence in the United States, without the intent to return to Bavaria, he shall be held to have renounced his naturalization in Bavaria. The intent not to return may be held to exist when the person naturalized in the one country resides more than two years in the other country.

ARTICLE V.

The present convention shall go into effect immediately on the exchange of ratifications, and shall continue in force for ten years. If neither party shall have given to the other six months previous notice of its intention then to terminate the same, it shall further remain in force until the end of twelve months after either of the contracting parties shall have given notice to the other of such intention.

ARTICLE VI.

The present convention shall be ratified by His Majesty the King of Bavaria and by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Munich within twelve months from the date hereof.

In faith whereof the plenipotentiaries have signed and sealed this convention.

Munich, the twenty-sixth of May, 1868.

[SEAL.] GEORGE BANCROFT.
[SEAL.] DR. OTTO FRH. VON VOLDERNDORFF.

PROTOCOL.

DONE AT MUNICH, THE TWENTY-SIXTH MAY, 1868.

The undersigned met to-day to sign the treaty agreed upon in conformity with their respective full powers, relating to the citizenship of those persons who emigrate from Bavaria to the United States of America, and from the United States of America to Bavaria; on which occasion the following observations, more exactly defining and explaining the contents of this treaty, were entered in the following protocol:

I. RELATING TO THE FIRST ARTICLE OF THE TREATY.

1. Inasmuch as the copulative "and" is made use of, it follows, of course that not the naturalization alone, but an additional five years' uninterrupted residence is required, before a person can be regarded as coming within the treaty; but it is by no means requisite that the five years' residence should take place after the naturalization. It is hereby further understood that if a Bavarian has been discharged from his Bavarian indigenate, or on the other side, if an American has been discharged from his American citizenship in the manner legally prescribed by the Government of his original country, and then acquires naturalization in the other country in a rightful and perfectly valid manner, then an additional five years' residence shall no longer be required, but a person so naturalized shall from the moment of his naturalization be held and treated as a Bavarian, and reciprocally as an American citizen.

2. The words "resided uninterruptedly" are obviously to be understood, not of a continued bodily presence, but in the legal sense, and therefore a transient absence, a journey, or the like, by no means interrupts the period of five years contemplated by the first article.

II. RELATING TO THE SECOND ARTICLE OF THE TREATY.

1. It is expressly agreed, that a person who, under the first article, is to be held as an adopted citizen of the other state, on his return to his original country can not be made punishable for the act of emigration itself, not even though at a later day he should have lost his adopted citizenship.

III. RELATING TO ARTICLE FOUR OF THE TREATY.

1. It is agreed on both sides, that the regulative powers granted to the two governments respectively, by their laws for protection against resident aliens, whose residence endangers peace and order in the land, are not affected by the treaty. In particular the regulation contained in the second clause of the tenth article of the Bavarian military law of the 30th of January 1868, according to which Bavarians emigrating from Bavaria before the fulfilment of their military duty can not be admitted to a permanent residence in the land till they shall have become 32 years old, is not affected by the treaty. But yet it is established and agreed, that by the expression "permanent residence" used in the said article, the above described emigrants are not forbidden to undertake a journey to Bavaria for a less period of time and for definite purposes, and the royal Bavarian government moreover cheerfully declares itself ready, in all cases in which the emigration has plainly taken place in good faith, to allow a mild rule in practice to be adopted.

2. It is hereby agreed that when a Bavarian naturalized in America and reciprocally an American naturalized in Bavaria takes up his abode once more in his original country without the intention of return to the country of his adoption, he does by no means thereby recover his former citizenship; on the contrary, in so far as it relates to Bavaria, it depends on his Majesty, the King, whether he will, or will not in that event grant the Bavarian citizenship anew.

The article fourth shall accordingly have only this meaning, that the adopted country of the emigrant can not prevent him from acquiring once more his former citizenship; but not that the state to which the emigrant originally belonged is bound to restore him at once to his original relation.

On the contrary, the citizen naturalized abroad must first apply to be received back into his original country in the manner prescribed by its laws and regulations, and must acquire citizenship anew, exactly like any other alien.

But yet it is left to his own free choice, whether he will adopt that course or will preserve the citizenship of the country of his adoption.

The two plenipotentiaries give each other mutually the assurance that their respective governments in ratifying this treaty will also regard as approved and will maintain the agreements and explanations contained in the present protocol, without any further formal ratification of the same.

[SEAL] GEORGE BANCROFT.

And whereas the said treaty has been duly ratified on both parts, and the respective ratifications were exchanged at Munich the 18th day of September last:

Now, therefore be it known that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America, have caused the said treaty to be made public to the end that the same and every clause and article thereof may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done in the city of Washington, this 8th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight and of the independence of the United States the ninety-third.

LAWS OF THE STATE OF LOUISIANA

[PUBLISHED BY AUTHORITY.]

[No. 209

AN ACT

To Incorporate a Savings and Pawners' Bank.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That R. M. Montgomery, Daniel L. Shearer, B. J. Montgomery, William Saunders, James T. Summers, and others whom they may associate with them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate and politic, under the name of the "Savings and Pawners' Bank of New Orleans," for the term of twenty-five years from the passage of this act. It shall have power to contract, sue and be sued, receive, purchase, convey, mortgage and receive in mortgage, pledge and receive in pledge property, both real and personal; to make use of a common seal of such device as the Board of Directors may recommend, to name and appoint such officers, managers, directors and servants as its interest and convenience may require; to create and establish such by-laws, rules and regulations for the management of its affairs as may be deemed advisable, all in its corporate capacity.

ARTICLE II.

SECTION 1. Be it further enacted, etc., That in order to promote the interest of the working classes, and assist those out of employment and temporarily in need of funds, for the support of themselves and families, and also aid the mercantile community in business, it shall have power and authorization to receive deposits from all persons, all sums of money, from one dollar upward, and pay out the same by checks or otherwise, for which sums of money interest shall be allowed in accordance with the provisions of this act and the by-laws of this Corporation: Provided, That nothing contained in this act shall be construed to allow the deposit of any article except by the consent of the actual owners of such articles or money, or to prevent the recovery from said Savings and Pawner's Bank of any article which may have been stolen or fraudently obtained by the depositors from the owners thereof.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That it shall have power to make and enter into all manner of contracts and agreements for the pledge of, and to receive in pledge, movable property, to make, execute, issue and receive certificates of pledge of any kind and nature whatsoever, for the pledge of movable property, and to do and perform generally every act and thing to the business of loaning money on security of pawn or pledge belonging or in anywise appertaining to the same.

ARTICLE III.

SECTION 1. Be it further enacted, etc., That all citations, notices, whatsoever shall be served upon the President or Manager.

ARTICLE IV.

SECTION 1. Be it further enacted, etc., That the capital stock of this bank shall be one hundred thousand dollars, divided into one thousand shares of one hundred dollars each, which capital stock may be increased five hundred thousand dollars by two-third votes of all the stockholders, in general assembly convened; it may begin business as soon as fifty thousand dollars has been subscribed, the subscribers to the stock shall pay into the hands of the cashier the sum of ten dollars on each and every share subscribed by them upon the organization for business, and the balance in installments not exceeding ten dollars each, after fifteen days notice from the Board of Directors, who are authorized to make such call through its cashier.

ARTICLE V.

SECTION 1. Be it further enacted, etc., That all powers corporate of this bank shall be vested in a Board of Directors, to be composed of five stockholders, from among which they shall elect their President and Cashier; said board shall be elected on the first Monday of December next and every year thereafter, in general meeting of all stockholders convened between such hours as may be designated by the Board of Directors. In case of death or resignation of any member of said board, the vacancy shall be filled by the Board of Directors in which said vacancy has occurred. No stockholder shall be eligible to a directorship unless at the time of his election and during his continuance of office he shall own in his own name or on that of a commercial firm, in which he forms part thereof, at least ten shares of the capital stock of the bank. One month's notice shall be given before the election takes place, and the President, in conjunction with the Cashier, shall appoint three competent persons from among the stockholders, not directors or officers, for the purpose of conducting and managing the election of the board; those receiving a majority of all votes cast shall be declared duly elected, and take their seats on the second Monday after the election. In case of no election on the day fixed, the President shall cause an election to be held within ten days thereafter, after due notice, the following persons are hereby declared to be the first Board of Directors: R. M. Montgomery, D. L. Shearer, B. J. Montgomery, William Saunders, James T. Summers, who shall, immediately after organization, elect their President and Cashier, appoint all officers, clerks and employes of this bank, adopt the by-laws, rules and regulations, and do and perform all acts necessary to carry in full effect the workings and objects of this bank; provided, that nothing in the by-laws shall conflict with the laws of this State, or the true interest and meaning of this act.

ARTICLE VI.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of the Board of Directors to regulate, from time to time, the rate of interest to be allowed depositors, so that they shall receive as nearly as can be computed a fair rate, and that they are hereby authorized, should the condition of this bank at any time render it expedient to discriminate the rate of interest to be allowed depositors, and to reduce the rate to be allowed in all cases where the amount deposited shall exceed the sum of one thousand dollars, the object of the present incorporation being to give the greatest possible premium on the savings of the poor and hard working classes of this community.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That the bank shall be authorized to hold at interest subject to the rate provided by the by-laws any trust fund or money belonging to minors or other parties as shall by or under any decree of any court within the State be ordered to be deposited therein.

ARTICLE VII.

SECTION 1. Be it further enacted, etc., That all loans shall be on a fixed time and not over one year, the pawner shall have a right of redeeming this property at any time within the specified period fixed on the payment of the loan and the rate of compensation agreed, and if the property pledged is not redeemed within the time limited it shall be sold at public auction and the net surplus after paying loans, charges and expenses of all kinds shall be held one year for the owner, if then at that time it is not called for the same shall go to the credit of the general fund of the corporation, less ten per cent of the net amount, which shall be paid to the State Treasurer for the charitable funds of the State.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That the bank shall give each pawner a card inscribed with the name of the bank, the article or articles pawned, the name of the pawner, the amount loaned, when paid, the date when payable and page of book where recorded.

ARTICLE VIII.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That in the month of June and November of each year, an estimate of the profits and loss of this bank shall be made, also a statement of all depositors, the amount of interest accrued upon their deposits, the amount deposited, all amounts paid by the bank, in interest, etc., the value of property held on pledge, a complete statement of the stockholders, certified by the President and Cashier of the bank, in all cases the profits of the bank must exceed ten per cent on the amount of the stock subscribed before a dividend can be declared, and then said dividend shall be only the amount in excess of said ten per cent which shall be kept as reserved fund.

ARTICLE IX.

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted, etc., That all transfer of stock shall be made only at said bank, and on the books, the new stockholders binding themselves by said transfer to all terms, stipulations and conditions of the corporation and assuming the liabilities of said stock; should any subscriber desire a transfer before the stock is declared fully paid, the same must be satisfactory to the Board of Directors.

ARTICLE X.

SEC. 5. Be it further enacted, etc., That at the time of the expiration of this charter, or at any time a dissolution of this corporation is expedient, three commissioners shall be appointed, who shall remain in office until final liquidation.

ARTICLE XI.

SEC. 6. Be it further enacted, etc., That this act shall be in force on and after its passage.

AN ACT

For the relief of William G. Bell of the Parish of St. Landry.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That William G. Bell of the parish of St. Landry be and he is hereby confirmed in his title to the following described two tracts of land, the State hereby relinquishing in his favor whatever right, title or interest it had therein, arising from any source whatsoever, to wit: A tract of land situate in the county of Opelousas (now parish of St. Landry) on the eastern branch of the Bayou Plaquemines Brulees, bounded on one side by land of Edward Foreman and on the other by land formerly claimed by Daniel Callihan, having a front on the said bayou, on the right bank, of ten arpents by the ordinary depth of forty arpents, and described in the Land Office of the United States as section (16) sixteen, in township number nine, south range number two, east, containing three hundred and thirty-eight 51-100 acres. Another tract of land on Plaquemines Brulees, having six arpents front by forty deep, bounded one side by land of Catherine Retter, and of the other side by land of John Thompson, as appears by registry in book "E" of Alienation Records of the parish of St. Landry.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That this act shall take effect from and after its passage.

MEMORIES.

But a line in a daily paper
Thousand of eyes would see,
And carelessly pass the record by
That gives such a pang to me.

Yet our lives had drifted far apart—
Mine, at my ingle side,
And his, who, I read in the Post to day,
"On the fourth of October died."

And ours was a quiet liking,
A simple, friendly bond;
It was pleasant to meet, and light to part,
And never a thought beyond.

Yet as I read those words to-day,
Through a sudden mist of tears,
The fair, frank face and the bright blue eyes,
Gleamed out through the cloud of years.

I heard the murmur of the tide
On the southern shore again,
And the echo of the pony's feet
In the sandy Hampshire lane.

I saw the sheen of the willow bough,
And the flashing of the weir,
Just as we watched them long ago,
In the spring of the life and the year.

Ah, well! it has passed away from mine,
The life that is closed at noon;
And I, who forgot to watch its course,
Will forget its setting soon.

For the world goes up and the world goes down,
And the young succeed the old;
And the April sunshine gilds the buds
That spring from the churchyard mold.

And eyes that of old have answered mine
Will sadden as mine have done,
And they glance some day down the list and read
That my earthly race is run.

Well, I scarce can frame a kindlier wish
Than that every lip will say,
"God rest her soul!" as earnestly
As I breathe it for his to-day.

A MAIDEN'S PSALM OF LIFE.

Tell me not in idle jingle,
"Marriage is an empty dream!"
For the girl is dead that's single,
And girls are not what they seem.

Life is real! life is earnest!
Single blessedness a fib!
"Man thou art, to man returnest!"
Has been spoken of the rib.

Not enjoyment, and not sorrow,
Is our destined end or way,
But to act, that each to-morrow
Finds us nearer marriage day.

Life is long, and youth is fleeting,
And our hearts, though light and gay,
Still, like pleasant drums, are beating
Wedding marches on the way.

In the world's broad field of battle,
In the bivouac of life,
But not like dumb, driven cattle!
Be a heroine—a wife!

Trust no future, howe'er pleasant,
Let the dead past bury its dead!
Act—act in the living present!
Heart within and hope ahead.

Lives of married folks remind us
We can live our lives as well,
And departing leave behind us
Such examples as shall "tell."

Such examples that another
Wasting time to-bid e sport,
A forlorn, unmarried brother
Seeing shall take heart and court.

Let us, then, be up and doing,
With a heart on triumph set,
Still contriving, still pursuing,
And each one a husband get.

Les Pensees.

Although the road to Heaven is narrow, yet it is wide enough for true happiness.

Our friends do not know all our humility, for many is the season of self-abasement which but one eye sees and understands—purity of heart is being poor in spirit, even at Jesus's feet. It sometimes depresses our courage to express ourselves too freely and humbly to our friends—one friend only understands us perfectly. We are happier and better exercised in passing through real trial, than in dwelling upon imaginary joy.

Usefulness, in the highest acceptation, is not the highest aim of the purified heart, but to walk and talk with God is the satisfying desire of that state of grace. Where the image of Jesus is, there the fruits of the likeness will be seen.

After the resurrection Jesus called his disciples positively his brethren, "go and tell my brethren." In this relation, as our elder brother, he ascended on high to claim our inheritance, as well as to be there our sacrifice and ever living intercession. Poor sinner, your cause can not fail in his hand—therefore be confident of success. Your unwavering trust is all he asks to bring you safely through all your difficulties. God will keep his supremacy over us, for many is the secret between Christ and the soul, which we can not tell to the dearest earthly friend, and many is the little understanding between him and thee which can not be explained to the human heart. And yet there is abundant room to tell his kindly dealings with thee daily. "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him."

Said one, "all the man's goodness depends upon his wife's prayers." A good woman is a priestess in her family and household. It requires moral courage to fill suitably the most insignificant position in life, so that we can not despise as mean, any calling.

When the shepherds feed in the land of Beulah, the sheep and lambs follow into the green pasture, and know the voice of the Good Shepherd, who secretly calls them by name, while he spreads his banner of love over them. It requires all the endearing symbols of human relationship to faintly express to us the love of God, in Christ Jesus our Lord.

ANNIVERSARY
OF THE ## Church Extension Society.

ADDRESSES OF BISHOPS CLARK AND KINGSLEY, AND REV. DR. NEWMAN.

[Reported by Rev. S. M. Stiles for the Society.]

The third anniversary of the Church Extension Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church was held in Green Street Methodist Episcopal Church, Philadelphia, on Thursday evening, November 19, Bishop Simpson presiding. The audience was larger than at any previous anniversary of the Society, filling the spacious galleries above as well as the main body of the audience room below. The Board of Bishops, officers of the Society, and other distinguished ministers and laymen occupied seats on the platform. The singing was under the direction of Professor Fisher. Chaplain McCabe contributed largely to the interest of the evening by singing two or three of his most popular songs.

OPENING EXERCISES.

At half-past seven the exercises commenced. After a voluntary by the choir, Bishop Thomson read the sixty-third hymn, commencing—

"O thou to whom in ancient time,
The psalmist's sacred harp was strung," which was sung by the choir and congregation in a manner truly inspiring. Bishop Kingsley then led in prayer.

ELECTION OF BOARD OF MANAGERS.

The following persons were elected a Board of Managers for the ensuing year:

Ministers—Bishops Morris, Janes, Scott, Simpson, Baker, Ames, Clark, Thomson, Kingsley, Rev. Drs. A. J. Kynett, Joseph Castle, Robert H. Pattison, William Cooper, G. D. Carrow, Revs. S. W. Thomas, A. Atwood, W. L. Gray, William McCombs, T. C. Murphy, Joseph Mason, W. J. Paxson, C. H. Payne, J. B. McCullough, J. B. Dobbins, J. Dickerson.

Laymen—Thomas T. Tasker, Colson Heiskel, Thomas T. Mason, George W. Hill, L. C. Simon, Charles Spencer, Robert Armstrong, James Long, A. H. Derrickson, J. B. McCreary, W. G. Spencer, Joseph Thompson, John Hunter, John W. Hicks, James H. Bryson, Charles Scott, D. H. Bowen, F. Scoffin, M. D., William Barlow, William Matthews, Amos Phillips, John Schallcross, Elijah G. Cattell, A. H. De Haven, Benjamin Schofield.

REPORT OF TREASURER.

T. T. Mason, Esq., then presented his report, showing the aggregate receipts, including the amount in hand one year ago, $9228 78, and $35,000 borrowed, to be $89,837 20, and the amount disbursed, including contingent expenses, and $36,800 loaned to churches, to be $85,355 92.

REPORT OF THE CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

Dr. Kynett, corresponding secretary of the Society then read his report, which was as follows:

"During the past year we have been fully relieved from the embarrassments under which we had been laboring, arising out of old claims against the Society; and our Society is now fully and permanently incorporated into the regular economy of the Church.

With a comparatively small income, we have assisted by donation eighty churches in twenty-six different States and Territories. We have also greatly relieved and assisted by loan, with little or no interest, eleven more, in eight different States and Territories, some of which we have saved from absolute disaster. We have received contributions to the Monroe Loan Fund to the amount of $1300, and subscriptions from three brethren to the General Loan Fund to the amount of $30,000.

God in His providence calls us to an immense work, but is opening our way, and encouraging us to hope for the means to do it.

SINGING.

The choir then led the congregation in singing the 238th hymn, commencing

"Hear what God the Lord hath spoken,
O my people faint and few."

After the singing of this hymn the President introduced as the first speaker of the evening, Bishop Clark, who spoke as follows:

ADDRESS OF BISHOP CLARK.

Mr. President and friends of Christ—A few years ago when Dr. Elliott was known by every Methodist, young and old, in our connection, I suppose, and whose peculiarities are widely known, visited the Wesleyan Conference of Canada, he introduced himself, by saying that he wished to make a few brief remarks before he began. I notice in the credit of your Treasurer there is borrowed thirty-five thousand dollars, but the whole receipts for the year are eighty-nine thousand dollars and some cents. I take it that to get at the exact collections for the year, we must subtract the thirty-five thousand from the eighty-nine thousand, which would give us fifty-four thousand dollars, and something more, as the net contributions for this cause during the past year. With that result, sir, I congratulate the Society and the Treasurer. The advance during the past year is truly encouraging. I know that two years ago some fifty-nine thousand dollars were reported, but the audience will remember that that covered a period of eighteen or twenty months; but last year, if I remember correctly, the report of the collections was about thirty-three thousand dollars. And when the circumstances of mercantile depression and embarrassment in the country are considered, the advance is indicative of the hold this Society is taking upon the minds and heart of the Church.

Well, sir, there is another question I wanted to ask before I begin. Your Secretary very briefly, and so rapidly that we hardly get the idea, announced that three friends had subscribed ten thousand dollars each to this Loan Fund, which I have no doubt is to be one of the most effective agencies in the working of the Society. Now, sir, I think he should have told this audience who these generous individuals are.

Bishop Ames: "No."

Bishop Clark: One of them says, "No," here on my right hand; but the audience is entitled to know who they are, and the Secretary is called out to finish his work.

Dr. Kynett: Well, a friend congratulated me upon my report being so short. I ought to have said that these three brethren volunteered to give ten thousand each without being solicited. We have solicited no one on the Loan Fund as yet. The three brethren alluded to are Brother McWilliams, of Dwight, Illinois; Bishop Ames, and a Brother Perkins, of some point in New York, who made his subscription by a letter received yesterday. (Applause.)

Bishop Clark, resuming: The erection of churches is indispensable to the permanent existence and progress of Christianity. This is a proposition so clear and so palpable that it needs no elaboration. A system of education that did not contemplate the erection of houses for instruction, buildings and the necessary appliances for the purposes of education, and the accumulation of apparatus and other means of illustration would be essentially defective. So a form of Christianity or a Christian denomination that does not comprehend in its plans and purposes the erection of churches, would be essentially defective, and must fail in the accomplishment of the ends and purposes proposed to itself.

This erection of churches, too, is missionary in its character as accompanying the great missionary work. Our Missionary Society has recognized this fact in one of its provisions. Only the foreign work itself recognized the necessity of erecting churches wherever mission stations were planted. But in our own land so large a portion of our work was actually missionary, as the church was rising and spreading out and going along with the new and wide-spreading population in the frontier regions, it was found to be actually impossible to provide for the wants of the new churches in this respect. Therefore the Missionary Society never entered upon this work, and for many years our work in the frontier and in the new settlements in various places has been crippled and retarded for the want of the very agency this Society is designed to afford. I thank God, then, regarding the society as a great missionary enterprise, for its institution, and for the success with which it has been crowned.

Your Secretary expressed a special desire that I should present some of the facts connected with our Southern work. In doing so I must speak somewhat of my own experience; but I believe experience is always in order in Methodist meetings—in order as a part of the sermon, and even the most effective part of the sermon, if the minister has a right item of experience to present. I, therefore, need no apology for running out the line of thought suggested to my mind by this request of the Secretary.

Some four years ago our work in the South—and when I speak of our work in the South, what thoughts it suggests to the mind! The breaking down of that fearful rebellion that had desolated so large a portion of our land; that had laid so many of our promising young men in the grave. The breaking down of that rebellion not only emancipated the four millions of slaves in the South, but it broke down that Chinese wall of separation that had prevented us in the years gone by from passing over into that region with the banner of Methodism. Soon after this, our work there was organized into three distinct departments—the Mississippi department, the Middle department, and the Coast department—the Atlantic perhaps it was called.

Just four years ago the Middle department was intrusted to myself. The Middle department comprised the whole State of Tennessee, the State of Alabama and the State of Georgia. At that time—and you must remember it was only four years ago this very month—all the work we had in this region was one preacher stationed in Nashville with a very small society, one laboring among the colored people in Memphis with no organization at all, and thirteen or fourteen laboring in East Tennessee. Most of them were local preachers, and one or two, nearly superannuated, were identified with us, and about seven or eight hundred members; so that all told in that region, comprising those three great populous States, we, at that time, had about eight hundred members and fourteen or fifteen preachers. I visited the field, as soon as it was possible, and prepared for the enlargement of the work. The work advanced till, in June, 1865, the Holston Conference, embracing the Eastern part of Tennessee—the part that had been known as the loyal portion of the State—was organized, comprising then some thirty odd preachers, and perhaps about six thousand members. In the January following, or early in December rather, the work was organized into what was called mission districts, extemporized for the efficiency of our work. We soon found it necessary to advance further South, and, following the line marked out by our triumphant host in their preceding march, I went on to Atlanta and organized in the January of sixty-six, the Georgia and Alabama mission district that comprised about the same number of ministers we had commenced with in the beginning—about thirteen or fourteen.

The next fall the Tennessee Conference was regularly organized at Murfreesboro, and last fall, in October, 1867, the Georgia Annual Conference, and immediately after it the Alabama Annual Conference was organized, making four Annual Conferences occupying this territory.

We entered upon the conference year that is just now closed with many misgivings—on account of the turbulence of the times, the fearful hostility that had sprung up against us and our work, the spirit of rebellion that seemed broken loose in all the land, and was restrained only by the strong hand of national power and authority. I said not only to the missionary secretaries at the beginning of this year, but to others, and especially to my colleagues, "If we can hold our own in the South, we shall be doing well." But I have reason to thank God that we have not only held our own, but largely advanced.

The first conference I visited this fall, in October, was the Tennessee Conference; and I wish to give the audience the summing up of the results. At the Tennessee Conference, which met at McMinnville, a large village, or city, perhaps, on the western slope of the Cumberland mountains, it appeared that during the year many of the churches had enjoyed seasons of revival, and the membership had gone up from six thousand one hundred and ten, to nine thousand six hundred and fifteen, making an increase for the year of three thousand five hundred and ninety-nine members. The number of preachers employed in that work this year is ninety-three, against seventy-three last year.

At McMinnville it was my privilege to dedicate a church which was started by the benefaction of this Society. The Church Extension Society, some two and a half years ago, made an appropriation of two thousand dollars for the erection of a church in that place. The brethren met with serious and great difficulties, but, as they pushed their way forward, strength came to them. Persons moving into the place joined them. Many from the North that had moved into the vicinity, came in among them, among whom were some excellent Presbyterians. One, a most excellent ruling elder of the Old School Presbyterian Church, finding that to be the only genuinely loyal church in the place, identified himself with it, and I take pleasure in bearing testimony to the fact that he makes not only a most efficient trustee, but also a most excellent Methodist class-leader. The church cost about ten thousand dollars, and is a beautiful structure with class rooms and Sunday school room below, and a beautiful audience room above. On the day of its dedication they called for fifteen hundred dollars to complete the collection necessary to cover the entire indebtedness, and in a very brief time they took up over seventeen hundred dollars. The next morning, learning what had been done, several gentlemen came round saying they meant to have been there and help, and one gave fifty dollars. Other contributions were made afterward.

In the middle and western portions of the State of Tennessee we have had the greatest difficulty in getting a foothold of almost any part of the South, the spirit of the rebellion was so intense. Every man was ostracized who did not partake of that spirit, and they partook of it much more there than many portions of the country further South. I was riding in a stage at one time in which a man was uttering his treason—belching it out in the face of every one. A man with a broad-brimed hat sitting on the front seat bent over to me and whispered, "These men hav'nt been put through as we in Georgia, or they would not talk in this way." This man, an excellent Baptist deacon, had lived on the line of Sherman's march.

In west Tennessee there have been extensive revivals during the past year. The Memphis district comprises the whole of West Tennessee. We commenced with about four hundred and seventy members, and ended it with nearly eighteen hundred. Revivals have spread everywhere in the midst of confusion. In the midst of the threatenings of the Ku Klux Klan and their visitations, God has been at work. Some of you may remember that one of our preachers was shot in that region. He was a colored preacher, and one of the most excellent men of color that we ever had among us—of wide influence, great purity of character, known and honored, not only by the colored people far and wide, but also by the white people who would come out in throngs to hear him preach. Shortly after his appointment, when he was returning home, he was met by a one-armed ex-rebel soldier, who took deliberate aim, without saying a word, and shot him. He held on to his horse a little while, turned toward his home, and arrived so near that his wife met him, helped him from his horse, and in a short time he died. This vile murder in open day, without disguise of any kind, shooting down a minister of Jesus Christ! Why, you say the perpetrator was arrested, do you, brought to trial, executed? Nothing like it. The one-armed fiend lives to-day, and is applauded for that deed of murder!

With regard to our work there we were alarmed at that time. We supposed the work among the colored people must end with the death of this noble man. But God looks out for his own work. One of the most glorious revivals in West Tennessee, broke out in that very charge and spread until nearly five hundred souls were converted to God. This is to my mind an indication that God is in this work.

Our preachers suffer some in that region of terror. One incident may be to the point, showing what kind of men we have in that work. One man, a genuine Irishman, whose heart is in the work, was aroused one night between twelve and one o'clock, by a knock at his door. He called out, "Who's there?" "A friend," was the response; and then he heard several persons outside. "Well," said he, "my friends are all decent men; they are not out at this time of night." "Open your door!" "I will not do it." "If you don't we'll break it down and come in." "Well," said he, "then somebody will get hurt, and if anybody is hurt, I don't intend to be the only one." That checked them, and they went off a little way, held a consultation, came back to the door and warned him to leave within ten days, or they would come back and string him up to a tree. Said he, "If you come back you will find me here. I am going to stay here, and don't intend to be the only one hurt if you return." He hadn't heard from them afterward up to the time of conference, but has gone on steadily with his work.

From the Tennessee I passed to the Holston Conference, which met at Chattanooga. There I found the conference I had organized in 1865, had grown up to a membership of twenty-five thousand nine hundred and fourteen, including probationers and local preachers, as in the other case; and there was an increase there, also, of two thousand one hundred and ninety-four. I am happy to say that, in the change of public feeling that was evidently coming about in the region, all the churches in Chattanooga were opened to the members of the conference, except the Episcopal, and that was not open at all; and our preachers occupied these churches, much to the acceptance of the people, as far as I know, and greatly to the furtherance of our cause.

In Georgia, from which State you have heard in more ways than one, I found that our work there had been wonderfully prospered, so that the membership had gone up from ten thousand six hundred and seventy-five to fifteen thousand one hundred and ninety-one, a net increase of four thousand five hundred and twelve; and in this conference we have seventy-five preachers and stations.

From thence I passed to the Alabama Conference, taking the steamer at Rome, Georgia, and passing down Coosa river to Gadsden, and out among the mountains where the conference met in a country place. Even in Alabama—though some of our preachers were unable to get to conference, some few for want of means, others because of the perils which surrounded them, and one of them being in prison charged with setting fire to a dwelling—one who would be about as likely to do such a thing as myself—we found that God had been with us in that work, and the conference showed an increase of three thousand and fifteen, giving us a membership of eleven thousand five hundred and nine.

Now I wish to sum up the aggregate of this work for these four conferences. I am not able to speak of the other conferences. Some five others have been organized in the South; for you must know we have spread a net work of conferences and presiding elders' districts all over the South. I say I am not able to give a summary for those other conferences. Dr. Newman may, perhaps, supply some data. But in these four conferences there are now sixty-two thousand two hundred and twenty-nine members. And a feature of the work, to my mind exceedingly interesting, is that eleven thousand six hundred and eighty-five of these are probationers. You ask me, "Have we not gathered all these from the Church South?" This simple fact that eleven thousand six hundred and eighty-five probationers have been added to the church, indicate how great and widespread and glorious have been the revivals of religion in that region. A large portion of the people, desolated by the war, afflicted, stripped of their property, have turned with sorrowing hearts to the great Healer of the sorrows of the soul.

In that region, also, we number four hundred and thirty-eight churches, with a value of two hundred and seventy-nine thousand dollars. We have also five hundred and sixty-seven Sunday schools organized, and three thousand five hundred and twenty-three officers and teachers. What an army of workers co-operating with the ministry there! And we have three hundred and forty-five appointments made, this last October, in these four annual conferences.

Such has been the growth of the work in the region that I particularly represent, and about which I was requested to speak. You will ask, "Are not all these colored people? Are they not all negroes?" Well, suppose they are; they are men for whom Christ died, and who have been redeemed by the shedding of his most precious blood; and they are men too, if that were the case, in whom there is hope in relation to the future. The colored people, to a very large extent, as all reasonable, right-minded men will now admit, are more steady in their work, more conscientious in their dealings, than any one expected them to be before their emancipation; and there that deep feeling, that earnest desire for knowledge on the part of parents and children—but especially on the part of parents for their children—that is full of promise, indicating that this class will, in time to come, have not only political consideration, but also influence and position in society.

But you ask again the question, "Are these not all colored people?" I have carefully gone over the minutes and find in these four conferences about forty-six thousand and some hundreds are white. The balance, some sixteen thousand, are colored. That is the ratio in the four conferences of which I particularly speak. The larger proportion of the ministers are white.

Now with regard to these ministers, some have asked, "Are they not all transferred from the North?" Not a bit of it. In the Alabama Conference, with some seventy-seven appointments, there is only one man who is transferred, so far as I know, or who even went from the North. All others were raised up on the soil; some for thirty, and some for forty years ministers in the Church South, or rather in the old Church. Several of them were ministers in the old Church before the division, and not a few of them young men converted in the morning of life, and thrust out, in the emergencies of the times, into the ministry, just as young men were converted and thrust out into the ministry in the early history of the Methodist Church. In some other conferences a larger proportion have been transferred, but in nearly all these transferences the greater number of men engaged are men who were born and raised in the South, and who entered into the ministry there.

Now one word with regard to our churches. You will notice from the data I give you, we have a large number of churches. The estimated value is small in comparison to the number of churches in many cases. These churches are simply rude log houses erected by the members of the church, with scarcely a nail, and many of them without even a pain of glass, estimated at fifty, seventy-five, or one hundred dollars. A small contribution from the Church Extension Society has started scores of churches all through the South. Men can give the work, get the lumber, but the nails, hinges, and glass, and paint, and some other things require money, and up to this time there has been absolutely no money among our people there. Just think of going up to a dedication where many things were incomplete because the nails, though they had been forwarded to them by the railroad, could not be had because a charge for freight, of fifteen cents, was resting upon them; and there was not fifteen cents in the whole company! This is perhaps an extreme case. Let me refer to a church started by an appropriation from this Society. Last winter I was called to take up a collection for this Society in Asbury church, Indianapolis. I had several pressing applications. There was one from Fayette county, Tennessee. Our colored people there had been worshipping out of doors, but there was a church that had been sold at Sheriff's sale that could be bought for seventy-five dollars, and they said they could raise twenty-five dollars, though no man among them could give more than a dime; yet they thought that in dimes and half-dimes they could raise twenty-five dollars if they could get fifty. And there were two churches in lower Alabama; one could be bought for a hundred dollars, and another for a hundred and fifty. I stated the matter to that audience, and asked them by a collection of three hundred dollars that morning to buy three churches in the South. A lady, the widow of one of our fallen soldiers—he was a Colonel in the army—said at once, "In behalf of my deceased husband I give fifty dollars to purchase the first named church;" and the three hundred was raised immediately; and that church purchased by this lady is now called the O'Neil chapel, after her husband. One of those other churches was near Evergreen, Alabama. The Society contributed a hundred and fifty dollars for its purchase. It is right by a camp ground which I think is also included in the purchase, for land is not valued very highly there. A society has been formed there, and when at conference we came to the question, "Where shall the Alabama Conference hold its next session?" the presiding elder of that district, a noble, earnest, glorious man, nominated this very church. There was considerable competion, for although new in that country we have societies that are able to entertain a conference, and there were several societies that desired the next session of the conference to be held with them; but this church, purchased by your benificence, carried the palm, and the next session of the Alabama Conference will be held in the church called Mount Hermon, Lower Alabama.

I have thus given you an outline of our work. I have been impressed, from various circumstances, that our work in thu South is not understood as it ought to be, even by many Methodists, and I want to assure this audience, as I have hitherto others, that I never returned from that work with a stronger conviction that it was of God. I never returned with a stronger conviction in my own mind that it was now firmly established and destined to abide through all time than I did this very fall. It is compacted and organized; and, what is more valuable than all, the feeling is begotten in the minds of our preachers that we are there to occupy and triumph over all that land. And then still farther, the conviction exists not only in the minds of the preachers, but in the minds of the community generally. Even rebels are coming to feel that the old Methodist Church is there to stay.

The Alabama Conference met in a country place in Murfrees Valley—a rich, fertile valley. The church was a new one, and had been erected, but was unfinished because the society could not buy glass, nails, etc. On Friday morning a large number of persons came in from the country round about, in their large wagons, and camped, as Methodists were accastomed to do forty or fifty years ago at camp-meetings. On Saturday a larger number came, and on Sunday the whole country for twenty miles about came in. The camp there was said to be the largest assembly of any kind that ever came together in that valley, and I am sure that many carried away the impression that the old church had really returned in her life and power.

I shall always rejoice that in the providence of God, I have been permitted to be associated with this work, and contribute, perhaps, some little, to its success. It is a work that took hold of my heart, entered into my thoughts and feelings, four years ago, and no minister ever went into a protracted meeting with a firmer purpose, or more ardent desire to see the glory of God manifest, than I engaged in this work committed to my hands; and I shall rejoice in the assurance that I have contributed something toward planting the banner of the church alongside the banner of our country to wave in victory over a land that had been given over to rebellion and crime. I rejoice to know and feel that secession will, in the coming years, be purged out, and that the banner of Methodism will wave triumphantly over the length and breadth of the land. At the close of the Georgia Conference I made a prediction that I am almost inclined to repeat here. It was this—that within ten years the Methodist Church would number as many members in the Southern States as she had before the great division. I verily believe we shall see this result. May God speed it!

At the conclusion of Bishop Clark's address, Chaplain McCabe sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," the congregation joining in the chorus.

Dr. Newman was then introduced as the next speaker. He delivered an eloquent and powerful address, which we are compelled to omit this week for want of room.

General Fisk had been expected to be present and deliver an address, but, being detained by important official duty, sent the following telegram which was read by the Corresponding Secretary:

TELEGRAM FROM GENERAL FISK.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Nov. 19, 1868.

Dear Brother: Railway Extension Society continues in session here, requiring me to make a quorum. I must therefore be excused from duty at your headquarters to-night, but will pledge you donble duty in the field during next year.

You will remember Sheridan's telegram to the great Tanner in the neighborhood of Appomattox apple tree about pressing things, the reply, and the result. Now then, so press the needs of our Church Extension Society against the generous hearts of our million and a quarter of members as to cause a cheerful and bountiful surrender of dollars to your treasury. Press things.

C. B. FISK.

Chaplain McCabe here sang the soul-stirring "Song of Thousand Years," the congregation again joining in the chorus.

PUBLIC EDUCATION.

Since their emancipation much has been said and done by the philanthropic to educate the negroes. All must agree that, clothed with intelligence, they will make more skillful workmen and better citizens generally. This being the case, we have worked to inspire them with the importance of true manhood, and we hope they will prove faithful to the lessons of wisdom imparted by the friends of humanity. The negro must put his hand to the plow and help work out his destiny. He can not expect to live without work, and he must be smart enough to find out the work that is profitable and best adapted to his habits and taste. Before the war the instructions imparted to negroes was confined principally to plantation life—the growing of sugar-cane, cotton, tobacco, rice, corn, potatoes, the raising of cattle, horses, hogs, poultry, etc. In fact, they were taught a knowledge of all that appertains to plantation life, or, if they were not, it was their own fault, for they were made living and active witnesses and participants in what was daily transpiring around them. Many of them had opportunities of becoming fair mechanics, and could build comfortable farm houses, make plows, tan leather, make shoes and do a great many other things that was profitable and useful. Besides that they excelled as house servants. As slaves, not to be taught to read and write, they were valued according to their intelligence and skill to labor. They were educated in the branches of work above enumerated and were rated according to their proficiency, a good mechanic or house servant frequently commanding as high a price as $2500 when sold, while an ordinary field hand would not bring more than $800 or $1000. If, as slaves, without knowing the alphabet, they were worth this much to masters, how much ought they to be worth to themselves and country as freemen, with the privilege of knowing how to read and write? This is a question they will have to solve themselves, and in doing so they fix their own destiny. If they labor as diligently for themselves at some useful and profitable occupation as they did for their masters, and observe a fair economy—that is, save a portion of their earnings—they must in a few years come to be comparatively independent. If they save but one hundred dollars a year for five years it will make five hundred dollars, and this is a low estimate of what can be done if a person will but put forth the will to do it. He can do this and live comfortably besides. He then has the means to buy him some land and make a home for himself and family and become truly independent. This can not be done, however, if he fritters away his time in idleness and unprofitable pursuits. If a man is constitutionally lazy and prefers to beg or steal, then the poorhouse or prisonhouse is his inevitable doom, and in either case he becomes a burden to the State and is lost to freedom. Men may work, and by spending their money in the grogshop, at the gambling table, in buying lottery tickets—which is the worst species of gambling—they will never advance themselves; and if by bad associations they do not reach a worse fate, old age will creep upon them, and when too old to work they will find themselves thrown upon the cold charities of the world and learn, when it is too late, the follies of such a course of life. In the same way they may fritter away their time—which is money—in politics, and encouraged by designing men who would lead them to believe that that was the broad road to wealth, happiness and distinction, when in fact it most often proves the broad road to destruction.

Let us begin, then, with a will to educate our people to work. We would have the white men of the South educated to believe that it is noble to work. We have never gone back on our own race nor do we intend to do so. They are foremost in our thoughts, and if we can be the means of inspiring them with a knowledge of their true condition and real wants at this time, we should be most happy in doing so. We should like to see them prosper and become contented and happy once re. Let our young men and women be taught that it is honorable to work. Let our boys learn good trades or learn some useful and profitable calling that will secure for them an honest living after they have arrived at the age of manhood. It is with sorrow that we see many of them "dressed to death," wasting their best days in standing about street corners, ogling the fairer sex and indulging in indecent and uncharitable remarks. They could be better employed.

PRACTICAL PHILANTHROPY.

Scarcely two months ago, in a beautiful town at the head of Cayuga lake, in the western part of the great Empire State, a beautiful scene was witnessed by the people of that section of the dedication of an institution of learning called "The Cornell University," to the purpose and object for which it was built.

The following description is worthy of reproduction and will make a profound impression upon the mind of all who read it:

Around the solid brick building, over the entrance of which was written "The Cornell Library," there was a moving crowd and a throng of young men poured in and out of the door and loitered vaguely expectant upon the steps. By ten o'clock in the morning there were two or three hundred young men answering to a roll-call at a side door, and the hall above was filled with citizens. Presently the young men passed in, and a procession entered the hall and ascended the platform. Prayer and music followed, and then a tall man, spare, yet of a rugged frame and slightly stooping, his whole aspect marking an indomitable will, stood up and read a brief, simple, clear and noble address. It said modestly that this was but the beginning of an institution of learning for those upon whom fortune had omitted to smile; an institution in which any person could acquire any instruction in any branch of knowledge, and in which every branch should be equally honorable. Every word hit the mark, and the long and sincere applause that followed the close of the little speech showed how fully every word had been weighed and how truly interpreted. But the face and voice of the speaker were unchanged throughout. Those who best know what he had done and what he was doing, knew with what sublime but wholly silent enthusiasm he had devoted his life and all his powers to the work. But the stranger saw only a sad, reserved earnestness, and gazed with interest at a man whose story will long be told with gratitude and admiration.

This is one of the many instances which have occurred within a few years past, in the Northern States and especially in New York, where noble-minded men have been their own almoners during their life-time, and have not left their property after them, like Girard and McDonogh, to be frittered away in tedious litigation before the courts in an endeavor to ascertain the interpretation of some clause in their wills. When we call to mind such men as Cooper, Vassar, Wadsworth, Leake and Watts, Rose, Gerrit Smith, and others whose names are out of our present recollection, who have made dedications as the one above alluded to, for the education and training "of those upon whom fortune had omitted to smile," either North or South, we are led to ask the question—where in the South are the men who will do the same, with the like catholicity and munificence? Remembering, too, what has been done by our noble countryman, Peabody, in his magnificent gift of two millions of dollars for the promotion of education in the more destitute portions of the Southern and Southwestern States to be distributed among the entire population without any distinction, ought we not to be exceedingly thankful that such great and noble princes by nature have been raised up, who by their wealth are imparting so much knowledge and happiness to the young and rising generation. How much better the course adopted by these men, that they see, direct and supervise the disposition of their fortunes acquired by a life of industry and successful business in appropriating and devoting their means to the high and noble purpose of elevating and educating mankind, than to suffer their money to become a curse and a root of evil and contention among their surviving friends and relations. We have heard of an institution founded by a worthy citizen of the State of Ohio, named Baldwin, in the parish of St. Mary, on the Teche, in this State, which is said to be magnificently endowed by him for the support and education of colored orphans; and we have heard that this same noble gentleman was not permitted by the people of the parish where this institution is located, to remain quietly in their midst to care for it and its helpless orphaned inmates, but he must be driven away from the scenes of philanthropic labor on account of his political sentiments. Mark the contrast between the two extremes, the one where toleration invites all to participate in the privileges of a philanthropy without limit, and the other where bigoted, narrow-minded prejudice will not permit the good man to perform a work of beneficence for the young and rising generation of a people poor and persecuted and almost friendless.

Let the examples of such men as we have named be emulated by some of the wealthy men of the South, by the appropriation of their wealth, or some of it at least, toward the same object, and see to the accomplishment of the work while they live, as Cooper, Cornell and Vassar have done, and there will no longer be cause for bickering or dissension on sectional or other political questions which now divide the country, but all will be peace, unity and concord. If the people here would turn their attention to these objects which elevate and improve the people in industry, sobriety, good morals and the attainment of knowledge for themselves and their children, the latter of which is "freely offered without money and without price," how much more happy they would be than in the indulgence of those passions which ruin the body and destroy the soul.

From the testimony of Judge J. B. Robertson, given in the Opelousas railroad case, before Judge Durell, we learn that some time last summer Judge Robertson and Mr. W. S. Pike, as a committee appointed by the Directors of the road, went North to effect a sale or lease of the road; and that "capitalists siad they would not invest unless General Grant was elected, although satisfied it would certainly be the best paying stock in the country as long as the country was quiet."

This is what every intelligent, unprejudiced man in this city knew was the course adopted by the moneyed men of the North. It was proclaimed by every Republican speaker and editor. The answer of the capitalists showed that money was timid in coming South, and that the Northern mind was satisfied there could be no peace in the South unless Grant was elected. Why did not Messrs. Robertson and Pike publish the result of their trip? They could have imparted knowledge to a class of people sadly in need of it. By doing so Mr. Pike could have compensated, to some slight extent, for having affixed his honorable name to the infamous ordinance of secession. However, Grant is elected; railroads will be built; and we will all rejoice.

THE PRETENDED ELECTION.

We publish to-day, in another column, a report of Mr. Wm. Baker, Chairman of the Board of Registration, made to the Governor, respecting the election in this State, held on the third day of November last.

It is a brief and concise statement, derived principally from reports made by the Supervisors of Registration to the Board of Registration, and discloses how completely the Democracy succeeded in terrifying and intimidating the Republican voters in this State, and so secured for the Democratic candidates a majority, which they would not have had but for the reign of terror so effectually inaugurated.

While the registration was going on the Camp street organs claimed a majority of twenty thousand for the Democratic candidates. They soon found, however, that they had no real majority, unless some extraordinary means were resorted to, for they made it their business to watch daily the number and class of persons registered in each office in the city. When the offices closed 41,712 persons were registered.

Now, if the Democrats had a majority of twenty thousand, the Republican party only numbered ten thousand eight hundred and fifty-six.

From the report of the Board of Registration we learn about "eighteen thousand colored men registered, and there are certainly not less than six thousand white Republicans." Hence, it appears why the Democracy became so exited; hence the necessity for breaking down the Republican majority which stared them in the face. Colored men were coaxed, petted and feted, paid to march in Democratic processions; still the colored men "did not see it." All else failing, they must be intimidated—kept away from the polls The first step in this work was to shoot down a few colored policemen, and to insist that "this community could not consent to be governed by niggers." All the white policemen on the force that could be influenced were made to resign, so that the Democratic thugs and hirelings might have free scope for their murderous work. So much accomplished, the rest was easy. Colored processions were fired into. Colored Republican club rooms were broken into, and flags, banners and furniture destroyed. "The houses of colored men were entered at night by men in disguise, and with pistols at their heads, and threats of instant death if they resisted, they were robbed of their registration papers." "There is not a ward in the city in which threats of violence have not been made to the Registrars in the performance of their duties." "Many of them, for some time prior to the election, were afraid to sleep in their own houses at night." "One of the newspapers called upon the people to hang the Registrars to the nearest lamp post."

We notice one thing the Board of Registration omitted to mention. That at the time when the police were all withdrawn from the public streets, and the city abandoned to bands of armed men who, under the pretense of keeping the peace, shot down peaceable, unoffending colored men; that at that time so great was the alarm throughout the city, that the Registrars of most of the wards closed their offices for a day or two for fear of personal violence. These are grave facts, and in the recent count of the votes, had no other reason existed, would have constituted good grounds for throwing out the vote of this city.

"Republicans could not be found who were willing to incur the risk of serving as Commissioners of Election," thereby leaving the management of the election in the hands of the Democracy. It is seldom that men succeed who go out of their line of business into another to which they are strangers. But General Rousseau has been eminently successful, if we believe the report published by the Herald. He is reported to have prophesied that "the election would be either a farce or a tragedy." Unfortunately his prediction was too true. In strict conformity with theatrical usage, both pieces were present, ed for the public entertainment—the "tragedy" preceding the "farce."

The story of New Orleans is the story of many of the parishes of the State. St. Martin, St. Mary, Lafourche, Bossier, Jefferson, St. Bernard, St. Landry. In seven parishes of this State not a single Republican vote was cast. In six parishes only one Republican vote in each was cast. In twenty-two parishes of this State only 541 Republican votes were cast.

From all these facts one thing is apparent, no legal election was held in this State. The election was not a free one. Under all the circumstances, Congress with these facts before it will hardly count the vote of the State in the Presidential contest. To justify the counting of the vote it must be clearly shown that it was an election such as is contemplated in law—one where every man qualified to vote can do so without fear of consequences. Not an election where men who by law enjoy the privilege of the ballot are compelled to vote an open ticket, or not vote at all, as was generally the case in the late election.

But if Congress has any doubts as to the character of the election, let it appoint a committee and send down here to ascertain the facts for themselves. The large sacrifice of life, the terror and intimidation throughout the State, will fully justify the laying of all these facts before the country. In conclusion, we bespeak a careful reading of the report of the Board of Registration.

THE VACANCY IN CONGRESS.

A very interesting question will come before the approaching short session of Congress, relative to the vacancy from the Second Congressional Disirict of this State. At the time of the death of Colonel Mann, his seat was contested by Colonel Simon Jones, with very fair prospects in favor of the latter. The frauds practiced by the commissioners and others at the election of the eighteenth and nineteenth of April, were being unearthed and brought to light, and a moral certainty existed that early in the coming session a report would be adopted admitting Colonel Jones, as the real Representative of the people. Colonel Jones was a gallant Union officer of the late war, and his military record, and abilities as a civilian alike favored his claims, beside the indisputable fact that he was honestly elected.

Now that Colonel Mann is dead the position of contestant Jones is at least as strong as it would be were the late incumbent living. He only ceases to be contestant, and would become a claimant, in fact the sole claimant, had not an act of the Legislature intervened changing the boundaries of the District materially and a gubernatorial proclamation issued to fill the vacancy at the general election. The result thereof was the choice of J. Willis Menard by a decisive majority, and we presume Mr. Menard will claim his seat for the short term. There are various opinions, and we simply give them as they are, so that our readers may understand. The law of the Legislature, if it took effect from date, made a new Congressional district, and there was undoubtedly a vacancy, or, at least, no Representative from that district. But many think that the law should only be considered as taking effect for the next Congress, and that parts of Mr, Menard's district are at present otherwise represented. And this view has been sustained by the legal editor of the Times, whose views will, no doubt, have a great deal of effect upon Congress. Either of the gentlemen would be satisfactory to their Republican constituency. Mr. Menard being one of the newly enfranchised and a man of capacity and ability, would be very acceptable to all ardent lovers of Republicanism, for his acceptance to a seat would be a practical demonstration of the sincerity of Congress in instituting and putting in operation the truly Republican doctrine of equal political rights. On the other hand, there are strong legal points in favor of Colonel Jones. The whole matter will doubtless be fully argued before Congress, and the balance of power may lie with the Democratic members to choose between the two. The people of Louisiana have chosen them both, leaving the choice between them to Congress.

So far as the long term is concerned, there will be a formidable contest between General Sheldon and Mr. Hunt. The other four districts will, however, probably be declared vacant on account of frauds and Ku-Kluxism, which defeated the will of the people. In these districts there will therefore probably be new elections shortly after the accession of General Grant to the Presidential chair, when the protection of the Government and liberty of political action will enable the people to send candidates of their choice. Unless the voice of the majority can be expressed, there is no use in having the State represented at all. Let it be understood that all the people may peaceably participate in the election and an honest count be had. No one doubts that in that case our Congressional delegation will be entirely Republican for years to come.

HIGHEST PHASE OF CIVILIZATION.

"In Greeley's vivid imagination, gaining its body and substance from Northern civilization, 'grist and saw-mills, mechanics and traders, a school-house and meeting-house of their own,' seem to be the indispensable correlatives of settling Northerners in the South. This is fair enough, although these same elements represent a phase of civilization which is not altogether the highest in the world."—New Orleans Times.

As mills, mechanics, traders, school-houses and meeting-houses are not the "highest phase of civilization," according to the New Orleans Times, we wonder what the Times's highest phase would be.

Are deserted wharves, empty warehouses, vacant lots, dilapidated buildings, cobwebbed churches, Ku-Klux Klans, chivalric tournaments, horse pistols and revolvers in general a higher phase of civilization?

The Times goes on to say, referring to Greeley's kind of civilization: "We have no objection to make to it." Then let the car of progress move on. The reign of peace and thrift and industry may yet work out its destiny on this continent, for the Thunderer, though preferring some other phase of civilization not definitely indicated, graciously allows it to be implied that it will place no insuperable obstacles in the way.

The Picayune gallantly comes to the aid of Mr. Charles Morgan in the Opelousas Railroad squabble. The public spirit of this gentleman in all matters wherein his pockets are to be benefited, is admirably shown. The advantages of allowing Mr. Morgan's schemes to succeed are thus briefly put:

By seizure and foreclosure, the sale can be brought about within a month or so of time, whereas by an act of bankruptcy it becomes impossible to foresee the delays which are likely to ensue. This proceeding, however, is enjoined by the United States Court, and the case is progressing in that court with decided manifestations of the court in favor of the application to force the company into bankruptcy.

That the road should be taken out of the control of its present incompetent managers no one doubts. Between a forced sale by the civil sheriff of this parish, at which Mr. Morgan will bid in the road at an insignificant price, and for which he will pay in bonds purchased at an immense discount, and the judicious management of the road, its lease to proper parties, or sale, after due consideration, by Judge Durell, the public, who have been swindled quite enough in this matter, greatly prefer the latter. Give us anything but the present bungling management.

George A. Stuart, formerly President of the Christian Commission, says: "After Gettysburg I telegraphed to Boston, 'Can I draw on you for $10,000 on sight?' It was stuck up in the Exchange. The merchants at once formed in line to put down their subscriptions. In half an hour the answer came, 'Draw for $60,000.'"

---

It is rumored that John Slidell intends to make an effort to recover his property in New Orleans, and for this purpose has executed a power of attorney to two New Orleans gentlemen. This was acknowledged before General Dix, American minister in Paris, by John Slidell and his daughter, and in Frankfort by his son, before the United States consul there.

---

A Mississippi editor having given notice that he would inform, free of charge, enterprising young men how to make a fortune without capital, replies thusly to several anxious inquirers: "Every one of you pull off your coats, leave off your army sixes, quit whisky, go to work, make a crop of corn, cotton, peas and potatoes; house them up, then marry an 'enterprising' girl, and continue working, adding in your former crop boy babies and pumpkins. This never fails."

---

We copy the following from the St. Louis Republican, and would suggest that a liberal reduction might be made in telegraph rates at New Orleans:

Business men and the public generally will be glad to hear that the Western Union Telegraph Company has reduced its tariff rates about twenty-five per cent from St. Louis to all the large central and Eastern cities, and fifty per cent to points along the Mississippi river between this city and St. Paul. We learn, also, that further reductions are in contemplation with the view to increase the business of the Western Union lines.

CONFISCATION.

Near three years have elapsed since the surrender of the rebel armies. The leaders of one of the greatest, most causeless and infamous of rebellions have not met with the deserts which would have been meted them or have been approved of by all nations of the globe. On the contrary they move among us free as other citizens, deprived of but one privilege—the right to vote. Confiscation laws have not been enforced to any extent. There has been no gory sacrifice to meet the requirements of the law. Much has been overlooked, and many sacrifices of duty and of right have been made through an earnest desire on the part of the loyal people to bind all sections by ties of fraternal love and Christian mercy. Aye, the interests of commerce, the just rights of a race and the general improvement of the country have been neglected in the effort to obtain a heart-felt reconciliation.

What is the result? How have the advances of the government been met? Have the late Rebels changed opinions or policy? Do they cease their treasonable acts? Have they regarded the terms of surrender, or do they respect their oaths? Has the power of the government been increased, and is law respected, obeyed and enforced? Let the score of premeditated massacres like New Orleans and St. Landry, the thousands of Ku-Klux assassinations, the daily defiance of law and the insolent demands of the Southern press and people make answer. Defeat on the battle field and at the ballot box has taught them nothing. Organizations, martial and murderous in character, antagonistic to government and its supporters, rapidly increase and threaten the peace and prosperity of the country. It is notorious that in the greater portion of eleven States freedom of speech and of the press does not exist, and supporters of the government are subjected to persecution, and as immigrants, can not acquire property, engage in ordinary pursuits of life and dwell in peace. Has the rebellion been crushed? No sensible man can acknowledge this. Ex-Confederate leaders say their cause still lives and will yet triumph.

In view of all these facts has not the time arrived when it becomes necessary to preserve the dignity of government, cease a conciliatory policy, and demand obedience of rebels? And to deprive them of a power which they only hold by its tolerance?

There are millions of acres lying in idleness—property of law-breakers and defiers which have been justly forfeited to government by virtue of treasonable acts.

A recreant President and a lax Congress have neglected to act in the premises. These countless acres are used as an engine of political power to crush out Unionism and Republicanism. Thousands of acres are ruled by petty lords, who seek to oppress labor, and now continue to resist taxes levied to support governments organized under an act of and recognized by Congress. There are thousands of loyal soldiers who are without homes, who bore the brunt of battle, have lived and been subjected to insults and indignities numberless, and without redress. The honor of the government demands that they should be protected and cared for, and their oppressors silenced. There are thousands of brawny arms, accustomed to till the soil, who are seeking to rise above the level of beasts of labor, to which they were lately subjected, and who now seek to obtain a few acres upon which to rear a refuge from oppression, a place to call home. Justice demands aid for this people. There are hundreds of intelligent, industrious citizens of the North who desire to bring their capital to regenerate our bankrupt States. The spirit of nationality, the encouragement of Republicanism, demands that confiscation should take place, and the power of the enemy be broken, to open the way. Lords could no longer combine to prevent Union men from acquiring property; compel labor to remain homeless and subject to be made vagabond for a political purpose, and receive a mere pittance; or so powerfully resist the Government.

Confiscate! These large untilled plantations are an eyesore to our body politic. The thousands who are to-day refugees because of the cruelty and savage hate of the owners; the prostrate condition of the Southern States caused by the reign of the Ku-Klux Klan, call upon the Government to give a merciful, complete, wise protection to the people. Small farms and a happy, contented people should put to shame the leagues of murderers and assassins who now surround us.

PROGRESS.

SUFFRAGE AND AMNESTY.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:

The recent elections, and the triumph of General Grant as the next President of these United States, for four years from the fourth March next, opens a wide field for the reflections of every Southern man, as well as to every well wisher of his country's destinies.

The reconstruction policy of Congress has been reaffirmed at the ballot box, the last appeal of a free people—next to the conflict of arms. That question has received its quietus, and thank God, peaceably. All the South has to do is to acquiesce in the verdict of the people with the best grace possible.

Whether suffrage to the negro was rightfully bestowed or not is not the question now. It has been irrevocably settled that that class shall have the right of suffrage in the South, whether it is agreeable to the people of the States respectively or not; on which side or for what party their suffrages will be cast in future elections, is the great question at issue now—among opposing political parties. I don't, for one, see any serious objection to their holding the right of the ballot, but while I would freely grant this right to them, I am equally opposed to withholding that precious privilege inherited by every free born American citizen from the Revolutionary sires, from the white man. Hence my doctrine is this.

"Universal suffrage" and "universal amnesty," and I furthermore believe that these sentiments are in accord with those of General Grant, and if adopted speedily, would tend to promote harmony and peace throughout the length and breadth of the land, and their sequence would be, as General Grant says in his letter of acceptance, "Universal prosperity all over the country."

We of the South, to be wise, must accommodate ourselves to circumstances.

"Tout est bien, tout est bon, tout est grand a sa place."

We must bend to the yoke, which we can not break, and make the best out of a bad bargain, "as the tree falls, so it must lie;" as we make our bed, so will it be soft or hard, and so must we repose upon it. We have to take the reconstruction laws just as they are until time, and a wiser and better and more generous and just council prevail in Congress, and then, and I trust speedily, we shall see them amended by adding "universal amnesty" for past political offenses to every individual now disfranchised from these causes in this boasted "land of liberty."

Allow me to say to you, Mr. Editor, that the hand that guides this pen is the same which wrote the first fifteen planks in the platform of the Union Republican party of Louisiana nearly two years since, and before any party had formed itself in the South. There was certainly no Democratic party, and then no Radical party. If the so called Republican party, or at least a large majority of them, slid off into the Radical camp—the extremists, I was not one of them, nor have I ever acted with, or written a line favoring their extreme, and I still believe their suicidal policy, as carried out in this State and in the legislation of Congress toward the South. The same hand wrote and published an address to the colored people of this State and of the South relative to their duties as voters for members of the convention to form the Constitution of this State, and giving them my views of their duty and the course to pursue for their own and for the best interests of all. They were voters then, and are so still, and will in all probability forever remain so. I accepted that reconstruction act as a fact, and went to work in my feeble way to assist in freeing us from military rule, but having the best interests of the people of my own beloved South of both races sincerely at heart. There stands the platform and there the address, and to-day they are in fact the principles of the Democratic party of the South, although some of them don't like to confess them openly. O Time! what curious revelations dost thou work!

I have acted with that party—the Democratic—as the Republican party became too radical for my conservative notions, and I still think—(pardon my frankness)—that if you want to see Republican principles flourish in the South you must strike from your party the name of "Radical," and with it all proscriptive legislation, and cease to legislate for a party, instead of the good of the whole people as well in State affairs as in national. Favor universal amnesty, and teach the colored race to look upon the white man as not his enemy, and the white man to treat the colored as part of a common tenantry capable of great improvement, morally, intellectually and industrially, and then there are good grounds for believing that the Republican party of the South may attain strength and respectability.

A SOUTHERN UNION MAN.

The Louisiana Terrorism.

The New Orleans Picayune points with exultation to the overwhelming Democratic majorities in that State as a proof that "we the people of Louisiana have done something toward helping on our own redemption." When leading Northern organs of the Democracy are jubilant over the success of flagrant frauds in this city and elsewhere, it is perhaps not surprising that a New Orleans sheet should glory over the consummation of that terrorism which kept Republicans away from the polls, which gave Seymour 23 897 votes in the Crescent City to 276 for Grant, and which carried Louisiana for the Democracy by 55,000 majority, after the State had a few months before given a Republican majority of 25,000.

The Picayune could not, however, be guilty of greater folly and shortsightedness than in supposing that such a policy will insure the "redemption" of Louisiana. It will, on the contrary, if persisted in prove the most ruinous and destructive to her future interests. Let the impression once gain ground that violence and terrorism are to supplant law and order there, that freedom of speech is not enjoyed, and that elections are to prove mere farces, and capitalists and emigrants will shun the State as they would any infected district.

What the Southern States now require above all things to insure recuperation and regeneration, are protection for all, (regardless of color or political sentiments), emigrants, and money. The two latter can not be secured unless the former is insured. Southern leaders may depend upon it, that so long as lawlessness and anarchy prevail, and men are shot down for opinion's sake, all their efforts to invite capital and strangers thither will prove abortive. Until it shall appear that every man can enjoy religious and political liberty within their boundaries, without the aid of military force, so long will the Southern States remain at a stand still, while their Northern neighbors press forward in new paths of greatness and grandeur.

The problem of Southern prosperity rests with the Southerners themselves. Whether their future shall be for good or for evil depends wholly upon themselves. Meanwhile, they may be sure that every individual will be guaranteed the rights and privileges conferred upon him by the Constitution, though the whole United States army is employed, if need be, to secure them.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Report of the Inspector General.

General Shriver, Inspector General of the Army, has submitted his annual report on West Point. He says the Academy was never in a better or more promising condition. The number of cadets now there is 224. The number authorized by law when the Southern States are all admitted is 290. He enters at length into question of increasing the number of cadets, and concludes by saying that 400 can just as well be educated there as 224, and I strongly recommend an increase to that number. The only additional expense will be for board of students, there being teachers, books and apparatus enough. He says the necessity for an increased number of specially educated officers, is admitted by all who have given attention to the subject, and this necessity will not diminish in future. Various schemes are proposed to meet this need, but all are more expensive and more or less remote and uncertain in their value to the nation, while the Government already, in West Point, has means already at command for supplying its wants. He asks that Congress be requested to take action in the premises. The whole number of graduates to this time is 2273; number who entered but did not remain to graduate, 2472. The total cost of Academy to date is $8,236,372. This includes the cost of grounds, buildings, books, work, instruments, apparatus, as well as pay of teachers and Board of Teachers and cadets. General Shriver speaks about the notions that the Academy cultivates aristocracy and is tinctured with disloyalty, and, under this last head, says that, of the whole number of living graduates in and out of the service at the beginning of the war, more than three-fourths remained loyal. Of the whole number of graduates in and out of the service born in or appointed from the South, one-half remained loyal. Of graduates belonging to the States that actually seceded, more than one fourth remained loyal. Of graduates who served against the rebellion more than one-third were wounded, and one in five were killed in battle. He says in conclusion that the Board of Visitors recommend the Academy to ask for $65,000 this year for repairs and improvements, and also recommend that the Superintendent be raised to the rank and pay of Brigadier General.

The office-hunters' raid upon President Grant brings to mind Mr. Lincoln's complaint under a similar affliction. "I am like a landlord," said he, "who is so busy renting rooms at one end of the building that he has no time to attend to the fire that is raging at the other end."

A SUB-TREASURY AND SUB-ROSA AFFAIR.

EMBEZZLEMENT OF GOLD COIN.

During the past week, says the Times of yesterday, a case of more than ordinary interest has come up for preliminary examination before the United States authorities, and one in which embezzlement of the gold coin taken at the Customhouse of this city, by the substitution of silver, is charged to a large amount. What the precise amount embezzled is there is no means of ascertaining. The fact, however, that as much as $60,000 in gold has frequently been brought from the Customhouse to the Mint building, would seem to indicate that the opportunities for embezzlement have been very large.

From the evidence taken before United States Commissioner Warren, it appears that the sudden and remarkable increase of silver had attracted the attention of some one connected with the old Mint building on Esplanade street—now used as a place of deposit for the moneys collected from the Customhouse. The facts concerning the substitution were made known to Secretary McCulloch, at Washington, who gave orders in writing, and which were transmitted here, that the affair should be sifted. Under these instructions J. Marshal, a bookkeeper, was arrested charged with being the principal in the affair.

According to the evidence of the witnesses, a large amount of gold had been taken from the Mint by Mr. Marshal and given to a carrier to be conveyed to some broker's establishment on Camp street. In exchange for this gold a corresponding amount of silver was carried back. One witness thought that he transferred in this way about $20,000. Another statement made was that the witness had gone ten times to carry gold to the brokers—could not say that he had gone five hundred or even twenty times. As a man might have carried almost any given amount in each expedition below $30,000, it is not easy to guess what amount has hitherto passed from the Mint.

The money, the evidence further shows, was taken from drawers about the Mint building, and not from the vault. The party accused was bookkeeper, and did not properly have the handling of the moneys in the building.

The question that now arises is, how did the accused, under the circumstances, come to have control of the money.

The answer given by the friends of Mr. Marshal is that it is obviously absurd that he could attempt any such operation by his own efforts alone. According to their representation, Mr. Marshal was made the catspaw or agent, and has to stand the whole weight of the ignominy for which others are also responsible. According, too, to their representation, there was really no embezzlement at all, since hard silver coin was put in the place of gold, and that so long as one hundred dollars in gold was only worth two dollars and fifty cents more than silver, that there was no wrong done to anybody.

The case was last evening argued before United States Commissioner Warren by United States District Attorney Samuel H. Torrey, and by Judge Whittaker for the defense. Whatever may have been the evidence as to the complicity of others, there was no doubt whatever that the money had been actually taken from the Mint building and exchanged for silver, and the gold actually proven to have been converted into silver was of no very great amount.

The following was the decision of E. Warren, United States Commissioner, in the case of the United States vs. J. Marshal, late bookkeeper of United States Treasury, charged with exchanging gold coin for silver coin and appropriating profits to his own use: "That the accused be sent before the United States Circuit Court, under $1500 bail, for further investigation and examination."

GENERAL GRANT ON UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE—HIS CABINET.

Speculations of a Democratic Correspondent Based on Radical Information.

[Washington (November 18) Correspondence of the Boston Post.]

A distinguished Radical Senator, who arrived in this city last evening, says that the idea now becoming so prevalent of General Grant's conservative views will prove delusive. He bases this declaration upon his knowledge of Grant's political faith as derived directly from the General immediately after nomination by the Chicago Convention. Among other things, he says that Grant emphatically declared to him a full indorsement of negro suffrage, enforced, if necessary, by Congressional action. In a protracted conversation on the subject between the General and a number of Radical Congressmen, he said he had been at one time opposed to extending the right of franchise to freedmen, but that his views had undergone a radical change on this question, and that he now regarded it as essentially necessary for the protection of the negroes that they should be armed with the ballot. This Senator further says that during the latter portion of the last session of Congress Grant was in the lead on all Radical measures, and favored the most radical method of executing the several reconstruction acts. Hence he laughs at the idea that Grant's inaugural will lay out a conservative policy for his administration—unless an administration of the laws, as enacted and understood by the Radical party, can be considered conservative. Our Senatorial informant further stated that General Grant had, no doubt, fixed upon the whole of his cabinet, except a Secretary of the Treasury, and upon this he would probably decide while in New York. He thinks that Mr. Motley, late Minister to Austria, will be tendered the State Department.

NATIONALITY OF THE FEDERAL ARMY.—Some of the Southern journals continue to assert that they were overcome only by hired mercenaries, who fought the battles of the Yankees for them. The following figures, from Professor Gould's statistical volume, reveal the nationality of the Federal troops. The table does not include the colored soldiers:

| | | Per cent. |
|---|---|---|
| Native American | 1,523,300 | 75.6 |
| British American | 53,500 | 2.6 |
| English | 45 500 | 2.26 |
| Irish | 144 200 | 7.1 |
| German | 176,800 | 8.7 |
| Other foreigners | 48,400 | 2.8 |
| "Foreigners," nativity unknown | 26,500 | 1.3 |
| Total | 2,018,200 | 100.00 |

From these figures it appears that about three-fourths of the men in our armies were native, and one-fourth foreign born.

We extract this paragraph from a Washington special—twenty-third instant—to the Cincinnati Gazette:

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has been investigating matters in Louisiana. He finds them in a very rotten condition and demanding thorough uprooting. He has just recommended the removal of the Collector of the Third District, and some time ago recommended the removal of General Steedman, in the New Orleans District. The President shows no disposition to help him reform the matter.

Immportant Arrest Of Counterfeiters.

Vigilance of the Police.

DISCLOSURES BY A DEALER.

DISCOVERY OF DIES AND NICKLES.

Finished and Unfinished Counterfeits.

It has been generally supposed that five-cent nickles were counterfeited in this city to a very large extent, and so many of them are in general circulation that the street railroad managers have offered a reward for the arrest and conviction of counterfeiters of this coin.

The police authorities struck the trail of dealers in counterfeit nickels several days ago, and have been quietly working up the case without the suspicion of the guilty parties. The general impression has been that a fruit dealer has been operating largely in these coins. Last year several fruit dealers were arrested, but the parties escaped conviction, there being no postive proof of criminality.

Special Officer Walsh, assisted by other officers, has been at work on the present case, under the direction of the Superintendent of the Police and the Chief of Detectives for some days, and at length his diligence was amply rewarded. Yesterday morning Special Officers Walsh, Huolihan and Canonge arrested at his fruit stand in Treme market Antonio Gregora, and there they found secreted three dollars and twenty-five cents in counterfeit five cent nickels.

They proceeded to his house on Treme street with him, and there found secreted $77 35 in the same spurious coin. They also arrested his wife, Madame Gregora, against whom the additional charge is made of passing counterfeit money, knowing the same to be counterfeit.

On information obtained, the officers afterward proceeded to the house of Mary Valeour, near the corner of St. Claude and St. Peter streets, where the officers found $32 in counterfeit five cent nickles.

Mary was in the very act of pouring the composition into the dies for five cent nickels, which she had just taken from the stove where she had melted it, when the officers went in. They found there, also, nineteen dies, eighty-six rods of spelter or composition, a bag of plaster of paris, lot of broken and used moulds, iron ladle. lot of ends of spelter rods, four pieces of dross, four files, pair of shears and a lot of pieces of lead. They also found at the house of Antoine Gregora a gold watch and chain, two silver watches, three loaded revolvers and a loaded single barrelled gun.

The officers connected in making these important arrests will probably be entitled to the thousand dollars reward offered by the street railroad managers, and the ve thousand dollars standing reward ffered by the United States authorities for be arrest and coviction of counterfeiters.

These re the most important arrests made here for a very long time, and the mystery may now be solved as to where the counterfeit nickels come from with which this city is flooded. From one of the parties arrested it appears that the counterfeiters sell their spurious coin at a discount to such parties as will buy it. The profit is large to both parties, and the temptation great to pursue the criminal transaction of coining, buying and passing counterfeit nickles.

The New York Herald thus concludes an editorial in reference to the people of the South:

It is folly for them to contend any longer against the reconstruction laws, bad and tyrannical as they are, so long as the political power of the country rests in the hands it now does. We believe that in the pursuit of peaceful avocations, in efforts for the development of the hidden wealth of the country and in the establishment of law and order in districts where confusion and anarchy may have prevailed and may still prevail, the South will find a warm, true and steadfast friend in the President elect.

REPORT

Of William Baker, Chairman of the Board of Registration, to Governor Warmoth, on the Late Election.

[Copy.]

OFFICE BOARD OF REGISTRATION, State of Louisiana, New Orleans, November 23, 1868.

To his Excellency, H. C. Warmoth, Governor of Louisiana;

SIR—As chairman of the Board of Registration, a large mass of evidence has been forwarded to me by the Supervisors of Registration in the various parishes of the State, setting forth the intimidation, fraud and violence, including murder itself, which has been used for the purpose of preventing duly qualified electors from exercising their right as citizens and voting as they deemed proper. Under the circumstances I thought it my duty to lay before you for your information an epitome of the most important facts; if time permitted I should furnish you with copies, but as it is I shall be happy to exhibit to you the originals whenever you may desire it.

Of the city of New Orleans, it is hardly necessary for me to say anything, as you are, doubtless, as well informed as I am respecting the murders, assaults, threats and every species of intimidation which for a month preceding the election were used, and obviously for no other purpose than that of preventing Republican voters, more especially the colored ones, from going to the polls.

There is not a ward in the city in which threats of violence has not been made to the Supervisors of Registration in the performance of their duties. Many of them for some time prior to the election were afraid to sleep in their own houses at night. Others were threatened, and in one instance one of the newspapers called upon the people to "hang the Registrars to the nearest lamp-post." Is it any wonder that they resigned rather than perform their duties at so much personal risk? In the First Ward one of the Registrars was hung in effigy in front of his own door. Since then, as a matter of personal safety, he has sold out his place of business at great loss, and moved to another portion of the city.

One Registration office (the Sixth Ward) was broken into and all the furniture and stationery destroyed, fortunately the records were deposited elsewhere for safe keeping. The First Ward Registration office was broken into and the whole records destroyed. It is believed it was done for the purpose of destroying the evidence which the Registrars had been collecting, respecting the breaking into the houses of colored men, and with pistols at their heads and threats of instant death if they resisted, robbing them of their registration papers. I am in possession of many affidavits setting forth these facts. Many club rooms were broken into and sacked, the furniture and everything destroyed.

So far had these threats of violence, intimidation and murder been carried that when the Registrars came to that part of their duty requiring them to appoint Commissioners of Election, that in not one ward in this city could be found Republicans who were ready to incur the risk of serving as Commissioners of Election, showing most conclusively the reign of terror which had been inaugurated and which but too truly made "the election a farce," the "tragedy" having preceded it.

In the parish of Jefferson the riot and murder of a number of colored citizens was but another link in the chain with which loyal citizens were to be bound and deprived of the right of exercising the franchise, except at the risk of their lives. One of the most intelligent and useful of the Registrars was threatened and told that his life was to be the price of his daring to continue in the performance of his duties; his family was also visited and threatened. Under these circumstances he resigned.

In this parish (Jefferson), on the day of election, one of the Commissioners reports "that three or four gangs, numbering some two hundred men each, went to Kennerville on cars or special trains provided by the Jackson Railroad. They were apparently organized bodies and all armed." These rowdies demanded that the returns should be made out in their presence, "and even went so far as to enter the private apartments of the Commissioners and with drawn revolvers and every conceivable kind of weapon forced the Commissioners to make the returns at once," "and owing to threats and intimidations the tickets were forced to be thrown under the table and destroyed against their will."

In the parish of St. Bernard, such was the state of things, that two of the registrars had to take to the swamp for safety, and wait for the excitement to abate. One of the registrars came to this city and has not been heard of up to the present time. No Commissioners of Election were legally appointed, and no legal election was held in the parish, so the registrars report to this office.

In the parish of Washington, the registrars had to go armed night and day, and were frequently threatened and insulted. colored men were beaten and obliged either to vote as directed, or not at all. So outrageous were these acts of violence, so far was it from being a fair election, that the registrars refused to certify to the returns, "regarding the election in this parish as carried by the knife and revolver."

The registrars for the parish of Plaquemines report that legal voters were refused the right of voting—other were permitted to vote on old registration papers, some who were not residents of the parish, were allowed to vote, while many, from the murders in the city of New Orleans, and the adjoining parish of St. Bernard, were so intimidated that they were afraid to vote. In one precinct an election was held by unauthorized parties, and should not be regarded at all, under any circumstances. But for these influences, the registrars report that the Republican ticket would have had 600 more votes in the parish.

The parish of St. Mary, and what has transpired there during the time the Board of Registration has been in existence, is too well known for any one to contend for a moment that anything like a fair election has been held in the parish. I have no other comments to make. I merely submit a copy of a report by the registrars of the parish:

NEW ORLEANS, November 6, 1868.

William Baker, Esq., Chairman Board of Registration:

SIR—The undersigned, Supervisors of Registration for the parish of St. Mary, would respectfully represent that the returns of the election from said parish have been duly sent in. But under the existing circumstances we have seen proper to make this further statement:

The chairman of this Board, a resident of the said parish of St. Mary, was compelled by threats to leave the upper end of the parish, and other members of the Board were driven out of Franklin several days before the election; such an amount of violence and intimidation was used before the election and on the day of election, that we are satisfied that the election in the parish was not an expression of the will of the people, and we believe the returns from all the precincts except Brashear and Pattersonville should not be counted.

Not fully knowing our powers under these peculiar circumstances, we have signed and sent in the returns accompanied with this further statement of the

Very respectfully,

(Signed by the Supervisors of Registration of the parish of St. Mary.)

In the parish of East Baton Rouge the circumstances attending the registration and election, although not accompanied by the same amount of violence as is found in many other parishes, yet the facts show clearly enough that no election such as is contemplated by law, was held.

The parish being a populous one, two sets of Supervisors were appointed so that all duly qualified might have an opportunity to register in the short time allowed by law. One Board was to be located in the city of Baton Rouge; the other was to move from point to point in the parish. When the moving Board came to Manchac they found it impossible to get accommodation of any kind; they were unable to hire any place for an office; no one would supply them board or lodging. They proposed to erect a temporary shed for registering in. Colored men and others were forbidden to work for them. So after traveling a day and night they had no other alternative but to return to Baton Rouge, where they announced they would be ready to register all who came and were qualified.

By this time a large number of colored men were in the city of Baton Rouge waiting to be registered, but had up to that time been unable, in consequence of the interference of the Mavor, Sheriff and others, who insisted the Registrars should only register one colored man for every white man registered. As there are about five colored men for every three white men in the parish, this course would necessarily have prevented two-fifths of the colored men from registering. The presence of the second board in the city of Baton Rouge gave the opportunity for these men to register. At this moment Messrs. Fuqua, McCollum and others obtained from the Parish Judge, a writ of injunction prohibiting the second board from proceeding any further in the work of registration in the parish of East Baton Rouge, thus practically closing the registration office seven days sooner than provided for by law, thereby preventing, it is believed, about twelve hundred colored men from registering, by a base use of the law and the prostitution of justice, to serve the purposes of those who are legally disfranchised.

With respect to the election in East Baton Rouge, the protest of four of the Supervisors of Registration is the best evidence in what light it is to be viewed. The original protest is attached to this communication, so that your Excellency may see for yourself.

PARISH OF EAST BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA, November 9, 1868.

To Chairman and Members of Board of Registration.

GENTLEMEN—We, the undersigned, Supervisors of Registration of the parish of East Baton Rouge, do solemnly protest against the election held in said parish on the third day of November, 1868, for the following reasons, viz: That being obstructed by the Parish Court and want of material, we failed to complete the registration of the parish by about (1200) twelve hundred persons, who would have registered.

The conduct of the police, who were authorized by his Honor Mayor Elam and Thompson Bird, Sheriff, to keep the peace at the Courthouse, first precinct, on the day of the election, was outrageous in the extreme, they taking away the ballots of citizens wishing to vote for Republican Electors and Congressmen, and substituting other tickets instead; on their refusing to vote said substituted ticket they would destroy their certificates of registration (this was not done in every case, but in many.) In consequence of the threats and intimidation used by said police, about (200) two hundred men left the poll without voting. All other precincts in the parish (with the exception of the first) were conducted in accordance with law. We signed the returns of the election believing it was required by law; otherwise we would not have done so.

We have the honor to be your obedient servants.

(Signed by the Supervisors of the parish.)

From the parish of Vermillion I have a report from the Registrar which sets forth, among other things, "that for two or three months prior to the election an armed band of men, under the guise of vigilance patrol, took charge of the town of Abbeville and its environs, threatening everyone who was not prepared to express Democratic sentiments. The Registrar's life has been more than once threatened; messages sent to him to 'shut up his Republican mouth or a hole would be bored in him,' 'no one would dare vote the Republican ticket.' The club room was guarded so as to keep Republicans from meeting. Considering the above facts, and many others not mentioned, I, as Supervisor of Registration, do not and can not consider the election of the third instant as fair and honest expression of the will and wishes of the people; that it is not only unfair, but that it was conducted in its incipient canvass by the force of Democratic powder and lead. I therefore enter this my solemn protest against any Democratic majority that may be claimed."

The Registrars of the parish of St. Landry report that for nearly two months before the election a state of anarchy existed in the parish, and that over two hundred colored men were murdered during that time. Of the election, they say such was the state of things at that time that no one would have dared vote any but the Democratic ticket, except at the risk of his life.

In the parish of St. Martin the Registrars report that "the registration itself was not free, for armed bands of men prevented colored men from going to register; several of their leaders were killed." The chairman reports that he knows nothing about the returns as they were not made to him. Other persons took possession of the returns from the Commissioners of Election, and he was not allowed to see or compile them as required by law.

From the parish of Lafayette there does not appear to have been any interference with registration, but armed bands of men patrolled the parish and intimidated and prevented Republicans from voting.

The parish of St. Tammany is no exception to the other parishes where intimidation has been resorted to. The report of the supervisors shows conclusively that citizens in that parish no longer enjoy the privilege of the ballot. "A week or ten days before the election the Ku-Klux Klan rode around parts of the parish and threatened and intimidated the voters." "The editor of the St. Tammany Vindicator had to fly from the parish to save his life." Houses of known Republicans were visited as a part of the system of intimidation and surveillance. The Democrats announced "that no white man should vote any but an open ticket. Out of 1465 registered voters 261 failed to vote. Yet the white and colored population of the parish are about equally divided. The Registrars conclude as follows: "We are satisfied that had there been no intimidation used, that the Republican majority in the parish would have been at least two hundred."

From the parish of Catahoula, the report shows, with a previous registry of at least twenty-five hundred, for twenty-three hundred and seventy (2370) voted. Under the present registration not one-half of that number registered, and less than one thousand voted. This the Registrar accounts for by saying: "There was such a system of imprecation, abuse, entreaty, espionage and threats and annoyances generally, that very many voted against their convictions, and many more were deterred from registering at all." "The vote as given is not a fair expression of the sentiment of the people of this parish at all." "There was no absolute fraud in receiving or counting votes."

One thing with reference to the vote in the parish of Jefferson I forgot to mention. It is this:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| There are registered in Carrollton, Kennerville, Gretna and the Glassworks, Precincts 2, 3, 4 and 5 | | 3461 |
| Whites | 1061 | |
| Colored | 2400—3461 | |
| Democratic vote in the four precincts | 995 | |
| Republican vote in the four precincts | 658 | |
| Total number voting | | 1653 |
| Registered whites not voting | 66 | |
| Colored men not voting | 1742 | |
| Total not voting | | 180 |

Thus showing that considerably less than half of the registered voters, voted.

In the parish of Jackson, the election appears to have been peaceably conducted, and all but one hundred of the persons registered voted. Although there are many well known Republicans in the parish, and nearly one-half of the voters are colored, yet not one Republican vote was cast in the parish. The returns sent in are made by the sheriff of the parish, and not by the registrars as required by law, in spite of the protest of the registrars.

Up to the present timee we have not heard from many of the parishes, and are not informed particularly, either as regards the registration or election.

I most respectfully call your Excellency's attention to the very small number of Republican votes cast in all those parishes where there has been riots, assaults and murders, in many of the parishes where there has been heretofore Republican majorities; while on the other hand in those parishes where there has been no disturbances or intimidation of the voters, the Republicans voted in full strength, and had the majority their registered number indicate.

The consequences of the intimidation just referred to, is no where more perceptible than in the city of New Orleans. With more than eighteen thousand (18,000) registered colored voters in this city, and certainty not less than six thousand white Republicans, it appears that less than three hundred persons voted the Republican ticket. Why the Republicans did not vote, is easily explained, by taking a glance at the weekly mortuary report of the Secretary to the Board of Health, which shows that three white men and ten colored came by their death, either by gun-shot or other wound, in one week in this city, during which time such a state of anarchy or mob-law existed that the ordinary police authorities were powerless, and the streets at night were patrolled by bands of self-appointed men, armed with all kinds of dangerous weapons, during which time no colored man or known Republican dared show themselves on the streets after dark.

One other circumstance is worthy of notice, and to which I also respectfully call your attention. It is this: Under the new election law the Supervisors of Registration are the officers whose duty it is to compile the returns sent in by the Commissioners of Election; but the Civil Sheriff of this parish undertook to say that he was the returning officer, and ignored the Registrars. When the ballot boxes were delivered to his deputies on the morning of the election, they were instructed that the boxes were to be carried back to the Sheriff's office instead of the Registrars' offices, where the Chief of Police had detailed two men to guard them till the morning after, when the Registrars were to make the proper returns, as required by law. The boxes were carried to the Sheriff's office, and with them the poll books and duplicate lists; they were, with a few exceptions, not in the hands of the Registrars, and in no case in the eighty-two polls held in this city did they, so far as I can learn, have an opportunity of verifying the correctness of the returns made by the Commissioners of Election. They have merely certified that it was a correct copy of such returns. It is not such a return as is contemplated by the law; but that they have made them as they have done is no fault of theirs.

The Registrars of the parish of St. Helena report that "during the time they were engaged in registering, such an amount of intimidation existed in the parish as to prevent many from registering, and many who registered were prevented from voting, while a large number who would have voted the Republican ticket voted the Democratic ticket through fear of personal violence; that just previous to the election an organization known as the Ku-Klux Klan, in disguise and threatening manner paraded about the parish for the purpose of intimidating the peaceably disposed of the Rpublican party. At Tangipahoa, one of the voting precincts in the parish, one John Kemp, a prominent Republican, was murdered by this band, and another citizen was wounded. After due deliberation the Supervisors concluded it was not safe for them to disperse themselves at the various polls on the day of election." They conclude: "In our judgment the election was unfair, and should be deemed void."

In conclusion, did time permit, and were I sure I was not trespassing on your time, much more might be said. As it is, I have tried to condense the reports sent to this office, using, as far as possible, the language of the Registrars themselves. Many of them residents of the country parishes aver that they dare not make a written statement; such, they allege, would cost them their lives. Many have declined to make any report of the facts known to them respecting the intimidation of loyal voters, considering that the state of society is too well known to make it necessary for them to expose themselves as a target to the mob which rules in too many of the parishes of the State. All of which is respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM BAKER,
Chairman Board of Registration.

The Vice-President's Bride.

The Washington Star gossips in this manner about the bride of Mr. Colfax, Vice-President elect:

Miss Wade resides with her stepmother, her father and mother both being dead. She is the neice of Senator Wade, who resides at Jefferson, fifteen miles from Andover. Miss Wade is about thirty years of age, of medium size, good figure, dark hair, brown eyes, and has a pleasing face, indicating goodness and intelligenee. All who know her speak of her amiability and quiet good sense, as qualifying her admirably to preside at the house of the Vice-President elect. Three years ago she spent the winter in Washington with her aunt, Mrs. Senator Wade, at the house of Mr. Barrett, on Four-and-a-half street, where Mr. Colfax also stopped; and the friendship formed at that time probably laid the foundations for the present more intimate relations. Miss Wade was one of the excursion party with Senator Wade and Mr. Colfax that came so near being cut off by the Indians on their Rocky Mountain trip. The other ladies of the party were Mrs. Matthews, mother of Mr. Colfax; Miss Carrie Mathews, his sister; Miss Sue Mathews, his cousin, and Miss Sallie Bowles, daughter of Sam Bowles, of the Springfield Republican. These ladies are said to have displayed an amount of courage and self-possession on the occasion of the Indian attack that won for them an enthusiastic vote of admiration from their companions and from the rough mountaineers.

The regulators of Jessamine county, Kentucky, have been again correcting social abuses. They whipped several citizens recently for alleged misbehavior of a domestic kind.

FACT AND FANCY.

General Grant is reported by a St. Louis correspondent to be worth $300,000.

Schuyler Colfax carried his town, his county and his State, while Frank Blair is beaten in his ward, his city, his county and his State.

Old Crabtree, Lotta's father, loses $2000 by the fire which burned out his liquor saloon in Broadway, New York, a few nights ago.

Fessenden says Andy Johnson went into office tight. He went in so very tight that he must have got badly squeezed by the operation, since he has been decidedly "mellow" ever since.

The Frankfort Journal states that Mrs. Lincoln passed through that city on the eighteenth ultimo, on her way to Weisbaden, to place her son Thaddeus at school there. She was afterward to proceed to Carlsbad, Nice and Naples.

A Republican in Massachusetts abstained from voting because he had resided in the State less than a year by fifteen minutes when the polls closed.

Florida is a small State, but it has two Governors at present, both of whom are using the State Seal. The impeachers are trying to make one of them a broken Reed.

The soldiers and sailors of Massachusetts intend to be represented at Washington by a large delegation on the occasion of the inauguration of President Grant. A committee of prominent ex-army and navy officers has been appointed to make the necessary arrangements.

Mr. John G. Saxe recently met on board a steamer a lively young lady to whom he made himself agreeable. Of course, he made an impression upon the damsel, who said at parting: "Good by, Mr. Saxe; I fear you'll be forgetting me." "Ah, Miss," replied the many-times defeated candidate for Governor of Vermont, "if I was not a married man already, you may be sure I'd be for getting you."

The steamboat lines between New York and Boston have renewed their wars. The Newport line has reduced its fare to three dollars, and the other companies will follow suit.

According to the New York Democrat, a meeting was held in Jersey City, on the evening of the twenty-first instant, of the men who fought with Admiral Farragut at the capture of New Orleans in 1862.

The object of the meeting was to prepare petitions for next Congress, to seek for the prize-money to which they were entitled after the capture of New Orleans under Admiral Farragut. Although the property taken by Farragut and his men amounted to about eighteen or twenty millions, yet, up to the present hour, not a single cent of prize-money has been awarded.

The question will be strongly agitated until the next meeting of Congress.

LAWS OF THE STATE OF LOUISIANA

PUBLISHED BY AUTHORITY.

AN ACT

[No. 212.

To Incorporate the Loan and Pledge Association.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives, of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That the following named persons, their sucsessors and assigns are hereby created a body politic and corporate under the name and title of the Loan and Pledge Association, with the powers and rights as set forth in the following articles, viz: Alfred Marchand, Charles H. Foster, Henry Kloppenburg, H. W. Kloppenburg, R. Huberwald, A. C. Denonvian, St. F. Casanave.

Article 1—The name and title of the said Corporation shall be the Loan and Pledge Association, and its domicile is hereby established in the city of New Orleans. It shall commence business as soon as fifty thousand dollars shall have been subscribed, and shall exist for twenty-five years from the date hereof, and any such longer period as may be granted by special act of the Legislature of this State. It shall have power to contract, sue and be sued, to hold, receive, purchase, convey, mortgage and receive in mortgage, pledge and receive in pledge, property, both real and personal, to make and use a common seal of such device as may be recommended by the Board of Directors herein established, to name and appoint such managers, directors, officers and servants as its interests and convenience require, and to create and establish proper bylaws and rules for the regulation and management of its affairs, all in its corporate capacity.

Article 2—The object and purposes of said corporation are to make and enter into all manner of contracts and arrangements for the pledge of, and to receive in pledge, movable property in order to promote the interest of the working classes who are out of employment and temporarily in need of money for the support of themselves and families, and to make and execute, issue and receive certificates of pledge of any kind and nature whatsoever for the pledge of movable property, and to do and perform generally every act and thing to the business of loaning money on the security of pawn or pledge belonging or in any wise appertaining.

The said Association may, for the interest of its stockholders, purchase from time to time any certificate or certificates of pawn or pledge, or other obligations issued or to be issued by the said corporation. All citations, notices and other legal process shall be served on a President, who shall be appointed in the manner hereinafter provided for.

Article 3—The capital stock of the said Association shall be two hundred thousand dollars, divided into two thousand shares of one hundred dollars each, to be paid for at the time and in the manner following, to wit:

The subscribers to the said Association shall pay into the hands of the President, upon its organization for business, the sum of twenty dollars on each and every share of stock subscribed by them, the remaining eighty dollars per share payable on demand at the office of the company, after fifteen days notice from the President and Cashier. The said capital stock of two hundred thousand dollars may be, by a two-thirds vote of the stockholders, in number and amount extended to an amount not to exceed five hundred thousand dollars.

Article 4—All the corporate powers of the said association shall be exercised by a Board of Directors, to be composed of three Directors and ex-officio, the President and Cashier, any three of whom shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, over which the President, or, in his absence, the Cashier shall preside, or, in the absence of both the said officers, one of the said Board, to be selected by the members present, and the person or officer thus presiding shall exercise a casting vote in case of an equal division in the vote of those present. The following named stockholders, together with the President and Cashier are hereby constituted the first Board of Directors and invested with all the rights and privileges herein specified, to wit:

Article 5—The Board of Directors shall fix the amount of the compensation of all officers, clerks and employes of the Association. They shall invest the profits and gains of the Association as herein provided for. They shall make and adopt by laws, rules and rugulations for the proper government of the Association and the transaction of its affairs, and alter and change the same at pleasure: Provided, The same shall not conflict with the laws of this State, or the true intent and meaning of this act. They shall have full power to do and perform all acts and things not herein provided for, which may be necessary to carry into full effect the object and purposes of the said Association; and they shall also have power to fill all vacancies which may occur in their number or in the offices of President and Cashier.

Article 6—To the end that the term of service of the aforesaid three Directors shall not expire at the same time, the said Directors shall by lot be so divided that they shall be respectively designated as the First Director, Second Director and Third Director, the term of whose service shall expire as follows: That of the First Director in one year, that of the Second Director in two years, and that of the Third Director in three years, to date from the first Monday in May, 1868; and on the third Monday of April in each and every year thereafter there shall be holden at the office of the Association, in the city of New Orleans, between such hours as may be named or designated by the Board of Directors, an eleceion for Director in the place and stead of him whose term of service shall then expire, of which said election previous notice of not less than ten days shall be given by public advertisements in two newspapers published in this city, and it shall be the duty of the Board of Directors, at some meeting of said Board prior to such election, to appoint three competent persons from among the stockholders, not Directors nor officers of this Association, to act as inspectors of said election, to superintend and conduct the same, and to certify to said Board the result thereof, and should any of the persons so appointed decline or fail to attend, the President shall have power to appoint others to fill the vacancy.

Nothing in this act shall be construed as to render any Director ineligible to said office of Director. Those receiving a majority of votes cast shall be considered duly elected, and shall take their seats on the first Monday of May after the election, and shall hold the same until others are elected in their stead. In the event of no election taking place on the day fixed, the President shall cause an election to be held within ten days thereafter, and shall give notice thereof by advertisement in two of the newspapers published in the city of New Orleans, repeating the same, if necessary, until said election is effected.

Article 7—No person shall be capable of being a Director of this Association who does not at the time of his election and during his continuance in office hold in his name, or that of the commercial firm of which he may be a member, ten shares of the stock of this Association.

Article 8—No stock shall be transferred unless such transfer be made on the books of the Association at their place of business in the city of New Orleans, and no transfer shall be made while any indebtedness to the Association exists on the part of such stockholder. But a stockholder wishing to transfer stock may be permitted to do so by substituting the obligations of the party to whom the stock is transferred. Provided always that the obligations proposed to be substituted shall be in every respect satisfactory to the Board of Directors. And the said Board of Directors shall at any time have the right to require additional bond or security from any stockholder whenever they deem the security on the deferred payment insufficient. The stockholders shall not be responsible for loss or damage incurred by said association beyond the amount of capital stock held and owned by him or them respectively.

Article 9—The funds of this association shall consist of those funds which result from the sale of the capital stock as above set forth, and of those funds which may be received by the said association in payment of the interest on money loaned on pledges and pawns of movable property as herein provided, and the profits which may be realized by the said association after the payment of the semi-annual dividend on the capital stock as further provided herein shall be invested at the rate of at least three per cent per month and not to exceed five per cent per month as loans upon the security of movable property exceeding in value one hundred per cent of the amount so loaned; nor shall any loans whatever of the funds of the said company be made for a period exceeding six months.

Article 10—All pledges or pawns which shall not have been redeemed on or before the expiration of the period for which the loans as above set forth may have been made shall be considered as forfeited to the Association, and at least twice in every year, and at such periods as shall be designated by the Board of Directors, after ten days advertisement in two newspapers published in the city of New Orleans, such unredeemed pledges or pawns thus forfeited to the Association on account of non-payment of the principal loaned thereon, and of the interest, as stipulated, which may have accrued, shall be exposed for sale, and sold to the highest bidder, at public auction, for cash, and the proceeds, after deducting the said principal and interest, and the costs of said sale and advertisements, shall be placed to the credit of the pledger on the books of the Association; and should he fail to claim the same within one year from the date of the pledge, ten per cent thereof shall be paid into the hands of the treasurer of the Charity Hospital, and the remainder shall be applied and added to the capital stock of the company

Article 11—In the months of May and November of each year it shall be the duty of the cashier to make, or cause to be made, an estimate of the profits and losses of the Association, and also a statement of all cash paid into the Company for or on account of the interest paid on pledges and pawns during the preceding six months, and further a statement of the value of the property held by the Company in pledge, as well as the amount of certificates or pledge thereof not cancelled, together with such other accounts as may be necessary to exhibit a complete statement of the affairs of the said Association as they exist, for the information of the Stockholders and all persons interested, and the said statement shall be verified by the affidavit of the cashier and filed with the papers of the Association, to be examined by all whom it may concern, and if it shall appear that the profits of the Association do not exceed its losses and expenses by more than ten per cent of its capital stock the Board of Directors shall make no dividend to the Stockholders, but such per centage of profits shall be retained by the Company as a reserve fund to meet future losses and liabilities and for the investment, according to the object and purposes of the Association. But if it shall appear that the profits exceed the losses and expenses by more than ten per cent of the capital stock, then the Board of Directors shall reserve and set apart a portion thereof not less than ten per cent nor more than one half of such excess as they may deem proper to be kept by the association as a reserve fund, which shall be applied as above set forth and the residue of such excess shall be rateably apportioned and divided between the several stockholders according to the amount of stock held by each stockholder.

Article 12—This act of incorporation may be modified, altered or amended, or the said Association dissolved at any general meeting of the stockholders which the Board of Directors shall convene for that purpose after thirty days' notice in the English and French languages published in the daily newspapers having the largest circulation in the city of New Orleans, with the assent of three fourths of the stock represented at such meeting, and any and all such notifications, alterations, amendments or dissolution shall be recorded and published according to law.

Article 13—The Board of Directors shall assemble at such place and as often as they may deem it necessary, and shall convene the first general meeting of the stockholders to effect the organization of this Association, and on the first Monday of May of each and every year thereafter the said Board shall convene a general annual meeting of the stockholders to deliberate upon the interest of the said Association.

Article 14—After the term of the dissolution of this Association, its affairs shall be liquidated, and its debts paid under the charge and superintendence of three commissioners to be appointed by the Board of Directors, and who shall remain in office until the final liquidation of the affairs of the Association.

Article 15—At every general meeting of the stockholders, each and every stockholder shall be entitled either in person or by proxy to vote for each and every share which he, she or they may respectively hold: Provided, That no corporations shall be entitled to a greater number of votes than fifty, nor to vote on any share transferred to him or them within ninety days prior to such meeting.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That this act take effect on and after its passage.

Dentistry.—The best of work done, at the most reasonable rate, by Dr. B. F. Wright, 153 Customhouse street, between Dauphin and Burgundy streets.

Rev. Dr. Newman will preach in his Church, corner of St. Charles and Calliope streets, to-morrow morning at eleven o'clock and in the evening at seven o'clock. Strangers in the city are cordially invited.

Conference Collections.—We trust that each minister will remember to take up the missionary collection and the other Conference collections, and report the same to the treasurer of Conference. Do this, though the collections be but small.

Freedman's Savings Bank.—This bank, located at 114 Carondelet street, is one of the very safest banks in the city. It was opened more especially for the benefit of the freedmen, but many others have selected this bank as the place to deposit their money. We would urge laborers to deposit all their spare earnings here, instead of keeping money on their persons or in their houses, with the risk of losing the same.

Our Annual Conference.—The Louisiana Annual Conference will convene in this city, at Wesley Chapel, on the twentieth day of January, and not the thirteenth, as published last week. There was a change made after the information in our last issue was forwarded to us. A change occurs also in the Texas and the Mississippi Conferences. The former convening at Austin, January 9, and the latter at Canton, January 28.

At all of these Bishop Simpson will preside.

The People.—The Democratic press of this city are constantly referring to their party as the people. The people of Louisiana are all its inhabitants, white and black. The enemies of the people are not those who tell the truth about the lawlessness and murders which are so rife here, but they are those who commit these crimes and abet them. They are enemies alike to Democrats and Republicans, enemies to law and order, enemies to commerce, to trade, to agriculture and emigration, enemies to every interest of the State, enemies to their race and all mankind.

The Crescent's Threats.—The language of menace appears to be inseparable from Southern rebel rhetoric. For example, the Crescent can not discuss the Governor's action in refusing to count the illegal returns from sundry parishes without appending the threat that for so doing he will be treated as a usurper. Can't the Crescent get over the old slave driving style of argument? We have to suggest that when the Crescent undertakes any overt acts to treat the legally constituted authorities as usurpers, it runs the risk of itself being treated as a traitor. In the question of sustaining the State government, it will be the United States vs. the Crescent and the Knights of the White Camelia.

The Tribune and Liberia.—The Tribune has made a gross mistake in criticising an article in the Advocate on Liberia. That article was addressed to such Christian colored people as are contemplating entering upon missionary work, to their own people in Africa. There are hundreds of such, as there have been in all ages of the church, who are ready to forsake home and kindred to engage in the great work of publishing the Gospel of Christ in distant lands. The article had not the remotest reference to a general colonization of the colored people which is a scheme as impracticable as it is undesirable.

We suggest to the Tribune that misrepresentation and war against the party which supports it, will be as unprofitable again as it has proved before in its own experience.

Missionary Appropriations.

The General Missionary Committee has closed its session, and made the appropriations for 1869. There were present all our Bishops, corresponding secretaries and members of the Committee proper, representing every section of our Church. The meeting was held in an unpretending room, at 200 Mulberry street, New York; yet in that small room, conclusions were reached and plans adopted, the resulting influences of which will run parallel with time, and add to the harpers of the skies. It was no ordinary pleasure to look in upon that venerable body, representing more exalted worth, more practical wisdom, more profound scholarship and more devotion to God and humanity, than is usual in such assemblies. There was the venerable Rev. Bishop Morris, wise, gentle, genial; and Janes, the embodiment of Christian earnestness; and Scott, the Fenelon of the church; and Simpson, the golden-mouthed; and Ames, on whom has fallen Hedding's mantle of wisdom; and Kingsley, and Clark, and Thomson, each good and great in "work and worth." Sitting by their sides was Durbin, calm, thoughtful, quick to perceive, ready to reply; and the busiest man in the Council was Harris, thinking everybody's thoughts and anticipating everybody's words by the fullness of his knowledge of every subject discussed. These in the foreground, and the General Committee in the background, it were a living picture to be contemplated only with pride and delight.

Not even the Church can be aware of the thoroughness with which each proposed appropriation is debated. Sometimes a Bishop, or a Secretary, or a member of the Committee grows earnest, waxes eloquent, becomes excited in urging a claim, or in opposing one. With the good of the whole Church in view, each interest thereof is jealously guarded, and the appropriations are advanced to the supposed giving capacity of our people. One remarkable feature of this Society is the economy with which its business is conducted. Nearly a million of dollars are annually collected and disbursed: three secretaries are constantly employed and several attachés and the "office expenses" are but $15,000 per annum. In what department of government or in mercantile life may we look for an instance of equal economy?

It must be gratifying to Dr. Durbin and to the whole Church, that there has been a steady advance in the missionary contributions. The pressure on the Society is not from a diminution of collections, but from an increase of our mission fields. This is no proof that the spirit of missions is waning in our Church. Such is the religious destitution of our own country alone, that the Committee might have appropriated a million dollars more. The supply is not equal to the demand; nor have we reason to expect it will be. And yet we feel confident that our Church could give annually a MILLION AND A HALF of dollars to the missionary cause. AND SHE WILL. No church in the land is wealthier in the aggregate, and whose members are more thrifty. God is pouring the riches of the earth into the lap of our people, and the Methodist Episcopal Church is the Joseph of Christendom. Then open thou the storehouses of this spiritual Egypt, and give to the people the corn which ye have garnered up.

We happened to be present in the Committee in the afternoon, when Gilbert Haven and other excellent brethren from New England, presented the name of Dr. Butler as a special agent to make collections for the Society. A lively discussion followed, in which New England's dialectic skill was seen and felt. And these brethren were right in asking for additional aid in working up the Society to its utmost power, and they would have succeeded, had they not brought their candidate with them. But New England never does anything on the halves. If she discovers a place for a man, she has a man for the place. It was bad policy, bad taste and bad Methodism to urge a special man for that place. It damaged their cause; it damaged Dr. Butler. But while we shared with them the conviction that additional aid should be employed, yet we do not regard their choice a judicious one. In Canada Dr. Butler may be popular, and may exert a controlling influence over the Canadians, but the result would be different in the States.

We judge Dr. Butler is a good organizer, attested by his mission in India, and believing this, we stand ready to subscribe $100 per annum for the next five years to the Doctor's support in Alaska, one of the openings of Providence and one of the most promising of all our boreal fields.

In Memoriam.

Another friend is gone. As the ethereal flash singles out the tallest of the forest, so death has laid low one of earth's noblest sons. In manhood's earliest prime, he sleeps the sleep that knows no waking, till time shall be no more. A manly spirit has bade adieu to earth, and entered the unseen world. The earthly house is dissolved and unclothed, he has entered into the presence of the Invisible. The hectic flush has faded into the pallor of the grave, and the cough—the echo of death's foot-falls—has ceased to vex his gentle spirit. Consumption has claimed another victim and the grave demanded another tenant. Life is ended. Its drama is closed. The black curtain has fallen. The sun has set. Farewell, my noble Heilner!

Dr. H. C. Heilner was born in Port Carbon, Pennsylvania, and in the year 1856, was converted, under the ministry of Rev. G. J. Barr. Inclined to a professional life, he read medicine in his native place, and in 1863 graduated in Brooklyn, New York; after which he served as assistant surgeon in West Philadelphia and Georgetown, District of Columbia. During the war he was appointed for medical service both in Texas and Louisiana. At the time of his death he was resident physician at Quarantine, Louisiana, which position he filled with great credit and fidelity, but which he was compelled to resign in consequence of failing health. It was his purpose to have spent the winter in El Paso, Mexico, and to accompany him, a dear and only brother had come to our city. But alas! death changed the programme, and our friend has gone to another El Paso. Rapidly and certainly the disease increased, when at eight o'clock, on the morning of December 1, 1868, Dr. Hielner died. At 4 P. M. weeping friends gathered about the coffin, and after a few remarks and a brief prayer, the body was removed to the Jackson depot and forwarded to the residence of Mrs. Heilner, the venerable mother of the pious dead.

Thus the story of life and death is briefly told. A gentleman of great personal refinement; a scholar of many attainments; a companion of genial fellowship; a friend that "sticketh closer than a brother;" a Christian whose "life was hid with Christ in God," and whose death was tranquil as when the weary traveler falls asleep. He sleeps in Jesus. Let us meet him in the resurrection morning.

General Grant—His Cigar and His Tongue.

Our recent visit to General Grant corrected two false impressions which the press had made upon our mind. We have all heard of his "everlasting cigar:" that he has never been seen without one; that it is so inseparable a companion that he has been photographed with the roll of tobacco either in his lips or between his fingers, and in a word, that he sleeps with a cigar in his mouth. With these and other stories of the General's cigar fresh in mind, we felt no little disappointment when he greeted us in the hall not to see a column of smoke issuing from his thin lips, and our disappointment increased when he sat an hour in conversation without a single whiff on the everlasting cigar.

And our surprise was equally agreeable and great at the conversational powers displayed by President Grant. We had entered his presence with the impression that we would have to lead the conversation, and remembering his reported passion for horses, we had determined to engage him in conversation by describing a famous Arabian horse we once rode from Jerusalem to Bethlehem; but the General "moved directly upon our works," nor did he give us time to bring up our Arabian steed. His thoughts are clear, quick and comprehensive; his language accurate, terse and sufficiently full for all colloquial purposes. He displayed a breadth of view, a minuteness of detail, a practical understanding, a preponderance of common sense, which so largely characterized the illustrious Washington. In their mental structure Grant and Washington are not unlike. In his analysis of Washington's character the great Everett enumerated common sense, prudence, punctuality, modesty, love of justice, self control, pride of character, seriousness, honesty, patriotism and morality, as the distinguishing traits in the character of the "Father of his Country;" and it is not too much to say that no other public man since the days of Washington has displayed similar mental and moral excellencies in the same degree and harmony as General Grant.

We fancy that Grant's reputed reticence is simply a perfect control of his tongue when in the presence of men over anxious to know his thoughts, and particularly so when politicians ask him questions. He has a constitutional aversion to being interrogated. In this he and General Canby are quite alike. The following good story was related to us by one of the parties: When General Canby was in command of Louisiana two Texans called upon him. On the way one said to the other, "I have many times called upon the General, but could never engage him in conversation; but I am determined to make him talk to-night, and I will bet you five dollars that I succeed." The wager was taken, and the parties were soon in the General's elegant mansion, corner of St. Joseph and St. Charles streets. The gentlemen were announced and the General entered. "Good evening, General;" "Good evening, gentlemen," and a pause. Questions on the war, on commerce, on politics, were put, but only received from the General the monosylabic "yes" or "no." He who had offered the wager resolved to rally the General on the place of his birth. Both being Kentuckians, but one small and the other large, the former put the square question: "General, in what part of Kentucky were you raised, that you should be a so much larger man than I am?" This was a poser, and our friend thought "I have made a hit this time." Quite a pause followed this natal interrogation. The gentlemen looked one at another; the General chewed away on his unlit cigar, and finally said, "Bottoms." He was born and reared on the Kentucky bottoms. It was a crushing reply, and our friend said to his companion, "I guess we'll go;" and they did go, and he paid his five dollars, because the General would not say more than "bottoms." But this was Canby's habit when he did not wish to be questioned, for at other times he was one of the most intelligent and copious gentleman in conversation it has been our pleasure to meet in the South.

Few men have the power of silence. Moses had it, Washington had it, Grant has it. Other things being equal, it is an evidence of mental greatness, of extraordinary self control. It is not an indication of lack of capacity, but rather of the power of concealment, and this power of silence reaches its height when the countenance is as silent as the tongue. Grant's face is as unreadable as his tongue is silent, when he wills it. As Moses could denounce the rebels at Horeb, and Washington thunder out a burning rebuke at Lee at Monmouth, so Grant can speak when the time comes. He was communicative to us because we are not a politician, and because we did not ask questions. As we left the mansion we thought of the future influence of General Grant's self-imposed silence upon the American people. Hereafter, silence will be regarded a sign of greatness.

The Next Administration.

We claim not to speak by authority nor to be one of the prophets, yet we feel safe in asserting that the next administration will be the most systematic, powerful and successful ever witnessed in this country. If we mistake not, it will be more military than any preceding one. Himself accustomed to the discipline and precision of military life, General Grant will aim to strengthen his administration by infusing a severe discipline throughout every branch of the Federal Government. The heads of the departments will be so many corps commanders, who will receive their orders and be held to a strict account for the faithful discharge of their duties; and while they will be entrusted, almost exclusively, with filling all subordinate appointments, their official acts will be subject to a severe scrutiny. There is a much deeper significance in General Grant's refusal to read applications for office, than appears upon the surface. Unlike Mr. Lincoln or Mr. Johnson, Mr. Grant will neither endure the worriment incident to the overwhelming personal calls for office, nor have his attention thereby diverted from the graver interests of the general government. "To the heads of departments," will be the response to all office-seekers.

To the utmost extent he will demand HONESTY as a requisite to the reception of an appointment. He will aim to rid the land of the official thieves and plunderers: who for too many years have grown rich on their ill-gotten gains. It will be a more Herculean task than the capture of Lee, but he can do it and will. With a new broom, he will clean out the customhouses, especially in the South, which are dens of thieves. The stupendous frauds that now make every customhouse stink, he will check, and in the four years to come fewer will grow rich by official dishonesty, but the commercial communities will rejoice in their immense gains under a better administration.

With a clear appreciation of material wealth, General Grant will throw the weight of his great influence in developing the material interests of the South. Better than any other man, knowing its immense resources, he will favor the construction of those public works and the adoption of such plans as will best promote the agriculture and commerce of this great section of our country. Less political than former President's, he will seek to divert the attention of the people from the bitter and bootless partisanship which now curses the nation, especially in the South, and will aim to turn that attention to the restoration of broken fortunes and the acquisition of new ones. All that he will ask of the Southern people will be loyalty to the Government, and the prevalence of peace and order throughout their borders. Grant has a "cold shoulder," and he will turn with power against political hacks and mercenary politicians who are leeches on the body politic, whose cry is "taxes, taxes," and like death and hell cry "give, give."

With a calm assurance of the justice and wisdom of such a course, he will protect the Union men and their capital, who reside in the South. Under him, lawlessness shall cease; crime shall not go unpunished; and no citizen shall be persecuted to the death because of his political sentiments. And whether such Union citizen is native born or from the North, he shall be protected in his rights, in his person, and in his property. The day will soon dawn to the persecuted loyalists of the South; and the time is at hand when the Northern capitalists may come to our now impoverished region, and find ample protection in the noble pursuits of industrial life.

The Southern Argus and Crisis Again.

We recently gave our readers extracts from the above named paper, on its plan of ridding the South of political opponents. We give below another extract from this delectable sheet, which we clipped from its issue of the fourteenth instant. Go it, Johnnie, and you'll get your name up as a "fire-eater." We shall endeavor to learn if you also are not a "carpet-bagger" of a few years longer residence than those you would have "exterminated:"

The Situation—Our Position.—We wish it distinctly understood by white Radicals with black hearts that they can expect no quarter from us. The South has been a prey for these vultures long enough, and it is idle to prate any further about a common country and a common destiny among those whom God hath not joined together. General Grant and his satelites will not give us our rights in a national point of view, and we must as States, individually and collectively, keep our organizations intact for purposes of necessry and legitimate defense. Carpet-baggers and scalawags must be scouted and despised as the most abominable things on earth. We should require them to keep the peace or beat an ignominious retreat from the States which are infested by their presence. They should learn, once for all, that tampering with negroes and inciting them to insurrection is a crime too infamous to go unpunished. We insist that the negroes shall be protected in whatever rights belong to them, but that scalawags and carpet-baggers are wholly inadmissible. To the white race of the South belong the government of affairs, and it is a needless task to attempt to deprive them longer of that just and proper relation which God has ordained. Forever must the negro be subordinate to the white race of the South, and it is just as impossible to reverse the decision as to change the color of the African or to pass an elephant through the eye of a needle.

We shall be more bitter and proscriptive than ever upon scalawags and carpet-baggers. Mississippi, like her sister State of Louisiana, must perfect her organization in every county, and be prepared to resist the encroachments contemplated by the vilest imposters that were ever permitted to disgrace the civilization of any age or country. Mark them well, men of Minsissippi, and spare none who are so base as to propagate in the minds of the negro false doctrines which will inevitably lead to violence and bloodshed. We want the negroes as laborers in developing our fertile regions and it is both natural and right that the utmost confidence should prevail. Extermination of scalawags and carpet-baggers is our motto.

Hon. Michael Hahn.

We congratulate the loyal citizens of Louisiana on the accession of Mr. Hahn to the editorship of the New Orleans Republican. That journal has badly needed an editor and editing for some time past. The official journal of the State and city, it should command the best talent available, and should be made a power by the strength of its editorials, and not by the number of its advertisements. As a graceful, pungent, discreet writer, Mr. Hahn has no superior in New Orleans, as the columns of the Republican now indicate. Associated with him is Mr. Tracy, to whose energy, unselfishness, and large business experience and ability, the Republican has been kept alive against fearful odds. He is the matter-of-fact philosopher of St. Charles street.

Colonel Simon Jones.—The article in last week's Advocate requires explanation, and we herewith cheerfully give a historical statement of the facts of the case. The state of the case is very plain.

Colonel Jones, at the last session of Congress, contested the seat of Colonel Mann, on the ground of fraud.

We have reason to know that the frauds were clearly proven, and of sufficient magnitude to give Colonel Jones an undisputed majority over his opponent.

While the contest was pending Colonel Mann died.

This does not abate the contest nor in any wise affect the rightful claims of Colonel Jones. The contest will go on. If Colonel Jones establishes his claims he will be seated. If he does not, then Colonel Mann having been the lawful member elect, there will be a vacancy in his seat. There is no conflict at all in the positions of Colonel Jones and Mr. Menard.

Extensive News Room.—A. Simon, No. 85 Baronne street, has about one hundred and fifty different papers and magazines for sale, on all subjects and in several languages. He is also agent for "Greeley's History of the Rebellion," "The Women of the War," &c.

Dr. Southworth.

We gladly publish below this gentleman's card, to which we call the careful attention of every candid reader of the Advocate. We know that some tremendous blunders were made during the late disturbances in this city, and we wonder not that a scapegoat is in great demand. We are pleased that General Rousseau repudiates the authorship of the language of which Dr. Southworth justly complains. But who is the author? No matter now; that will transpire in due time. In the mean time we may say that Dr. Southworth criticises and disapproves of General Rousseau's course, which as a citizen he has a right to do, and we suppose is prepared to give his reasons. As to our own opinion, we expressed that in a former issue of the Advocate, and need not repeat it here.

NEW ORLEANS, La., November 30, 1868.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:

SIR—I inclosed the telegram forwarded from Washington on the twenty-eighth instant by the Associated Press Agent and published here yesterday, containing what purports to be an extract from the New York "Herald's" version of Major General Rousseau's report to General Grant, in the following note to General Rousseau, and append his reply.

NEW ORLEANS, La., November 29, 1868.

General L. H Rousseau, Commanding, etc., etc.:

GENERAL—Will you be so kind as to inform me by the bearer if the inclosed paragraph, purporting to be from your report as published in the New York "Herald," really emanated from you, and oblige,

Your obedient servant,
M. A. SOUTHWORTH.

NEW ORLEANS, La., November 30, 1868.

M. A. Southworth, Esq.:

SIR—Your note of to-day is just received, and in reply I have to say that the paragraph you inclose forms no part of my annual report to General Grant. I have the honor etc.,
LOVELL H. ROUSSEAU.

I have to add that I never visited General Rousseau's headquarters except on business and in the interests of peace and order, nor have I ever uttered the expression attributed to me in the interpolated paragraph of the report.

The paragraph referred to is so vulgar in language, and so evidently false and malicious, and its accusations so contrary to my known principles and habits that it is only necessary to add that so far as it relates to me it is wholly and entirely untrue, and that those from whom it emanated are guilty of willful and malicious falsehoods.

Very respectfully,
M. A. SOUTHWORTH.

To Our Preachers.

As the session of our Conference is drawing near, we wish to call special attention of our preachers to collecting the subscription money to the Advocate, of all subscribers connected with their various charges. It is expected that every preacher will so exert himself in this matter as to be able to make a good report at Conference.

Conference Studies.—Those ministers on probation in Conference should be carefully preparing themselves for their examinations at Conference. We will publish soon the proof texts on the various Bible doctrines, which we hope will be thoroughly committed to memory, so that they may pass their examinations in a creditable manner.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, November 23.

Current history, as well as justice, demands a notice of the audience given yesterday in the Foundry Methodist Church to Dr. J. P. Newman. The morning was cloudy, with a sprinkle of rain, but was not sufficient to deter the people who had looked to this visit with so much interest from attending service. The house was filled to its fulness, though not uncomfortable. The congregation was such as to flatter any speaker who could yield to that kind of influence. Citizens of prominence, members of the bar and bench, ministers of other churches, General Grant and General Dent, his Aid, and other representatives of the army, and also of the navy, with heads of bureaus, and many others, presented a most imposing assembly of hearers. At night, though service was half an hour earlier than usual, the seats were filled, packed; the aisles filled, gallery and choirs filled; many stood, and hundreds went away unable to be accommodated. The speaker was himself on both occasions. At night, while the discourse was more evangelical because of the theme, it was not more appropriate than the one of the morning. The attention given by the vast sudience may be symbolized by the gray haired minister who made the opening prayer. He sat with eyes fixed, or only moving them as the speaker moved, and was playfully accused after service with never before having heard a sermon.

The fact is, the Doctor does not let his audience down; their attention rises with his thoughts, and there remains till he closes. The fear of having excluded from the Advocate anything more personal to him restrains our feelings and checks the outburst of a tribute due to those memorable services. The Doctor left this morning for New York. He and his excellent wife, I find, were the welcome guests at Foundry Parsonage.

That unobtrusive man, General Grant, came yesterday to the church in a street car, and returned by the same conveyance as far as it went, and walked the balance of the way. He reached here on Saturday evening.

President Johnson attended the New York avenue Presbyterian Church yesterday. It is said he attended church regularly during the impeachment trial, but not since its close till yesterday. He is said to work very hard on the Sabbath. It is to be hoped the affairs of Government may be so shaped, and that speedily, as to afford all public officers the rest on Sabbath they need. Mr. Colfax paid a short visit to his home last week, but is off again this morning.

Thanksgiving day has been designated by the Mayors of this District in accordance with the President's proclamation on that subject.

Mr. Lincoln was the first President who proclaimed days of thanksgiving, but then it was in view of some great victory. President Johnson, however, continues to make these proclamations under different circumstances, and against all the prejudices of his own ond other Southern States. For this he merits the most sincere commendation of the Church, but strange, if anything can be strange, there are church members and ministers who refuse to observe the day because it has been set apart by a Chief Magistrate not of their choice. Let the head be pitied and the heart censured for such narrowness and impiety.

It is an epoch in our country's history that there is now, more than heretofore, what may be called a magisterial acknowledgment of the deity. As a nation we are more religious than moral, and the less worship is performed the less morality will exist.

Among the measures to be brought before Congress at an early period of the approaching session may be reckoned a United States Postal Telegraph by which messages can be conveyed at less cost than now charged, and delivered as letters now are in large towns. A new executive mansion will be proposed. This is much needed; the present one has answered its day, and is only fit for an office, and not for the residence of a President's family. An effort will also be made to increase the President's salary. This improvement is as much needed as the other. So far as General Grant is concerned, he can not afford financially to be President, for he leaves a better place than he goes to. This change would no doubt have been made long ago but for the war. The bill regulating the tenure of office, having served its day, will no doubt be repealed.

Mr. Mullett, supervising architect of the Treasury extension, has made a report of some general interest to all who desire the expansion and beauty of the national capitol. He recommends several important changes in public buildings, streets and avenues, and improvements of parks for drives and recreation. His judgment is against the eight hour system, and the letting of Government work by contract to the lowest bidder; both these have operated against the interests of the Government.

Chief Justice Chase left for Richmond on Saturday; he will hold his court there, commencing to-day. Whether Mr. Jefferson Davis will appear remains to be seen. A short while since some persons connected with the Treasury were searching for a package among the captured property stored in that building; on opening one supposed to contain the object of their search, it was found to contain the women's clothes worn by that functionary when he was captured.

MORDECAI.

Sung Mother into Heaven.—There are in our city, says the Christian Advocate of Cincinnati, two orphan children, a boy and a girl, deprived of their parents within the last yeor. The lad is but seven years old, and is sustained in his grief by an almost gladsome remembrance that the last words his parents ever spoke on earth were to him, and that he sung his mother into Heaven. He lately told the story thus: his mother, it must be remembered, had been sick for some time:

"My mother called me," said he, "and told me that she felt like going to sleep; and that if she did, she wanted me to sing to her; and if she fell aslep, she wished me to sit by her bed till the doctor came. So," said he, "I began."

Here the little fellow, with great tears trickling down his cheeks, sang his little song, beginning:

"I want to be an angel," to show just how it happened.

"When I was done," continued he, "mother had turned over and gone to sleep, and I sat ever so still by her bed till the doctor came. I told him she was asleep; that I had sung her to sleep. He went over to the back side of the bed, and as soon as he touched her hand, he started back and said, 'My boy, your mother is dead.' So I had sung my dear mother into Heaven."

Magnitude of London.—Its houses number more than 350,000, and its streets, if placed in line, would extend from Liverpool to New York, and are lighted at night by 360,000 gas lamps, consuming in every twenty-four hours about 13,000,000 cubic feet of gas. Of the water supply, 44,383,328 gallons are used per day. The traveling public sustain 5,000 cabs and 1,500 omnibuses, besides all the other vehicles which human ingenuity invent. Its hungry population devour in the course of every year, 1,600,000 quarters of wheat, 240,000 bullocks, 1,700,000 sheep, 28,000 calves, 35,000 pigs, 10,000,000 head of game, 3,000,000 salmon, and innumerable fish of other sorts, and consume 43,200,000 gallons of beer, 2,000,000 gallons of spirits, and 66,000 pipes of wine. As a consequence, 2,000 doctors find constant employment. London, finally, supports 852 churches, which are presided over by 930 divines of more or less note.—The Nation.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted by the General Missionary Committee, namely:

Resolved, That in making appropriations to American Domestic Missions this Committee understand that they are made for the specific purpose of establishing new charges in the most promising fields; and that the Committee recommend that appropriations should not be made, as a general rule, by the Annual Conference to the same charges for more than five consecutive years.

After the foregoing appropriations had been approved by the Board of Managers the Bishops expressed their concurrence as follows in a communication to the Committee and Board of Managers, dated New York, November 17:

We have witnessed with much satisfaction the prayerful and careful attention with which you have considered the condition and claims of the missionary cause among us, and the deliberate and prudent manner in which you have provided for its support and progress for the coming missionary year.

We believe you have done wisely in increasing, to a moderate extent, your appropriations both to the Foreign and Domestic Departments.

We know you share our most earnest desire that the increased liberality of the Church may enable us next year much more fully to meet the growing claims of our whole work.

We doubt not you will continue to unite with us in praying most devoutly and constantly that the great Head of the Church will imbue us and all the Church more fully with the spirit of the great commission committed to us by our divine Lord and Master to disciple all nations.

With these sentiments we concur in the appropriations you have made for the coming year.

We think you are justified in trusting, to the extent you have done, the missionary intelligence and zeal of the churches and pastors. We are persuaded they will respond promptly and cheerfully to your action. Certainly God will honor your faith.

In our judgment, Providence has clearly indicated your duty in reference to the appropriations you have made at this time. The exigencies of our missions, and the recent providential opening of new fields, imperatively demanded of you all you have done. Indeed, the urgent claims of our Domestic and Foreign Missions have been but partially met. Great want will be felt in both these departments.

Church Extension Collection.

On Sabbath morning (November 22) the pulpits of the following Methodist Episcopal churches were filled by the Bishops and members of the General Committee, and collections were taken as follows:

|---|---|
| Ebenezer | $ 69 00 |
| Port Richmond | 59 00 |
| Eleventh Street | 32 00 |
| St. Georges | 150 00 |
| Haines Street (Germantown) | 169 00 |
| Salem | 130 00 |
| St. Johns | 200 00 |
| Twelfth Street | 160 00 |
| Spring Garden Street | 1075 00 |
| Trinity | 662 00 |
| Wharton Street | 250 00 |
| Green Street | 300 00 |
| Arch Street | 700 00 |
| Bethel | 70 00 |
| Nazareth | 300 00 |
| Centenary (Camden, New Jersey) | 80 00 |
| Broad Street | 70 00 |
| Emory | 100 00 |
| Fifth Street | 214 00 |
| Tabernacle | 150 00 |
| Ebenezer (Manayunk) | 20 00 |
| Total | $4871 00 |

This is an increase of very nearly fifty per cent over the collections taken in the same churches last year.

Intelligence from Our Mission Rooms.

FIRST GUNS FOR 1869.—The missionary contributions for 1869 have commenced, New York and Brooklyn coming forward promtly and liberally, as will be seen in the following cases: Eighteenth street, New York, doubles her contributions of last year; Eighty-sixth street, New York, advances 25 per cent. over last year; Bedford street, New York, andvances 16 per cent. over a very liberal contribution last year: First Place, Brooklyn, advances some 20 per cent over last year. This average scale of advance over last year will carry the Missionary Society clearly through 1869, and find her free from debt at the close of next year. This can easily be done, and than our grand Missionary Society will bound forward in her new work with her youth renewed as the eagle's.

FOR INDIA.—Rev. Henry Jackson and wife left the port of New York early on the morning of November 22, in the steamer Helvetia, for Liverpool. Owing to detention from the non-arrival in time of a part of the cargo, the steamer was delayed some twenty hours. Mr. Jackson's destination is Lucknow, India—a field in which he has spent some eight years last past.

THE NEW ENGLAND CONFERENCE.—One of the oldest and best pastors in that part of our work writes: "I am anxious to inspire the Church with missionary interest and ardor. I want the Missionary Advocate to sow among the people, in the confidence that I shall reap a corresponding harvest in our missionary collections. I have held monthly missionary concerts, and am doing what I can to wake up the people to feel for other's needs. The Missionary Advocate, I think would be a powerful auxiliary in the good work."

CHINA.—A young brother in our China mission pleads earnestly for more men; at least one or two more this year for his Station, which is in the valley of the great Yangtsi River. He says twenty are needed; that our mission is the only one in that region; and he justifies his earnest pleading by saying his heart goes out to save and elevate these groaning millions. Will not the Church at home respond?

CHILDREN OF MISSIONARIES.—We have been very much struck with the report made to the American Board on the characters and fortunes of the children of missionaries. The report says:

A circular addressed to 212 children, of whom 190 answered, revealed the following statistics: Of 95 males 81 are members of the Church, 51 have received a collegiate education, 31 are now in college, and 13 are now in the Gospel ministry. Of 89 females 78 have been educated and are professing Christians, and 13 are the wives of missionaries. The answers to the circulars sent out to show that the system pursued with children of missionaries has produced most happy results. No other class of children can exhibit such a moral and religious average.

MISSIONS AND SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.—The success of the vast missionary plans of the Methodist Episcopal Church depends largely on the organization of each Sunday-school "into a Missionary Society" according to the order of the late General Conference, (Discipline, Part IV, section 3, paragraph 12.) The success attending these juvenile missionary societies becomes more and more manifest every day. The Rev. J. J. Manker, writing to the Mission Rooms from Athens, Tennessee, under date of Nov. 8, says: "Our Sunday-school Missionary Society is workiug well. Last year, with an average attendance of sixty-seven, we collected $80 78 for missions. For the more systematic collection and distribution of missionary intelligence we have a committee for each grand geographical division of the earth, to report latest items of interest at each monthly meeting."

SWEDEN.—Advices received at the Mission Rooms from Sweden continue to be very encouraging. Under date of October 20, Rev. V. Witting, Superintendent, says:

Since my return from my fourth quarter's visitation I have heard good news from many places. The work in all directions is gaining strength every day. A great work is going on in Carlskrona. On my late visit from one thousand to twelve hundred people attended the preaching. More than fifty had been added to our Church there within a short time. Within a short time scores of people have been converted at Gottenburgh. LastSunday we had to organize two more classes. Our hall is altogether too small for our work; it is sometimes crowded full of people half an hour before the services begin, and scores have to go away. And such is the heat in the low crowded hall that it is exceedingly oppressive to preach in it. Rejoice with me for what God has done and is doing in Sweden, for it is indeed wonderful in our eyes.

CALIFORNIA.—A minister writes from that distant field: "I am satisfied that the free distribution of the Missionary Advocate pays largely. The increase of missionary collections on my former charge was nearly doubled after the free circulation of that paper.

Growth is the law of life. The plant that lives grows, the tree that lives spreads its branches wider, lifts its head higher, makes its shade richer and deeper while it grows. The child that lives grows. He creeps, walks, works, and becomes a man in muscle, nerve and noble deeds. Spiritual life in the soul follows the law of natural life in the body, in the tree, in the plant. It grows and develops.

At first, spiritual life is but a spark of grace, as it were, then it becomes a live coal, and then a vitalizing flame. At first it is seed sown in the garden of the heart, then it is the tender "blade, then the ear, and the full corn in the ear." It is a little leaven hid in three measures of meal which goes on leavening and leavening until the whole lump is pervaded. Faith, which is an element of the spiritual life, feeble at the first, becomes strong through exercise and conflict. Hope brightens by experience, and love warms and glows in the discharge of duties enjoined by the author of this new life.

The grace of Christ in the heart reveals itself in the outward life of the Christian. His walk will become more circumspect. "The path of the just is a shining light which shineth more and more unto the perfect day." His knowledge shall increase. "Then shall ye know, if ye follow on to know the Lord, and his coming unto you shall be as the early and the latter rain unto the earth." His works shall become richer in spiritual power, so that "others seeing your good works shall be led to glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Growth in grace, Christian reader, it is well to remember, is a gradual work. It increases little by little. This is the general law. There are some exceptions to show the working of God's mighty power, but these rare exceptions only establish the rule more fully and should lead Christians to put confidence in the usual mode. And it is usually important to remember the simple arrangements by which it is usually attended, to wit: "They that wait on the Lord renew their strength." "Wait on the Lord and he shall give thee the desires of thy heart."—Christian World.

A LIE STICKS.—A little newsboy, to sell his paper, told a lie. The matter came up in Sabbath school. "Would you tell a lie for three cents?" asked a teacher of one of her boys. "No, ma'am," answered Dick very decidedly. "For ten cents?" "No ma'am." "For a dollar?" "No, ma'am." "For a thousand dollars?" Dick was staggered. A thousand dollars looked big. Oh, would it not buy lots of things! While he was thinking, another boy roared out, "No, ma'am," behind him. "Why not?" asked the teacher. "Because, when the thousand dollars is all gone, and all the things they've got with them are gone too, the lie is there all the same," answered the boy. It is so. A lie sticks. Everything else may be gone, but that is left, and you will have to carry it around with you, whether you will or not; a hard, heavy load it is.—Child's Paper.

What Sends Young People to the Devil.

BY OLIVER DYER.

At the moment the reader takes this article in hand there are ten thousand girls in the United States, from five to eighteen years of age, many of them now the light and joy of happy homes, who, within ten years from date, will have become outcasts, and be earning their bread by the last shameful resort of degraded womanhood.

How do you know that such will be the fate of those girls? the reader is doubtless ready to ask. How, in fact, do you know that such will be the fate of even one girl? This is the way we know it:

In this city alone there are now seven thousand such as we say these girls will in ten years become; and in the entire Union there are over 20,000 such.

It is well known by those who have knowledge on these matters, that, within ten years, more than half of that twenty thousand will pass away, and their places be filled, and probably more than filled, by fresh victims.

These facts are just as well known as any statistics in regard to the phenomena of population, or classes of population, ever were known.

There is no mistake, there can be no mistake about this matter.

It is a settled fact, then, that there are now ten thousand innocent girls in this land, beloved of parents and friends, with a seemingly bright and auspicious future before most of them, whose names, within ten years from this day, will not be spoken by parents or friends, except with emotions of sorrow and shame.

And furthermore, there are now living in this land ten thousand boys, from five to eighteen years of age, who within ten years, will have become forgers and defaulters, and thieves, and robbers, and murderers, and in one way and another be reckoned among the felons and vagabonds who infest the earth.

Many a father and every mother who reads these lines will not fail to ask in their secret souls, "Will any child of mine be one of these lost 20,000? Is my daughter to be an outcast? my son to become a felon?

We can only say that, to our personal knowledge, the daughters and sons of parents just as good, and just as happy, and just as flourishing as any parents who will read these lines, have become outcasts and felons within the last ten years.

This brings us to the subject which we are to discuss in this article:

What sends young people to the devil?

We shall exclude outcast children and youth from the discussion, and confine it to families of intelligence and respectability—to such as are supposed to know, and who believe that they do know how to train up a child in the way it should go.

The devil's main hold on the youth of the land comes of and is clinched by the selfishness, the ignorance, and the incapacity of parents and guardians, we mean the selfishness of the good as well as the selfishness of the bad, the ignorance of the learned as well as the ignorance of the unlearned, and the incapacity of the distinguished as well as the incapacity of the obscure.

To train up a family of children in the way they should go is about the highest achievement of which man is capable; and he who would accomplish it must make the Divine Fatherhood his type and model. And however great and however frequent his failures may be, he must forever keep his Divine model in mind, and forever aspire to approach it more and more closely.

And what are the prevailing characteristics of the Divine Fatherhood?

They are ever-enduring patience, forbearance and mercy, with never a semblance or shadow of reproach or fault-finding with the repentant prodigal.

No penitent son of God, no matter how frequent or outrageous his offenses, on coming to his Heavenly Father, confessing his sins and asking forgiveness, ever heard any such response sounding down from on High as "You are always doing something you've no business to do! I'm tired of this. I'ts all very well promising obedience and good behavior; promises are cheap, but I should like to see a little performance as well as so much promise!"

How many penitents would ever approach the Throne of Mercy again after such a response? And yet that is often the tone and in some cases almost the precise words with which earthly parents respond to the penitential confessions of their children.

One such mistake, at such a time, is apt to be fatal. At the moment of confession the heart is melted and inexpressibly sensitive, and the impression then made upon it, especially if it be malignant, is apt to be enduring. And no reader of this article, of whatever age, needs to be told that nothing so stings the soul nor so rankly festers in the heart, as the rude and ungracious reception of an honest, well-meant apology or confession.

Nor does our Heavenly Father ever forsake an erring child, no matter how grievous its offense may have been. He forever follows the offender with his beseeching love, and ceaselessly holds open a door of return, from out which streams the beacon of redeeming grace to welcome the wanderer from afar. But it is not an uncommon thing for an earthly parent to drive an offending son forth to utter ruin of body and soul, and to cast out an erring daughter unto certain and eternal death. Such ferocious virtue on the part of a parent is about the mostrevolting emanation from the bottonless pit ever manifested on earth. Who would stand in such an one's place when God shall call him to a reckoning, and require his children's souls at his hands?

Unless parents retain the implicit confidence of their children they can not train them up in the way they should go, nor control their destiny. This is the vital point!

We wish that we could send this point like an arrow hissing home to the heart of every parent in the land, for it is the point—the central, the vital, the controlling point of the whole matter—the point of departure which unceasingly determines whether myriads of children shall tread the path to Heaven or that which leads to Hell.

* * * * *

We will give a case, which was communicated to us by Mr. Kennedy, the Superintendent of the Metropolitan Police.

As Mr. Kennedy was sitting in his office at Police Headquarters one day, at about one o'clock P. M., an elderly gentleman came in, and in a state of great excitement exclaimed,

"I've lost my child! My child is gone! She's fled from her home! She's lost!"

Mr. Kenedy, who knows just exactly how to manage any case that may come before him, took the excited gentleman in hand, and learned from him the following:

Three years before the gentleman had been boarding with his wife and two daughters, in a fashionable house up town. At that time the "child," now lost, was sixteen years old, and her sister was twenty-six. Among the boarders were two Spanish families. These Spanish families had Spanish visitors. The male portion of the Spanish visitors took a great fancy to the gentleman's youngest daughter, and one of them evidently wanted to marry her. This filled the girl's parents with horror. "I'd as soon she'd marry a negro," said the father.

Finally, in order to get rid of the Spaniards, the gentleman went to house keeping; but he had constantly been haunted with the fear and the belief that some of the Spaniards had kept up a communication with his youngest daughter, and he knew now that they had, for his daughter had that very day fled to Cuba. On pretense that she wanted some ribbons and collars to wear to a matinee at two o'clock in the afternoon, she had got her mother to go shopping for her; she had then got her sister in a front chamber, and when a carriage drove up to the door, at half-past eleven A. M., she had rushed out and locked the chamber door, run down and had a man come up and get her trunk, which was packed, had put on her hat and mantilla, and as her sister (who had crawled through a window to a closet adjoining the chamber, and thence made her way down stairs,) appeared at the front door the girl had exclaimed, as she entered the carriage, which immediately drove away,

"Good bye, sister! I'm off for Cuba."

Word was at once sent down town to her father, who immediately rushed for the Havana steamer, but it had sailed; and now here he was at Police Headquarters, appealing to Mr. Kennedy to recover his child.

"Your child, as you call her, seems to be a young lady of nineteen," said Mr. Kennedy, as the father kept repeating that term.

"But she is a mere child for all that," replied the father, "mere child, a helpless child!"

"Humph!" said Mr. Kennedy, who thought that a girl who could manage such an escapade as had just been detailed to him was anything but a helpless child. In fact, he had already made up his mind that the girl had not gone to Cuba, but he kept his own counsel, and sent the father away with the assurance that every effort possible should be made to find his daughter and restore her to her home.

Mr. Kennedy at once detailed two men to work up the case, which, of course, they knew just how to handle. Going to the livery stable nearest the girl's residence they began their inquiries there, and from that point circled out, and out, and out, until they found the stable where she had obtained the carriage, which was about half a mile distant from her father's house. She had ordered the carriage five days in advance, with strict injunctions that it should arrive at the door precisely at half-past eleven, and not a moment sooner or later. That morning she had been to the stable again to repeat her instructions, and to request that a second man should be sent with the carriage to bring down her trunk without the least delay. Smart girl.

The next thing was to examine the driver. His story was short and simple. He had driven to the Havana steamer and deposited his passenger and baggage on the wharf, in the usual way, and there he had left them. The next thing was to ascertain what policeman had charge of the steamer wharf on the day the steamer sailed. This was done. The policeman remembered that young lady came there a short time before the steamer sailed, and requested him to keep her trunk in charge while she went on board the vessel to see if her friends had arrived with whom she was going to Havana. The policeman had put a man in charge of the trunk and then assisted the young lady to go on board. When the signal "all ashore" was sounded, she came back and told him that her friends had got evidently belated, as they had not arrived, and therefore she would be obliged to him if he would call a hack for her to return home in. He called a hack, she entered it, her trunk was put aboard, and she was driven away.

This showed that Mr. Kennedy's shrewdness had penetrated the young lady's clever game at the start.

The next step was to find the hackman who had driven her away. This was done in the course of the next day, it being the third since the search had commenced. The hackman remembered all about his part in the matter. He had taken the young lady to the Girard House. On inquiry at the Girard House it was found that a young lady answering to the description of the fugitive had taken a room there on that day and hour specified. Was she there still? She was. She had not been out since her arrival. She had taken her meals in her room, and no one had called to see her. But now an imperative call was made, and the lady was taken in a close carriage to Police Headquarters.

Mr. Kennedy then heard her story. She said:

"My father is a hard, harsh man, my mother is an angel, and my sister is a shrew. She and my father have always treated me as a child. They would never treat me as a woman. They insulted me in that way beyond endurance, and I burst away from home, not knowing what I should do nor what would become of me, nor did I care. Anything—even death itself—was better than the life I led at home."

Mr. Kenedy questioned her about the Spaniards. She knew nothing about them. She had not heard from any of them for years; but she remembered how jealous of them her father and sister were, and how her sister used to take her away from the boarding house piano when they would gather around to hear her sing, and that was what put it into her head to pretend that she was going to Cuba. She knew they would believe she had gone there, and so would be thrown completely off the track.

She didn't know whether she'd go home or not. If she could be treated like a woman, and emancipated from her sister's tyranny, she would; but if not, then she wouldn't.

The father was sent for, and after a thorough indoctrination as to his paternal duty, he was permitted to take his daughter home to her mother. Being treated thenceforth like a woman, and not like a "child," she remained at home until she made a romantic marriage, the story of which is as interesting as that of her previous flight.

We have told this girl's story for the purpose of showing what fatal mistakes may be made with children when parents do not take the trouble to study their nature nor to look rationally into their environment, for the purpose of seeing just what influences are operating on them. This is an excellent case for parents to consider, because it is a representative one. It is a representative of the blindness and blundering of parents, and also of the unexpected and unheeded hunger of a daughter's heart. It brings us back again to the everlasting starting point of our common human nature. If parents would only squarely and honestly ask themselves what their own hearts demanded when they were young, or even what their hearts demand now that they are old or middle aged, they would have but little difficulty in understanding what the hearts of their children also demand in respect to all the mutterings therein touched upon.

Love, and the entanglements and disturbances flowing therefrom, are a fruitful source of domestic hostility and eventual destruction of children. A daughter has a lover who is repugnent to her parents; a son falls in love with some girl whom his father or his mother can not tolerate; complications, irritations, quarrels and estrangements follow, leaving scathed and embittered hearts to curse the lives and perhaps to destroy the souls of those whom a little Christianity might have sent forth laden with blessings from the parental roof.

Whenever a case of this kind arises in a family the parents should at once pointedly understand that the only part they have to enact in the matter is that of God's vicegerent, and that their own selfish, personal wishes are in no manner to be regarded. The eternal welfare of their son's or their daughter's soul must be their everlasting objective, and the point on which all their forces must be concentrated. Let them remember how it was with them in such matters when they were young, and sympathize with their children, and treat them kindly and respectfully, and avoid every appearance of harshness and tyranny, and they will be able to lead them with a silken thread where they could not drag them with a cable.

To sum up the whole matter: Young people are sent to the devil by lack of sympathy, by lack of understanding, by lack of study of children's natures, by lack of devotion to children's welfare, by selfishness, bigotry, cruelty and tyranny on the part of parents. In short, by whatever makes the human fatherhood the reverse of the Divine Fatherhood.

Always a Hypocrite.

Yes, that is the cry; he has sinned and fallen, and now you say, "He was always a hypocrite."

I do not believe it. I can not believe that through all the years in which he professed to follow Christ he was a traitor to his Master. I pity the heart that can readily credit such a tale.

The poor old man has sinned and fallen. God pity him, for man's sympathy is full of scorn. How eagerly they whisper the sad story, and gloat over the shameful details as though a brother's fall was a cause for rejoicing! The angels—the pure angels weep, while frail man looks on with scorn.

True, they close the tale with "I pity him," yet their sympathy goes no further; and they add, "but I always believed him to be a hypocrite."

Is not his present shame enough, that all the good of his past life should be counted as naught, or as the cunning acting of a confirmed villain?

"Always a hypocrite!" David fell, Solomon sinned, and Peter denied his Master thrice; yet who will say these were "always hypocrites?"

I do not know this poor old man, though I have seen him often as he served in the church of God; and now, when the story of his shame is on every tongue, my heart bleeds to think of him, as, disgraced and deserted, he hides in the solitude of his home, moaning and weeping in impotent remorse for the sin which has stamped a Cain-mark on his brow. God help thee, brother; and in thine agony find room for gratitude, that through thy sinful, erring brethren cast thee off, God, the pure, the Almighty, heeds thy repentance, and will forgive thy sin. "For I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."

And you who join in the hiss which pierces the lacerated heart, pause and look at yourself. What has kept you from falling? Perhaps you were not tempted. Then thank God for that, and strive to help those who were. Or, being tempted, you fled to the Source of strength and found power to resist. Then be grateful, and assist those of weaker faith.

Proud Pharisee, despise not thy brother. Look deeply into the recesses of thine heart, and mark well the points of weakness, which, if attacked in an unguarded hour, might prove vulnerable; and humble thyself in the dust, thanking God, not that thou art "not as other men," but that He has supported thy weakness, and guarded thee from "the sin that doth so easily beset."

And ye, young lambs of the flock, who in your innocent purity can scarcely believe that such iniquity abounds, and penetrates even into the Church of Jesus, while your tears and prayers are fervently offered for the sinning and suffering, nestle closely to the Shepherd's bosom and entreat that He will "lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil."—Presbyterian.

Minding.

"Charlie, come in; I want you," said a sweet, womanly voice to a little boy who was playing marbles on the sidewalk in front of a nice brick house.

Now Charles was very busy, and in the midst of a delightful game. He was as happy as could be. To quit his play then was like quitting the table when half through dinner. Would he obey? We looked with interest to see what he would do. What would you have done?

Charlie replied, "Yes, mother," and picking up his marbles, started off with a smiling face and a bounding step up the side yard, and in at the end door of the house. A fine boy that, I thought, as I looked after him. I wonder who he is? What a beautiful thing it must be to have a little boy or girl that will mind at once, and with a happy, loving heart! I wondered what would become of that boy, and wished to see more of him and learn his history.

I used to walk past that house every week, and always thought of that blue-eyed, light-haired boy. The thought of him made me happy. I saw a great many naughty children. Once I spent two or three days in trying to find a naughty boy who ran away from his home and overwhelmed his parents with grief; and when I found him some one had stolen his coat, and hat, and bundle of clothes, and all the money he had. Once I chased after a truant boy and girl for several hours, and at last, late at night, found them in the woods, wet through, cold and frightened almost to death. They had disobeyed their mother and gone to play instead of going to school, and both of them were sick for several weeks in consequence of their folly and exposure. A boy that minds—he is a jewel.

I had been in business a year or two, and in that time had had several boys; but it was next to impossible to find one that would mind. At last I was quite out of patience, and I determined that I would have no one who could not bring the best recommendation and stand the closest test. Several applied for the place, but no one suited us. At last came a blue-eyed, flaxen-haired youth of twelve years, with a bright, honest face. There was something engaging in his aspect. Had I seen him before? What is your name?

"Charlie Warren, sir. I live in Franklin street. My father is a carpenter, but is lame now, and can not work, and I have got mother's consent to go into a store, if I can find a place."

It was the very Charlie whom I had seen playing at marbles. I remembered the circumstance, and knew that he would mind. I did not need a recommendation for him, but gave him the place, and twice as much pay as I had promised to give.

Charlie came to work on Monday morning. It seemed hard for him the first week of work, but he behaved like a man. The boys in the next store came in and made his acquaintance. One morning I heard two of them trying to persuade Charlie to go off with them down on the wharves in the forenoon and see a boat race that was to come off. "No," said Charlie, "mother told me to mind my business, and I am paid for staying here, and don't think it right to go off without my employer's knowing it."

That was a brave word, and I thought more of Charlie than ever.

That was ten years ago. He has been with me ever since, and proved to be the best clerk I ever had. Yesterday we put up a new sign, and on it, in large gilt letters, was Charlie's full name. The store is his own. He is now a prosperous, promising young man, and if he lives will be a rich, honored man. And all this because one bright morning he minded his mother when she called him. From such little things do great results come. Always mind, and it will be always well with you.—Ladies' Repository.

TRANSPLANTING FOREST TREES.—Shortly before cold, freezing wheather sets in, I take my tools and wagon, with as much horse manure with me as I think I shall need, select and dig around my tree, letting from one to two and a half feet of ground stand all around the tree—small trees need but little, large ones more. Dig a trench straight down some ten or twelve inches, then undermine the tree to the extent of one half of the block of ground, and in digging under keep digging down, so as to have the ground at the tree near the shape of the half of an egg. Now fill this trench about three parts full of the horse manure. Next take the measure of the diameter of the tree's base, then dig holes sufficiently large for all the trees so prepared. Fill these also with manure, but be sure to leave some good mellow ground in the hole to use when planting. Next, when frozen and there is a solid ball, we throw out the manure, then with a strong lever, pry out the tree, roll it upon a sled or truck, convey to the already dug hole, clean out the manure and some unfrozen ground, slide in the tree, fill up tight. I have never had a tree to miss growing when thus planted. It is no easy matter to dig a large hole in the ground when the same is frozen to the depth of three feet.

REMOVING TAN.—Tan may be removed from the face by mixing magnesia in soft water to the consistency of paste which should then be spread on the face and allowed to remain a minute or two. Then wash off with castile soap suds, and rinse with soft water.

The Opelousas Railroad Suit.

PRESIDENT SEGER A WITNESS.

TESTIMONY OF JUDGE ROBERTSON.

Assets and Liabilities.

In the United States District Court, the case of James T. Tucker and others against the Opelousas Railroad Company, seeking to force that corporation into bankruptcy, was taken up yesterday. Messrs. E. C. Billings and Fellowes and Grant for petitioners, and Messrs. Cohen, Stone, Judge Robertson, Miles Taylor and H. J. Leovy for the defense—Mr. Taylor appearing more particularly in behalf of the interest of Mr. Charles Morgan, who is a large holder of the bonds of the road, and has instituted suit against the company in one of the State Courts for over $200,000, and Mr. Leovy, as City Attorney, representing the city, which is also largely interested in the bonds of the road.

Mr. A. B. Seger, President of the road, was introduced by Mr. Cohen as a witness, to show by telegrams and a letter from New York that negotiations were at this time going on for the sale of the road to Northern capitalists, represented by Mr. Adams, of New York, and General Fremont. Mr. Seger corroborated Mr. Bayley's testimony as to Mr. Morgan's desire and interest to have the road extended to Texas (the Sabine river). Mr. Morgan, he said, had declared that he would never disturb the road, unless compelled to do so for the protection of his own interests, involving $370,000 worth of the bonds of the road. He has a contract with the company for transportation over the road till 1871. He detailed the contract. Among other things, Mr. Morgan pledged himself to make two trips a week with his boats from Brashear to Galveston, and one to Sabine.

Judge Robertson, a director of the road appointed by Governor Baker, testified to the fact that Mr. W. S. Pike and various parties, in the interest of the road, went North last summer (before the Presidential election) to effect a lease or sale of the road. Capitalists said they would not invest unless General Grant was elected, although satisfied it would certainly be the best paying stock in the country as long as the country was quiet. There were now other propositions, besides that through Mr. Adams, before the company, among them one from Messrs. Chouteau & Price, of St. Louis.

Judge Robertson gave the following statement of the assets and liabilities of the road:

ASSETS.

|---|---|
| Road from Algiers to Berwick's Bay, with culverts, grading, etc. | $3,840,000 |
| Debt due by the United States | 360,000 |
| Net earnings from the United States due up to July, 1863 | 28,000 |
| Earned from the United States since July, 1863 | 200,000 |
| Debts due by the city | 60,000 |
| Debts due by the parishes | 26,000 |
| Debts due by the State | 550,000 |
| Total | $5,194,000 |

LIABILITIES.

|---|---|
| First mortgage bonds | $1,987,000 |
| Second mortgage bonds | 40,000 |
| Interest due | 578,000 |
| Due the United States | 30,000 |
| Other liabilities | 20,000 |
| Total | $2,655,000 |

Judge Robertson said he believed the road to be one of the best in the United States. It is in perfect running order. No one has been killed or maimed on the road in fifteen years.

This closed the testimony, whereupon the argument was commenced by Mr. Grant, of counsel for Mr. Tucker, and was to be resumed by him this morning.

The One Per Cent Tax.

SEVENTH DISTRICT COURT INJUNCTIONS.

Petition of the Taxpayers.

Injunctions restraining certain Tax Collectors from proceeding under the one per cent tax have already been issued from the Seventh District Court in the cases of W. H. Letchford, W. T. Hepp, A. B. Griswold & Co., S. N. Moody & Co., E. A. Tyler. I. R. Haggerty, and others, plaintiffs, through Messrs. Campbell, Spofford & Campbell. All of these, and others in the same court, resist the payment of the tax, and the following is the petition in the case;

The petition of the taxpayer, a resident and citizen of New Orleans, Louisiana, respectfully shows:

That the tax collector for the district in said city has served upon your petitioner a special notice, requiring petitioner to call at his office and pay a tax of (amount named), it being called "one per cent State tax as per act No. 114 of the Legislature, approved September 29, 1868," and threatening petitioner with a seizure and sale of property in default of payment of said tax within ten days, as will more fully appear by said notice, which is annexed hereto as part hereof. Now petitioner avers that said tax is illegal and unconstitutional, and is not due by petitioner; that the so-called act 114 of the Legislature, approved September 29, 1868, is not a law, and is without force and validity; that it was not passed with the forms and solemnities prescribed by the Constitution of Louisiana under which it pretended to have been passed; that its pretended passage was in violation of article forty-two of said constitution; that it was not read in each House on three several days; and that four-fifths of each House which pretended to pass it, did not order a dispensation of the constitutional rule requiring such reading; that said pretended act 114 is also in contravention of articles 110 and 118 of the State Constitution aforesaid; that it is retroactive and forbidden; that it attempts to impose a taxation not equal and uniform, and to tax property not in proportion to its value, to be ascertained as directed by law; that for the foregoing and other reasons to be shown on the trial, the said pretended act 114, approved September 29, 1868, is unconstitutional, null and void, and the tax demanded by said collector from petitioner, by virtue thereof, is not due, and is, but is an unauthorized, unlawful and oppressive exaction. Petitioner shows that notwithstanding he verily fears and believes that unless restrained by a writ of injunction the said tax collector will proceed immediately to seize and sell the property of your petitioner, as he threatens to do, for the purpose of compelling the payment of said illegal and unconstitutional tax to petitioner's irreparable injury. Wherefore petitioner brings this suit and prays your honor, after considering the premises, and the annexed affidavit, to fix the amount of bond of petitioner, and to order that an injunction thereupon issue restraining and inhibiting the said tax collector from proceeding to seize and sell any of petitioner's property for the payment of said pretended tax.

The foot race between E. D. Davis, of New York, and J. W. Cozad, of Iowa, for the championship of America, one hundred and twenty-five yards, for $4,000, took place on the Fashion course, Long Island, Monday; Davis winning in eleven and a half yards.

THE OPELOUSAS RAILROAD CASE.

Argument of Miles Taylor.

MR. GRANT VINDICATES TUCKER.

THE PERSONAL MOTIVES CONTRASTED.

The argument to put or not to put the New Orleans, Opelousas and Great Western Railroad in bankruptcy was continued yesterday by Miles Taylor, who represents Charles Morgan, the latter having brought suit in the Sixth District (a State court) to foreclose a mortgage held by him in the shape of $240,000 of bonds and coupons against the road. Mr. Taylor confined his argument in the following propositions—First, that the road is not in a bankrupt condition. Second, that no acts of bankruptcy were committed; no fraudulent preferences were made by the payment of two coupon holders named in plaintiff's petition. Third, that the suit of Charles Morgan in the Sixth District Court, did not necessarily show an insolvent condition of the road. The principal portion of his argument was directed to the discussion of the legal proposition, "whether it was contemplated by the framers of the bankrupt act to include railroad corporations among those capable of committing acts of bankruptcy." He concluded by paying tribute to the great worth of Charles Morgan "his noble disinterestedness in the welfare of the city of New Orleans," and his long and studied efforts to promote those interests. He referred particularly to the fact that wherever the channels of trade were attempted to be diverted from this city. Charles Morgan, by his interests, sufficiently controlled so as to secure it.

Mr. Taylor was followed by Mr. William Grant, of the firm of Fellowes & Grant, attorneys for James T. Tucker. He stated that from the remarks which had fallen from the lips of counsel on the opposite side, the motives of Mr. Tucker were sought to be impugned, and that instead of a desire to have this road sold to responsible parties, and then built, he was actuated, perhaps, by selfish aims. Mr. Grant combatted this idea, saying "that from the recent enterprises of Mr. Tucker for the welfare of this city, and from his known large interests in the shipment of cattle over this road to supply the great West, his record stood as well as that of Mr. Charles Morgan, whom the people of this city knew was, by the exorbitant charges made for the shipment of freight on his steamers, and by his contract with the road, stipulating to receive three-fourths of the freight money earned, destroying the interests of the city, and diverting trade to other channels. He compared the position occupied by Mr. Morgan in so zealously defending this suit to that of the wolf, who, having destroyed the lamb, says, "My motives are pure, my thoughts are sincere, and I meant no harm." That the idea of Mr. Morgan appearing in this suit as defending the interests of the people of New Orleans, and of his known intention to build this gap in the road, is something that would strike the mind of the people of this city as certainly ludicrous, to say nothing more. On the other hand, Mr. Tucker had given positive assurances that this road should be built at no matter what cost, and without fear of incurring the enmity of a few. He said this was the home of Mr. Tucker, all his interests were here, that every dollar he represented was to be used in the prosperity of this city and the welfare of its people; that he (Mr. Tucker) saw unless some step of this kind was taken, time would be frittered away and the great trade of Texas lost; that he had no interest in the Southern Pacific Railroad, no desire to have that road built, and that his object was to call the attention of capitalists to the importance of having this road finished before other roads were built which would destroy us and his interests. Competition will be free. The sale will be immediate; those who desire to purchase will have ample opportunity. He concluded by saying that his client was willing to let the people of New Orleans judge between his motives and that of his opponent.

Mr. Billings, attorney for Paul A. Conant, will close the argument to-day, on behalf of his client, one of the petitioners.

We adopt the Times' report of this and other court cases.

Louisiana Revenue Frauds.

The following extract from the Washington correspondence of the New York Tribune of the twenty-fifth ultimo, concerning the official malfeasance of some of the Democratic carpet-baggers with whom this State is blessed, will prove interesting:

Mr. C. E. Creecy, who has several years been Appointment Clerk of the Treasury Department, was appointed to-day Supervisor of Internal Revenue of the district comprising Louisiana and Arkansas. This appointment was a surprise to the Louisiana "Internal Revenue Ring." Perry Fuller, the present Collector of the port of New Orleans, was here several weeks ago, representing the "Ring," and attempted to control the Supervisorship for that State. Creecy's appointment is an utter overthrow of his plans. Several months ago a special revenue agent was sent to Louisiana to investigate the workings of the Internal Revenue Bureau there. Strong suspicions of extensive frauds on the revenue in Louisiana have been harbored by Secretary McCulloch and Commissioner Rollins for some time past. The revenue agent who was commissioned to make the examination has sent a deputy here with a report of his investigations as far as made. He discloses the most extensive and barefaced frauds, and implicates nearly all the Government officials in the State. Millions of dollars have been lost to the Government by the dishonesty of its servants. The evidence accompanying the report, which is voluminous, is in the possession of Commissioner Rollins.

In eighteen months time the Government was plundered of $11,000,000 on cotton and whisky alone. During the past year when the tax on whisky was two dollars per gallon, forty distillers in the parish of Orleans were producing at least 20,000 barrels of whisky a month, on which not one cent of tax was paid to the Government. It is alleged that a ring exists, consisting of all the Government officers. This renders it almost impossible to pursue the investigations. The appointment of Mr. Creecy as Supervisor, it is thought, will check the operations of the guilty distillers and tend to bring them to justice. He will leave at once for his post of duty.

A Short Cut to New Orleans.

We copy this from the Nashville (Tenn.) Banner:

We learn that the surveying corps of the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad arrived in Decatur a day or two ago, and began the survey from that point to Aberdeen, Mississippi. It is contemplated to intersect this road with the New Orleans, Jackson and Great Northern Railroad at Canton, Mississippi, and thus connect New Orleans with New York, Philadelphia, Charleston, Savannah, etc., by the shortest and most direct route possible. By this route the distance is shorter, by at least a hundred miles, to either of the above places, than by any other practicable route. The survey of the road is under the superintendence of Major Green, of New Orleans, and we understand it will be completed about Christmas.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE DIAMOND QUO WARRANTO.—This is the closing paragraph of the judgment of Judge Cooley Saturday in favor of Robert Diamond, who wants to perform the duties of Chief of Police:

Construed as I do it, the Metropolitan Police act becomes, if not a model of legislative skill, at least a fair and passably well written enactment. But viewed as a compulsory measure, it is the most bungling and easily evaded law which can be imagined. Looked upon as a whole, there is not a section which is not incompatible with the idea that the city of New Orleans may not refuse to avail herself of the Metropolitan Police and proceed to employ agents selected by herself to perform police duties. On the other hand, sections 9, 22, 27, 29, the most important of the law, and which constitute what is termed indispensable in all statutes of this kind, present insurmountable objection to the theory that the Metropolitan Police act was intended to operate absolutely, and without their consent, upon every portion of the Metropolitan district.

The writ of quo warranto issued in this case is therefore maintained; and it is ordered, adjudged and declared that Robert E. Diamond be recognized as the legal Chief of Police of the city of New Orleans, and that a writ of injunction issue as prayed for in the petition in this case, commanding George Cain not to interfere with said Robert Diamond in the discharge of his duties as Chief of Police of the city of New Orleans, upon said Diamond giving bond and security, conditioned as the law requires, in the sum of $2000; and further, that said George Cain pay all costs of this proceeding.

LIBEL SUIT.—The German Gazette has been sued for ten thousand dollars damages by Mr. G. W. Lyman, for an alleged libel contained in a paragraph warning the public against confounding the business establishment of Pothoff & Knight with that of plaintiff's. Suit is instituted in the Seventh District Court, Frank King, Esq., for plaintiff, and Messrs. Braughn and Ogden for defendant.

DESERTED.—A poor woman applied yesterday at the Mayor's office for assistance to enable her to return to her home in Texas. It appears from her story that about two months ago she was a widow with three children, residing in Red River county, Texas, where she owned some property. A man who gave his name as John Ransom, of Mobile, induced her to become his wife, to sell out and go with him to Mobile. In New Orleans he deserted her, leaving her without the means to feed herself and children.

The same woman, with her three children, went to the Third precinct station Saturday night and Sunday night in their distress and destitution, and Captain Bradley rendered such assistance as he could under the limited circumstances of the police. The last property she had went to a landlord for board.

THE HAZLEHURST ROBBERY.—The robbery recently committed at Hazlehurst, Mississippi, is supposed to have been the act of an organized band of robbers, who a few weeks ago were captured at Jackson, Mississippi, in which vicinity they had operated pretty extensively, stealing horses, mules, watches, jewelry, money, etc. It seems they were captured by the military authorities and sent by General Ames to the Penitentiary. Soon after their incarceration they were employed on some public works, along with a number of others, when they evaded the guards and escaped. Nothing has been heard of their whereabouts other than the robbery at Hazlehurst as above stated.

PARAGRAPHS.—The New Orleans German Press has again changed hands. Messrs. M. J. Hauck, P. Pfeiffer & Co. now being the proprietors. Mr. Pfeiffer, of this firm, is the founder of the New Orleans German Gazette.

Yesterday a difficulty occurred in the saloon of the Crescent Billiard Hall between Arthur Guerin and Manuel Gonzalez, one of the barkeepers, in which the former drew a pistol and fired at the latter. The ball grazed the finger of Mr. Gonzalez, grazing the skin. Guerin was arrested and locked up in the First District Station.

On an affidavit made a day or two since one Bordelais was arrested last evening in the Second District, charged with being the accessary to the burglary committed at the corner of Palmyra and Claiborne streets. He is the last of the parties suspected of the burglary who was still at large. The police authorities express themselves competent to substantiate the charge against all the prisoners indicated, who are now in custody.

Gustave Bordelais was arraigned this morning before Recorder Becker and remanded to Parish Prison, in default of bail in the sum of $5000 for appearance to be examined on the charge preferred against him.

The names of P. T. G. Beauregard, G. W. R. Bayley and Colonel Hardie have been suggested in connection with the Board of Engineers proposed to be elected by the Council for the purpose of devising a plan for draining the city and protecting it from overflow.

Captain Woodruff, of the Carrollton police, reports that last evening a man who had probably been drinking too much created a slight disturbance by threatening to cut the throats and clip off the ears of the Judge and District Attorney. The latter drew his pistol to shoot the offender, but a bystander threw his arm up, and he didn't shoot.

THE MANK MAIL ROBBERY.—In the United States District Court, the case of W. G. Mank, of this city, came up yesterday, charged with embezzlement of valuable letters from the United States mails, and gold belonging to the Government, on which charge he was arrested some months ago. It is alleged that the embezzlement, amounting to several thousand dollars, was committed while Mank was in the Postoffice of this city. After his arrest he was released on bail.

The case came up upon a rule, taken by Colonel Field in behalf of Mrs Mank, wife of the accused, upon the United States Marshal, to show cause why certain gold coin and jewelry (rings) which, with several thousand dollars in United States currency, were seized by him, should not be returned to her as her property. Mrs. Mank herself was in court.

Colonel Field inquired for the United States Marshal. Mr. Torrey, United States District Attorney, replied that he represented him.

Colonel Field: What have to say, Mr. Torrey, in answer to the rule?

Mr. Torrey—(addressing the court)—I have to say that this rule of Mrs. Mank is an unheard of and unprecedented proceeding, of which this court can take no more cognizance than I could as a private citizen.

Colonel Field—That is your dodge.

Mr. Torrey—That is my legal dodge.

He added to the court that the money, etc., was seized by virtue of the arrest of the accused, and that the Marshal was the proper custodian. As for the rings, he would restore them to Mrs. Mank.

Judge Durell required the rule to be argued, which was done, and the result was that the gold and rings were ordered to be restored to Mrs. Mank.

INJUNCTION CASE.—The case of O. J. Dunn, President Board of Metropolitan Police Commissioners, on the injunction against Mayor Conway, came up again for argument in the Fifth District Court, this morning, at ten o'clock. Mr. Fileul, one of the counsel for the Board, continued the argument until the hour of eleven, when the case was continued until Thursday next, at 10 A. M.

PROMISSORY NOTE CASE IN THE SUPREME COURT.—The case of Nelligan & Von Zinken vs. George Musbach was appealed from the Fifth District Court, and was instituted to recover $600, alleged to be due on a promissory note, payable on demand. The defendant filed an exception, averring want of amicable demand. The plea of the defense was set aside, and judgment given on the note. The court confirms the decision of the court below, with damages for a frivolous appeal.

SURETIES ON A LEASE IN SUPREME COURT.—The case of Amaron Ledoux vs. A. A. Jones et al., and G. A. Sandford, is an action by plaintiff against the lessee Jones and his sureties, Whitney and Sandford, based on a written contract of lease, to recover of defendants in solido the sum of $3437 50, as balance due on the lease of a dwelling. There was judgment against all the parties, but Sandford alone has appealed. The premises were vacated before the time specified in the lease expired. The plaintiff received the house, but at the same time declared his intention of holding the parties liable for the rent due and to become due. The question for the court to decide is, whether the sureties of this contract of lease have been discharged by any act of the plaintiff.

The sureties are responsible for the acts of the lessee; they bind themselves to become so. If the lessor does no act to produce the abandonment, the principal and sureties are bound by the terms of the contract. See C. C. 668. The law does not, however, require the lessor to enforce his lien against the lessee before the surety can be held liable. On these recognized principles the court below gave judgment for plaintiff, and the decision is confirmed, the court seeing no reason to reverse it.

PETIT ANSE SALT MINES.—We copy the following from the Times of this morning:

We are glad to learn that C. P. Chouteau, Esq., one of the solid men of St. Louis, has just arrived in Louisiana for the purpose of remaining. He has connected himself with the great enterprise of developing the salt mines of Petit Anse, and has brought with him forty expert miners who have had experience in English and other salt works. The great salt deposit at Petit Anse is one of the geological wonders of the world. So large a mass of pure salt has nowhere else been discovered, and the marvel is how it took its rise in the centre of an immense marsh and become so wonderfully pure. The extent of the deposit is practically without limit, and all that is required to give it a value, which can scarcely be expressed by the alphabet of numbers, is a railroad connection with this city and with Texas. We trust that Mr. Chouteau will prove an Alladin, capable of bringing the rich crystalizations of this storehouse of wealth into golden and productive uses. He is well known to be a gentleman of enterprise and intelligence. We welcome him to Louisiana.

DEATHS LAST WEEK.—According to the report of interments in this city, prepared by Dr. G. W. Dirmeyer, Secretary of the Board of Health, the whole number of deaths last week was 107, of which two died of gunshot wounds, one drowned, one burns or scalds, one apoplexy, one congestion of the brain, thirteen consumption one pernicious fever, one intermittent, one brain and two typhoid fever, one heart disease, one old age, one paralysis, five pneumonia, eighteen stillborn, and the balance various diseases.

Two ruffians attacked Mr. Gerard Frazier, a cattle dealer, while on the levee, near the Stock Landing, between two and three o'clock in the morning, knocking him down with a slung-shot, which inflicted a terrible gash upon his head, and then robbing him of $1600. They escaped with their plunder.

The five men, said to be from Chicago, whose arrest under charge of being concerned in recent robberies along the line of the Jackson Railroad was mentioned a few days since, were brought before Judge Abell, of the First District Court, Saturday, on a writ of habeas corpus. The court decided that as the case was still pending in an inferior tribunal, it had no jurisdiction in the matter at the present time. The prisoners were, therfore, remanded to the Parish Prison.

Judge Durell charged the Grand Jury Saturday among other things to rigidly enforce the Civil Rights Bill. The Jury returned a true bill against John Conroy or Connoly, a sailor, for the murder of Captain Low, of the ship Polar Star, while at sea, and a similar bill against Sam Thompson, for the murder of W. L. McCall, on the ship St. James, also on the high seas.

An elderly single gentlemen, whose house, during his absence, had been rented out, returned, and presuming the building still occupied by his relatives, made himself at home and went to bed while the tenants were at the the theatre. The latter returned, found a stranger in the house, and the elderly gentleman was marched off to the calaboose for being found under suspicious circumstances in his own house.

PROPOSED NEW STATE HOUSE.—Messrs. John Ray, A. B. Bacon, J. Wittgenstein, John, Page, C. A. Eiger and Lange were appointed a joint committee by the late Legislature to procure a suitable building for a State House. This committee have, as we learn from the Picayune, concluded an arrangement with the liquidators of the Bank of Louisiana whereby the State leases the banking house at the corner of Conti and Royal streets, and the dwelling-house adjoining on Conti street for one year, at $8000, with the privilege of becoming the purchaser of it, by paying the liquidators for it, at any time before first of April next, the sum of $75,000.

SOME OF THE GAINES'S ESTATE.—In the Supreme Court the case of Duncan N. Hennen vs. the New Orleans and Carrollton Railroad Company was appealed from the Fifth District Court. It was instituted to recover back the price of several lots of ground purchased by plaintiff from defendant in 1844. By a decree of the Supreme Court of the United States, the property has been adjudged to belong to Mrs. Myra Clark Gaines, and the plaintiff was ordered to restore them to her, with the fruits and resources since 1844. In a supplemental petition, plaintiff also demanded the reimbursement of such sums as he might be adjudged to pay Mrs. Gaines for the rents and profits of the lots since the same were in his possession. An exception was taken in the court below to this supplemental petition and rule filed for a detailed account. The plaintiff not complying with these orders, the case was dismissed. From this judgment the appeal is taken, because plaintiff had no notice of the time fixed for hearing the rule. On this ground, the judgment of the court below is reversed, and proceedings ordered to be had in the court below not inconsistent with this opinion.

PARAGRAPHS.—The Grand Jury yesterday found a true bill against William Blevins for the murder of Officer Gebhardt, on the fifth ultimo.

SWINDLING OPERATION.—A. S. Sterritt, of Lancaster, Styles county, Missouri, was yesterday swindled out of one hundred and thirty dollars by a confidence man, who gave his name as White, and is supposed to be a "roper in" on the levee.

It seems Mr. S. was returning home from an absence of three years on the frontier. Meeting White, the latter scraped up an acquaintance, and claimed to be an old friend. He pretended to be purchasing goods in the city, and seemed very anxious to get a draft cashed at the office of the steamer Louisville. Mr. Sterrit was going up on her, and White determined they should make the trip together.

Last evening he succeeded in borrowing the above-mentioned amount and started ashore, apparently with the intention of paying his bills. When the hour came for the Louisville to leave, the gentle stranger was not on board. Mr. Sterrit, seeing he had been swindled, also stopped, and the matter was laid before the police.

STABBING AFFAIR.—About half-past three o'clock yesterday a difficulty took place between Frank Meyers and Joseph H. Centeno, both engaged in painting the house of Mrs. Govaia, on Goodchildren street, during which Meyers was cut and wounded in the left side with a bowie-knife. Mr. Meyers was taken to his residence, No. 191 Spain street. Centeno was arrested. Dr. Cooper, Police Surgeon, who is attending the wounded man, says he will recover.

ARRESTED FOR ARSON.—Daniel Meyers, a youth about eighteen years of age, was arrested Sunday morning, suspected of having on Friday evening, set fire to the clothing store No. 36 Girod street.

The officers who examined the premises shortly after the flames were extinguished, state that three piles of fat pine were found under the counter, all of them charred, and wearing the appearance of having been lighted.

The property, stock, furniture and kitchen utensils were insured in the Germania office for $9000. The affair has created considerable excitement among the friends of the accused, and the probabilities of a conviction are much canvassed. The arrest was made by Captain White, Chief of the detectives.

THE COUNTERFEITERS.—The three parties, Antoine Gregora and his wife and Mary Valcour, were taken before United States Commissioner Warren yesterday, who committed them to the Parish Prison in default of bail in the sum of $2000 each, for passing and coining counterfeit nickels. Gregora was in the Parish Prison some time since for alleged murder. But he was not convicted.

ARRESTED FOR MUTINY.—George Washington and John Lee were arrested yesterday by Deputy United States Marshal Ward, for alleged mutiny on the steamer Glide, a Red river packet, on her way down to New Orleans. They were deck hands, and attempted to prevent the other men on the boat from working, and were generally insubordinate. They were committed to the Parish Prison for examination before United States Commissioner Warren.

DROWNING A BOY DECLARED EXCUSABLE HOMICIDE.—William Anderson, commonly called Henderson, was tried in the First District Court yesterday by a jury, and acquitted of the charge of manslaughter. He was accused of drowning a boy named Holsen in July last. Anderson was employed on a schooner moored in the lower part of the Third District, and having stripped had jumped overboard to bathe in the Mississippi. Holsen, who was a stripling, mischievously hid his clothes, and when the swimmer climbed up on deck he was unable to find any portion of his apparel except his hat. The boy finally brought the clothes from their hiding place, when, much exasperated by the delay, Anderson pushed him over the schooner's side. The boy clung to the rail, but Anderson tore his hold loose. Holsen then dropped headlong upon a staging used by the carpenter, and rolling off into the current was drowned before anybody could rescue him, although several persons jumped overboard to save him. It was supposed he was stunned by the concussion of his fall on the staging. Proof was adduced that the boy was well known as an excellent swimmer, and all the witnesses gave it as their belief that Anderson merely intended to punish him with a good ducking for his prank of hiding the clothes. The jury considered the act excusable homicide.

SHOOTING A THIEF AFTER THE RACES.—The Crescent reports that yesterday, just after the conclusion of the races, an affair occurred in which was shown one of the most prominent examples of swift justice that we have ever heard of. It commenced at one of the roulette tables in the gambling room. A gentleman was standing at it playing, when one of the men in charge of the table observed a hand stealing into the vest pocket of the player, and in a moment a five dollar bill was deftly extracted. The pickpocket was at once seized and rather roughly handled by the various inmates of the room, gamblers and others.

After being pretty badly beaten the thief made a burst and darted out of one of the doors. He was pursued and three shots fired after him—by whom nobody knows. He was struck by one of them in the back, near the hip, when he fell, and somebody picked him up and carried him outside of the gate of the track, where he lay for some time. He was finally removed.

ROBBING A PEDDLER.—Three women, occupying a hovel on Burgundy street, between Bienville and Conti, named Harriet Russell, Jennie Thompson and Virginia Davis, were tried yesterday and found guilty of robbing a peddler and unmercifully beating him to boot. The peddler, one Maurice Samuel, was passing along Burgundy street one day, with his pack containing stockings, thread, buttons, etc., when one of the hags called him in to examine his wares. He had no sooner opened his pack than the woman called her two associates, and all three sprung at him like tigresses, beat, bruised and scratched him, and finally drove him from the premises minus two dollars in greenbacks, two dozen pairs of children's and one of women's stockings, each valued at six dollars, and a quantity of lesser articles.

SUICIDE OF A YOUNG GIRL.—Monday evening, Minnie Gray, a handsome but wayward young girl of seventeen years of age, drowned herself by jumping into the river below the Barracks. She was said to have been quite respectably connected and to have been driven from home for her first shameful conduct in life. About a year ago, as report goes, she became fascinated with a circus bare-back rider, and letting her fancy manifest itself, was sought out by the rider and finally eloped with him. Shortly after she returned to the city alone and voluntarily became an inmate of a house of illfame, adopting the name of Minnie Gray as a disguise for the true one. Her body was found by a ship captain.

SECOND DISTRICT COURT.—A petition for the interdiction of Anthony Fernandez has been filed in the Second District Court, on the grounds set forth as follows: "That he, for a year past, and in all probability will continue to be in such a state of mental and physical debility as to be altogether unable to attend to his personal wants, and still less to the property which belongs to him, so much so that it becomes absolutely necessary that he be interdicted, and that his person and property be put under the control of a curator." Being summoned to appear, the time in which he is to answer the petition, ten days from the twenty-eighth of November, has not yet elapsed.

EX-SHERIFF AVERY TO GET BONDS.—It appears that Judge Leaumont, in deciding the case of George W. Avery vs. William S. Mount, made peremptory the mandamus taken out by the former, commanding the City Treasurer to pay him the amount claimed, or rather to pay him a sufficient number of the million bonds to cover the total amount of the warrants in the hands of the relator, amounting to $37,280 92. Yesterday a rule for a new trial was dismissed. J. H. New for plaintiff Avery; I. N. Lea for defendant.

METROPOLITAN POLICE INJUNCTION ON DIAMOND.—It is ordered that O. J. Dunn show cause to morrow why the injunction herein issued should not be set aside and dissolved with five thousand dollars special damages.

SUPREME COURT.—In the case of John Bird vs. the heirs of Henry Doyal, deceased, the judgment of the Sixth District Court, decision of Judge Duplantier, has been affirmed. The decision of the Supreme Court is rendered by Associate Justice Taliaferro, and relates to a promissory note and the question of indorsement, notice, protest, etc.

The same Justice also read an opinion of the Court, affirming the decision of the Sixth District Court in the case of Mrs. Armide E. Fritz (widow Vogel) vs. A. Richard and others, involving points touching Confederate money, the use of which is not sanctioned by the Court, as being a treasonable currency.

The case of Abraham Myres, executor of D. E. Twiggs, vs. John Mitchell, is appealed from the Third District Court, and is brought against the indorser of six promissory notes for $50 each, executed by William J. Castell in 1860.

The Court reassert their former opinion, and dismiss the appeal with costs, as in the preceding case.

FIRES.—A fire was reported at half-past ten o'clock yesterday on the roof of a two-story kitchen on Casacalvo street, between Mandeville and Spain streets, caused by a defective chimney.

About half-past twelve this morning a fire was reported in the grocery store corner of Dumaine and Derbigny streets, kept by Patrick Hayes, and owned by Mr. François. Origin of the fire supposed to be explosion of coal oil or incendiarism. Building and stock completely destroyed. Insured.

A fire was reported about one o'clock this morning in the partition of millinery stores of Mrs. R. Loch and Mary Reyff, Nos. 531 and 533 Magazine street, Hasting's Block. Building insured and slightly damaged. Stock considerably damaged.

PARAGRAPHS.—Three hundred petit jurors names have been drawn from the jury-box and are summoned to appear in the First District Court on Monday morning next.

The receipts of internal revenue in this (First) District of Louisiana during the month of November past amounted to $60,704 50.

About two o'clock yesterday afternoon a colored man, named Joseph Balter, fell from the second story of a house on Dauphin street, which he was painting. He was very seriously injured, and was taken to his home in the Third District.

The Finance Committee of the Board of Aldermen have recommended retrenchment in the city's expenses and stoppage of further contracts.

The steamer Magenta, Captain Hicks, arrived yesterday from Memphis with 4028 bales of cotton, the largest load of the fleecy staple brought to this port this season and the largest since the war.

About six o'clock last evening, a cabman, number of cab unknown, drove over a boy ten years old, named Michael Carpenter. The boy was taken to his residence, No. 13 St. Ferdinand street, near where it happened. The driver was not arrested and we are not advised as to the extent of the boy's injuries.

Jackson Railroad passenger trains now leave the depot, foot of Calliope street, at 7 A. M. and 5½ P. M., and arrive at 6 A. M. and 1:55 P. M. Travelers and persons expecting the arrival of friends will note this.

Yesterday Officer Metz arrested Joseph Roy, on a warrant from the Recorder's court, charged by William B. Eatau with having set fire to a vacant tenement house belonging to him, on the night of the tenth instant. He was supposed to have been incited to the act by revenge, having been put out of the house in default of rent.

The residence of Mr. H. J. Alston, on Tonti street, near the corner of Canal, was entered Monday night by some unknown persons and robbed of a quantity of wearing apparel, some silver plate and a gold watch. An entrance was effected through the front door by means of an outsider, and an escape made in the same way.

Only two offers for exchange of bonds were made up to yesterday, as advertised for by the Board of Commissioners of the consolidated debts of New Orleans. One of the offers was to exchange four bonds of $1000 each, for consolidated bonds at $750 per bond. The other to exchange for three consolidated bonds of $1000. The offers were rejected by the Board.

The Board of Aldermen have adopted a resolution instructing the Surveyor to place in perfect condition, at once, all the levees and wharves of the whole city front. Some of the wharves are said to be slipping into the river. The Surveyor estimates that the work will cost $20,000.

A difficulty occurred on the schooner Firefly yesterday between two sailors, named Thomas Oats and John Gray, which resulted in the latter being dangerously not mortally wounded by a knife in the hands of the former. As soon as the stabbing was done the assailant leaped ashore and succeeded in making his escape, while the wounded man was taken to the hospital and his injuries cared for by a physician.

Andrew Grove, a German, took lodging at No. 16 St. Philip street, between Levee and Chartres. He had with him $175 in greenbacks, and this upon retiring Monday night he placed under his pillow. His roommate, Henry Rosenblack, was the only man Grove states that knew where the money was placed. At any rate in the morning the money was gone. Rosenblack meanwhile had arisen and gone out, but was subsequently met by Grove at the Postoffice. There Grove had Rosenblack arrested and brought to the station. Rosenblack was searced at the station, but the money was not found.

The boy, Michael Carpenter, run over by a cab, was not dangerously hurt.

Jack Toby, whose occupation is recorded on the police books as a thief, was arrested last night by Officer King. Toby insulted the officer, who afterward floored the belligerent fellow and had him locked up. Recorder Gastinel gave Toby the option of ten dollars or ten days parish prison to teach him better manners.

About five o'clock yesterday morning the residence of Alfred Kearny, 159 Prytania street, was entered and robbed of silver plated ware to the value of about $150.

John Williams was arrested between one and two o'clock this morning on St. Charles street, for attempting to rob a drunken man of a gold watch. Moral: Men who carry gold watches should not get drunk.

Officer Miller reports at two o'clock this morning the City Hotel as a nuisance for allowing its waterclosets to flow into the public streets.

THE CITY COUNCIL.

Board of Aldermen.

President Markey in the chair, last evening.

Mr. Kaiser introduced the old Market ordinance in place of the one previously adopted. It was adopted unanimously.

Mr. Prados moved a reconsideration and offered an amendment to the second section requiring purchasers to pay one-twelfth in cash in United States currency and the notes in same as they fall due. The ordinance was adopted without the amendment.

Mr. Kaiser opposed this on the ground that it would be equivalent to repudiation.

Mr. Shields made retraction of some remarks at previous meeting on the conduct of the Finance Committee, which remarks Mr. Poynot kindly assured him had been forgotten.

A resolution by Mr. Prados was adopted, instructing Mr. Mingle, Superintendent of the Fire Alarm Telegraph, to extend the lines to the depot of the Orleans Railroad, on Laharpe street, between White street and Gentilly Road.

Mr. Shields, from the special Waterworks Committee, reported an ordinance for the protection of the works, and checking abuses and waste of the water used by the city. The ordinance was adopted and sent to the other Board. It contains merely police regulations, with fines and penalties for interfering with the works or wasting the water.

The claim of Mr. Brisolara for $600 for damages to his confectionery during the political disturbances prior to the Presidential election, in consequence of the destruction of his confectionery, was considered, and a resolution of the Lower Board to allow him $300 in United States currency, was called up.

Mr. Shields said if the destruction occurred under the regime of the Metropolitan Police, over which the city had no control, the city was not responsible, and he was therefore opposed to allowing the claim.

That police, he said, was a State institution, and the State, and not the city, was responsible.

The matter was laid over subject to call.

A communication was received from the Property Holders' Association, protesting against the three million bond ordinance, which was to have been voted on this coming Saturday.

Mr. Shields, author of the ordinance, offered a resolution to postpone the election for the present. Adopted and sent to the Lower Board.

The Finance Committee presented a resolution authorizing the issue of $1,500,000 in bonds, bearing five per cent interest, to the liquidators of the affairs of the Commercial Bank in settlement for the Waterworks. Adopted finally.

A resolution was also adopted providing for the appointment of a committee of two members of each Board, and the chairmen of the respective Finance Committees, to superintend the contract for the printing, engraving, etc., of the bonds.

The two resolutions were sent to the Lower Board.

The Finance Committee offered a resolution to compromise with the heirs of Livaudais, claiming the ground on which the Dryades Market is built, and other rights of property arising therefrom, recommending that they be allowed the lease and revenues of the market for eight years, they to give bond to keep the market in repairs. Lost by the casting vote of the President, but Mr. Poynot gave notice that he would move a reconsideration at the next meeting.

The Board adjourned.

Board of Assistant Aldermen.

President Kearny in the chair.

The Treasurer submitted a report for the week ending on December 28. Receipts $503,172 92; expenditures $22,963 23; balance on hand $480,209 74.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the Superintendent of the Fire Alarm Telegraph to establish a line to the Orleans Railroad depot, on Laharpe street, between White and Gentilly Road.

A resolution was adopted that no more contracts be sold for repairing or paving any streets of the city until after the first day of January next, owing to the critical condition of the financial affairs of the city.

Mr. Pemberton offered a resolution authorizing the Committee on Waterworks to receive proposals for leasing the Waterworks of the city for a number of years, and that the bids therefor be submitted to the Council. Adopted on its second reading by a unanimous vote.

A communication was received from Mr. Samuel Flowers, Secretary of the Board of Directors of the Property Owners' Association, objecting to the issuance of the $3,000,000 bonds, declaring that their issuance will not accomplish the object had in view. That the Legislature would soon be in session again, and it is believed that action will be had by that body which will be more favorable to meet the present financial emergency.

A resolution was received from the Upper Board authorizing the Mayor to discontinue his notice for an election upon the $3,000,000 bonds until further action was taken upon the subject by the Common Council.

Not concurred in.

A resolution from the Upper Board to pay $1,5000,000, in bonds, to the Commercial Bank, in settlement for the City Waterworks.

Referred to the Waterworks Committee.

A petition from the Claiborne Street Railroad Company to build a trunk railroad track on Canal street, from Basin to the head of Canal street, was referred to the joint Committee on Railroads.

Adjourned.

Some ten miles north of Salt Lake City is a boiling sulphur spring. It gushes out in great volume at the foot of a limestone rock, from an aperture as large as a hogshead and a stream that would fill a tube a foot square. The water is very strong, and you can perceive its odor a long time before you reach the spring. It is boiling hot, and strolling Mormons often cook eggs in it.

The great demand for State warrants creates a still further advance. They are gradually approaching a par value.

OFFICIAL.

LAWS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Passed at the Second Session of the Fortieth Congress.

[PUBLIC—No. 106.]

AN ACT to amend section one of "An act to prevent and punish frauds upon the revenue, and for other purposes," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the act entitled "An act to prevent and punish frauds upon the revenue, to provide for more certain and speedy collection of claims in favor of the United States, and for other purposes," approved March third, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, be, and the same is hereby, amended by adding to section one thereof an additional proviso, as follows: And provided further, That in case of goods, wares, and merchandise imported from a foreign country adjacent to the United States, the declaration in this section hereinbefore required may be to, and the certificate indorsed by the consul, vice-consul, or commercial agent, at, or nearest to the port or place of clearance for the United States.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC—No. 105.]

AN ACT to authorize the city of Washington to issue bonds for the purpose of paying the floating debt of the city.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the city of Washington be, and hereby is, authorized to issue, by vote of its councils, registered or coupon bonds in denominations of fifty dollars, one hundred dollars, five hundred dollars, and one thousand dollars, payable in ten years from the date of issue, bearing interest at the rate of six per centum per annum, payable semi-annually—principal and interest payable in lawful money of the United States. Said bonds shall be signed by the mayor and countersigned by the register of the city, and shall be payable at such place or places as may by them be deemed expedient, and may be issued and disposed of to an amount sufficient to pay and discharge the present floating debt of the city, not, however, to exceed the sum of eight hundred thousand dollars: Provided, That said bonds shall not be sold for less than their par value in lawful money of the United States, or in exchange for said matured and liquidated indebtedness: Provided also, That no greater amount of said bonds shall be disposed of than may be found necessary for the payment of said indebtedness.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the city councils upon issuing the bonds herein authorized to provide by taxation for the prompt payment of the interest thereon; also to provide for the redemption of the said bonds by establishing a sinking fund to be set apart annually to an amount not exceeding ten per centum of the amount of bonds issued, said sinking fund to be created from regular taxes levied for that purpose, and to be assessed and collected as other taxes.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the said city councils are hereby authorized to pass any and all ordinances which may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act, and all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 57.]

A RESOLUTION relative to lighting the streets of Washington City, District of Columbia.

WHEREAS, The municipal authorities of the city of Washington have failed to carry out the arrangements for lighting the streets of said city, in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the government," approved July twenty-eighth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six: Therefore

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the mayor and city councils of the city of Washington be and they are hereby authorized and directed to levy and collect a tax from the property holders of the city of Washington, sufficient to defray the expenses of lighting the avenue and street lamps of said city with six feet burners, twenty-one nights in each month, from dark until day light, and keep said lamps so lighted each year.

SEC. 2 And be it further resolved, That the mayor and city councils of the city of Washington be and they are hereby authorized to contract with the Washington Gas Light Company for the term of one year, and so from year to year until otherwise provided by law, at such rates as may be agreed upon not exceeding the maximum now fixed by law, for all the illuminating gas required for the avenue and street lamps and public offices of the city, and public grounds under the control of said city.

SEC. 3 And be it further resolved, That the mayor and city councils of the city of Washington be and they are hereby authorized and directed to increase from time to time, as the public good may require, the number of street lamps on any of the streets, lanes, alleys, public ways and grounds in the city of Washington, and to do any and all things pertaining to the well lighting of the city, and to levy and collect a tax from the property holders thereof.

SEC. 4. And be it further resolved, That in the event of the failure of the mayor and city councils to levy and collect the tax herein authorized, or to light the said city as herein directed, then the Secretary of the interior be and he is hereby authorized and directed to levy a tax upon the property of said city, and to collect the same, sufficient to light said city for the current year, and so from year to year, in case of such failure of said mayor and city councils to light as herein directed, and to fully execute the provisions of this joint resolution in the place and stead of the said mayor and city councils.

SEC. 5. And be it further resolved, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to relieve the said Washington Gas Light Company from paying the internal revenue tax imposed by law.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 62.]

JOINT RESOLUTION giving the assent of the United States to the construction of certain wharves in the harbor of Oswego, New York.

WHEREAS, The common council of the city of Oswego, in the State of New York, by resolutions unanimously adopted April seventh, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, and May twelfth, eighteen hundred and sixty eight, in pursuance of the authority granted them by the Legislature of New York in the charter of said city, have given permission to the owners of lots eleven and twelve, also of lots thirteen, fourteen, eighty-one and eighty-two, and of lots fifteen, sixteen, seventeen and eighteen, in fortification block number two, in the first ward of said city, to construct wharves in front of said lots, seventy feet in width, and extending northerly so that the north end of said wharves may be on a line with the north line of the Ontario elevator pier, but not less than two hundred and fifty feet distant from the nearest point of the United States pier, which wharves will extend into the navigable waters of said harbor: Therefore,

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the assent of the United States be, and the same is hereby, given, so far as Congress has power to give the same, to the owners of the lots above mentioned, to construct said wharves in accordance with the terms of said resolutions, subject, however, to the approval of the engineer department of the army.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 63.]

A RESOLUTION to drop from the rolls of the army certain officers absent without authority from their commands.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following named officers of the army reported by the Secretary of War absent from their commands without authority, be, and they are hereby dropped from the rolls, with loss of all pay and allowances, viz: First Lieutenant D. H. Weiland, sixth infantry; First Lieutenant H. H. Lanty, fourth infantry; First Lieutenant A. J. McDonald, fifth artillery; First Lieutenant Richard Wilson, third artillery; Second Lieutenant J. W. Approved, July 27, 1868

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 64.]

A RESOLUTION joint resolution appealing to the Turkish Government in behalf of the people of Crete.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the people of the United States renew the expression of their sympathy with the suffering people of Crete, to whom they are bound by the ties of a common religion and by the gratitude due to the Greek race, of which the Cretans are a part; that they rejoice to believe that the sufferings of this interesting people may be happily terminated by a policy of forbearance on the part of the Turkish government, and they hereby declare their earnest hope that the Turkish government will listen kindly to this representation, and will speedily adopt such generous steps as will secure to Crete the much-desired blessings of peace and the advantages of autonomic government.

SEC. [2.] And be it further resolved, That religion, civilization, and humanity require that the existing contest in Crete should be brought to a close, and to accomplish this result the civilized powers of the world should unite in friendly influence with the government of Turkey.

SEC. [3.] And be it further resolved, That it shall be the duty of the President to instruct the Minister of the United States at Constantinople to co-operate with the Ministers of other powers in all good offices to terminate the sufferings of the people of Crete; and that it shall be the further duty of the President to communicate a copy of this resolution to the government of Turkey.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 66.]

JOINT RESOLUTION relative to the pay of the chief clerk in the office of the Sergeant-at-Arms of the House

Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Clerk is directed to pay from the contingent fund of the House to the chief clerk in the office of the Sergeant-at-arms the difference between his present pay and the amount voted him by a resolution of the House, passed June twenty fifth, eighteen hundred and sixty-six, thereby fixing the salary of the clerk in the office of the Sergeant-at-arms at twenty-five hundred dollars per annum.

Approved, July 27, 1868.

Treaties and Conventions.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS a treaty of friendship, commerce, and navigation, between the United States of America and the Republic of Nicaragua, was concluded and signed by their respective plenipotentiaries, at the city of Managua, on the twenty-first day of June, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty seven, which treaty, being in the English and Spanish languages, is word for word as follows:

TREATY OF FRIENDSHIP, COMMERCE, AND NAVIGATION, BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE REPUBLIC OF NICARAGUA.

The United States of America and the Republic of Nicaragua desiring to maintain and to improve the good understanding and the friendly relations which now happily exist between them, to promote the commerce of their citizens, and to make some mutual arrangement with respect to a communication between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, by the river San Juan, and either or both the lakes of Nicaragua and Managua, or by any other route through the territories of Nicaragua, have agreed for this purpose to conclude a treaty of friendship, commerce and navigation, and have accordingly named as their respective plenipotentiaries, that is to say: the President of the United States, Andrew B. Dickinson, Minister resident and Extraordinary to Nicaragua, and His Excellency the President of the Republic, of Nicaragua, Senor Licenciado Don Thomas Ayon, Minister of Foreign Relations, who, after communicating to each other their full powers, found in due and proper form, have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

There shall be perpetual amity between the United States and their citizens on the one part, and the Government of the Republic of Nicaragua and its citizens of the other.

ARTICLE II.

There shall be between all the territories of the United States and the territories of the Republic of Nicaragua a reciprocal freedom of commerce. The subjects and citizens of the two countries, respectively, shall have full liberty freely and securely to come with their ships and cargoes to all places, ports, and rivers in the territories aforesaid to which other foreigners are or may be permitted to come, to enter into the same, and to remain and reside in any part thereof, respectively; also to hire and occupy houses and warehouses for the purposes of their commerce; and generally the merchants and traders of each nation, respectively, shall enjoy the most complete protection and security for their commerce, subject always to the laws and statutes of the two countries, respectively. In like manner the respective ships of war and post office packets of the two countries shall have liberty freely and securely to come to all harbors, rivers, and places to which other foreign ships of war and packets are or may be permitted to come, to enter the same, to anchor, and to remain there and refit, subject always to the laws and statutes of the two countries, respectively.

By the right of entering places, ports, and rivers, mentioned in this article, the privilege of carrying on the coasting trade is not understood; in which trade national vessels only of the country where the trade is carried on are permitted to engage.

ARTICLE III.

It being the intention of the two high contracting parties to bind themselves by the two preceding articles to treat each other on the footing of the most favored nations, it is hereby agreed between them that any favor, privilege, or immunity whatever, in matters of commerce and navigation, which either contracting party has actually granted, or may grant hereafter, to the subjects or citizens of any other State, shall be extended to the subjects or citizens of the other contracting party gratuitously, if the concession in favor of that other nation shall have been gratuitous, or in return for a compensation as nearly as possible of a proportionate value and effect, to be adjusted by mutual agreement, if the concession shall have been conditional.

ARTICLE IV.

No higher or other duties shall be imposed on the importation into the territories of the United States of any article being the growth, produce or manufacture of the republic of Nicaragua and no higher or other duties shall be imposed on the importation into the territories of the republic of Nicaragua of any article being the growth, produce or manufacture of the United States, than are or shall be payable upon the like articles being the growth, produce or manufacture of any other foreign country; nor shall any other or higher duties or charges be imposed in the territories of either of the high contracting parties on the exportation of any articles to the territories of the other than such as are or may be payable on the exportation of the like articles to any other foreign country; nor shall any prohibition be imposed upon the importation or exportation of any articles the growth, produce or manufacture of the territories of the United States, or the republic of Nicaragua to or from the said territories of the United States, or to or from the republic of Nicaragua, which shall not equally extend to all other nations.

ARTICLE V.

No higher or other duties or payments on account of tonnage, of light or harbor dues or pilotage of salvage in case of either damage or shipwreck, or on account of any local charges, shall be imposed in any of the ports of Nicaragua on vessels of the United States than those payable by Nicaraguan vessels, nor in any of the ports in the United States on Nicaraguan vessels than shall be payable in the same ports on vessels of the United States.

ARTICLE VI.

The same duties shall be paid on the importation into the the territories of the republic of Nicaragua of any article being the growth, produce or manufacture of the territories of the United States, whether such importation shall be made in Nicaraguan vessels or in the vessels of the United States: and the same duties shall be paid on the importation into the territories of the United States of any article being the growth, produce or manufacture of the republic of Nicaragua, whether such importation shall be made in Nicaraguan or United States vessels. The same duties shall be paid, and the bounties and drawbacks allowed on the exportation to the republic of Nicaragua of any article being the growth, produce or manufacture of the territories of the United States, whether such exportation shall be made in Nicaraguan or United States vessels; and the same duties shall be paid, and the same bounties and drawbacks allowed on the exportation of any articles being the growth, produce or manufacture of the republic of Nicaragua to the territories of the United States, whether such exportation shall be made in the vessels of the United States or of Nicaragua.

ARTICLE VII.

All merchants, commanders of ships and other citizens of the United States shall have full liberty in all the territories of the republic of Nicaragua to manage their own affairs themselves, as permitted by the laws, or to commit them to the management of whomsoever they please, as broker, factor, agent or interpreter; nor shall they be obliged to employ any other persons in those capacities than those employed by Nicaraguans, nor pay them any other salary or remuneration than such as is paid in like cases by Nicaraguan citizens; and absolute freedom shall be allowed in all cases to the buyer and seller to bargain and fix the price of any goods, wares, or merchandise imported into or exported from the republic of Nicaragua as they shall see good, observing the laws and established custom of the country.

The same privilege shall be enjoyed in the territories of the United States by the citizens of the republic of Nicaragua under the same conditions.

The citizens of the high contracting parties shall reciprocally receive and enjoy full and perfect protection for their persons and property, and shall have free and open access to the courts of justice in said country, respectively, for the prosecution and defense of their just rights; and they shall be at liberty to employ, in all cases, advocates, attorneys, or agents, of whatsoever description, whom they may think proper; and they shall enjoy, in this respect, the same rights and privileges therein as native citizens.

ARTICLE VIII.

In whatever relates to the police of the ports, the lading and unlading of ships, the safety of merchandise, goods, and effects, the succession to personal estates, by will or otherwise, and the disposal of personal property of every sort and denomination, by sale, donation, exchange, testament, or any other manner whatsoever, as also the administration of justice, the citizens of the two high contracting parties shall reciprocally enjoy the same privileges, liberties and rights as native citizens; and they shall not be charged in any of these respects with any higher imposts or duties than those which are or may be paid by native citizens, submitting, of course, to the local laws and regulations of each country, respectively.

The foregoing provisions shall be applicable to real estate situated within the States of the American Union, or within the republic of Nicaragua, in which foreigners shall be entitled to hold or inherit real estate. But in case real estate situated within the territories of one of the contracting parties should fall to a citizen of the other party, who, on account of his being an alien, could not be permitted to hold such property in the State in which it may be situated, there shall be accorded to the said heir, or other successor, such time as the laws of the State will permit to sell such property. He shall be at liberty, at all times, to withdraw and export the proceeds thereof without difficulty, and without paying to the government any other charges than those which would be paid by an inhabitant of the country in which the real estate may be situated.

If any citizen of the two high contracting parties shall die without a will or testament in any of the territories of the other, the minister or consul, or other diplomatic agent, of the nation to which the deceased belonged, (or the representative of such minister or consul, or other diplomatic agent, in case of absence), shall have the right to nominate curators to take charge of the property of the deceased, so far as the laws of the country will permit, for the benefit of the lawful heirs and creditors of the deceased, giving proper notice of such nomination to the authorities of the country.

ARTICLE IX.

1. The citizens of the United States residing in Nicaragua, or the citizens of Nicaragua residing in the United States, may intermarry with the natives of the country; hold and possess, by purchase, marriage, or descent, any estate, real or personal, without thereby changing their national character, subject to the laws which now exist or may be enacted in this respect.

2. The citizens of the United States residents in the republic of Nicaragua, and the citizens of Nicaragua residents in the United States, shall be exempted from all forced or compulsory military service whatsoever, by land or sea; from all contributions of war military exactions, forced loans in time of war; but they shall be obliged, in the same manner as the citizens of each nation, to pay lawful taxes, municipal and other modes of imposts, and ordinary charges, loans, and contributions in time of peace, (as the citizens of the country are liable), in just proportion to the property owned.

3. Nor shall the property of either, of any kind be taken for any public object without full and just compensation to be paid in advance; and

4. The citizens of the two high contracting parties shall have the unlimited right to go to any part of the territories of the other, and in all cases enjoy the same security as the natives of the country where they reside, with the condition that they duly observe the laws and ordinances.

ARTICLE X.

It shall be free for each of the two high contracting parties to appoint consuls for the protection of trade, to reside in any of the territories of the other party. But before any consul shall act as such, he shall, in the usual form, be approved and admitted by the government to which he is sent; and either of the high contracting parties may except from the residence of consuls such particular places as they judge fit to be excepted.

The diplomatic agents of Nicaragua and consuls shall enjoy in the territories of the United States whatever privileges, exemptions, and immunities are or shall be allowed to the agents of the same rank belonging to the most favored nations; and in the like manner the diplomatic agents and consuls of the United States in Nicaragua shall enjoy, according to the strictest reciprocity, whatever privileges, exemptions, and immunities are or may be granted in the republic of Nicaragua to the diplomatic agents and consuls of the most favored nations.

ARTICLE XI.

For the better security of commerce between the citizens of the United States and the citizens of Nicaragua, it is agreed, that if at any time any interruption of friendly intercourse, or any rupture, should unfortunately take place between the two high contracting parties, the citizens of either, who may be within the territories of the other, shall, if residing on the coast, be allowed six months, and if in the interior, a whole year, to wind up their accounts, and dispose of their property; and a safe-conduct shall be given to them to embark at any port they themselves may select. Even in case of rupture, all such citizens of either the high contracting parties, who are established in any of the territories of the other in trade or other employment, shall have the privilege of remaining and of continuing such trade or employment, without any manner of interruption, in the full enjoyment of liberty and property, so long as they behave peacefully, and commit no offense against the laws; and their goods and effects, of whatever description they may be, whether in their own custody, or intrusted to individuals or to the State, shall not be liable to seizure or sequestration, nor to any other charges or demands than those which may be made upon the like effects or property belonging to the native citizens of the country in which such citizens may reside. In the same case, debts between individuals property in public funds, and shares of companies, shall never be confiscated, nor detained, nor sequestered.

ARTICLE XII.

The citizens of the United States and the citizens of the republic of Nicaragua, respectively, residing in any of the territories of the other party, shall enjoy in their houses, persons, and property, the protection of the Government, and shall continue in possession of the guarantees which they now enjoy. They shall not be disturbed, molested, or annoyed in any manner on account of their religious belief, nor in the proper exercise of their religion, agreeably to the system of tolerance established in the territories of the high contracting parties: provided they respect the religion of the nation in which they reside, as well as the Constitution, laws, and customs of the country.

Liberty shall also be granted to bury the citizens of either of the two high contracting parties, who may die in the territories aforesaid, in burial places of their own, which in the same manner may be freely established and maintained; nor shall the funerals or sepulchres of the dead be disturbed in any way or upon any account.

ARTICLE XIII.

Whenever a citizen of either of the contracting parties shall be forced to seek refuge or asylum in the rivers, bays ports, or dominions of the other with their vessels, whether merchant or war, public or private, through stress of weather, pursuit of pirates or enemies, or want of provisions or water, they shall be received and treated with humanity, and given all favor and protection for repairing their vessels, procuring provisions, and placing themselves in all respects in a condition to continue their voyage without obstacle of any kind.

ARTICLE XIV.

The Republic of Nicaragua hereby grants to the United States, and to their citizens and property, the right of transit between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans through the territory of that republic, on any route of communication, natural or artificial, whether by land or by water, which may now or hereafter exist or be constructed under the authority of Nicaragua, to be used and enjoyed in the same manner and upon equal terms by both republics and their respective citizens, the Republic of Nicaragua, however, reserving its rights of sovereignty over the same.

ARTICLE XV.

The United States hereby agree to extend their protection to all such routes of communication as aforesaid, and to guarantee the neutrality and innocent use of the same. They also agree to employ their influence with other nations to induce them to guarantee such neutrality and protection.

And the Republic of Nicaragua, on its part, undertakes to establish one free port at each extremity of one of the aforesaid routes of communication between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. At these ports no tonnage or other duties shall be imposed or levied by the Government of Nicaragua on the vessels of the United States, or on any effects or merchandise belonging to citizens or subjects of the United States, or upon the vessels or effects of any other country intended, bona fide, for transit across the said routes of communication, and not for consumption within the Republic of Nicaragua. The United States shall also be at liberty, on giving notice to the Government or authorities of Nicaragua, to carry troops and munitions of war in their own vessels, or otherwise, to either of said free ports, and shall be entitled to their conveyance between them without obstruction by said government or authorities, and without any charges or tolls whatever for their transportation on either of said routes: Provided, said troops and munitions of war are not intended to be employed against Central American nations friendly to Nicaragua. And no higher or other charges or tolls shall be imposed on the conveyance or transit of persons and property of citizens or subjects of the United States, or of any other country, across the said routes of communication, than are or may be imposed on the persons and property of citizens of Nicaragua.

And the Republic of Nicaragua concedes the right of the Postmaster General of the United States to enter into contracts with any individuals or companies to transport the mails of the United States along the said routes of communication, or along any other routes across the isthmus, in its discretion, in closed bags, the contents of which may not be intended for distribution within the said republic, free from the imposition of all taxes or duties by the Government of Nicaragua, but this liberty is not to be construed so as to permit such individuals or companies, by virtue of this right to transport the mails, to carry also passengers or freight.

ARTICLE XVI.

The Republic of Nicaragua agrees that, should it become necessary at any time to employ military forces for the security and protection of persons and property passing over any of the routes aforesaid, it will employ the requisite force for that purpose; but upon failure to do this from any cause whatever, the Government of the United States may, with the consent, or at the request of the Government of Nicaragua, or of the Minister thereof at Washington, or of the competent legally appointed local authorities, civil or military, employ such force for this and for no other purpose; and when, in the opinion of the Government of Nicaragua, the necessity ceases, such force shall be immediately withdrawn.

In the exceptional case, however, of unforseen or imminent danger to the lives or property of citizens of the United States, the forces of said republic are authorized to act for their protection without such consent having been previously obtained.

But no duty or power imposed upon or conceded to the United States by the provisions of this article shall be performed or exercised except by authority and in pursuance of laws of Congress hereafter enacted. It being understood that such laws shall not affect the protection and guarantee of the neutrality of the routes of transit, nor the obligation to withdraw the troops which may be disembarked in Nicaragua directly that, in the judgment of the Government of the republic, they should no longer be necessary, nor in any manner bring about new obligations on Nicaragua, nor alter her rights in virtue of the present treaty.

ARTICLE XVII.

It is understood, however, that the United States, in according protection to such routes of communication, and guaranteeing their neutrality and security, always intend that the protection and guarantee are granted conditionally, and may be withdrawn if the United States should deem that the persons or company undertaking or managing the same adopt or establish such regulations concerning the traffic thereupon as are contrary to the spirit and intention of this treaty, either by making unfair discriminations in favor of the commerce of any country or countries over the commerce of any other country or countries, or by imposing oppressive exactions or unreasonable tolls upon mails, passengers, vessels, goods wares, merchandise, or other articles. The aforesaid protection and guarantee shall not, however, be withdrawn by the United States without first giving six months notice to the Republic of Nicaragua.

ARTICLE XVIII.

And it is further agreed and understood that in any grants or contracts which may hereafter be made or entered into by the Government of Nicaragua, having reference to the interoceanic routes above referred to, or either of them, the rights and privileges granted by this treaty to the Government and citizens of the United States shall be fully protected and reserved. And if any such grants or contracts now exist, of a valid character, it is further understood that the guarantee and protection of the United States, stipulated in Article XV of this treaty, shall be held inoperative and void until the holders of such grants and contracts shall recognize the concessions made in this treaty to the government and citizens of the United States with respect to such inter oceanic routes or either of them, and shall agree to observe and be governed by these concessions as fully as if they had been embraced in their original grants or contracts; after which recognition and agreement said guarantee and protection shall be in full force; provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed either to affirm or to deny the validity of the said contracts.

ARTICLE XIX.

After ten years from the completion of a railroad or any other route of communication through the territory of Nicaragua, from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, no company which may have been constructed or be in possession of the same shall ever divide, directly or indirectly, by the issue of new stock, the payment of dividends or otherwise more than fifteen per cent per annum, or at that rate, to its stockholders from tolls collected thereupon; but whenever the tolls shall be found to yield a larger profit than this, they shall be reduced to the standard of fifteen per cent per annum.

ARTICLE XX.

The two high contracting parties, desiring to make this treaty as durable as possible, agree that this treaty shall remain in full force for the term of fifteen years from the day of the exchange of the ratifications; and either party shall have the right to notify the other of its intention to terminate, alter or reform this treaty, at least twelve months before the expiration of the fifteen years; if no such notice be given then this treaty shall continue binding beyond the said time, and until twelve months shall have elapsed from the day on which one of the parties shall notify the other of its intention to alter reform or abrogate this treaty.

ARTICLE XXI.

The present treaty shall be ratified and the ratifications exchanged at the city of Managua, within one year, or sooner if possible.

In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the same, and affixed thereto their respective seals.

Done at the city of Managua, this twenty-first day of June in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven.

A. B. DICKINSON, [L.S.]
TOMAS AYON, [L.S.]

And whereas the said treaty has been duly ratified on both parts, and the respective ratifications of the same were exchanged at the city of Granada, on the twentieth day of June last,

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America have caused the said treaty to be made public, to the end that the same, and every clause and article thereof, may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this thirteenth day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred sixty-eight and of the independence of the United States of America the ninety-third.

[SEAL] ANDREW JOHNSON.

By the President:
W. HUNTER,
Acting Secretary of State.

CONVENTION BETWEEN THE GENERAL POST OFFICE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND THE GENERAL POST OFFICE OF THE UNITED KINGDOM OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

The general Postoffice of the United States of America and the general Postoffice of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland being desirous of establishing and maintaining an exchange of mails between the United States on the one side and the Straits Settlements and the British East Indies on the other, by means conjointly of the line of United States mail packets plying between San Francisco and Hong Kong and of the line of British mail packets plying between Hong Kong and Singapore, Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Aden, the undersigned duly authorized for that purpose have agreed upon the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

There shall be a direct exchange of mails between the offices of New York and San Francisco on the one part, and the offices of Singapore, Calcutta, Madras Bombay, and Aden, on the other, comprising letters, newspapers, prices current, book packets, and packets of patterns or samples originating in the United States and addressed respectively to the Straits Settlements, or to the British East Indies, or originating in the British East Indies or the Straits Settlements, respectively, and addressed to the United States.

These mails shall be conveyed by United States mail packets between San Francisco and Hong Kong via Yokahama, and by British mail packets between Hong Kong and Singapore or the Indian ports.

ARTICLE II.

The postage to be collected in the United States, upon paid correspondence addressed to the Straits Settlements or the British East Indies, shall be ten cents per single letter not exceeding half an ounce in weight, heavier letters being charged in proportion, two cents each on newspapers or prices current, and eight cents per four ounces on book packets or packets of patterns or samples; and the postage to be collected in the Straits Settlements or the British East Indies, upon paid correspondence addressed to the United States, shall be ten pence per single letter not exceeding half an ounce in weight, heavier letters being charged in proportion, and four pence per four ounces for newspapers, prices current, book packets or packets of patterns or samples.

The correspondence thus paid shall be delivered at the place of destination, whether in the United States or in the British Possessions, free from all charge whatsoever.

Letters posted in either country unpaid or insufficiently paid shall, nevertheless, be forwarded and shall be charged at the place of destination with a rate of postage of the same amount that would be chargeable on a letter of like weight, posted for dispatch in the opposite direction, together with a fine of six pence in the Straits Settlements or the British East Indies, or of twelve cents in the United States.

ARTICLE III.

The exchange of the correspondence referred to in Article II. preceding, shall not give rise to any accounts between the British and the United States postoffices. Each office shall keep the postage which it collects.

ARTICLE IV.

Every letter newspaper, price current, book packet or packet of patterns or samples, dispatched from one office to the other, shall be plainly stamped in red ink with a stamp bearing the words "paid all" on the right-hand upper corner of the address, and shall also bear the dated stamp of the office at which it was posted.

ARTICLE V.

Dead letters, newspapers, etc., which can not be delivered from whatever cause shall be mutually returned, without charge, monthly, or as frequently as the regulations of the respective offices will permit.

ARTICLE VI.

The two offices may, by mutual consent, make such detailed regulations as shall be found necessary to carry out the objects of this arrangement, such regulations to terminate at any time on a reasonable notice by either office.

ARTICLE VII.

This convention shall come into operation on the first day of November, 1868, and shall be terminable at any time on a notice by either office of six months.

Done in duplicate and signed in Washington on the twenty-eighth day of July, A. D., 1868, and in London on the fourteenth day of August, 1868.

[SEAL.] ALEX. W. RANDALL,
Postmaster General.
[SEAL.] MONTROSE,
Postmaster General of the United Kingdom.

I hereby approve the aforegoing convention, and in testimony thereof I have caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

[SEAL.] ANDREW JOHNSON.

By the President:
WILLIAM H. SEWARD,
Secretary of State.

Washington, July 28, 1868.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA:

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas a treaty of commerce between the United States of America and her Majesty the Queen of Madagascar was concluded and signed by their respective plenipotentiaries at Antananarivo, the fourteenth day of February eighteen hundred and sixty seven, which treaty is word for word as follows:

TREATY BETWEEN THE GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATE OF AMERICA AND OF HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN OF MADAGASCAR.

Between Rainimaharavo, chief secretary of state, 16 vtra., Adriantsitohaina, 16 vtra., Rafaralahibemalo, head of the civilians, on the part of the government of her Majesty the Queen of Madagascar, and Major John P. Finkelmeier, the commercial agent of the United States for Madagascar, on the part of the government of the United States of America, all duly authorized to that effect by their respective governments, the following articles of a commercial treaty have this day been drawn up and signed by mutual agreement:

ARTICLE I.

Her Majesty Rasoherina Manjaka, Queen of Madagascar, and his Excellency Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America, both desirous for the good and welfare of their respective countries, to enter into a more close commercial relation and friendship between the subjects of her Majesty and the people of the United States, hereby solemnly declare that peace and good friendship shall exist between them and their respective heirs and successors forever without war.

ARTICLE II.

The dominions of each contracting party, as well as the right of domicile of their inhabitants, are sacred, and no forcible possession of territory shall ever take place in either of them by the other party, nor any domiciliary visits or forcible entries be made to the houses of either party against the will of the occupants. But whenever it is know for certain, or suspected that transgressors against the laws of the kingdom are in certain premises, they may be entered in concert with the United States consul, or in his absence, by a duly authorized officer to look after the offender.

The right of sovereignty shall in all cases be respected in the dominion of one government by the subjects or citizens of the other. Citizens of the United States of America shall, while in Madagascar, enjoy the privilege of free and unmolested exercise of the Christian religion and its customs. New places of worship, however, shall not be builded by them without the permission of the government.

They shall enjoy full and complete protection and security for themselves and their property, equally with the subjects of Madagascar; the right to lease or rent land, houses or storehouses for a term of months or years mutually agreed upon between the owners and American citizens; build houses and magazines, on lands leased by them, in accordance with the laws of Madagascar for buildings; hire laborers not soldiers, and if slaves, not without permission of their masters.

Should the Queen, however, require the services of such laborers, or if they should desire on their own account to leave they shall be at liberty to do so, and be paid up to the time of leaving, on giving previous notice.

Contracts for renting or leasing land or houses or hiring laborers may be executed by deeds signed before the United States consul and the local authorities. They also shall be permitted to trade or pass with their merchandise through all parts of Madagascar which are under the control of a governor duly appointed by her Majesty, with the exception of Ambohimanga, Ambohimananbola and Ampafaravato, which places foreigners are not permitted to enter, and, in fact, be entitled to all privileges of commerce granted to other favored nations.

The subjects of her Majesty the Queen of Madagascar shall enjoy the same privileges in the United States of America.

ARTICLE III.

Commerce between the people of America and Madagascar shall be perfectly free, with all the privileges under which the most favored nations are now or may hereafter be trading. Citizens of America shall, however, pay a duty not exceeding ten per cent on both exports and imports in Madagascar, to be regulated by a tariff mutually agreed upon, with the following exceptions: Munition of war, to be imported by the Queen of Madagascar into her dominions, or by her order. Prohibited from export by the laws of Madagascar are munition of war, timber and cows. No other duties such as tonnage, pilotage, quarantine, light house dues shall be imposed in ports of either country on the vessels of the other to which national vessels or vessels of the most favored nations shall not be equally liable.

Ports of Madagascar where there is no military station under the control of a governor must not be entered by United States vessels.

ARTICLE IV.

Each contracting party may appoint consuls, to reside in the dominions of each other, who shall enjoy all privileges granted to consuls of the most favored nations, to be witness of the good relationship existing between both nations, and to regulate and protect commerce.

ARTICLE V.

Citizens of the United States who enter Madagascar, and subjects of her Majesty the Queen of Madagascar while sojourning in America, are subject to the laws of trade and commerce in the respective countries. In regard to civil rights, however, whether of person or property, of American citizens, or in cases of criminal offenses, they shall be under the exclusive civil and criminal jurisdiction of their own consul only, duly invested with the necessary powers.

But should any American citizen be guilty of a serious criminal offense against the laws of Madagascar, he shall be liable to banishment from the country.

All disputes and differences arising within the dominions of her Majesty, between citizens of the United States and subjects of Madagascar, shall be decided before the United States consul and an officer duly authorized by her Majesty's government, who shall afford mutual assistance and every facility to each other in recovering debts.

ARTICLE VI.

No American vessel shall have communication with the shore before receiving pratique from the local authorities of Madagascar; nor shall any subject of her Majesty the Queen be permitted to embark on board an American vessel without a passport from her Majesty's government.

In cases of mutiny or desertion the local authorities shall, on application, render all necessary assistance to the American consul to bring back the deserters, and to re establish discipline, if possible, among the crew of a merchant vessel.

ARTICLE VII.

In case of a shipwreck of an American vessel on the coast of Madagascar, or if any such vessel should be attacked or plundered in the waters of Madagascar adjacent to any military station, her Majesty engages to order the governor to grant every assistance in his power to secure the property, and to restore it to the owner or to the United States consul if this be not impossible.

ARTICLE VIII.

The above articles of treaty, made in good faith, shall be submitted to both the government of the United States of America and her Majesty the Queen of Madagascar for ratification, and such ratifications be exchanged within six months from date of ratification at Antananarivo.

Should it at any future time seem desirable in the interest of either of the contracting parties to alter or add to the present treaty, such alterations or additions shall be effected with the consent of both parties.

Duplicate originals of this treaty, with corresponding text in the English and Malagasy languages, which shall be both of equal authority, have been signed and sealed at Antananarivo this day.

SUPPLEMENTARY ARTICLE TO § II.

P. S.—Should there be any business of the Queen requiring the services of such laborers, they shall be permitted to leave without giving previous notice. The sentence in article II, stating that previous notice must be given, refers only to laborers leaving on their own account.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS, a convention for the surrender of criminals between the United States of America and his Majesty the King of Italy was concluded and signed by their respective plenipotentiaries at Washington on the twenty-third day of March, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, which convention being in the English and Italian languages, is word for word as follows:

CONVENTION FOR THE SURRENDER OF CRIMINALS BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND HIS MAJESTY THE KING OF ITALY.

The United States of America and his Majesty the King of Italy, having judged it expedient, with a view to the better administration of justice, and to the prevention of crimes within their respective territories and jurisdiction, that persons convicted of or charged with the crimes hereinafter specified, and being fugitives from justice, should, under certain circumstances, be reciprocally delivered up, have resolved to conclude a convention for that purpose, and have appointed as their plenipotentiaries: the President of the United States, William H. Seward, Secretary of State; his Majesty the King of Italy, the Commander Marcello Cerruti, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary; who, after reciprocal communication of their full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following articles, to wit:

ARTICLE I.

The government of the United States and the government of Italy mutually agree to deliver up persons who, having been convicted of or charged with the crimes specified in the following article, committed within the jurisdiction of one of the contracting parties, shall seek an asylum or be found within the territories of the other: Provided, That this shall only be done upon such evidence of criminality as, according to the laws of the place where the fugitive or person so charged shall be found, would justify his or her apprehension and commitment for trial, if the crime had been there committed.

ARTICLE II.

Persons shall be delivered up who shall have been convicted of, or be charged, according to the provisions of this convention, with any of the following crimes:

1. Murder, comprehending the crimes designated in the Italian penal code, by the terms of parricide, assassination, poisoning, and infanticide.

2. The attempt to commit murder.

3. The crimes of rape, arson, piracy, and mutiny on board a ship, whenever the crew, or part thereof by fraud or violence against the commander, have taken possession of the vessel.

4. The crime of burglary, defined to be the action of breaking and entering by night into the house of another with the intent to commit felony; and the crime of robbery, defined to be the action of feloniously and forcibly taking from the person of another goods or money, by violence or putting him in fear.

5. The crime of forgery, by which is understood the utterance of forged papers, the counterfeiting of public, sovereign, or government acts.

6. The fabrication or circulation of counterfeit money, either coin or paper, of public bonds, bank notes, and obligations, and in general of all things, being titles on instruments of credit, the counterfeiting of seals, dies, stamps, and marks of state and public administrations, and the utterance thereof.

7. The embezzlement of public moneys committed within the jurisdiction of either party, by public officers or depositors.

8. Embezzlement by any person or persons hired or salaried, to the detriment of their employers when these crimes are subject to infamous punishment.

ARTICLE III.

The provisions of this treaty shall not apply to any crime or offense of a political character, and the person or persons delivered up for the crimes enumerated in the preceding article shall in no case be tried for any ordinary crime, committed previously to that for which his or their surrender is asked.

ARTICLE IV.

If the person whose surrender may be claimed, pursuant to the stipulations of the present treaty, shall have been arrested for the commission of offenses in the country where he has sought an asylum, or shall have been convicted thereof, his extradition may be deferred until he shall have been acquitted, or have served the term of imprisonment to which he may have been sentenced.

ARTICLE V.

Requisitions for the surrender of fugitives from justice shall be made by the respective diplomatic agents of the contracting parties, or in the event of the absence of these from the country, or its seat of government, they may be made by superior consular officers. If the person whose extradition may be asked for shall have been convicted of a crime, a copy of the sentence of the court in which he may have been convicted, authenticated under its seal, and an attestation of the official character of the judge by the power executive authority and of the latter by the minister or consul of the United States or of Italy, respectively, shall accompany the requisition When, however, the fugitive shall have been merely charged with crime, a duly authenticated copy of the warrant for his arrest in the country where the crime may have been committed, or of the depositions upon which such warrant may have been issued, must accompany the requisition as aforesaid. The President of the United States, or the proper executive authority in Italy, may then issue a warrant for the apprehension of the fugitive in order that he may be brought before the proper judicial authority for examination. If it should then be decided that, according to law and the evidence, the extradition is due pursuant to the treaty, the fugitive may be given up according to the forms prescribed in such cases.

ARTICLE VI.

The expenses of the arrest, detention, and transportation of the persons claimed, shall be paid by the government in whose name the requisition shall have been made.

ARTICLE VII.

This convention shall continue in force during five (5) years from the day of exchange of ratification, but if neither party shall have given to the other six (6) months' previous notice of its intention to terminate the same, the convention shall remain in force five years longer, and so on.

The present convention shall be ratified, and the ratifications exchanged at Washington, within six (6) months, and sooner if possible.

In witness whereof, the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present convention in duplicate, and have thereunto affixed their seals.

Done at Washington, the twenty third day of March, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, and of the independence of the United States the ninety-second.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS an additional article to the treaty of navigation and commerce between the United States of America and the Emperor of Russia, of the eighteenth of December, 1832, was concluded and signed at Washington, by their respective plenipotentiaries, on the twenty-seventh day of January, 1868, the original of which additional article is word for word as follows:

The United States of America and His Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, deeming it advisable that there should be an additional article to the treaty of commerce between them of the 6-18 December, 1832, have for this purpose named as their plenipotentiaries, the President of the United States, William H. Seward, Secretary of State, and His Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, the Privy Councillor, Edward de Stoeckl, accredited as his Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States; and the said plenipotentiaries, after an examination of their respective full powers, which were found to be in good and due form, have agreed to and signed the following:

ADDITIONAL ARTICLE.

The high contracting parties, desiring to secure complete and efficient protection to the manufacturing industry of their respective citizens and subjects agree that any counterfeiting in one of the two countries of the trade marks affixed in the other on merchandise to show its origin and quality, shall be strictly prohibited and repressed, and shall give ground for an action of damages in favor of the injured party, to be prosecuted in the courts of the country in which the counterfeit shall be proven.

The trade marks in which the citizens or subjects of one of the two countries may wish to secure the right of property in the other, must be lodged exclusively, to wit: the marks of citizens of the United States in the Department of Manufactures and Inland Commerce at St. Petersburg, and the marks of Russian subjects at the Patent Office in Washington.

This additional article shall be terminable by either party, pursuant to the twelfth article of the treaty to which it is an addition. It shall be ratified by the President by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, and by his Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, and the respective ratifications of the same shall be exchanged at St. Petersburg within nine months from the date hereof, or sooner if possible.

In faith whereof the respective plenipotentiaries have signed the present additional article in duplicate and affixed thereto the seal of their arms.

Done at Washington, the twenty-seventh day of January, in the year of grace one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight.

WILLIAM H. SEWARD. [L. S.]
EDOUARD DE STOECKL. [L. S.]

And whereas the said additional article has been duly ratified on both parts, and the respective ratifications of the same were exchanged at St. Petersburg on the twenty-first day of September last by Cassius M. Clay, Esquire, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States, and Vladimir de Westmann, Acting Minister of Foreign Affairs of His Majesty the Emperor of all the Russias, on the part of their respective governments:

Now, therefore, be it known that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America, have caused the said additional article to be made public, to the end that the same, and every clause and part thereof, may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS a treaty concerning the citizenship of emigrants between the United States of America and his Majesty the King of Bavaria, was concluded and signed by their respective plenipotentiaries at Munich, on the 26th day of May, 1868, which treaty, being in the English and German languages, is word for word, as follows:

His Majesty the King of Bavaria and the President of the United States of America, led by the wish to regulate the citizenship of those persons who emigrate from Bavaria to the United States of America, and from the United States of America to the territory of the kingdom of Bavaria, have resolved to treat on this subject, and have, for that purpose, appointed plenipotentiaries to conclude a convention; that is to say: His Majesty the King of Bavaria, Dr. Otto, Baron of Voelderndorff, Councillor of Ministry, and the President of the United States of America, George Bancroft, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary, who have agreed to and signed the following articles:

ARTICLE I.

Citizens of Bavaria, who have become, or shall become, naturalized citizens of the United States of America, and shall have resided uninterruptedly within the United States for five years, shall be held by Bavaria to be American citizens, and shall be treated as such.

Reciprocally: Citizens of the United States of America who have become, or shall become, naturalized citizens of Bavaria, and shall have resided uninterruptedly within Bavaria five years, shall be held by the United States to be Bavarian citizens, and shall be treated as such

The declaration of an intention to become a citizen of the one or the other country has not for either party the effect of naturalization.

ARTICLE II.

A naturalized citizen of the one party on return to the territory of the other party remains liable to trial and punishment for an action punishable by the laws of his original country, and committed before his emigration, saving always the limitation established by the laws of his original country, or any other remission of liability to punishment.

ARTICLE III.

The convention for the mutual delivery of criminals, fugitives from justice, in certain cases, concluded between the United States, on the one part, and Bavaria, on the other part, the twelfth day of September, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-three, remains in force without change.

ARTICLE IV.

If a Bavarian, naturalized in America, renews his residence in Bavaria, without the intent to return to America, he shall be held to have renounced his naturalization in the United States. Reciprocally, if an American, naturalized in Bavaria, renews his residence in the United States, without the intent to return to Bavaria, he shall be held to have renounced his naturalization in Bavaria. The intent not to return may be held to exist when the person naturalized in the one country resides more than two years in the other country.

ARTICLE V.

The present convention shall go into effect immediately on the exchange of ratifications, and shall continue in force for ten years If neither party shall have given to the other six months previous notice of its intention then to terminate the same, it shall further remain in force until the end of twelve months after either of the contracting parties shall have given notice to the other of such intention.

ARTICLE VI.

The present convention shall be ratified by His Majesty the King of Bavaria and by the President of the United States, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate of the United States, and the ratifications shall be exchanged at Munich within twelve months from the date hereof.

In faith whereof the plenipotentiaries have signed and sealed this convention.

Munich, the twenty-sixth of May, 1868.

[SEAL.] GEORGE BANCROFT.
[SEAL.] DR. OTTO FRH. VON VOLDERNDORFF.

PROTOCOL.

DONE AT MUNICH, THE TWENTY-SIXTH MAY, 1868.

The undersigned met to-day to sign the treaty agreed upon in conformity with their respective full powers, relating to the citizenship of those persons who emigrate from Bavaria to the United States of America, and from the United States of America to Bavaria; on which occasion the following observations, more exactly defining and explaining the contents of this treaty, were entered in the following protocol:

I. RELATING TO THE FIRST ARTICLE OF THE TREATY.

1. Inasmuch as the copulative "and" is made use of, it follows, of course, that not the naturalization alone, but an additional five years' uninterrupted residence is required, before a person can be regarded as coming within the treaty; but it is by no means requisite that the five years' residence should take place after the naturalization. It is hereby further understood that if a Bavarian has been discharged from his Bavarian indigenate, or on the other side, if an American has been discharged from his American citizenship in the manner legally prescribed by the Government of his original country, and then acquires naturalization in the other country in a rightful and perfectly valid manner, then an additional five years' residence shall no longer be required, but a person so naturalized shall from the moment of his naturalization be held and treated as a Bavarian, and reciprocally as an American citizen.

2. The words "resided uninterruptedly" are obviously to be understood, not of a continued bodily presence, but in the legal sense, and therefore a transient absence, a journey, or the like, by no means interrupts the period of five years contemplated by the first article.

II. RELATING TO THE SECOND ARTICLE OF THE TREATY.

1. It is expressly agreed, that a person who, under the first article, is to be held as an adopted citizen of the other state, on his return to his original country can not be made punishable for the act of emigration itself, not even though at a later day he should have lost his adopted citizenship.

III. RELATING TO ARTICLE FOUR OF THE TREATY.

1. It is agreed on both sides, that the regulative powers granted to the two governments respectively, by their laws for protection against resident aliens, whose residence endangers peace and order in the land, are not affected by the treaty. In particular the regulation contained in the second clause of the tenth article of the Bavarian military law of the 30th of January, 1868, according to which Bavarians emigrating from Bavaria before the fulfilment of their military duty can not be admitted to a permanent residence in the land till they shall have become 32 years old, is not affected by the treaty. But yet it is established and agreed, that by the expression "permanent residence" used in the said article, the above described emigrants are not forbidden to undertake a journey to Bavaria for a less period of time and for definite purposes, and the royal Bavarian government moreover cheerfully declares itself ready, in all cases in which the emigration has plainly taken place in good faith, to allow a mild rule in practice to be adopted.

2 It is hereby agreed that when a Bavarian naturalized in America and reciprocally an American naturalized in Bavaria takes up his abode once more in his original country without the intention of return to the country of his adoption, he does by no means thereby recover his former citizenship: on the contrary, in so far as it relates to Bavaria, it depends on his Majesty, the King, whether he will, or will not in that event grant the Bavarian citizenship anew.

The article fourth shall accordingly have only this meaning, that the adopted country of the emigrant can not prevent him from acquiring once more his former citizenship; but not that the state to which the emigrant originally belonged is bound to restore him at once to his original relation.

On the contrary, the citizen naturalized abroad must first apply to be received back into his original country in the manner prescribed by its laws and regulations, and must acquire citizenship anew, exactly like any other alien.

But yet it is left to his own free choice, whether he will adopt that course or will preserve the citizenship of the country of his adoption.

The two plenipotentiaries give each other mutually the assurance that their respective governments in ratifying this treaty will also regard as approved and will maintain the agreements and explanations contained in the present protocol, without any further formal ratification of the same.

[SEAL] GEORGE BANCROFT.

And whereas the said treaty has been duly ratified on both parts, and the respective ratifications were exchanged at Munich the 18th day of September last:

Now, therefore be it known that I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States of America have caused the said treaty to be made public to the end that the same and every clause and article thereof may be observed and fulfilled with good faith by the United States and the citizens thereof.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed

Done in the city of Washington, this 8th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, and of the independence of the United States the ninety-third.

LAWS OF THE STATE OF LOUISIANA

[PUBLISHED BY AUTHORITY.]

[No. 209

AN ACT

To Incorporate a Savings and Pawners' Bank.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That R. M. Montgomery, Daniel L. Shearer, B. J. Montgomery, William Saunders, James T. Summers, and others whom they may associate with them, shall be and are hereby constituted a body corporate and politic, under the name of the "Savings and Pawners' Bank of New Orleans," for the term of twenty-five years from the passage of this act. It shall have power to contract, sue and be sued, receive, purchase, convey, mortgage and receive in mortgage, pledge and receive in pledge property, both real and personal; to make use of a common seal of such device as the Board of Directors may recommend, to name and appoint such officers, managers, directors and servants as its interest and convenience may require; to create and establish such by-laws, rules and regulations for the management of its affairs as may be deemed advisable, all in its corporate capacity.

ARTICLE II.

SECTION 1. Be it further enacted, etc., That in order to promote the interest of the working classes, and assist those out of employment and temporarily in need of funds, for the support of themselves and families, and also aid the mercantile community in business, it shall have power and authorization to receive deposits from all persons, all sums of money, from one dollar upward, and pay out the same by checks or otherwise, for which sums of money interest shall be allowed in accordance with the provisions of this act and the by-laws of this Corporation: Provided, That nothing contained in this act shall be construed to allow the deposit of any article except by the consent of the actual owners of such articles or money, or to prevent the recovery from said Savings and Pawner's Bank of any article which may have been stolen or fraudently obtained by the depositors from the owners thereof.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That it shall have power to make and enter into all manner of contracts and agreements for the pledge of, and to receive in pledge, movable property, to make, execute, issue and receive certificates of pledge of any kind and nature whatsoever, for the pledge of movable property, and to do and perform generally every act and thing to the business of loaning money on security of pawn or pledge belonging or in anywise appertaining to the same.

ARTICLE III.

SECTION 1. Be it further enacted, etc., That all citations, notices, whatsoever shall be served upon the President or Manager.

ARTICLE IV.

SECTION 1. Be it further enacted, etc., That the capital stock of this bank shall be one hundred thousand dollars, divided into one thousand shares of one hundred dollars each, which capital stock may be increased five hundred thousand dollars by two-third votes of all the stockholders, in general assembly convened; it may begin business as soon as fifty thousand dollars has been subscribed, the subscribers to the stock shall pay into the hands of the cashier the sum of ten dollars on each and every share subscribed by them upon the organization for business, and the balance in installments not exceeding ten dollars each, after fifteen days notice from the Board of Directors, who are authorized to make such call through its cashier.

ARTICLE V.

SECTION 1. Be it further enacted, etc., That all powers corporate of this bank shall be vested in a Board of Directors, to be composed of five stockholders, from among which they shall elect their President and Cashier; said board shall be elected on the first Monday of December next and every year thereafter, in general meeting of all stockholders convened between such hours as may be designated by the Board of Directors. In case of death or resignation of any member of said board, the vacancy shall be filled by the Board of Directors in which said vacancy has occurred. No stockholder shall be eligible to a directorship unless at the time of his election and during his continuance of office he shall own in his own name or on that of a commercial firm, in which he forms part thereof, at least ten shares of the capital stock of the bank. One month's notice shall be given before the election takes place, and the President, in conjunction with the Cashier, shall appoint three competent persons from among the stockholders, not directors or officers, for the purpose of conducting and managing the election of the board; those receiving a majority of all votes cast shall be declared duly elected, and take their seats on the second Monday after the election. In case of no election on the day fixed, the President shall cause an election to be held within ten days thereafter, after due notice, the following persons are hereby declared to be the first Board of Directors: R. M. Montgomery, D. L. Shearer, B. J. Montgomery, William Saunders, James T. Summers, who shall, immediately after organization, elect their President and Cashier, appoint all officers, clerks and employes of this bank, adopt the by-laws, rules and regulations, and do and perform all acts necessary to carry in full effect the workings and objects of this bank; provided, that nothing in the by-laws shall conflict with the laws of this State, or the true interest and meaning of this act.

ARTICLE VI.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of the Board of Directors to regulate, from time to time, the rate of interest to be allowed depositors, so that they shall receive as nearly as can be computed a fair rate, and that they are hereby authorized, should the condition of this bank at any time render it expedient to discriminate the rate of interest to be allowed depositors, and to reduce the rate to be allowed in all cases where the amount deposited shall exceed the sum of one thousand dollars, the object of the present incorporation being to give the greatest possible premium on the savings of the poor and hard working classes of this community.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That the bank shall be authorized to hold at interest subject to the rate provided by the by-laws any trust fund or money belonging to minors or other parties as shall by or under any decree of any court within the State be ordered to be deposited therein.

ARTICLE VII.

SECTION 1. Be it further enacted, etc., That all loans shall be on a fixed time and not over one year, the pawner shall have a right of redeeming this property at any time within the specified period fixed on the payment of the loan and the rate of compensation agreed, and if the property pledged is not redeemed within the time limited it shall be sold at public auction and the net surplus after paying loans, charges and expenses of all kinds shall be held one year for the owner, if then at that time it is not called for the same shall go to the credit of the general fund of the corporation, less ten per cent of the net amount, which shall be paid to the State Treasurer for the charitable funds of the State.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That the bank shall give each pawner a card inscribed with the name of the bank, the article or articles pawned, the name of the pawner, the amount loaned, when paid, the date when payable and page of book where recorded.

ARTICLE VIII.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That in the month of June and November of each year, an estimate of the profits and loss of this bank shall be made, also a statement of all depositors, the amount of interest accrued upon their deposits, the amount deposited, all amounts paid by the bank, in interest, etc., the value of property held on pledge, a complete statement of the stockholders, certified by the President and Cashier of the bank, in all cases the profits of the bank must exceed ten per cent on the amount of the stock subscribed before a dividend can be declared, and then said dividend shall be only the amount in excess of said ten per cent which shall be kept as reserved fund.

ARTICLE IX.

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted, etc., That all transfer of stock shall be made only at said bank, and on the books, the new stockholders binding themselves by said transfer to all terms, stipulations and conditions of the corporation and assuming the liabilities of said stock; should any subscriber desire a transfer before the stock is declared fully paid, the same must be satisfactory to the Board of Directors.

ARTICLE X.

SEC. 5. Be it further enacted, etc., That at the time of the expiration of this charter, or at any time a dissolution of this corporation is expedient, three commissioners shall be appointed, who shall remain in office until final liquidation.

ARTICLE XI.

SEC. 6. Be it further enacted, etc, That this act shall be in force on and after its passage.

WASHINGTON, November 26.—The omission of the ironclad oath to Federal Jurors by Judge Chase, at Richmond, encounters no serious comment from the Radical papers.

The following is an extract from a letter from Secretary Seward to Secretary Welles regarding Paraguayan complications:

"The situation thus presented seems to me so critical, that I have thought it my duty to advise the President that Rear Admiral Davis should be instructed to proceed with an adequate force at once to Paraguay and take such measures as may be necessary to prevent violence to the lives and property of American citizens there, and, in the exercise of a sound discretion, to demand and obtain prompt redress for any extreme insult or violence that may have been arbitrarily committed against the flag of the United States."

WASHINGTON, November 30.—

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES, Washington, November 24, 1868.

General J. M. Schofield, Secretary of War:

SIR—I have the honor to submit the reports of division, district and department commanders for the past year. These reports give a full account of the operations and services of the army for the year, and I refer to them for details.

I would earnestly renew my recommendation of last year, that the control of the Indians be transferred to the War Department. I call special attention to the recommendation of General Sherman on the subject.

It has my earnest approval. It is unnecessary that the arguments in favor of the transfer should be restated. The necessity for it becomes stronger and more evident every day. While the Indian war continues, I do not deem any general legislation for the reduction of the army advisable. The troops on the plains are all needed, troops are still needed in the Southern States, and further reduction can be made in the way already used and now in operation where it is safe, namely, by allowing companies to diminish by discharges without being strengthened by recruits, and by stopping appointments of Second Lieutenants. If it should be deemed advisable the Veteran Reserve Regiments might be discontinued by absorption and retirement of officers and discharge of men, without detriment to the service.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant.
U. S. GRANT, General.

General Grant departed Northward today.

The Treasury agents seized in New York on Friday 35,000 yards of fine Lyon's silks and a large number of French clocks. This is the largest seizure ever made in the United States, aggregating $70,000.

WASHINGTON, December 1.—Judge Chase has decided several confiscation cases, sustaining Judge Underwood's previous decision. The decisions involve the declaration that the confiscation laws are constitutional, and that where there was no appearance and plea by the defendants, the admiralty side of the District Court had full jurisdiction to decree confiscation and sale. Judge Chase, however, has desired that the question should come before the full bench of the Supreme Court, and an appeal on a writ of error was granted.

Richard H. Dana, of Boston, will represent the Government in the argument on the motion to quash the Davis indictment.

Commissioner Rollins returned to day.

A full Cabinet present to-day.

Revenue to day $692,000.

The cigar makers' strike in New York ended by a compromise.

General Grant in a letter to the Mayor of Boston, accepts with thanks the hospitalities offered, but begs to be excused from public demonstration. He will stop at the St. James Hotel, and will be glad to receive persons who may wish to call.

Secretary Seward directs our Consul at Panama to admonish citizens participating in the civil war that they forfeit the Government protection, and also directs him to demand protection for American citizens, and prompt redress for injuries received; also that American citizens shall not be subjected to forced loans or military duty. Naval commanders are ordered to afford full protection to American citizens in danger.

The Internal Revenue Bureau is in receipt of advices from the United States District Attorney for Texas, stating that the revenue officials there have signally failed in collecting revenue, and that gross frauds exist. In response the bureau has given instructions to Major Beiger, the newly appointed Supervisor, to inquire into the matter.

General Grant's official majority in California is 105.

The Tribune says the reported larceny of $8,000,000 is the latest sensation in the record of thievery concerning the Erie Railroad.

The Government issued $1,920,000 bonds to Pacific Railroad during November.

Gold in the treasury about $90,000,000.

WASHINGTON, November 28.—Hon. F. McMullen has presented a petition of citizens of Virginia against the extension of the stay laws beyond January 1, 1869.

General Grant expressed himself favorably to the petition, but desired to consult Secretary Schofield before acting.

General Stoneman, it is understood opposes further extension, and advises those who can pay their debts to take the benefit of the bankrupt law and start fresh. General Grant's petitioners represent that further extension of the stay law involves the credit of the State, and will prevent the payment of interest on the State debt.

The State Department urges travelers in view of the disturbed condition of foreign countries, to carry passports. They cost but five dollars and are only given to citizens.

Import duty from sixteenth to twenty first inclusive, $2,250,000.

WASHINGTON, November 30.—Mail advices from Havana, November 21, state that the insurgents had many successes, capturing two thousand Remington rifles and a hundred thousand dollars in money, near Puerto Principe, completely routing Colonel Quiros, driving him into Santiago de Cuba, with the loss of more than half his force.

It is stated that Puerto Principe has fallen, but the Government organs deny it.

The authorities are pinched for funds, and their calls on the wealthy merchants to support them are unheeded.

WASHINGTON, November 30.—General Meade's report gives a detailed account of his operations. He was applied to from all parts of the State to remove occupants from office and appoint others in their stead. He declined making the changes, except where a neglect of duty was proved or attempted obstruction to the reconstruction acts. He refers to the anomalous condition of affairs, and suggests that more power be given to the department commanders.

The suit of John Nagle vs. Stanton, for injury to Nagle's farm, in Prince William county, during the war, was dismissed at Nagle's cost.

Speaker Colfax has returned.

None of the targets at Fortress Monroe were found equal to the heavy ordnance used during the recent experiments.

Naval Promotions.—Captain George F. Emmons to be Commodore; Commander R. F. Renshaw to be Captain; Lieutenant Commander R. W. Meade to be Commander.

The Indian Commissioners meet here this week. Should the Indian war continue its cost next year is estimated at fifty millions.

Revenue to-day, $788,000; for the month, $9,500,000.

General Meade's report covers twenty-five foolscap pages.

WASHINGTON, November 30.—The Chiriqui rebels lost fifty-two killed, with their arms and leader. The Government lost three killed and eight wounded—among the latter General Pedro Gaita. This battle ends the civil war in Panama.

The Costa Rican revolution is successful. President Castro has been deposed, and Jiminez installed.

NEW YORK, November 26.—This morning's Tribune says: "General Rousseau's staff officer tells the Associated Press, and the Associated Press tells us, that General Rousseau has behaved admirably in New Orleans. This authority may or may not be considered good for this particular statement, but for another statement in the same connection it can not be questioned. The staff officer informs us that Louisiana Republicans did not vote at the late election, because they believed that the rebels would make it unsafe for them to do so, and that General Rousseau concurred in their view."

NEW YORK, November 27.—The Herald's Cuba dispatch reports the insurrectionists investing Santiago de Cuba, demanding its surrender; but the Governor of the district has a large force. The report is current in Havana and Santiago that the opposing parties had compromised.

NEW YORK, November 27.—A Havana letter says political arrests continue in Havana. Among the victims this week are Dr. Fernando V. Aguirre, member of Havana's Royal Academy of Sciences and professor in the University of Medicine; Juan Regueira, notary public; Segundimo Bermudez, a lawyer of distinction, and Jose Perez, a broker. They are all confined in Fort Cabanas. Quite a number of gentlemen were brought here from other places, and lodged in the cells of the Moro Castle, Fort Cabanas, Fort Principe and other frowning bastiles.

HAVANA, November 27.—The merchants are raising subscriptions to pay and equip three months volunteers, so they may move immediately against the rebels. Rumors are current that several cargoes of arms for the revolutionists had been landed. It is rumored that a secret commission left Cuba for New York, for the purpose of enlisting the press and Government for the rebellion. Telegraphic communication with Puerto Principe has been interrupted for two days. Twelve first-class field hands, worth three months ago $1200 each, sold for $900 each.

NEW YORK, November 27.—George P. Harsion, for many years president of the Atlantic Mail Steamship Company, is dead.

The American and Merchants' Union Express Companies have consolidated under the following officers: President, William G. Fargo; Vice President, S. M. Pomeroy; General Superintendent, James C. Fargo.

NEW YORK, November 28.—The Herald publishes the following special:

"In conversation, a few days ago, General Grant expressed his impression that the result of the late election had quieted down the state of feeling throughout the country, had produced a condition of sober and contented acquiescence in the declared will of the majority, and that an improved tone in the political, as well as in other relations of life, will soon be made manifest.

"When he made use of the expression 'let us have peace,' he sincerely meant it, and he apprehended no trouble in any section of the country under his administration, while at the same time the rights of all classes and of all communities shall be protected and preserved.

"Referring to the fourteenth amendment, he said Kentucky and Maryland would suffer a loss of representation after the next census, if they refuse to allow negro suffrage in accordance with the provisions of that amendment. It will be a bitter pill to them, observed the General, [laughing] but they will have to stand it."

NEW YORK, November 28.—There were fresh rumors afloat on the street to-day with regard to Erie, among them one that an injunction had been put upon both receivers, and that the Legislature would finally settle the whole matter by the passage of some new act.

The bank statement shows expansion, the loans being increased.

Arrived, steamships, George Washington, Lodona, Zodiac and General Grant.

NEW YORK, November 30.—George W. McLean, of the Treasury Secret Service Department, has been committed to jail for passing a counterfeit ten dollar bill. McLean pleads drunkenness in extenuation.

[Special Dispatch to the New Orleans Times.]

NEW YORK, November 30.—This morning's Tribune says an effort is to be made to throw out the electoral vote of Louisiana, and that the significance of this is that the Congressmen elected are not to be admitted. The opinion in best informed political circles here is that the electoral vote and Congressmen of both Louisiana and Georgia will be rejected.

NEW YORK, December 1.—The charter election is progressing quietly. The election of Hall as Mayor is conceded.

Hall is elected Mayor by 35,000 majority. Total vote cast about 80,000.

Fort Lafayette, in the harbor, is burning. Great danger is apprehended from the explosion of the magazine, containing thirty-two tons of powder.

The State Attorney General has taken possession of the Erie road, and placed it under the management of Jay Gould, which virtually leaves everything as before.

Sub-Treasury balance, $87,590,000.

The government sold $300,000 in gold to-day at 135 1-10.

The jury has found Garner C. Baker, late teller of the Tradesmen's Bank, guilty.

General Grant arrived this evening.

RICHMOND, November 26.—E. A. Pollard brother of H. R. Pollard who was killed on Tuesday, arrived here this afternoon. He published a card in the Evening State Journal, alluding to the cheering of Grant by the crowd and the verdict of the Coroner's jury, saying the death was caused by an unknown person, etc. He says: Let these things stand to the shame of their perpetrators, and write their own commentary on the chivalry of Richmond. They shame not me, they shame not the dead; my heart is sufficient to hold him—no man can insult my tears. I come but to claim one thing—justice. Let all true people consider I am far from defending the article which has been referred to in my brother's paper. I deeply regret it, but my brother did not write it. The murderer never inquired for the real author. He never asked any word of explanation. He never applied to have the article corrected. He took not one single measure which the brave man, no matter how wronged, always takes before he comes to the last resource of blood. He went without one alternative to that resource, and he went where no one but the coward treads, on the path of the assassin.

(Signed) EDWARD A. POLLARD.

Mr. Pollard says that the Southern Opinion shall not be published again.

RICHMOND, November 26.—A meeting of the stockholders of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad commenced this morning in the Capitol. A lively skirmish occurred between the respective friends of Wyckham and Fontaine, candidates for the Presidency. Each party chose a temporary chairman, and refused to recognize the chairman of the opposite party. A compromise was made on John B. Baldwin for chairman, and business committees were appointed.

JACKSON, Mississippi, November 26.—The Republican Convention adjourned last night, after preparing an address to be submitted to Congress, asking that body to declare the defeated constitution ratified and the State officers elected. A number of prominent Republicans opposed this action, inasmuch as the Commanding General had five months ago forwarded his official report to Congress, showing that the constitution had been defeated by a majority of the votes cast at that election.

TALLAHASSEE, November 26.—The Supreme Court assembled this morning, and, without transacting any business, adjourned on account of it being Thanksgiving Day.

Lieutenant Governor Gleason's answer to the rule nisi says he ought not to be made to show by what authority he holds the office of Lieutenant Governor by reason of anything contained in information on file in this case, because the Court has no power or jurisdiction to order a rule nisi, because the Court has no original jurisdiction to grant leave to file an information of the nature of quo warranto, because the court has no original jurisdiction under the constitution and laws to issue writs of quo warranto or try proceedings thereon; and because the power given to said court, if given it at all by the constitution, to issue writs of quo warranto, can only be used as an auxiliary to the exercise of appellate jurisdiction; because A. R. Meek, represented as Attorney General of the State in the papers served, was appointed by Governor Reed after impeachment; that if the Court has jurisdiction over information and quo warranto, it should not in this case grant a writ, as public policy and interest do not require or demand it; but, on the contrary, require that it should be denied.

That Harrison Reed has caused the motion for a writ from malicious and vindictive motives, and to gratify a spirit of revenge and recrimination against said Gleason, because Reed knew at the time of election how long Gleason had been a citizen of the State and advocated his election, and had at that time full knowledge of all the facts set forth in said information, and because the Constitution has given the power to the Assembly to impeach the Lieutenant Governor, and the Senate to try him and remove him from office; that the said bodies soon being in session can exercise the power, if deemed necessary. He says, for the above and divers other reasons, a rule against him should not issue and proceedings in the case should be quashed. Nothing in the answer claims competency to qualify for the office held.

BALTIMORE, November 26.—Admiral Semmes lectured in Maryland Institute last night. The audience was large and greeted the lecturer warmly. Lecture season has fully commenced. Dr. J. Gibbon, of North Carolina, was also before the Maryland Institute last night.

The day was universally observed.

Wm. Price, an old citizen and member of the bar, is dead.

Four fashionable weddings have occurred in Baltimore within a week.

CINCINNATI, November 26.—Thanksgiving was very generally observed.

The drawing of Murray, Eddy & Co.'s lottery has been resumed, the injunction being dissolved.

ST. LOUIS, November 26.—Dispatches from Denver City say the city is infested with roughs, driven from the Pacific Railroad towns by vigilance committees.

One of two highwaymen was killed, the other escaped. An alleged horse thief was taken from Denver jail by twenty men and hung.

PRANG'S AMERICAN CHROMOS

IN OIL AND WATER COLORS.

PRANG'S AMERICAN CHROMOS are fac simile re-productions of oil and water color paintings; so faithfully and skillfully done that it requires the experience of an expert to detect the difference between them and the originals.

For every purpose of decoration, for parlors, sitting rooms, nurseries, or chambers, nothing so exquisitely beautiful as these Chromos can be obtained for the same amount of money. No other ornaments of the same cost are so admirably calculated to adorn home, to cultivate a love for art among the people at large; to brighten up the dwellings of every class of our citizens and to teach the rising generation, by their silent yet refining influence, to love the beautiful in Art and Nature. Hitherto Art has been aristocratic in its associations, none but the wealthy classes could afford to buy fine works of art; but chromo-lithography has changed all that, and brought exquisite paintings within the reach of every family. It is doing for Art what the printing press did for Literature. Let no family, henceforth, be without a few classical books and one or two masterly painting. Both should be regarded as indispensable to complete a home.

Ask for them at the art stores and book stores. Our Chromos are sent free to any address within the United States east of the Mississippi, on receipt of price. Our journal of Popular Art, explaining how Chromos are made, mailed free. Send for a copy.

FIFTH DISTRICT COURT FOR THE PARISH OF ORLEANS.

Sarah E. Brooks vs. John M. Carr, her Husband—No. 20,157.

I HEREBY CERTIFY THAT ON THE seventeen day of November, 1868, judgment was rendered in this Court in the following entitled suits, in the words and figures following, to wit:

By reason of the law and the evidence in this case being in favor of the Plaintiff and against the Defendant, and by further reason of judgment of default herein and due proof of Plaintiff's demand in open court.

It is therefore ordered, adjudged and decreed that she have judgment against defendant in the sum of two thousand three hundred and twenty seven dollars, with legal interest from first January, 1861; that the community of acquets and gains be dissolved, and said plaintiff be permitted to control her paraphernal property separate from her husband; that her legal mortgage and privilege be recognized; that defendant pay all costs of suit to be taxed.

Judgment rendered November 17, 1868.
Judgment signed November 21, 1868
(Signed) CHAS. LEAUMONT, Judge.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the said Court, at the city of New Orleans, on this twenty-sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty eight, and the ninety-third year of the independence of the United States.

Poetry.

ALMOST THOU PERSUADEST ME TO BECOME A CHRISTIAN."

BY M. ANNESLEY.

What, but almost conscience, and rest
you there?
proof my friend, your soul is not your care.
so the famished wretch on seeing bread,
uld say, 'Enough—I could almost be fed.'
would the sick to his physician say, would almost be cured—go thy way.'
would the prisoner, if a gap he see, unconcerned, 'I would almost be free.'
would the rebel—should his prince forgive,
fusing say, 'I'm half inclined to live.'
hat then—are God, the soul, eternity, ath, heaven and hell, concerns too small for thee?
all sublunary hours, pleasure, power,
worldly cares engross your every hour,
l leave no room for dread eternity,
ere you and I, and all, must shortly be?
e long my friend, you'll know to ample cost,
hat almost to be saved is wholly to be lost,
e case, how dreadful! yet, alas, how true!
e case, my friend, this case applies to you."

HE GIVETH HIS BELOVED SLEEP.

BY MRS. E. B. BROWNING.

earth so full of dreary noises!
men with wailing in your voices!
O, delved gold, the wailers, heap!
strife, O curse, that o'er it fall!
l makes a silence through you all,
And "giveth his beloved sleep."

l men may wonder while they scan living, thinking, feeling man,
Confirmed in such a rest to keep;
angels say—and through the word think their happy smile is heard,
"He giveth his beloved sleep."

r me, my heart that erst did go lost like a tired child at a show,
That sees through tears the jugglers leap—
Would now its wearied vision close,
Would child like on his love repose,
Who "giveth his beloved sleep."

nd friends, dear friends—when it shall be hat this low breath is gone from me,
And round my bier you come to weep,
let one most loving of you all,
ay, "Not a tear must o'er her fall,
He giveth his beloved sleep."

MY WIFE'S HAND.

Every night when the stars come out,
And the birds have gone to rest;
A little hand, like a cooing dove,
Nestles about my breast.

Smoothes my forehead and pats my cheeks;
Passes its finger tips
Over my eye-lids and through my hair,
Lingering on my lips,

Clings to my neck and clasps my arm,
Till tired of its caress,
And fallen asleep within my own,
That pure white hand I press.

Many a year has come and gone;
The little hand is cold;
Children's children are on my knee,
And I am growing old.

Yet, each night, as the stars come out
And I near the heavenly land,
Feel as I felt in my early days,
The touch of that gentle hand.

Letter from Bishop Morris on Church Extension.

CHURCH EXTENSION SOCIETY.—This is justly regarded as next in importance to the Missionary Society. Indeed it is virtually part and parcel of the same thing among us. In very many places of our mission work the only hope of gathering a congregation and of forming a society of Christian men and women to sustain the worship of God is in providing for them a house of worship. This could be done in most cases by affording a little aid in the beginning. In some places $500 or $1000 from the Church Extension fund to start with would so encourage the people that they could and would provide for themselves cheap houses of worship, sufficient for present use. Who can estimate the good resulting from regular preaching and church privileges in any community? From hundreds of places the Macedonian cry is heard "Come over and help us." Viewed prospectively there can not be made a better investment of our means than through the Church Extension Society either by gift or loan. How many destitute souls are saying, with the Psalmist, "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to inquire in his temple." Psalm 27, 4. But how can they dwell in the Lord's house when he has no house, or inquire in his temple when he has no temple? "A word to the wise is sufficient."

The Church Extension Society is accumulating funds and influence very slowly, but not as slowly as did the Missionary Society at first, but which has now become a great power in the Church for good. "Who hath despised the day of small things?" The Church Extension Society will yet prove a success, provided the members and friends of our Church become generally interested in it; and they will become so interested if the pastors all wake up themselves and rouse up the attention of their people to its importance. When all parties are interested it will be an easy task to furnish the treasury with all the funds necessary to do the work contemplated by the Society. Our last official minutes report an aggregate of over a million and a quarter of members and probationers. Now if we excuse a quarter of a million on the score of inability to pay anything, we still have a round million to contribute of their means. To pay fifty cents each on an average would not hurt them, which would make the handsome sum of $500,000; an average of twenty-five cents would amount to $250,000; even ten cents a member would be a $100,000. Now can we reasonably doubt the ability or the disposition of our people to pay a dime per member in 1869, and to double the sum in 1870? Most of our Societies have a few men of means who could afford to pay their own dime and then pay for ninety-nine of their poor members. I know a brother who though not wealthy will agree to pay a dime for himself and for nine hundred and ninety-nine others rather than see the enterprise fail. Come, dear brethren and friends, let us make a strong pull, a long pull, and a pull altogether. And while all try to help each other, may the God of our fathers help us all for Christ's sake.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, December 2.

An interview with General Grant at his home dissipated the erroneous ideas formed in regard to his deficiency in affability. Looking into his face, or seeing him on mere introducion, taken in connection with his known aversion to public speaking, one would suppose him to be stiff and reserved in conversation. Just the reverse is true. He receives visitors with the utmost cordiality and freedom. His motions are quick, manners perfectly simple and easy, voice clear and ringing, utterance ready, words well chosen, sentences correct, and his thoughts full of intelligence. He possesses a thorough knowledge of the composition of Southern society, and what that portion of the country needs to insure its prosperity, and evidently entertains hopes of it in the future. On this subject, however, his remarks suggest even more than they express. General Sheridan's name being mentioned, he paid him a high compliment, and also a most flattering one to the character of the army during the war. There is no display about his house. A single gas burner lighted the entrance hall, and two were lighted in the library. It is impossible to feel otherwise than easy in the company of General Grant; he is sublime in simplicity. Thanksgiving day was marked by several marriage solemnities, in which the military was most conspicuous. Major Evan Thomas, Fourth United States Artillery, was married to Miss Foster, of this city. Captain McComas, Fifteenth United States Infantry, was also married to Miss Reed, of this city. An immense audience assembled in Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church to witness the nuptials of the last named parties. The churches were generally open on Thursday for religious service.

Among other expedients adopted by the churches here for raising funds for missionary and other benevolent objects the supper has been adopted by some; this resembles somewhat the English breakfast and tea drinking, but is not on so large a scale, nor connected with addresses and large voluntary contributions. Miss Tilly, of Wesley Chapel, gave a supper on Wednesday evening which was well attended; the company was congenial; the refreshments abundant, though simple, and the occasion was one of eminent social enjoyment. Of the sumptuous methods of serving the Lord's cause, this seems to be the least jectionable, if indeed, any objection can be charged against it.

In the case of Mr. Davis, the Government is expected to move its continuance, on the ground that the Chief Justice is obliged to preside, and this he can not do at present. There seems to be much trouble in getting at this case; a key to this may be found in the fact, that while Mr. Davis was confined at Fort Monroe, he received the compliments of Mr. Johnson.

Some stir has recently been made among heads of departments by the violence done to American citizens in Paraguay; it is feared two of our countrymen have been murdered there; a fleet will likely be ordered there to deal a stroke of vengeance; they deserve it. Those wretches might have been assured our Government would resent such an outrage; if those scapegraces wanted to murder Americans, why not come over to Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana, where they could have murdered by the hundreds, and produced no "unpleasantness" in Cabinet.

General Grant's annual report has been forwarded to the Secretary of War. He recommends the transfer of Indian affairs to the War Department, also the non-reduction of the army, owing to the necessity for the employment of troops in the South and on the plains; depletion, however, may take place by the expiration of term, and ceasing to recruit. There is much interest excited in regard to new lines of railway from this city to other parts; it is also conjectured that Congress will take this subject under consideration, in view of the commercial demands of the country.

The movements of our banqueting minister Johnson, at the Court of St. James, are not likely to meet the approval of Government.

Speculations are afloat in regard to the new Cabinet. Mr. Motley is named far Secretary of State, Mr, Stanton is assigned to the Treasury, Mr. Wade to the Interior, and General Schofield to remain, while Commodore Farragut takes charge of the Navy Department. Judge George P. Fisher, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia is named in connection with the Attorney Generalship.

It is pleasurable to note the continuance of revival influence at McKendry church. Over eighty have been added to the church. There is also an interesting work in the Dunbarton street charge, Georgetown.

To-day a meeting of ministers and laymen was held in "Foundry" church, to arrange for the annual meeting of the Parent Missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Bishop Ames and Dr. Harris, assistant secretary of the Missionary Society, gave their aid in shaping the exercises for that occasion. The annual meeting is fixed for the second Sunday and Monday in January; that is, the Sabbath will be devoted to missionary exercises, such as the local committee may determine, with the concurrence of the different pastors here, and Monday morning and evening will be under the direction of the Parent Board of Managers. "Foundry" will be the place of meeting, and Bishop Janes will preside Monday morning and Bishop Ames at night; the details will be published at a proper time.

To-morrow Bishops Simpson and Ames meet the trustees of Metropolitan church, under the direction of the Church Extension Socity; the object is to hasten the completion of that enterprise, and "bring the top stone with shoutings of grace! Grace unto it!"

Mission Correspondence.

CANTON, Missouri, Nov. 11, 1868.

REV. DR. NEWMAN:

Dear Friend—Your welcome ADVOCATE comes regularly to hand. I read its contents with great interest. The account of the massacre of the judge and sheriff at Franklin, made the cold chill run over me; as I had spent several days at that town, at the same hotel, occupied the same room and had sat about the same spot on the porch whore they were first assaulted. It brought the murder close to my heart. How long are these things to continue? The earth, which is compelled to drink of this innocent blood, is crying to the God of justice for relief. Blood for blood is still the economy of God in the cleansing of the earth. I have hopes that it will be done without God's pouring out another vial of his wrath on that deluded people.

I see by last accounts that General Grant has returned to Washington, and is actively engaged in his office. I feel satisfied now, the people having so overwhelmingly ratified the reconstruction policy, that he will assume the high prerogative conferred on him by the last Congress and now by the people—enforce to the strict letter and spirit of the law, everything necessary to give peace and protection to the loyal people of the South. General Grant is now virtually President; first by the acts of Congress, and secondly, by the action of the people at the polls. He should not wait till after the fourth of March, but at once make a clean sweep, especially in the department of Louisiana. Let him call back to his place the little giant with big soul, General Phil. Sheridan, and I bet that a different state of things would exist in your department.

Let us rejoice and thank God that we have in the person of the President elect, a man of iron nerve and strong heart. May he have superhuman wisdom, for without it he will be unable to withstand the wiles of these devils incarnate. Johnson fell down and worshipped them before he had got half way to the top of the "high mountain." Their flattery and promises were too strong for him. They are now trying this same game on Grant. "Oh he will make a good President." "He has always been kind to the South," etc. It will require more nerve to say, "Get behind me, Satan," than it did to storm the fortifications of these rebels in the war. I know he will thus answer. He passed thrice through their efforts to tempt him; first at Fort Donelson, then at Vicksburg, and last at Apomattox, but each time he answered, "It is written."

I regret much I did not see you last summer in Chicago. I called frequently at the Conference hall, but presume you were engaged on committees. Should you come North and West next summer, try and make it convenient to call and see us; your presence here would much cheer your brethren. The Church South predominates and are very full of venom, yet their condition is as the sunlight of midday, compared with your dark abode in the South. I know a brighter day is coming, in which you will be enabled to realize the great labor of love that you have in the providence of God been called on to perform. Then you will, I hope, receive due credit for the great influence of your ADVOCATE, in molding the political condition of the State. I would not flatter, but I hold your paper second to none in this respect. Its moral influence will not be fully known until the gathering in of the great harvest.

Cheering Letter.

UTICA, November 9, 1868.

REV. DR. J. P. NEWMAN:

Dear Brother—I have thought of you much since you left us here with your benediction, a few months since, to resume your hazardous, difficult, but important work in the South. Paul "strove with the beasts at Ephesus," "where also he died daily."

"You wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, and against wicked spirits in high places." But "what advantageth it you if the dead rise not." But the dead will rise, not only "at the last day," but dead hopes shall arise and the "witnesses" slain in the streets of New Orleans shall arise; and the spirit of freedom shall arise, and the "Lost Cause" shall sleep the sleep that knows no waking.

The voice of this great nation has again pronounced the downfall of rebellion, and has re-echoed the jubilee and emancipation proclamation, and hath said emphatically, "let the oppressed go free." The calm, intrepid, inflexible, determined, patriotic peace maker, General Grant, is the nation's choice to execute its behests in these regards. We all rejoice as you rejoice, though doubtless with less fear and trembling. But God yet ruleth, and the South shall yet be saved from its madness and suicidal wickedness,

I have read with deep interest of the progress of the work of the Lord under the administration of the church, with which you are connected. It is wonderful how God keeps the bush from being consumed in the midst of the burning.

I have read with great satisfaction, but with some apprehension, your fearless utterance through the ADVOCATE, and have prayed that you may not fail nor be discouraged till truth is established in the earth.

We are progressing slowly with our church enterprise, and we hope to get into our chapel by the coming in of 1869. Your visit to our city to lay the corner-stone of our new church is remembered by your friends here with great pleasure. It is a source of satisfaction that the old Oneida Conference has so faithful a son and representative in the front rank of valiant soldiers of the cross and of freedom. And personally I feel a pleasure in the thought that I was permitted to share the responsibility, as the member of the "Committee on the State of the Church," in the great Conference of 1848, of repealing "the plan of separation," so unfortunately adopted in 1844. And that at Chicago, in 1868, I was permitted to share the honor of recognizing the delegates from the Southern conferences as legitimate members of the General Conference, irrespective of all plans of separation or of disqualifying restrictions; and that you, in common with other such representatives, have gone back to your fields to demonstrate the wisdom of such a policy as well as of your own appointment. God bless you.

[For the New Orleans Advocate.]

Why the M. E. Church South Opposes Us.

We have recently read several articles in our church papers devoted mainly to the "reasons why" we are opposed by the Southern church. Rev. N. E. Cobleigh, in an article in the Methodist, says that this opposition "grows mainly out of three things." First. "The natural hostility." Second. "A desire to have the Southern field all to themselves." Third. "A strong desire and a lingering hope of yet gaining the lost cause."

A St. Louis correspondent of the Northern Independent, writing over the signature of R. M. Beach, among other things, says: "That notwithstanding all of these overtures" (made by our church) "the Methodist Episcopal Church South says no emphatically, indignantly, persistently, unanimously no. In justice to the laity, I should say the last qualifying word applies to the ministry."

Of course these writers, as well as others who have written upon this subject, judge of this matter from the persons representing the Church South, and the condition of things in their immediate fields of labor, and our experience teaches us that they are in a measure correct, but that they are not so entirely.

We are conscions of the fact that there is a score of preachers within the boundaries of the Texas Conference, with whom we have been brought into contact, that would hail the day of a reunion with the Methodist Episcopal Church with delight, although they dare not utter one word or make a single effort of a public character in that direction, not because they fear the loss of influence among their parishioners, but because they feel the powerful influence of their "leading brethren" in their conference. The negro question, the church property question, the question of church antagonism or Northern church intrusion upon their particular territory, or the faint hope of yet reorganizing their "lost cause;" all these questions sink into insignificance when compared with that of the constant dread of leading ministerial influence being brought to bear against those who are liberal (or perhaps we should Christian) minded.

We can not go so far as Brother Beach, in saying that the whole ministry are against the reunion of the churches, but we are convinced that the majority, and especially controlling element are "emphatically" opposed to it from purely selfish motives.

As to the membership, I assert without fear of contradiction, that more than one half of the intelligent laity are to-day ready for such an union, and thousands more would favor it were this ministerial influence withdrawn.

The writer has taken some pains to learn the feelings of the laity in this respect, and we think our position is such as to assist us in this work above that of many of our brethren, who are exclusively devoted to the ministry. We have been in the South nearly four years, and for nearly two years past have mingled largely with the business and professional men of Texas, and we find that many persons in the Methodist Church commenced their Christian life in their early days in the old organization, and despite their new-made prejudice have a lingering love for the old pastors and churches, and look back upon those happy seasons of grace experienced in their former homes among former friends.

There are others, especially in large cities, whose sympathy we have, and who would gladly come among us, were it not for the ostracism and business loss they would experience by such a course in places where we are weak and the Methodist Episcopal Church South powerful.

These different classes are here, and they are in every city and county in the South, and their prejudices and weaknesses are being constantly fed and kept alive by those who have the spiritual oversight of them. Take six men out of the Methodist Episcopal Church South Conference, and instead of its being an extremely rabid one, it would be mild.

In this city there is a large church membership. Their live, active, godly men, who are the life and power of their social meetings, and most effective in the Sabbath school, are nearly all either of Northern birth or extremely liberal on the union question, but what is the trouble? Simply here the preacer is an ex-Colonel of the Confederate army, a bitter, malignant rebel to-day, who during the past year has been very actively engaged writing for the press reminiscences of the war and glorying in his participation in the same, and expresssing no sorrow for the lives he took, nor his attempt to destroy the best of Governments.

If an attempt upon the part of his membership is made to pay even the common courtesies of life toward a Northern person, especially one belonging to the Methodist Church North, suspicion is at once placed upon it, and the effort is frowned upon.

So far as the church membership is concerned, were the question submitted to the intelligent laity, any minister of our church would be permitted to occupy the pulpit.

The writer visited San Antonio, called upon the preacher, and when leaving was informed that he would receive an invitation to preach, "but the people would not hear us."

We thought then, and the sequel proved, that that preacher was misrepresenting his people, and the sum total of the prejudice was in his heart, for when afterward invited by the official brethren, we did preach, and no one left the house.

Said one of their liberal preachers to us, a short time since, "our street conversations are looked upon with suspicion, and I am confident that if they dared they would prefer a charge in conference against me," alluding to some of his brethren in the ministry.

These men are the true cause of all our troubles and differences, they are blind leaders of the blind. Their power, thank God, over the people is waning. They led in the rebellion, and their prophecies concerning it were false. Thus it will be in church matters.

The good sense of the people, together with good, judicious, godly men to do missionary work, sent into this field by our church, and money used freely for the erection of churches suitable for the accommodation of our people, will enable us to prosper, and hasten the time when the existence of a church built upon the corner-stone of slavery or its equivalent, a divine right to hold their fellowmen thus will be numbered among the things that were.

GEORGE W. HOVEY.

Address of Bishop Kingsley

AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CHURCH EXTENSION SOCIETY.

I do not know, but perhaps enough has been said in relation to the South. Your minds and sympathies have been so drawn in that direction, and properly, that it seems like something else, I suppose, to introduce anything but this theme here now, and yet there are other reasons than these for supporting the Church Extension Society. In my mind there are great, grave, important reasons. And when Dr. Newman said that our foreign missionary operations might be considered as defensive. It seems to me, as I look around me, that the remaining portion of the nineteenth century, just one generation, is fraught with responsibilities to the American people, such as earth has never seen. To no nation since time began have the eyes of all nations turned as they now turn to this. In no nation in the world's history have the hopes of the rest of mankind centered politically as in this nation. To no nation upon the face of the earth are all nations coming as to this nation. They are coming, coming, coming, like doves to their windows. Ireland is coming; Germany is coming; Scandinavia is coming. And the coming is not confined to the East. China is pouring its hordes upon our shores; and Japan will soon follow China. Upon our South side, not to speak now of the colored population, Cuba is coming, and Mexico is coming; right or wrong. I am not speaking of the desirableness of the thing, the propriety of the thing, but the fact of the thing—they are coming, and will soon be part and parcel of the United States.

Now look upon the strain that will be upon this country then. We have passed through one great, gigantic struggle. That struggle was like the rocking of a mighty earthquake. God be praised that we have passed it. The next will not be like the rocking of an earthquake, but like the encroachment of the sea coming in, rolling in upon us, and washing out the deep foundations. That will be the character of the next struggle. From the East are coming people at war with the holy Sabbath, and determined to destroy it. On the southern border, these nations that I have named as coming, have been degraded by ages of ignorance, and vice, and crime. On the west, hordes of pagan idolaters are coming, having already established in the United States, their temples of idolatrous worship, and having the means at their command of hording in such multitudes as will truly overwhelm that Pacific coast, if God in his providence permit it, and if God in his mercy do not help us to leaven that vast mass of humanity.

Now what is to be done under these circumstances? If there ever was a time when every man, and woman, and child, that has a heart to feel for this country—the goodliest that the sun ever shone upon, the land whose very name causes the eye to grow brighter, and the hopes to rise higher, and the thoughts to grow larger, than the mention of any other land in the world—I say, if anything should rouse the attention, should wake up every Christian to every kind of activity, the circumstances that surround us now should wake us to that activity. The hope of the world very largely depends upon the success of this great—problem we used to call it; we have about stopped calling it a problem. I rather think that the solution has been accomplished; rather think that the Q. E. D. we had put on a problem when we thought we had solved it, we may put on this problem if we do our duty now, just at this juncture, and are wise enough to understand what Providence would have us do, and will do it, trusting in Providence to leaven this great mass. These people must be met upon our shores with open Bibles and warm hearts; with mighty faith in the love of God, the finger upon that promise which says: "If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth." This is the way they must be met.

If a man talks to me about his country, I want to know if he loves it well enough to be good for it; well enough to promote virtue for it; well enough to lead little boys to Jesus for it; well enough to work in the Sabbath school; well enough to go out into the street and proclaim salvation; to talk with the most degraded children out of hell, and say: "Here, we want to introduce you to the King of kings and Lord of lords. True, you are not in a very fitting dress now, but he can fit you; he can put a dress upon you, and put a crown upon you." This is the way, it seems to me, we must feel if we would perpetuate the glorious heritage God has given us. Oh, how it becomes an army thus surrounded and pressed on all sides, to strengthen the centre, to make steadfast and sure its conquests already gained, in order that it may not only hold its own, but may advance upon the enemy's works!

Now this Church Extension Society proposes just that thing. It proposes to plant churches and to establish ourselves; to anchor these great principles; to furnish religious houses, so as to be able to draw the attention of children and parents to these houses of God.

There is something wonderfully educating in the very nature of a church reared to the service of Almighty God; in which the pure worship of God is celebrated and faithfully performed. There is something in the very thing that has a happy influence upon society, and that speaks of stability. I saw, a little more than a year ago, O how many precious little boys! My heart ached, and tears gushed to my eyes often times as I asked them, "Do you want to go to America?" If they could answer me, they said, "Yes, if we could get money enough." Why, here we gather the poor little boy into the Sunday school and acquaint him with Jesus Christ, and under such influences in twenty-five years he becomes a solid man. I say, knowing what I say, that it is not true, of any single nation of Europe that there is any hope at all for the poor; and they are coming here. And oh, how important as they come, to have these churches open, these Christian hearts open to them, the blessed Bible of God open to them, that they may receive Christianity as they come, and become valuable acquisitions to the real stability of the country. For every soul gathered to Christ is a soul enlisted under the Great Captain of our salvation. And we only need faith and works enough to go together. It wont do to think of this thing coming to pass by sitting down and theorizing. When I see a man with a commentary under his arm, that he has written himself, talking about the millenium and explaining Daniel by the prophecies, and Napoleon by Daniel, I think of the lunatic asylum; but when I see a man leading a poor sinner to Jesus, I think he understands the millenium. It is to come by great faith; by one after another becoming converted; by coming into contact with the powers of darkness, and charging them until their ranks break. Why, I thought when I saw the reports of increase in our church this year that it must have kept heaven in considerable uproar with tidings, from this branch and other branches of the church. O, then, we want the news to go that these comers are canverted as they come.

At the close of Bishop Kingsley's remarks, the Corresponding Secretary said that it was not intended to take any collection at this time but on Sabbath several of the Methodist pulpits of the city would be supplied by the Bishops and members of the General Committee, when the subject of church extension would again be presented and all would have an opportunity to make their annual contribution to the cause.

The doxology was then sung and the audience dismissed with the benediction by Bishop Janes, more fully informed and more deeply interested, it is to be hoped, in the subject of church extension.

New Orleans Advocate.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1868.

JUDGE LEAUMONT'S DECISION.

The decision of Judge Leaumont, of the Fifth District Court, in the matter of the Metropoliton Police bill, is remarkable for one thing: Its author has not relied upon or cited a single authority.

It is not our purpose to review this judgment at length. Divested of its special pleadings, the case presents but one question: Does the act known as the Metropolitan Police Bill contravene any provision of the Constitution of 1868? Judge Leaumont has examined it and says: "The issue is made and should and must and shall be decided!" "It is unconstitutional, wholly and thoroughly so, in its sections and in its entirety."

After so brave and so positive an asseveration one might expect a vast amount of legal acumen; that the subject was to be examined in the light of judicial determination, but he would be disappointed.

Judge Leaumont says: "It violates articles 42, 114 and 117 of our Constitution." Article 117 is the one under which the objection is made that Lieutenant Governer Dunn can not act as President of the Board. If the Court is right in this it but annuls that section of the bill which authorizes Mr. Dunn to perform such additional duties. The law otherwise remains in full force.

Article forty-two reads: "No bill shall have the force of law until on three several days it be read in each House of the General Assembly and free discussion allowed thereon, unless four-fifths of the House when the bill is pending may deem it expedient to dispense with this rule." Judge Leaumont understands that the four-fifths vote spoken of in this article means four-fifths of all of the members elected to the House. But as an instance of remarkable clearness in judicial composition, and as a fair example of the elegant diction of the learned Judge, we can not refrain from publishing his reasons upon this point in full:

Four-fifths of the House! Do you see the point? The House, under article twenty-two of our Constitution, is composed of one hundred and one members, four-fifths of one hundred and one is eighty and four-fifths; but an eighty and four-fifths vote is impossible, therefore eighty-one votes is the four-fifths of the House. I think there can be no doubt as to my numerical interpretation of the words four-fifths of the House. If there should be, then, to show that the court is correct, I would refer to article thirty-three of the Constitution, which says: "Not less than a majority of the members of each House shall form a quorum to transact business." Now, a majority of one hundred and one is fifty-one. Whenever, from the journals of the House, it appears that at any session of the House fifty-one members of the House were not present, there was no quorum; and either absent members were sent for to complete the quorum or the House adjourned; therefore in pari materia the same language, the same words. I say that four-fifths of the House composed of one hundred and one members are eighty one members, just as a majority of the House composed of one hundred and one members is fifty-one members. So much for that part of the argument.

Do we see the point? We confess that our mind is not sufficiently obtuse. But seriously. The technical expression "the House" is interpreted to mean a quorum of the members elected to a legislative body present to do business. When the total number elected is taken into consideration as when a quorum is to be determined, the language, as in the article thirty-three above cited, is a majority, or two-thirds or four-fifths of the members of each House. To reason after the style of the above extract: If the House of Representatives be composed of 101 members, and it requires eighty-one votes to make four-fifths of the House, then there must be 101 votes present to constitute the House, for if eighty-one are four fifths, not less than 101 will be five-fifths or the whole House! This same article forty-two provides that no bill shall have the force of law unless it shall have been read to each House, etc. The bill is not to be read to a quorum present, but to the House. But Judge Leaumont declares that the House is composed of 101 members. If one member be absent, therefore it is not a House, and the remaining members can not presume to hear the bill read or act upon it. And so, in all probability, every law which these various legislatures of our State have attempted to pass are "illegal," as a worthy citizen would say.

We have thus absurdly followed this reasoning after the style of the learned Judge, only to show the absurdity of his argument. We fortify our opinion differently.

A like provision to this in article forty-two is to be found in the several constitutions of Louisiana. By referring to the rules adopted by the several Legislatures it will be observed that they have invariably provided that when the rule is to be suspended that a bill may pass to a second or third reading that it should be by a vote of four-fifths of the members present. The question has never been presented to a court, so far as we know. We never heard of any one's doubting the interpretation placed upon it by our Legislatures, in which our most eminent lawyers have sat, before the present instance.

Section seven, article one, of the Constitution of the United States provides that if the President return a bill to Congress without his approval, each House shall reconsider its vote, and if two-thirds of each House shall agree to pass the bill it shall become a law. It has been invariably held by Congress that two-thirds of a quorum only were requisite to pass a bill over the President's veto, and not two-thirds of the whole number elected. (See journal of the Senate, July 7, 1856.)

We have thus casually considered this point made by Judge Leaumont, that really deserves no consideration. Let us now notice the other objection to the constitutionality of the law.

"Again," the court says "the act is unconstitutional because it violates article 114, which reads as follows: "Every law shall express its object or objects in its title." Passing by a foolish quibble about the word government, wherein the Judge confounds the technical term "the government thereof," with "a government"—a participial noun with a noun substantive, the court goes on to discover that the law contravenes this article in that it provides for raising a fund o pay the expenses of maintaining a police force within the Metropolitan District. "The title of the bill," says the Court, "no where expresses that object." We submit that everything contained in the bill is suggested and implied by the title. Expense is incident to the government of district or parish or State.

The Constitution of 1868 differs materially from those of 1864, 1852 and 1845, in this provision about the titles of laws. In those instruments the provision was as follows: "Every law enacted by the Legislature shall embrace but one object, and that shall be expressed in the title." The object of this restriction was, as the Supreme Court declared in the case of Walker vs. Caldwell, fourth annual, 297, to guard against the insertion of important general provisions in acts of a private nature. Article 114 of the present constitution has the same general object in view, though it is not so restrictive. It is intended to prevent legislation for the benefit of John Smith under title of an act relative to Tax Assessors. It was not intended to require that the bill should be repeated in the title. In the case of the State vs. Harrison, eleventh annual, 722, the court decided a law unconstitutional because it pertained to the different subjects in contravention of the then existing provision to which we have referred. Judges Spofford and Lea, whom the public recognize as among the most eminent jurists in our State, dissented from the opinion of the court upon questions of fact presented in the case. In their dissenting opinion they used the following language: "The design of a title is merely to indicate the general subject of the law, and not to furnish a detailed exposition of its provisions," "in order that the attention of both legislator and citizen may be fixed upon the main subject matter to which all of the details of the body of the statute are auxiliary."

If we are not mistaken the Supreme Court will reverse the decision of Judge Leaumont.

We would advise the public not to lose hope, as the Supreme Court is composed of men who will examine the case before deciding.

THE NEW ORLEANS POSTOFFICE.

The management of a postoffice in a large city is something that all classes of the people are more or less interested in. To the merchant or professional man, the prompt delivery of letters and papers after their arrival at their place of destination is often of the utmost importance; and everyone who expects a letter is always anxious to receive it as soon as it arrives. New Orleans being the chief commercial city of the South, her merchants and business men are in daily correspondence with the merchants and business men of every section of the country, and expect and demand all the facilities that can be afforded by good government for the sending and receiving of mail matter with safety and dispatch. There is no department of the Federal service in this city that the people as a whole are more interested in than the postoffice. It is true, the Government may feel deeply interested in the manner in which the revenues are being collected, and may have its suspicions that every dollar that should be paid into the United States treasury does not find its way there, yet all the people are more directly interested in the faithful and honest delivery of the mails and the prompt distribution of their contents than in the honest collection of the revenues from an internal or an external source. It is true that they are interested in all things pertaining to the business of government and in the manner in which that business is being performed by their public servants in every branch of the public service, but they are more particularly interested in that branch which is the medium through which much of their own business has to be transacted. The selection, then, of a postmaster for New Orleans is a matter for grave consideration, and no man should be appointed to the position who does not possess a thorough knowledge of the wants of the business community in this office, and who will so arrange and systematize its internal affairs as to meet them satisfactorily. This can not be done without energy and industry, combined with business qualifications and a will to please. Much must necessarily depend on the help that a postmaster has to employ, and although he may possess the requisite qualifications, unless he have the right kind of assistance he will fail to meet public expectation. He is held responsible for the acts of others in his employ, and if they are rude and inattentive to their duties, he suffers from public complaint. The present acting Postmaster, Mr. W. M. Smallwood—a stranger to our people—is acting in a manner that does not meet the just expectations and wants of the public. Complaints are made that the mails upon their arrival at the postoffice are not distributed with dispatch and that letters received to-day are not ready for delivery until the next day or day after, and that parties having boxes frequently find their names on the "letter-list" after a week has elapsed. This is not as it should be. Mr. Smallwood has rather got the "big wood" on the people of this city if this can not be remedied. It is true he may urge, in extenuation of the shortcomings of those who defraud the public by neglect of duty, through ignorance or otherwise, that they have not been there long enough to learn the same: but then this plea will not hold good when it is recollected that before the election he dismissed a large number of competent men, who had served an apprenticeship in the Postoffice and were honest and faithful, to make room for men of his own peculiar persuasion. These are believed to be facts that Mr. Smallwood will readily admit, for he gained much credit among his Democratic friends for so doing, and was hailed by them as "the prince of good fellows," and one that they would "die to" as long as he was Postmaster, if he was a carpet-bagger of fresh importation.

Both Mr. Smallwood and Parson Dailey would render the public more service by attending strictly to the duties for which Uncle Sam pays them so liberally, than by "orating" for the Democratic party, now so emphatically repudiated by the heart and brains of the nation.

Things must change for the better in the postoffice to satisfy the public. After the fourth of March next it is believed many other changes will be effected in the Federal service in this State, that will prove of infinite good to the public welfare.

THE VOICE OF THE PRESS.

It is singular how different are the views of the press of this city on the Three Million Bond question. All the papers oppose the adoption of the Shields ordinance, except one of the official organs, the Crescent, which this morning devotes a whole column, double leaded, to a defense of its favorite scheme. It thinks the resolutions published by the Property Owners' Association, in opposition to the bond ordinance, does not "represent the views of a majority of our property holders, or even a majority of the Association."

This charge, emanating from the recognized organ of the Democratic party of this city against the officers of the "Property Owners' Association," is quite serious, and requires explanation. Will the officers explain? Have the evil practices of wire-pulling and trickery so usual with the Democratic party, already entered what ought to be the pure and unselfish precincts of the association? In order that our readers may form some idea of how the different papers view the bond question, we extract the following:

Go to the polls with your registration papers and vote against the proposed issue of three millions of city bonds, and the quarter of one per cent tax to be annually levied to pay the interest on them.—Picayune.

That the city is bound to redeem its own currency is not to be disputed, but that the people should be taxed in order to pay a bounty to the holders of this currency is quite another question, and we hope the voters will turn out in full force to-day and vote "No," emphatically, as recommended by the Real Estate Owners' Association.—Bulletin.

Voters will also remember that this tax proposed to be levied upon our overburdened community, is for the purpose of raising money which is to go into the pockets of speculators in city currency. The tax is to be levied for the purpose of paying seven and thirty-hundredths per cent per annum—say two cents per day on every hundred dollars, which amounts in the aggregate to two hundred and nineteen thousand dollars per year; and this goes into the pockets of these speculators and will not benefit the poor man, who is counted upon to vote for this tax by the friends of the measure.—Bee.

We do not believe that the resolutions in opposition to the bond ordinance, and purporting to emanate from the Property Holders' Association, represent the views of a majority of our property holders, or even a majority of the association. We can not think that the property holders as a class wish to involve the city in the alternatives of repudiation or of an oppressive and destructive taxation. But to one of these alternatives we must come if we do not adopt the plan of getting the city money out of the way, so that the taxes may hereafter be paid in greenbacks. Property holders should reflect that the city government can not go on much longer as it has gone on for the last year. If this bond ordinance is defeated the results will be far more difficult to bear than the small tax to be collected in order to meet the interest on the bonds.—Crescent.

We presume that the vote on the three million bond question will be taken to-day, the protest of the Real Estate Owners' Association to the contrary notwithstanding. With the opposition of so large a body of our property holders it is by no means probable that the ordinance will be approved, or, if approved, that it will be carried into effect, for doubtless, an injunction will at once be taken in the premises. As to the legality of the bonds, if issued, the bar is somewhat divided in opinion. This being the case, it is perhaps best, notwithstanding the urgent necessity of retiring city notes from circulation, that a well digested act be prepared and submitted for approval to the Legislature. Such, at least, is the advice of the Real Estate Owners' Association, and as the Legislature is about to meet, but little time will be lost in following their advice. One thing is certain—an attempt to transact the business of the corporation for another year on no better circulating medium than city notes would be utterly suicidal. Furthermore, the proposed issue of city bonds would afford no relief unless the holders of city notes were required to make the exchange by some inducement so strong as to be certain of success. To accomplish all the ends proposed a legislative sanction is necessary; let it be obtained and a day be fixed, beyond which all city taxes must be paid in national currency.—Times.

SINGULAR OVERSIGHT.

In the election to-day the Commissioners of Election have taken an oath of office, the outline of which we give as follows:

State of Louisiana.

OATH AS COMMISSIONER OF ELECTION.

NEW ORLEANS, December 3, 1868.

I do solemnly swear, or affirm, that I will faithfully support, protect and defend the Constitution of the State of Louisiana; that I possess all the qualifications required by law to fill the position to which I am appointed, and that I will, to the best of my ability, perform the duties incumbent upon me as Commissioner of Election at Precinct ——, Poll ——, Ward ——, so help me God.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this —— day of December, 1868.

JOHN R. CONWAY,
Mayor.

We do not know what toploftical gentleman connected with the city government is responsible for the concoction of the above form of oath. From time immemorial it has been the custom for city officials to take the oath of office prescribed by the State Constitution, with the addition of declaring themselves possessed of the qualifications required by law which refers to the requirments of the city charter. The latter requisite is embodied in the above oath, but the remainder of the oath does not correspond with the form of oath required under the Constitutions of 1845, 1852, 1864 or 1868.

The form of oath prescribed by the Constitution of 1868, which we presume is in force in this State (and which superstitious people generally would suppose themselves swearing to when they promise to support the Constitution of the State) is as follows:

I (A. B.) do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I accept the civil and political equality of all men, and agree not to deprive any person or persons on account of race, color or previous condition, of any political or civil right, privilege or immunity enjoyed by any other class of men. That I will support the Constitution and laws of the United States, and the Constitution and laws of this State, and that I will faithfully and impartially discharge and perform all the duties incumbent on me as —— according to the best of my ability and understanding. So help me God.

We will now notice those particulars of the oath prescribed for the election of to-day, which are most notable.

1. The Constitution of the United States is particularly left out. We trust that the Constitution of the United States will survive this almost fatal thrust. At the same time it is surprising that any disciple of the Democratic party should avoid any opportunity of declaring his devotion to the Federal Constitution.

2. The affiant does not accept civil or political equality. Strange and very significant. He is unreconstructed, certainly.

3. Affiant don't promise to fill the office "faithfully and impartially," but only with "ability." This may imply a very left-handed way of filling an office. Judas Iscariot, Benedict Arnold, Andrew Johnson, David E. Twiggs, Fitz John Porter and "severial" others doubtless filled their offices with ability.

It is also noticeable that although affiant swears to the Consitution of the State, the above omissions render it exceedingly doubtful what Constitution is meant. It certainly does not mean, as we have before remarked, either of the Constitutions of '45, '52, '64 or '68, for all of these recognize the Constitution of the United States in the oath of office they prescribe. Then what in the deuce can it mean? A thought strikes us. We have it. The Convention of 1861 struck the Constitution of the United States from the oath of office. The brilliant deviser of the above oath don't recognize the reconstruction acts of Congress nor anything that has been ordained or enated in this State since 1861. May not this idea have the same luminous origin with that which first conceived the modus operandi of poor Thomas E. Adams "resuming his position?"

Now, if the prescribing such an oath of office is a mere blunder, it is a blunder which costs the city rising $8000. It renders the election of to-day a farce, and nullifies any effect it would have, if it could under any circumstances be supposed to have any. Who is responsible for this expense and loss? Let the "Property Holders' Association" inquire.

THE ISLAND OF CUBA.

The revolution in Spain is already felt in Cuba and a spirit of independence has again seized upon the people of the largest and most fertile of what are known as the West India Islands. The Island of Cuba is about seven hundred miles long and seventy in average breadth. It is capable of sustaining a larger population than Louisiana, and its position in the Gulf of Mexico is considered of vast importance. The gulf has only two inlets—the Strait of Yucatan, to the west of Cuba, and the Strait of Florida, to the north. The city of Havana, blessed with a most excellent harbor and strongly fortified, is situated on the northern coast of Cuba, and a fleet stationed there would command the passage of both straits. The productions of the island are numerous and varied, and its position is considered healthy and fertile from the play of the winds over it. It is thought that if Cuba were an independent country, possessed of a liberal and vigorous government, it would soon become a commercial State of great importance. Its proximity to the United States of America and its commanding position in the Gulf have caused our people to watch its fate with a great deal of solicitude. It is impossible to predict the fate of Spain, but that Cuba must ultimately connect its destiny with that of our own country, many of our people believe. The people of Cuba have often evinced a disposition to throw off the Spanish yoke and rid themselves of the measures of an arbitrary and oppressive Government; aggrieved by restrictions on trade, burdened by taxes, and harassed and insulted by a foreign soldiery, they have long burned to be free. Many of us recollect the gallant Lopez and the brave band of patriots who followed him from this country to Cuba in 1850. Knowing the true condition of the people there, having lived for years among them, and feeling sensitively their wrongs, at their solicitation he undertook to strike the blow that was to break the chains that bound them to a foreign despotic Government. He came to this country and enlisted a few hundred choice spirits to follow his fortunes to the "Gem of the Antilles," where they were promised all of the assistance from the inhabitants necessary to insure success to their glorious enterprise. But then fortune did not favor them and the brave Lopez, Crittenden and others perished in their noble efforts to make Cuba free. That this bright gem of the Gulf is not much longer to decorate the Spanish diadem is most certain, and it is believed to be equally certain that it will finally become one of that bright galaxy of stars that represent the States of the American Union upon the flag of our country.

ELOQUENCE AND POETRY.

The Times of Wednesday in an attempt to be witheringly sarcastic and facetious on a telegram from Europe concerning the whereabouts of two distinguished American citizens, exclaims: "Hale is in Paris, and Longfellow is at Genoa. We should like to know who the deuce cares!" We think the Times can be informed "who the deuce cares" about that announcement without much difficulty, to wit: All the American public who appreciate eloquence and poetry, high thoughts and noble ideas of life as much and even more than they do wars and rumors of wars, with the attendant influence upon the price of cotton, gold and other matters of groveling money-making. Society in this world is not entirely made up of the grosser and more animal passions. There are people, strange as it may seem to the Times, who do not believe the happiness of existence is utterly given up to money-making and violent passions; and although Europe may be on the "verge of war," still think that a few words of information concerning a matchless orator and a peerless poet of American birth in foreign lands, are fondly interesting. The Hon. John P. Hale, United States Minister to Spain, has long been one of the advanced videttes on the outposts of freedom in this country, was at one time a candidate for President of the United States on the very issues which have since been indorsed by a majority of the people of the nation, while Henry W. Longfellow was singing his sweetest strains upon the same theme. Such men, with such histories, are always gratefully remembered by men and women all over the world desiring to live noble lives.

We wonder if the Times, with its supporters, would complain as bitterly at news of the whereabouts of its favorite Confederate heroes wandering in foreign parts.

"GRANT'S POLICY."

The Bulletin, in an article on "Grant's Policy," as if ignorant of the political principles of our President elect, asks "What will he do?" We refer our cotemporary to the resolutions adopted by the National Republican Convention, held at Chicago on the twentieth and twenty-first of last May, for an answer to its question. That convention proclaimed that the constitutions of the States lately in rebellion "securing equal and political rights to all," should be sustained to prevent the people of such States "from being remitted to a state of anarchy or military rule;" also, and amid the greatest applause, "that the guarantee by Congress of equal suffrage to all loyal men at the South was demanded by every consideration of public safety, of gratitude and of justice, and must be maintained." This is the language of the great and good men who constituted the convention which nominated General Grant for President.

General Grant, in his letter of acceptance, briefly and emphatically announces his policy thus:

"I indorse the resolutions. If elected to the office of President of the United States it will be my endeavor to administer a the laws in good faith, with economy, and with the view of giving peace, quiet and protection everywhere."

These are the principles which triumphed in the late war, and which the people of this nation so heartily indorsed in the recent election. Are they the principles of the Bulletin? If so, let it come out and say so. We do not wish to be proscriptive. We will hail with pleasure the abandonment of the pernicious doctrines of the Seymour and Blair Democracy by our citizens, and shall always welcome them into the glorious party which has for its leader General Grant, and for its foundation, liberty, justice and political equality.

Several of our cotemporaries have brought the name of General W. G. Mank, late of the United States army, prominently forward in their columns, on an accusation of robbing the United States postoffice, in this city. Our cotemporaries are too generous to insist that a person should be declared guilty without benefit of judge or jury. General Mank occupies a good position in the estimation of our German fellow-citizens, and was and still is the Grand Marshal of their Democratic clubs.—Crescent.

The above contains a proposition sound in law and justice; and it also contains a statement not borne out by facts. That General Mank or "any other man," should not be declared guilty "without benefit of judge or jury," is most true. He should be deemed innocent until convicted by a jury and sentenced by Judge Durell. Even in case of reasonable doubt, he is entitled to the benefit of the doubt, and should be acquitted. But that Mank occupies "a good position in the estimation" of our German fellow citizens we emphatically deny. During the late excitement, with becoming modesty, he constituted himself Grand Marshal of "certain" German Democratic Clubs, and he may have stood well in the estimation of some of them. They, however, do not constitute the German population of this city. The latter, as a general thing, are an intelligent, honest and patriotic class, devoted to the principles of Union and liberty, and Mank does not hold a "good position" in their estimation. His pretentious and ridiculous address to the Germans of the North just before the late election farce in this State, was received with the contempt it so richly deserved. He is perhaps better known in the North than in this locality.

UNGALLANT.—The Times which has always opposed colored suffrage now makes an indelicate fling at woman suffrage. The ladies of New Orleans, irrespective of political belief, and many of them of the same political sympathies as the Times, whatever their opinions pro or con may be on woman suffrage, will know how to appreciate the elegant allusion of the Times to what it terms "barn-yard" suffrage in connection with the proposition of allowing ladies the right to vote. We give the Times's paragraph below for explanation, apologizing at the same time for its appearance in our columns:

Wendel Phillips admits that nothing will secure the Republican party's success in '72 except the Congressional enforcement of negro and woman suffrage all over the United States. In case of a similar contingency arising in '76, we may confidently look for the extension of suffrage to children and babes, and after that, barn-yard suffrage as a last resort will necessarily be inorder.

Horace B. Tebbets, a Carroll parish cotton planter, who this year has been fortunate in his planting operations, is at the St. Charles hotel. He was the original projector of the Atlantic telegraph line across the ocean, and is now prosecuting claims against the present company before the United States Court in New York.

The St. Louis Republican says that Captain P. D. Pratt, with his towboat Comet, is preparing to take eight barges of coal from Grand Tower to New Orleans. Mount Carbon "black diamonds" are coming into very general use in the Crescent City, and arrangements are being made by the firm having the matter in charge to deliver coal on board steamboats as is customary here.

THE END OF THE SUFFRAGE QUESTION.

One of the great questions arising out of the reconstruction measures of Congress, in the reorganization of the States lately in rebellion, is that of suffrage and upon whom it should be conferred and by whom exercised. The white males of those States who have but lately been in armed rebellion against the Federal Government claim that the colored males of the South ought not to have any part, as suffragans, in the reconstruction and maintenance of those State Governments of which they are members. These people say it is hard and infamous that their late slaves should be placed on an equality with them and permitted to enjoy the rights of citizenship and take part in securing to those States a republican form of government which is guaranteed to each State of this Union by the Constitution of the United States. Let these people remember that before the acts of reconstruction were passed the inhabitants of those States had been in rebellion against the General Government, and by it their States, or the States to which they claimed allegiance, were without form or organization, with no State governments, but reduced to a condition which made it necessary to begin at the foundation and build up such governments. Under these circumstances and this condition of affairs, in whom was vested the power to re-establish the rights of all the States in the rebel States which treason had overthrown? And whose duty was it to execute the guarantee of a republican form of government, when no such form existed?

The Constitution of the United States gives Congress the power to make all laws necessary or proper to carry out this provision of the guarantee of a republican form of government to each of the several States.

When Congress assumed the prerogative and power imposed upon it by the Constitution, it found those rebel States inhabited by two classes of persons, divided by the war into traitors and loyalists. The existing law leveled upon the heads of the former class the consequences of treason, arrest, trial, conviction and punishment. And the laws of war with a mightier sweep, might have doomed them to a swifter justice.

The executive, through amnesty proclamations and special pardons, with certain special exceptions, exempted the mass of the rebels from the consequences of their crime, and they thus became reinvested with those rights of citizenship of which they had voluntarily divested themselves.

All the inhabitants of those rebel States were freemen, and Congress, regarding the issues and consequences of the late war in their wisdom, saw fit, by the laws which they enacted, to give to those inhabitants the right of participation in the act of reorganization thereof.

At the time of the passage of those laws, Congress found among those inhabitants a class four millions strong, who, by the Emancipation Proclamation of our martyred President, and by constitutional enactment, had become free and elevated to citizenship with all the rights of equality before God and the law which citizenship in this country confers upon man.

This class thus elevated to those rights represented the labor of the country, and this labor had once been enslaved to the capital in those about to be reconstructed States. Capital then had become treason, and labor was loyalty. Capital was strong, educated, wealthy and remorseless. Labor was weak, ignorant, poor and humble. But labor was to be governed and taxed; it was to be elevated, and have representation in its taxation and a voice in the selection of its governors; it was not to be depressed, silent and subdued under the perpetual dictation of a rebellious race. And what was the people as to whom Congress decreed the power of self-protection? "It was a population nearly as large as that of Ireland, over whose wrongs so many hearts are bleeding all over the world; four times as large as that of Greece when the eloquence of Webster and Clay shook this continent in their behalf; twenty times as large as that of Candia, where the Cretans are struggling to shake off the yoke of Turkey; far larger than that of America when Washington led the colonies up to independence and freedom. It was a race who had made the wealth of the South, had created its capital, and given to its lordly rebels, by unrequited toil, everything on which their aristocracy rested. It was the representative of the labor of ten States, of the mechanics, the farmers, the tillers of the soil, of labor in all its classifications; and it had been, in all the dark and bloody years, true to the flag and loyal to the nation.

In acting upon disorganized populations, it was just and politic to give to labor a voice in instituting governments. There is no way in which labor can have the certainty of justice and protection, except it have the right of suffrage. It is that which dignifies and enables labor at the North to take care of its own interests. Why should not the labor at the South have an equal chance in the race of life? That was all it asked, a chance for itself; and that was all that Congress gave or sought to give it."

This class, thus representing labor, which was its capital, no longer enslaved, did cause itself to be represented in the reorganization of those Governments which were to be reformed and reconstructed, and in the organic laws or constitutions of those States it secured to itself the right of suffrage, representation and protection to which it was so justly entitled. This people, as part of the population of these States, can not honestly be disfranchised and deprived of the power which they have now exercised, or, if disfranchised, the State which does such an act shall not count them in its representation in Congress, and thus lessen its influence in the legislation of the nation. The Constitution of the United States no longer permits a fractional representation, but it must be a whole, or a unit as to each member or citizen composing the population of the several States. In this enumeration there is no longer to be any discrimination between any class as citizens of the United States, except as to Indians not taxed. Seven of the ten rebel States, by their Constitutions, reformed under the reconstruction laws, give the right of suffrage to all classes of men without unjust distinction or regard to previous condition; these Constitutions have been ratified by the people, and those States are now represented in Congress. Recognizing the march of events in the recognition of the rights of man, as indicated in the reconstructed States, several of the Northern States, by the voice and votes of their people, have struck the word "white" from their Constitutions, thus giving the right of suffrage to all properly qualified male citizens, as in the Southern States. Others of the Northern States will soon follow in their wake, and ere long the work will be complete, when we shall no longer be troubled with the vexed question as to the right of a class to suffrage, but when all shall acknowledge the justice and propriety of its universal application to all classes of men in our land.

JURIST.

Major General Rousseau's Report

Reply from Mr. Packard, President State Central Committee.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., December 5, 1868.

TO THE PUBLIC:

The report of Major General Rousseau to General Grant, on the disturbances in this State, contains so many evident untruths, that justice to the Republican party requires that it should receive immediate notice.

The Republican State Central Committee, which meets on the fourteenth instant, and the Republican State Convention, which will probably convene shortly thereafter, will doubtless make a more extended criticism and decided condemnation of its incorrect conclusions and false statements, than I am now called upon to do.

It is sufficient for the present to correct a few of the more prominent misstatements.

Major General Rousseau says:

"Until the receipt of reinforcements from General Gillem the entire number of troops at my disposal in and around the city of New Orleans was only 463 men. After the receipt of the reinforcements from Mississippi I had but 550 men available for service in the city."

It is a matter of public notoriety that previous to and during the disturbances in this city the regiment of Major General Mower was lying idle at Ship Island within twelve hours travel from New Orleans, and that General Mower and the Republicans of this city were anxious to have it immediately ordered here. General Rousseau refused to issue the order on the pretence that because it was a colored regiment "its presence would exasperate the people."

The implication that the police force consisted only of "243 negroes and 130 white men to take charge of the city of New Orleans," is also notoriously untrue, for at the time referred to, viz: the twenty-sixth of October, there were actually 388 white and 178 colored policemen on duty. The Board of Metropolitan Police will soon speak for itself in a report which will not add to the General's reputation.

The following statement is also untrue:

"The colored clubs habitually drilled; the white clubs did not, because with the majority of them drill was unnecessary."

The white clubs did generally drill, while the colored clubs did not, because they were without arms, their leading colored men being generally ex-United States soldiers, and having been disarmed by "Democratic citizens" under the administration of Major General Rousseau of the United States army.

And so is the statement the General's course was or is approved by the six Republican gentlemen named among the "general approvals." One of those gentlemen wrote and proposed the very resolution, strongly censuring the General's course, which was adopted by the Republican State Campaign Committee, and telegraphed to the Northern press. The plain truth is, that the General's course during the late riots is strongly condemned by nine hundred and ninety-nine in every one thousand of the Republicans of Louisiana, although a very few may hesitate about freely expressing their opinions on the subject from motives of personal interest or policy.

The General says:

"To watch and control as far as possible both sides and to preserve the public peace without influencing in any way the result of the election, was a task of no little difficulty and danger."

He would have exhibited more "freedom from political bias" and acted more as "became an officer of the United States army" if he had approved or desired that Democrats as well as Republicans should abstain from voting, or if he had sustained the assailed as much as the assailing party, or if he had cared and talked less about the "difficulties and dangers" surrounding himself and his command.

The General's political bias is illustrated by the fact that he allowed the assailed party to be generally disarmed by their assailants throughout the State, as in the parish of St. Bernard (to which he refers,) where colored men killed but one white man and the whites killed more than thirty blacks, and where the blacks were disarmed by the whites in the presence of United States soldiers, and left to the mercy of their excited and armed opponents. In some of the other parishes this condition of things may have occurred because he had not the power to prevent it, but I have yet to learn that he disapproved of it, or tried in any way to prevent it. Let it be observed that the General no where and in no instance in his report gives the number of Republicans killed in St. Bernard or elsewhere. Why is this, if he is so impartial?

General Rousseau says: "The disturbed condition of the public mind was brought about by no action of mine." Perhaps not; but it might have been prevented by prompt and proper action on his part. He evidently did not find it necessary to make a friendly visit to Republican clubs to advise them to preserve the peace, although he did make "personal requests to some of the clubs (Democratic), whose names had been publicly associated with acts of violence, that they should aid in preserving instead of assisting in violating the peace of the city."

Nevertheless, while the General has no word of rebuke for those whom his own report shows were the guilty parties, he makes a gratuitous attack on the Republican party and what he styles "the "indiscreet and unwarrantable course pursued by other and unworthy members," apparently alluding to those Republicans who differed with him and with some of the gentlemen he has named about the propriety of advising Republicans not to vote.

The report concludes with the surprising statements:

"It is but just to say that the great body of the people of New Orleans are law-abiding and entirely friendly to the Government of the United States." * * * *

"Officers of the army generally, and my staff especially, always found their uniform ample protection against either violence or the slightest disrespect, and a simple request from them was sufficient to disperse large and excited crowds of people."

Indeed! Then it is very pertinent to ask why the city of New Orleans was for four days and nights in a state of anarchy, and under the control of armed Democratic mobs? Why were Republican residences and club-rooms sacked by these same mobs, and Republicans killed with impunity in the public streets? Why were these proceedings and rioters sustained by the whole Democratic press of this city? And last, but not least, where were General Rousseau and his staff officers during all of this time?

I hold it self-evident that if General Rousseau had been free from political bias," and had promptly ordered General Mower and his regiment to this city, and had issued a proper order and "notice" (not "after quiet was restored,") at the beginning of the troubles, our city would have escaped this deep disgrace.

S. B. PACKARD,
President State Central Committee, Republican Party of Louisiana.

INAUGURATION OF THE TEXAN CLUB.

SPEECHES OF EX-CONFEDERATE GENERALS

REMARKS OF AN EX-FEDERAL OFFICER.

Undivided Attention to Politics Destructive to a Country.

THE PRESS AND THE RESPONSES.

RAILROAD CONNECTION OF NEW ORLEANS AND TEXAS.

There are considerable numbers of business and professional men in New Orleans hailing from Texas, who are anxious to promote the material interests of that State and of Louisiana by every legitimate means, and who consider it of paramount importance to complete at the earliest possible time direct and unbroken railroad communication between New Orleans and Houston. With these objects and to secure pleasant and frequent social intercourse an organization has been formed, uncontrolled by political considerations, called the "Texan Club," which was inaugurated Saturday evening at the rooms of the club, in Story Building, corner of Camp and Common streets.

The officers of the club are Judge A. G. Cantley, President; Colonel J. T. Ward and B. Hotchkiss, Vice-Presidents; A. E. Pierpont, Treasurer; and D. E. Scruggs, Secretary.

Colonel Frank A. Bartlett, that gentleman, who has a pleasant and winning way of securing its share of New Orleans patronage for the Galveston Civilian, of which he is the New Orleans editor, appeared to be among the most earnest and energetic in managing the details of the inauguration, and was especially considerate to the members of the press present as invited guests.

Quite a number of New Orleans merchants attended the inauguration. Among them Mr. David Wallace of the firm of Wallace & Brother; Mr. Baldwin of the firm of Slocumb & Baldwin, L. H. Gardiner and Mr. Michel. Others were there also as invited guests, whose good fortune it had never been to enjoy the generous hostality of Texans in Texas.

General Major, whose name is familiar to many of our readers, as a gallant commander of Texas cavalry during the late war, was called on for a speech, and responded eloquently. He alluded to the importance of the early completion of railroad connection with that State, and declared that New Orleans can drain every section of Texas by means of direct railroad communication with Houston. He said he had been to the North recently and learned there the anxiety to secure the trade of Texas by the construction of a railroad between Kansas and that State, which would create a trans-Mississippi route. Northern capital, Northern ingenuity and Northern trickery, he said, are at work to get Texas trade. They realize more than does New Orleans the importance of that trade.

It will be, he said, much to the credit of New Orleans and Louisiana to build a railroad to Texas. He called upon Louisiana men here to throw forward, without delay, that great iron band which will unite Texas and New Orleans.

General Major then introduced General Joe Wheeler, of Confederate cavalry fame. General Wheeler said it gave him pleasure to see Texas gentlemen organizing in New Orleans. When in Mexico (fighting then for his country), he learned what it was to belong to a race that won the respect of the world. To this race the men of Texas, peopled to a great extent by emigrants from the Southern States, from Virginia down, belonged. The American name everywhere commands respect. He proceeded to eulogize Texas regiments under his command, and declared that no true Texan soldier ever turned his back to the enemy. Whenever, he said, I meet a man from Texas, I feel that I meet a man of most undaunted chivalry. He felt that the union of the two States by rail would result, not only to the advantage of Texas, but to the metropolis of the South, and urged its speedy consummation.

General Major then announced that he would introduce Colonel Grow, of the Federal army during the war. He remarked that he would not say "Yankee army," for that expression was played out.

Colonel John A. Grow said he felt happy to meet so many Texans. He certainly would not hold himself second to Texans in according to General Major the honors he had so valorously won. The star of Texas had ever drawn his attention. Now, he was not far from Texas, the lone star State, a State of which the United States may well be proud. New Orleans as a city is yet but in its infancy. She has but to put forth her arms, and Texas will pour her wealth and luxuries into the markets of the Crescent City.

There is no reason that we should remain longer idle. We should avail ourselves of every measure to connect with Texas, a rich and fertile State, by means of a railroad whose bed has been long waiting for the iron band. We are losing precious moments. In these days of fast horses and fast men we must be up and doing. Shall we fail to afford all the aid we can to accomplish this great and important work?

With the completion of railroad connections with Texas the dull times will soon vanish, real estate will be rising in value, and the man with a comparative pittance of that property will wake up and find himself a millionaire. The warehouses of grocers and the stores of dry goods merchants will then require enlargement, and we shall all enjoy a season of unexampled prosperity.

The political bitterness that has grown out of the war is passing away and will soon subside. We must give less time to politics and more to business, for an undivided attention to politics is destructive to any country. The destiny of Texas is foreshadowed. The onward course of the State, her agricultural wealth and mineral resources are not even conceived of. She will yet be the richest as well as the most glorious State of the South, and New Orleans should adopt measures at once to secure her trade.

General Major next introduced Mr. B. B. Simmes. [A voice—"Good! We shall hear old Simmes."] Mr. Simmes—"Not so very old, either, as my friend would see if he was nearer to me." He was proud to see this assemblage of citizens of the growing State of Texas. He alluded to the hospitality he had received from the people of Texas in that State, and said that the importance of direct railroad communication could not be overestimated. But we are downtrodden—we are reduced from affluence to poverty. Our houses are destroyed, our plantations are laying waste. He alluded to the remarks of Colonel Grow and said he could not only extend one hand to him, but both hands. He wished that there were many more like him in Louisiana.

Let the past be forgotten. Let us unite as a whole people to build up a grand future for this State and Texas. The trials we have been subjected to have only made us aware of what materials we are made of. We will yet make this a great government, and if we are only true to ourselves Southern men will again occupy their positions in it.

This closed the speeches in the parlor, after which music from voluntary performers on the piano and violin entertained the members of the club and their invited guests until it was announced that the time had come for supper, which was modestly designated as "lunch." Retiring to an adjoining room it was found that the tables were laden with the best viands the markets afforded and that glasses were provided in which to drink to the sentiments offered.

General Major proposed a toast to Colonel R. S. Morse, of the City Hotel, and toast was also proposed to Mr. O. E. Hall, of the St. Charles, for their hospitality to Texas citizens and their kindness on the present occasion.

A sentiment to the press was responded to by Mr. John Jay Lane, of the Bee, who spoke at some length of the importance of railroad connection between New Orleans and Texas, and acknowledged the generous hospitality of Texans here assembled, though he had never been in Texas to enjoy the proverbial hospitalities of her people. Senator Bacon, of the Picayune, followed, and said that as a former resident of Texas he knew what the hospitalities of her citizens were. He knew also the paramount importance of railroad connection between the metropolis of the South and the Lone Star State. Colonel Love, of the Houston Telegraph, spoke in the same strain. Also Mr. Thomas, of the Crescent. Colonel Frank A. Bartlett, of the Galveston Civilian, who said he had never stepped his foot on the soil of Texas, complimented the hospitality of Texans, and urged the necessity to New Orleans of a speedy connection by rail with Texas.

Colonel M. W. Cluskey, of the Memphis Avalanche, was called for. That gentleman responded, and said that the state of his health had compelled him to sever his connection with the press. But as a citizen of the South, and at present a resident of New Orleans, he felt a deep interest in the prosperity and union of Louisiana and Texas. Speeches were made by the President of the club, by Mr. Simmes, and other gentlemen.

At this time midnight was approaching, and General Major said he desired to ask the attention of gentlemen for a few minutes in order that they might hear from Mr. Young, of the New Orleans REPUBLICAN. He said that he had fought the editor-in-chief of that paper, General Lee, three years. But the war being over, they had met again and again as friends. Under the circumstances, as this club is not formed for political purposes, as other members of the press had responded, it was peculiarily appropriate and proper that a representative of the REPUBLICAN should be called out.

In accordance with this request remarks were begun by the party referred to, when two or three persons expressed very decided and positive objections to listening to a representative of the REPUBLICAN. The situation was not suggestive of harmony and quiet, and the President of the club kindly suggested to the speaker that he had better stop right there. He unhesitatingly accepted the situation, but several of the most prominent gentlemen clustered around and urged him to go on. General Major declared that if an invited guest of the club was to be insulted in that manner, he should insist upon the withdrawal of his name from the rolls. Other gentlemen insisted that the reporter should proceed, and must be listened to. One cautious gentleman pleasantly requested the reporter not to touch politics.

He then commenced again, saying that as a correspondent of the New York Herald he had enjoyed the hospitalities of Confederate officers in the army of Virginia while a prisoner, and in that State had partaken of the hospitalities of Confederate citizens. That while a correspondent of the same paper during the Red river campaign, he had enjoyed the hospitalities of Confederate citizens. While on the march with General A. L. Lee, he had heard, he said, of General Major, and had learned to respect him without having the pleasure of his personal acquaintance. He had enjoyed the hospitality of Texas citizens at Houston, and had made the acquaintance there of the then President of the Texas Central Railroad, Colonel Hutchins, and freely discussed with him the importance of connecting New Orleans and Houston by rail—a connection which would bring the Crescent city in communication with the fertile and productive regions of Texas, through the various branches which fed the main track of the Central Railroad, and through other roads centering at Houston.

He respected Confederates and respected Democrats, and would not obtrude political notions or political opinions upon a meeting which it was his professional duty to report correctly without political prejudice or bias. Republicans cherish no personal enmities and no political hostilities against men who had been Confederates, or who are Democrats.

The interests, hopes and ambition of Louisiana Republicans are centred in the State. The interests, hopes and ambition of New Orleans Republicans centre here. They all desire the prosperity of that section of the country which is now their home, and where they intend to remain. They have no interests that are not in common with the whole people, and will do all in their power to hasten, cement, perpetuate and render profitable the union of New Orleans and Texas.

Thanking the gentlemne of the Texas Club for their courtesy, and again assuring them that his reports were never marred by political misrepresentations, the reporter closed with the sentiment: "God bless Texas, God bless Louisiana."

Mr. Simmes concluded the speeches of evening by offering a toast to the "Ladies of Texas," which was warmly applauded.

Allusion is made in this report to the objections made to listening to a representative of the REPUBLICAN for three reasons: First to declare that no sensible Republican would demean himself so much as to thrust politics upon an association of gentlemen who are not organized for a political purpose, and second, to express the high appreciation in which gentlemen are held who are capable of abjuring political prejudices on all social occasions; and third, to assure those who objected to listen to remarks by a member of the REPUBLICAN editorial staff, that he is certain they misapprehended entirely the character of the sentiments that were likely to be uttered by him.

If we are to have a railroad direct to Houston, men of all parties and without distinction of party will contribute to its stock, and men of all parties will unite in discussing the proposition.

Political asperities must and will soften down; Democrats and Republicans will unite in business enterprises, and social intercourse will be unbroken in the determination to join heart and hand in the great work of securing a glorious future for the sunny South.

The Vicksburg Republican has the following complimentary editorial article:

THE NEW ORLEANS REPUBLICAN.—We see that ex-Governor Hahn has assumed the editorial control of the above influential journal. Governor Hahn is just the man to control the organ of the Republican party in Louisiana. Never an extreme man, but always firm and decided in his principles—a man who has never been known to yield when he felt he was in the right, but always ready to risk his life in defense of his belief. Governor Hahn is an old citizen of the State, fully and thoroughly identified with its interests, and can be depended upon to further its advancement and prosperity in every possible way. The Governor is a genial, wholesouled gentleman and has ability second to no man in the State. He has hosts of warm friends among all parties. We say success to the REPUBLICAN and its editor.

OPINION OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Validity of Laws Approved After Adjournment.

Provisional Governors Have No Legislative Powers.

Acts Approved by Gov. Baker a Nullity.

The following correspondence between the Governor and the Attorney General will be read with interest by all who have had their attention called to the act of Governor Baker in signing a bill more than a year after the adjournment of the Legislature. It will be seen that Mr. Belden considers the pretended act to be entirely void, and not sufficient to affect in any manner the laws it purports to repeal:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
State of Louisiana,
New Orleans, November 13, 1868.

Hon. Simon Belden, Attorney General State of Louisiana:

SIR—I have the honor to inclose to you an act entitled "An act relative to Notaries Public" for your consideration and opinion. It aypears that it passed the Legislature on the twenty-eighth March, 1867, it being the last day of the session, but his Excellency, Gavernor J. Madison Wells, declined to approve it as did also his successor, Governor Flanders, but Governor Baker approved it on the eighth April, 1868, twelve months after its passage by the Legislature and nearly a month after the the adoption of the present Constitution by the Convention. It was not promulgated until the fifteenth May, 1868, subsequent to the ratification of the new Constitution by the people.

In view of the above facts I propound the following inquiries:

1. Could the Governor, under the Constitution of 1864, approve a bill after the expiration of the ten days allowed him for examination and action.

2. Supposing an affirmative answer, could the Governor legally approve a bill passed by the Legislature under the Constitution of 1864 after the adoption by the Convention of the Constitution of 1868?

3. This act not having been promulgated until the fifteenth May, 1868, can it be considered as having been "in force at the time of the adoption of this Constitution?" (See article 149, Constitution 1868.)

4. Is not the first section of this bill "inconsistent" with article two of our Constitution in the qualification of a residence of "five years?"

Your written opinion is desired at an early day.

I have the honor to be
Your obedient servant,
H. C. WARMOTH,
Governor of Louisiana.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
State of Louisiana,
New Orleans, November 30, 1868.

H. C. Warmoth, Esq., Governor of Louisiana:

SIR—Your communication of the fifteenth instant, propounding legal questions as to the act relative to notaries public, approved April 8, 1868, and promulgated May 15, same year, is at hand, and has been carefully considered.

The legal questions arising under the statement submitted, makes the subject necessarily one of a novel character and replete with legal inquiry. Therefore I shall present the entire subject without meeting your inquiry categorically, as by this method I can best give the reasons as they appear to me why the act in question is not a law.

There is no question as to the passage of the bill by both houses of the General Assembly, nor of its presentation to the Governor.

The first question, therefore, is: Had the Governor, under the Constitution of 1864, during the regular administration of civil government, the right to sign bills after the adjournment of the General Assembly, and if so, was there any limitation in point of time?

This question can only be determined by reference to article 60 of said Constitution. The first part of said article reads as follows: "Every bill which shall have passed both Houses shall be presented to the Governor; if he approves he shall sign it." The last clause of the same article reads as follows: "If any bill shall not be returned by the Governor within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, it shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the General Assembly, by adjournment, prevents its return."

The first part of article sixty above quoted simply says, "if he approves he shall sign it," and there is clearly no limitation as to time from adjournment until the following session of the Legislature. The last clause declares that, "it any bill shall not be returned by the Governor within ten days (Sunday excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, it shall be a law in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the General Assembly, by adjournment, prevents its return." Therefore, under said article, any bill might have become a law during session and without the Executive signature, by the lapse of ten days—but no lapse would have such effect during vacation, as the term "days" in the Constitution signifies days of session only.

This mode of enactment, however, does not involve the right of the Governor to approve and sign during vacation a bill passed in the last days of the session, duly presented to him for "consideration and action."

In this case it is clear that the Governor, under the Constitution of 1864, had the right to sign bills passed, enrolled and "presented" during the last nine days of a particular session up to the time appointed for the meeting of next succeeding Legislature.

This view is sustained by a learned decision rendered in the case of the State of Louisiana ex rel. Prendergast vs J. H. Hardy, Secretary of State (Fourth District Court New Orleans, No. 17,432), delivered by Judge Paul E. Theard, June 19, 1866, and is also supported by a decision delivered in the Supreme Court of New York upon a similar question, in the case of the people of the State of New York by their Attorney General vs. James Bowen and others, and reported in Thirtieth Barbour's New York Reports, page twenty-four.

The next question that arises in this case is as to the right of Joshua Baker, Governor by appointment of the United States military commander, to approve and sign a bill first presented by the General Assembly to the Governor of the State duly elected and qualified under the Constitution of 1864, after the forcible removal of said constitutional Governor from his said office.

In determining this question we have to deal with both facts and law. J. Madison Wells, Governor elect under the Constitution of 1864, was removed from office June 3, 1867, by reason of which removal Lieutenant Governor Albert Voorhies became Governor under said Constitution. It is, however, true in fact that Benjamin F. Flanders and Joshua Baker were subsequently respectively appointed by United States military commanders as Provisional Governors of Louisiana; but such appointments not being recognized by the Constitution of 1864, the incumbents named, although possessing military authority to execute the laws, could not perform any legislative functions, such as pertain to the office of Governor, duly elected and qualified under the Constitution aforesaid.

The legislative authority, of which the executive is part, was derived under the said Constitution from election by the people, in manner and form therein prescribed and set forth. (See articles seven, forty-three and forty-seven, Constitution of 1864).

The acts of Congress known as the Reconstruction Acts did not confer the power of legislation upon any person or persons appointed by military commanders, the authority of such appointees being only provisional, extended simply to the execution of the laws actually in force, but in no manner invested them with power to create new and permanent laws.

I am, therefore, of opinion that Joshua Baker, being only Governor by military appointment, an office not recognized by the Constitution of 1864, there would be some doubt as to your authority to ignore it; but where, from a casual examination, it is apparent that the said bill is signed by a person who is known to have had no authority to sign the same, you have not only the right, but it is your duty under article sixty-five (65) of the present State Constitution, which provides that the Governor "shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed," to treat this pretended act as a nullity, and to faithfully execute such laws as this bill attempted to repeal.

I am, respectfully,
Your most obedient servant,
SIMEON BELDEN,
Attorney General.

STEAMER GREAT REPUBLIC.

A Legal Muddle About the Sale.

The St. Louis Democrat of Monday reports that the steamer Great Republic which cost $260,000, was put up for sale the other day by the United States Marshal, and only $25,000 was bid for her. The Marshal made the following return of the sale to the court:

That he executed the writ by publishing notice of sale of the within named steamboat, etc., by advertisement in the St. Louis papers, Cincinnati Commercial and Pittsburg Commercial, daily twenty days, as herein ordered. And at the time and place named in said notice, fearing that from a combination of bidders that said vessel would be sacrificed, I notified all parties that unless I should receive a fair, reasonable bid, that I would not put said boat up for sale, that I reserved the right to refuse all and any bids not deemed reasonable; that Captain Henry Symmes offered the sum of $25,000; that I promptly told him I would not receive said offer or put the vessel up at that sum; that if any one would advance on the sum of $50,000 I would put her up and sell her. No one bid or offered anything but said Symmes. After seeking for bids, and no other bid being made, and believing that if I put said boat up no higher bid would be received or made, and at the earnest request and desire of the parties in interest present and their counsel, I declined to put up or sell said vessel for want of bidders.

The attorney for Captain Symmes appeared before the District Court Monday, and filed the following motion to amend the Marshal's return:

W. H. Brown vs. steamboat Great Republic.—Now at this day comes Henry Symmes, the purchaser of the steamboat Great Republic, at a sale of said boat, made on the twenty-seventh day of November, 1868, under order of this court heretofore made, and says hat said boat was duly advertised for sale in pursuance of said order, and in pursuance of said order and advertisement the said boat was put up at public auction, and offered for sale to the highest bidder by the United States Marshal on the day last aforesaid; that the said Henry Symmes bid the sum of thirty thousand dollars for said boat; that for some time after said bid the boat was still offered for sale by said Marshal, but that no one else bid more than the said sum of thirty thousand dollars, his being the cnly bid for that amount, and so he says he was the highest and best bidder for said boat; he asks, therefore, that the Marshal may be required to amend his return on said order of sale, so as to show that the said steamboat—Great Republic—was regularly offered for sale in accordance with the requirements of said sale, and that the said Henry Symmes was the highest and best bidder; and that he became the purchaser thereof for the sum of thirty thousand dollars.

This motion was argued by Colonel Broadhead, who contended that the sale having been administered, and Captain Symmes being the highest and best bidder was entitled to the possession of the boat. A number of the libellants were present at the sale and had an opportunity to protect their claims by advancing the bids.

Mr. Rankin and Mr. Hart opposed the motion, and claimed that the sale was not in accordance with the order of the court. The court had ordered the boat to be sold "at Carondelet," whereas the boat was not within the limits of Carondelet when sold.

Judge Treat said that if, as was alleged, the libellants were present and permitted the vessel to be sold at a smaller sum than was required to cover their claims, the fault was their own and they could not claim the protection of the court. He stated that he would hear the testimony on Wednesday next, when the matter would be disposed of.

THE LOUISIANA REVENUE FRAUDITES.

How Democratic Carpet-Baggers Act.

[Correspondence of the Cincinnati Chronicle.]

WASHINGTON, November 25.—There seems to be an explosion in Louisiana among the fraudites. The presence of Perry Fuller, as Collector of Customs, was the last drop. It has long been understood that the New Orleans whisky rings were probably more dishonest and corrupt even than those in New York. Nobody expected anything else from Fuller. He was probably appointed to enable him to replenish a purse somewhat depleted by his great exertions in saving the President from impeachment, and, later still, in moving those who seek to prove the corruption of Mr. Commissioner Rollins, in order to enable them to show how very honest their administration of the Revenue Bureau would be.

It is claimed that the recent appointment of Mr. Creecy (late appointment clerk of the Treasury) as Revenue Supervisor for Louisiana and Arkansas, is a bold rebuff to the ring that has controlled revenue affairs in Louisiana and Arkansas. Perhaps t is so intended, but it is my impression that it will take a man of sterner mould than he is to beat a crew whose master spirits are such persons as those who hold the Federal appointments in Louisiana. Ask Thomas J. Durant, the ablest and most upright loyalist of that State, how he was defeated, and a picture of astounding corruption will be given. If General Grant shall succeed in giving us a piece of the revenue, as well as peace to loyal persons, we shall have an additional reason to be grateful.

It is said that strong suspicion has been entertained for some time past of the frauds that were being perpetrated in Louisiana. Newspaper men here, who have had any opportunity of knowing something of Louisiana matters, have not doubted for two years past the character of the operations going on there. It is believed that the Government has been plundered during the last eighteen months of over ten millions of dollars on cotton and whisky alone. Twenty thousand gallons of whisky were, it is declared, manufactured each of the last twelve months, on which the whisky tax was two dollars per gallon, in the city of New Orleans alone. Let us hope that Creecy may unfold the creases in these affairs.

THE NICKEL COUNTERFEITORS.

ARRAIGNMENT BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER.

Examination of Witnesses.

Further Examination of Witnesses.

GREGORA AND VALCOUR COMMITTED.

Mrs. Gregora on Bail.

SCENE BETWEEN HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Antonio Gregora, Mary Gregora and Marie Valcour, the three persons arrested on Sunday last charged with the manufacture of counterfeit nickels, and the latter with having die tools and materials for such manufacture found in her possession, were brought before United States Commissioner Warren yesterday for examination. Gregora and his wife are both of them Italians, and Marie Valcour is apparently about thirty years of age. William H. Hunt, Esq., appeared for the prosecution, and John H. Bernos, Esq., as counsel for the defense of Antonio and Mary Gregora. The examination into the charge against the Gregoras was first begun, and the following testimony was taken:

Wm. Walsh—Is a detective on the Metropolitan force. On Wednesday, the twenty-fifth November, went to the stand of Antonio Gregora, corner of Orleans and Robertson streets and bought three oranges and gave him a twenty-five cent bill. On the following Friday Wm. Houlihan (special officer) and myself went there. We then went to the Superintendent and reported. Saturday evening, about half-past seven, myself, Houlihan and Officer Canonge visited the residence of Mr. Gregora and his stand. On the following morning we went to Mr. Gregora's stand, presented a search warrant to Mr. Gregora and put him under arrest. Mrs. Gregora then ran from the stand to their residence. Mr. Canonge, myself and one other pursued her to their residence, leaving Gregora in the charge of Corporal Walsh. We found Mrs. Gregora with a basket of nickels, attempting to secrete them under the bed in a band-box. We took seventy-three dollars in nickes from the band-box. Those now produced in court are a sample of them. The rest are at the office of the Superintendent. I then arrested the parties, Gregora and wife.

At this point the examination into the charge againt Gregora and his wife was continued over until to-day. The examination of the charge againt Marie Valcour was next begun, the following testimony being taken:

William Walsh, Special Officer—On Sunday morning, between seven and eight o'clock, I visited the residence of Paul and Mary Valcour, on Treme, between Orleans and St. Peter streets. Officers Canonge, Houlihan and myself knocked on the door; we received no answer. I then opened a side door and saw Mary Valcour pouring in the lead or spelter into the dies or something. We then all entered the house. I then saw Mary Valcour coming out of the house with a large number of bars of lead or debased metal similar to the one now produced in court. I then arrested her and sent her to the station. We then searched the house and found some fifty or sixty moulds similar to the one now produced. We then found some thirty or forty pounds of composition or metal, now at the First District Station. We also found some eight moulds in the stove, heating or baking.

Officer Houlihan—From information received from Mrs. Gregora, we went to the house of Mary Valcour. Officer Walsh went into the house by a side door. I saw Mary Valcour with a ladle, pouring the melted lead into something. We then went inside and saw Mary Valcour attempting to carry out some bars of the metal—a sample of which is now produced. We found a large quantity of melted lead spilt around the stove, which was heated. We found some unfinished nickels, to the amount of thirty or forty dollars, concealed in different places or packages. We left all we found at the Treme Station and afterward they were carried to the main station, except that which a sample of is now produced. After Mary Valcour put down the ladle we picked it up. It was warm.

Michael Walsh—Is acting Corporal on the police. Myself and the other officers had information that nickels were made on Treme street, between St. Peter and Orleans streets, at the house occupied by defendant. We went there and could not get admittance. Officers Walsh and Canonge went in at the side door; I remained outside. I then went in and found Mary Valcour much excited. She was arrested and carried to the station by officer Canonge. We searched the premises and found some seventy or eighty bars of the lead, a sample of which is now produced We found a large number of unfinished nickels.

The examination was continued to 1:30 P. M. to-day.

---

The examination of the charge of counterfeiting against Antoino and Mary Gregora was resumed yesterday before United States Commissioner Warren. The following testimony was taken:

Thomas Houlihan—On Sunday morning, the twenty-ninth, we were accompanied by Corporal Walsh, Canonge and William Walsh to the stand of Mr. Gregora, and produced a warrant, informing Mr. Gregora that he was arrested for passing counterfeit nickels. Mrs. Gregora then went toward her house. We went to the house of Gregora, and found Mrs. Gregora in the act of secreting the nickels, now shown in the basket produced in court, under the bed. We then arrested Mrs. Gregora, and carried her to the station, and took possession of the nickels, which are now shown in the same basket.

P. Z. Canonge—On Sunday, the twenty-ninth, myself, officers Houlihan and Walsh visited the stand of Mr. Gregora. Officer Walsh arrested Mr. Gregora on the charge of having counterfeit nickels in his possession, and passing the same. Officer Houlihan opened the drawer of the stand of Gregora, and captured three dollars and twenty-five cents in counterfeit nickels and twenty-five cents in good nickels. Mrs. Gregora then came up, and when she saw the drawer was open she ran to her residence, and I pursued her. When I entered the house Mrs. Gregora had the basket in her hands, placing it under the bed. I took the basket to the station myself, counted the nickels, and found seventy-two dollars.

Michael Walsh—Assisted in arresting Mr. Gregora. After arresting Gregora, I asked him where he procured these nickels. He said he had bought them at the rate of $100 for $50. Mrs. Gregora then told her husband to tell where the man lived that made the counterfeit nickels, saying, "I told you before you would get me into a difficulty."

M. K. Peck—Having for some time received counterfeit nickels from Mr. Gregora, I came to the belief that he was in the habit of passing counterfeit nickels. On the twenty-fifth of November I bought three oranges and gave him a fifty cent bill and received two counterfeit nickels, which I now produce. On the morning of the twenty-sixth Gregora gave me three more counterfeit nickels in change for somethin that I bought. On the morning of the twenty-sixth I bought an orange of Gregora for five cents and gave him a dime. He gave me the counterfeit nickel now produced in change. On the morning of the twenty-seventh I purchased ten cents' worth of oranges of Mrs. Gregora. She gave me a counterfeit nickel in change, which nickel is now at the Treme Station.

The Commissioner, in default of the prescribed amount of bail, four thousand dollars, committed Antonio Gregora and Marie Valcour for trial before the United States Circuit Court. Mrs. Gregora was released upon giving bonds of $1500 to appear at the same time. The separation between herself and her husband, when the latter was led off in the custody of a deputy marshal was an extremely interesting scene and made those present regret that the rigor of the law should have intervened to part two so evidently attached to each other.

DR. NEWMAN IN WASHINGTON.

The following able article is taken from the Methodist Home Journal, of November 28:

MR. EDITOR—Foundry, to its utmost capacity, was crowded on Sunday, to hear that distinguished orator and divine, Rev. J. P. Newman, of New Orleans, who had been announced the previous Sabbath to preach, morning and evening. In the audience of the morning were General Grant and members of his staff, several members of Congress, and other notables of the Government. The text was the closing expression of Christ's valedictory: "I have overcome the world."

The preacher, having read his text, closed the Bible, and spoke in a strain of great fervency and eloquence, for one hour and a quarter. His introduction, delivered in a clear, musical voice, led the listener on by a train of well associated ideas, to the two-fold divisions of the subject: "In what sense Christ overcame the world;" and "what encouragement Christians may therefrom derive." The argument on each of the divisions displayed much ingenuity and learning, and was really brilliant with historical, poetical and classical illustrations. Of thrilling power was that part of the peroration, in which the Christian was represented as tempted, tried, buffeted, cast down, weak in faith—and to each and every phase of Christian conflict and experience, the precious words of the Saviour were applied: "Be of good cheer: I have overcome the world." The oft-repeated words, "be of good cheer," was the sweetest music to many a throbbing heart!

At night many failed to find even standing room in the church, and had to turn away disappointed. The text was: "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?" The discourse was even more powerful than that of the morning. The preacher seemed more at ease, and to have, if possible, a better command of his subject. The journey of Saul from Jerusalem to Damascus was a magnificent panoramic representation of sacred brooks, and vales, and rivers, and mountains, and cities, each pointed out as the scene of some thrilling event, or flashing with the brilliancy of oriental grandeur—so sacred!—so sublime—till looms up in the distance the city of Damascus, when the blinding light blazes forth, and the voice is heard from far beyond the region of thunder: "Saul, SAUL, why persecutest thou me?" Saul, smitten from his steed to the earth, cries out: "Who art thou, Lord?" And from the same distant heavens comes back the answer: "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest!" Rarely, if ever, has there been a more life-like and powerful reproduction of this awfully sublime and amazingly gloriously transaction! The preacher seemed filled with the majesty of his great theme; and yet perfectly self-possessed amid all its glowing magnificence!

Dr. Newman, in voice, manner, gesture and time, is well nigh faultless. In the last mentioned particular, in which so many preachers fail, he greatly excels—the movement of his voice admirably corresponding to the sense of each sentence—indeed of each word—he utters. His style, too, is very rich, and his words are chosen with intuitive exactness. In the opinion of your correspondent, but few men possess equal power of accompli-hing great good in the vineyard of the Lord. And yet, it is said, that careful self-culture, persisted in the last few years, has, by the blessing of God, culminated in his present mastery of pulpit oratory. Is not this fact encouraging to the hearts of those young ministers who ardently desire enlarged power of usefulness, and who are willing to forego present ease for its attainment?

The City Government.

The following paragraphs are extracted from a sensible article in the Bulletin of Thursday on the city loan ordinance:

The City Hall should not be converted into a grand eleemosynary institution, but its doors ought to be closed against those official pap suckers who prey upon the lifeblood of the community. Abolish the offices of Chairmen of the Committees on Finance and Streets and Landings. This will save five thousand dollars per annum. Dispense with the useless services of the clerks, etc., about these two offices, and that will save five thousand dollars more. Stop paying contractors seven thousand dollars for building two iron bridges on Canal street that could have been done for $3000. Curtail the official printing by omitting the publication of all the specifications of contracts—a matter that interests but five or six persons in the city. Abolish the High School and extend public education only to the indigent, and limit that to the elementary branches, and thus save one hundred thousand dollars per annum. Correct the abuses of the Street Commissioner's department, and inaugurate a new contract system. In a word, administer the affairs of the city as a careful and discreet man would his own private business, and the city's embarrassments will soon be removed.

The people of the city are justified in questioning the ability of the present City Council to restore order out of that chaos which the present administration have brought about. There has been a manifest want of wisdom in their deliberations and a sinful neglect of the public interests. In plain terms the Council is not composed of the proper material, and consequently this body fails to command the confidence of the people.

The Late Governor Tod.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, November 17, 1868.

George B. Senter, Esq., Cleveland Ohio:

MY DEAR SIR—I thank you for the consideration which moved you to advise me of the sudden and lamentable departure of the late David Tod. Mr. Tod, although long a distinguished public character, only became personally known to me in what, perhaps, was the most trying crisis of the late civil war. His previous connection with the Democratic party enabled him to render invaluable service to our Union administration. He gave me full confidence on the spot, and he never failed afterward to yield the most vigorous and energetic support to the government. It was the patriotic services thus rendered the nation which induced President Lincoln, upon my suggestion, to tender to Mr. Tod the office of Secretary of the Treasury when Mr. Salmon P. Chase resigned. Few citizens of the United States have left a purer or nobler record. Very truly, yours,

WILLIAM H. SEWARD.

ARMY REUNION.

The December Meeting of the Armies of the Ohio, Tennessee, Georgia and Cumberland.

ADDRESSES OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

HEADQUARTERS EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE
Of the Armies of the Cumberland,
Tennessee, Ohio and Georgia,
Chicago, November 28.

Soldiers of the Armies of the Tennessee, the Cumberland, the Ohio, and Georgia:

The regular annual meeting of the soldiers of the Cumberland and Tennessee has been called to meet at Chicago on the fifteenth and sixteenth of December next; and Lieutenant General Sherman in his letter of April 20 has invited the officers of the armies of the Ohio and Georgia to assemble at the same time and place, in order that those who so long fought side by side may unite in a general reunion, and cement more closely the old friendship on the field, and to revive the recollections of those years which must always claim place and precedence amid the tamer recollections of a lifetime.

Assurances have been received that the commanders of each of these armies, and many of their most distinguished officers, including Generals Grant, Sherman, Thomas and Sheridan, Schofield, Slocum and Howard, and most of the corps, division and brigade commanders will be present.

Local committees, representing each of the armies, have been appointed, and a general executive committee organized, which is making all necessary preparations. The rendezvous of the army of the Tennessee will be at the Tremont House; of the Armies of the Cumberland and Georgia, at the Sherman House; and of the Army of the Ohio, at the Briggs House. Officers now in the service are requested to appear in their uniform; others in citizens' dress, wearing the badges of their respective armies and societies.

Arrangements have been perfected, by which all the railroads centering at Chicago, with their connecting lines, will convey those attending at reduced rates. To assist in decoration, all who have corps, division, brigade or regimental colors, are requested to forward them by express to Major W. L. B. Jenney, Chicago.

During the daytime of the fifteenth and sixteenth the different societies will hold their separate meetings in halls provided for the purpose.

On the evening of the fifteenth the address of welcome by Lieutenant General Sherman, and the addresses to the different societies by the appointed orators, will be pronounced in Crosby's Opera House before the united societies.

On the night of the sixteenth the general banquet will be given in the vast and beautiful Board of Trade Hall, which has been kindly tendered for the purpose. The difficulty of providing a banquet such as this for so large a body of gentlemen, in entire uncertainty beforehand of how many will be present—whether one thousand or three—will be apparent to all, and the committees, unwilling to incur the risk of any short-coming, feel the necessity of asking every one who intends to be present, and who wishes to attend the banquet, to forward at once his application for a ticket, accompanied by his name, rank and command. The names will be entered for tickets as received, and those who do not apply must not feel aggrieved if they are not provided for at the banquet.

The committees are assured that this will be by far the most notable assemblage of soldiers that has occurred since the war.

It may be the only opportunity we shall have of meeting so large a body of our former companions in arms, and all entitled to membership in either of the societies are cordially invited to come and live again, for a few brief hours, bright as brief in the glorious recollections of the past.

One evening a little girl of six year heard her father read an account of a mechanic whose arm was torn by machinery. No one supposed she took any notice of it; but when she went up stairs she began to sob violently. When asked what was the matter, she exclaimed: "Oh, dear! what shall I do if they marry me to a machine man?" Her mother, scarcely able to repress laughter, replied: "Don't cry about that, my child; perhaps you will never be married." "Oh, yes, I shall," she responded, trying to swallow her sobs; "they will marry me to somebody, and likely as not he will be a machine man; and if he breaks his arm all to pieces, I sha'n't know nothing what to do."

The following is from the St. Louis Democrat:

In Louisiana, it seems, the State authorities have adopted the Missouri method of dealing with Democratic swindles—wherever the whole election was fraudulent, the authorities threw out the whole return. There is really no other way to bring these Democratic scoundrels to their senses. If they continue swindling, State and Federal governments must teach them that frauds only result in throwing away the votes of those Democrats who are legal voters. If the vote of New York should be thrown out by the Electoral College, it would be a good lesson.

The Empire Parish, published at Pointe-a-la-Hache, Plaquemines parish, has five columns of editorial on the one per cent tax, containing reminiscences of Democratic Legislatures and Auditor Peralta, and closing with this blunt and unpolished language:

Read ye, Disciples of Jeff Davis and the devil, and weep. Ponder it well, ye sage opponents of the tax, and blush, if blush you can, for your inconsistency and vacillation.

The following, from the Rural Times, published at Sparta, Bienville parish, by a member of the Legislature of 1866, is about the first paragraph we have seen condemnatory of the destruction of newspaper offices:

We learn with regret that another raid has been made upon the office of the Homer Iliad, resulting in such destruction as to compel the proprietor to suspend the publication of his paper. Such outrages are to be deprecated, whatever the motives or causes that instigate them.

Brigham Young is in the habit of venting his little periodical growl against the Government of the United States for its persecution of the Mormon saints. But that same tyrannical Government pays $453,798 to deliver the love letters of Mr. Young and his concubines, his territory contributing $16,000 of the amount—the balance being paid out of the common treasury into the uncommon pockets of the contractors. Polygamy is a good thing, so long as U. Sam is at hand to pay the cost of correspondence.

The Advocate for 1869.

A new volume of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE will commence January 1, 1869. It is our purpose to make it one of the best weekly religious journals in the Southwest. Primarily promoting the interest of the Church, it will still be the defender of liberty, and the educator of the freedmen. Thankful for past patronage from our friends, both in the North and in the South, we earnestly hope they will continue their subscription for another year; and we expect to add many new subscribers to our list.

But that there may be no misunderstanding in the matter, we hereby give notice, that unless otherwise informed, we shall continue to send the paper to all present subscribers, and in due time will send their bills.

It is our intention to publish the ADVOCATE in its present form and size, at three dollars per annum, and furnish such religious, literary and political matter as will best promote the present and future interests of man. Send on your names and your money.

Notice.

ANNUAL CONFERENCES TAKE NOTICE—A CHANGE OF TIME.—Since our last issue we received the following note from Bishop Simpson, from which it will be seen that the time for holding the three Southwestern Conferences is changed. This may be considered final:

Dear Brother: Please announce the following changes: The Mississippi Conference will convene at Canton, Mississippi, on Thursday, January 7; the Louisiana Conference at New Orleans, January 13; the Texas Conference at Austin, January 21.

M. SIMPSON.

AMES CHURCH.—The religious interest in this church is rapidly increasing. Since the third of November the congregation has more than doubled. On last Thursday evening four persons rose for prayers, and at the sacrament on last Sabbath, three persons joined from the Church South. The class meetings are largely attended, and the religious interest deep and precious. Considerable zeal is manifested in the Sunday school, in which are 260 scholars, and all are now looking forward, with pleasing anticipation, to the approaching Christmas festival.

BROKEN WINDOWS.—During the recent riots in this city, some persons, not altogether unknown, gratified their political malice by breaking the elegant windows in the Ames Church. At first, supposing that it was the work of mischievous boys, the trustees expended some twenty-five dollars in repairs; but the attack was soon repeated, and the trustees have sense enough not to repair, but to allow the broken windows to remain a monument of the fury and folly of political partisan feeling. Whether the glass are broken by small boys or large boys, neither would dare to do it if they were not so instructed at home, and encouraged by the press of this city.

FROM OCEAN TO OCEAN—UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD.—It is now believed that this great railroad, stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific, will be completed by July, 1869. Therefore, we propose, that the trains shall start, one from New York, and the other from San Francisco, at a given time, and shall meet at Sherman, the summit of the Rocky Mountains, on July fourth, 1869, and there and then plant the flag of our country, and sing the old doxology to the glory of our fathers' God.

A. Simon, 85 Baronne street, between Union and Perdido streets, has about a hundred and fifty different varieties of magazines and papers on sale. He is agent for "Greeley's History of the Rebellion," and "Women of the War." He has all of Harper's periodicals, and last but not least he sells the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Christian Experience.

It is a happy circumstance that in our religious system the necessities of the million are consulted. No one can reject Christianity as an experience to possess and enjoy, because they are by want of education incapable of investigating and comprehending it. Happily the "logic of the life" can be studied without books, and the untutored utterances of a rustic may convey the richest wisdom of Heaven. A countryman, pressed by a scholar for his arguments to sustain the religion he professed, replied, pointing to his breast, "They are here;" and the little boy convert, after listening to much talk from an infidel lawyer, and being bantered to reply, said, "One day you will have to stand before the bar of God. What will you say then?" Men lose sight of the beautiful simplicity of the Gospel of Christ, and excuse themselves for neglecting religion, while discussing or avoiding as mysterious what is least essential. Jesus taught more by his life and death than by his words, and He was careful always to eulogize the good conduct of others, saying of those even who followed not after him, "Rebuke them not," and of the Roman soldier, "I have not seen so great faith, no not in Israel," while the centurion's prayers and alms brought angels to his dwelling. Jesus severely chid the orthodox Pharisees and doctors of law, the ritualists and bigots of Judea, and wasted no time in idle controversy; but with the peculiarity of all great minds, marched straight through theories, fallacies, preliminaries, to the object of his mission and of all revelation, "Thou shalt love God with all thy heart, and thy neighbor as thyself."

There is more power in a word of true experience, be it only "I love Jesus," than in barrels of dry sermons upon controverted questions; the hours you spend in criticising preachers, censuring Christians, excusing yourselves, or studying doctrines are more than wasted. If you want religion in your soul, Christ in your heart, heaven on earth, be willing to accept the same sort of testimony as in other matters; the evidence of such as known; who have seen and heard, and therefore speak. By this test true and false religion is discerned, and the judgment of charity can not be satisfied with aught but a clear testimony of the Holy Spirit's inward work, and the confirmation of a pure life. Christian experience is a sense more or less evident of that inward "peace of God that passeth all understanding." Thus our faith or religion is a substance, a thing of consciousness, one in kind, but not in degree, with that possessed by the saints in Heaven. It is strange that many object to the profession of this experience; its mere supernatural and inexplicable character is reason enough for the wise ones to rebuke its testimony, while others object for fear of expressing too much or of being deceived. As well object to the use of any other good thing for fear of its abuse; enough that the utterance does not give it, nor guarantee its possession; nor is the abundance of words the measure of its richness or extent. It is true that out of the fulness of the heart the mouth speaketh, but no less true that "still water runs deepest." Like the man who had been born blind, the genuine convert must say with more or less of earnestness "whereas I was blind, I now see." The contrast so evident to him can not but strike others with wonder, and such valuable testimony in favor of religion can not be ignored. Our unconverted friends expect and wish us to speak of it, and because it is reasonable; is not hearsay; and all the witnesses agree in substance. Nothing is more efficient in bringing people to Christ.

This religious enjoyment, or life within, is communion with God; oneness of feeling and interest with Jesus, and a business partnership really with the Creator of all; with Him who is the "Husbandman," "Householder," "Judge of all the earth."

It is common for unthinking minds to object; that talk about Christian experience is well enough for the poor, unlettered or superstitious people. The unprejudiced reader of history and fair observer among men will know this is not the case. Men abounding in wealth, high in station, grand in intellect, have in this particular stood side by side and spoken word for word with every other class, for here is equality and fraternity as it can nowhere else exist. Here all distinctions and pure religion is the great leveler, for it raises all its votaries up to God; none so base as cannot be ennobled by it, and none so great but may gain new lustre from it.

'Piety hath found
Friends in the friends of science, and true prayer
Has flamed from lips wet with castalian dews.
Such was thy wisdom, Newton, child-like sage!
Sagacious reader of the works of God,
And in His word sagacious. Such too thine, Milton, whose genius had angelic wings
And fed on manna. And such thine, in whom
Our British themis gloried with just cause,
Immortal Hale, for deep discernment praised
And sound integrity, not more than famed
For sanctity of manners undefiled."

"Thou Shalt Not Kill."

From his highest throne God thunders this solemn command. It is the sixth commandment of the Decalogue, promulgated amid the awful grandeur of Mount Sinai, and clothed with all the majesty and authority of the omnipotent God. It is a prohibition of all cruelty, and especially of the death of a fellow man from malicious intentions. The principle of this law was announced to Noah in those impressive words, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed; for in the image of God made he man." And in subsequent revelations the Almighty has thrown around human life the most solemn safeguards, and as the strongest motive to deter man from violence, Jehovah has warned him that "no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." And as if conscious of the authority and beneficence of this law, all good governments have protected life by the severest penalties, and the most eminent jurists have been the defenders of a Divine law, which, more than any other law, underlies the existence and well-being of soceity. In the whole calendar of offenses no one crime so completely demoralizes society as murder, and where murders are frequent the stability of government is overthrown and anarchy ensues. No community can safely look with indifference upon this most atrocious crime, nor allow its perpetrators to go unpunished. Every man who values his own life, and that of his wife and offspring; who prizes the sanctities of home, the blessings which property confers, and the softening and benign influences of religion can fail to throw all his influence, by precept and example, against the wanton destruction of human life.

These reflections have been suggested by the recent murders and homicides committed in our city and State, and the time has fully come when the pulpit, the press and the judiciary should speak out in no unequivocal language. The frequency of these crimes in our midst has reduced us in the estimation of better communities, to the level of a semi-civilized people, and to-day we are classed with Spain and Mexico. Has not the time come for us to strike for a higher civilization and a better code of morals? And to this end a more healthy public sentiment must be created. Our clergymen have too long been silent on this crying evil. Let Palmer, and Leacock, and Walker, and Moynihan take the text at the head of this article and say to the people: "Thou shalt not kill." Will they reply that only political enemies are slain? Let them remember that God's command is against all malicious homicides, whatever may be the source of malice. Let the city press rebuke the ease with which life is taken in our midst, and portray the inevitable evils of the prevalence of such murderous deeds. Especially should our grand juries be charged with the suppression of this growing violence, and jurors sitting on the trial of those arraigned for these crimes should feel that in their hands, more perhaps than in the hands of any other portion of the community, is the remedy for the evils we now deprecate. And the whole community should lift up its united voice against the common practice of our citizens carrying firearms.

But the speedier and more certain cure of the evil is the swift punishment of the murderers. The safety of society consists in the punishment of crime, and no government is worth a farthing that allows the guilty to go unscathed of justice. Strike terror to this custom of killing men, by hanging a few of the murderers. Let examples be made of all who are guilty, and others will be deterred from the commission of similar offenses. If the civil authorities can not do it, let Congress suspend the writ of habeas corpus, and let military commissions be instituted for the trial of the accused and there are not wanting witnesses to convict the guilty and doom them to the gallows. We shall not live in safety until this is done; and the sooner justice is measured out to the murderers of our fellow-citizens the sooner will society rest in safety beneath the broad ægis of civil law.

Congress—What the South Needs.

The day breaks. Congress is again in session. Loyal hearts grow stout with hope. The time intervening since Congress adjourned, has been a night of impending gloom, and of more than Egyptian darkness, to the Union men of Louisiana. The State, denuded of troops, by malicious intent, and denied a militia force by a law blind to the best interests of society; and commanded by generals in partisan sympathy with the enemies of reconstruction, it has been a Coliseum where Southern gladiators have slain the unarmed victims of their political hate, and a human slaughterhouse, where hundreds of helpless freedmen have been "led as lambs to the slaughter." Churches have been sacked, and their ministers murdered or exiled; schoolhouses burned, and their children scattered; presses destroyed and their editors maltreated; homes have been invaded at dead of night and pillaged; their inmates killed or their arms and registration papers forcibly taken from them; the public peace has been broken; civil authority trampled in the dust and the officers of the law atrociously assassinated. Such is the outline of a picture painted in blood; a ghastly memorial of three months' reign of terror, and a testimonial of a barbaric fury which future time will blush to own as part of her venerable annals. Gladly would we drop the curtain of oblivion over the horrid record, and like the sons of Noah, move backward and cast the mantle of charity over the nakedness of our State; but God and humanity, justice and mercy, good government and society, the living and the dead, the present and the future demand an exposé and the punishment of the guilty.

What does Louisiana need? What has she a right to demand and expect from Congress? The forces of a government are two-fold—civil and military. In ordinary times the former is sufficient to keep the peace and execute the laws; but in times of violence and widespread disorder, the military power of the State is as requisite as it is lawful. In this State the civil force is practically exhausted, and the strong military arm of the government should now be stretched out to protect the innocent and punish the guilty. And such a force should be State militia rather than Federal military. While the latter would be more expensive and less efficient, it would be a foreign element, and, therefore, would not impart the inherent strength to the State government, which is the great desideratum. The military force should be domestic; composed of men whose property, lives and families are at stake, and whose every interest would inspire fidelity, courage and firmness. We need CITIZEN SOLDIERS, armed and equipped, and commanded by the Governor of the State. The absolute command of such troops should be in his hands. Aside from his competency, this would give compactness, stability, power to his administration. Eighty thousand free men in Louisiana stand ready to respond to his call, to become citizen-soldiers, whose homes are in every parish, and city, and town of our State, and who could be organized as an armed police, ready at a moment's call to put down any forcible resistance to the law. And the State government should have this armed assistance at once; until then lawlessness will run riot; until then the laws will be violated with impunity; until then reconstruction is a practical failure.

Rice, of Arkansas, has introduced a bill into the United States Senate, which has the ring of true metal. It commands the Secretary of War to deliver to the Governors of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana and Arkansas, at their respective seats of government, as many arms for militia as the governors may require—not exceeding two thousand rifles and two field pieces for each Congressional District. These arms must go into the hands of loyal men, but remain the property of the United States, subject to the order of Congress.

Honorable Senators, pass this bill, and ere winter has yielded to the softening influences of spring, anarchy shall cease in our State, murder shall no longer stain our hearthstones, and a maddened lawlessness shall give way to peace, order and good fellowship. This is the hope of the Union men of Louisiana; this will be the end of their long night of suffering, and the dawn of their day of safety and gladness.

National Christian Convention.

A few months since, circulars were sent to many prominent clergymen and laymen throughout the United States, soliciting their signatures to a call for a National Christian Convention. Having secured over three hundred and fifty names, the circular containing these names, with the time and place of meeting, the objects thereof and the themes to be discussed, were sent broadcast over the land.

A three days session was decided on to open on the seventeenth of November at ten o'clock, in the Presbyterian Church (Dr. Hall's), corner of Fifth avenue and Twenty-ninth street, New York city. The topics for discussion were well chosen, and the men to open the discussion on each point were well selected.

The following were the topics for discussion, and were opened by the persons whose names are annexed. Some of the topics, however, were not assigned when the circulars were sent out:

1. How can the Christian activities of the entire membership of any particular Church be best organized and developed? Rev. Stephen H. Tyng, Jr.
2. Why do so many Churches fail to reach the poor? Rev. Cyrus D. Foss.
3. The right relation between the Churches and Voluntary Christian Associations. Rev. Walter Clarke, D. D.
4. How to make the week-day meetings of the Churches effective for spiritual purposes. Rev. Henry Ward Beecher.
5. Woman's Work in the Church. ——.
6. How can the influence of Christian homes be increased? ——.
7. By what means can the homes of the poor be improved? Z. R. Brockway, Esq.
8. Who should engage in lay preaching, and how? Rev. Howard Crosby, D. D.
9. How and by whom can open air services be held most profitably? ——.
10. The organization and work of City Missions. Rev. Geo. J. Mingins.
11. How can the people in rural districts be reached by Gospel influences? ——.
12. What is the work of Young Men's Christian Associations? Cephas Brainerd, Esq.
13. How can a better observance of the Sabbath be secured? Rev. Phil. Schaff, D. D.
14. How can the personal and social study of God's Word be made more general? Rev. John Hall, D. D.
15. The best method of conducting Sabbath Schools. Ralph Wells, Esq.
16. How is an unconverted person to be approached? Henry F. Durant, Esq.
17. By what means can we reach those who do not come to our Churches? D. L. Moody, Esq.
18. The possibility of evangelizing the whole world within the present century. ——.

Rev. Dr. Crosby presided over the deliberations, and it is said, with admirable ability and Christian courtesy. One hour was the period allowed for the discussion of each topic, the individual opening occupying generally about half the allotted period. No one subject, therefore, could be thoroughly discussed; but important suggestions were made as to the most efficient manner of working to secure the rapid upbuilding of the cause of Christ. Great good was no doubt accomplished, and those present, especially those who were not familiar with the simple, earnest and familiar way of working for Christ, went to their various homes and charges to be more effectual in their labors.

Methodism did not seem to be fairly represented, but to those present it was rather amusing to hear the discussions on such questions as the propriety of women speaking and working in the Church.

The Methodist in speaking of the Convention says its attention seemed to be occupied with the machinery of the Church, rather than its motive power; and that it seemed strange that with the model of church organization before them in Methodism this body of earnest men could occupy so much time in talking about the mere machinery of the Church.

We think, however, that much good will be accomplished if a knowledge of the means and plans of Methodism in working for the conversion of the masses be disseminated far and wide. For it seems to be a fact that the methods and plans which were decided to be the most effective were those which by long usage have become almost stereotyped in the Methodist Church.

We think these Conventions will result in much good, and therefore will hail the call for another with delight.

Bishop Morris.

On our first page will be found a letter from the Rev. Bishop Morris, senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The subject is, "Church Extension," and is treated in that concise, comprehensive and direct style, so characteristic of whatever falls from his lips or flows from his pen. It is absolutely refreshing to come in contact with one whose years are so many and yet whose heart is so young. His indeed is "a green old age," and he is a most beautiful illustration of Christian cheerfulness in advanced life. In him harmoniously blend the joyousness of youth ond the serene dignity of mature manhood. Such an one dieth not; death is but the passage from one mansion to another. Dr. Kynett and the whole church will thank the venerable Bishop for his timely letter in behalf of a great and pressing cause; and this brief epistle on such a subject, is in evidence that Bishop Morris, in all matters of useful progress, is the most advanced man in our church.

Doctor Carlton.

That inimitable letter writer, "G. W. W.," has paid a well deserved and hard-earned compliment to this distinguished minister of our Church, who for so many years has stood at the head of our large publishing house, and who has been and is the Treasurer of our Missionary Society. It is not too much to say that in view of his long term of service in both of the above named positions, no man in the Methodist Episcopal Church has been intrusted with more money than Dr. Carlton, and no one has a cleaner record for integrity and sound judgment. Of a commanding form, and to strangers of a brusque appearance, yet at home and in the social circle he is one of the gentlest and most gentlemanly of men. A sagacious financier, a wise man, and a true and ardent son of the Church, the historian of our Zion, will point to him as the great financier of American Methodism:

Among the remarkable men in this Missionary Committee, a single word ought to be said concerning their veteran Treasurer, Rev. Thomas Carlton. Mr. Carlton has great influence in our missionary matters, though he is not to the liking of the more pronounced and enthusiastic, and I have no doubt he might be very much improved along those lines. I hardly believe, however, that in sound financial sense, in unconquerable good humor, in honest devotion to Methodism, our missionary Treasurer can be excelled in the denomination, and his many years of free and unpaid service as an officer on our missionary staff has secured for him the confidence and respect of the Church. It is a pleasant thought to me that our beloved Methodism has developed so many prime men to superintend her interests, and to carry forward her work, and it is an equally pleasant thought that the Church is not unmindful of such faithful servants; but that we have both the heart and the ability to do for them as well as they do for us. G. W. W.

THOMAS W. CONWAY.—We rejoice that this gentleman is regaining his health. A more ardent patriot, a more earnest Republican, a more zealous friend of education, a more honest citizen and a more maligned man is not living in New Orleans. The State should be congratulated on having Mr. Conway at the head of its educational department, and instead of that wild radical man, he has been usually considered, he will be found an earnest, intelligent, religious and practical officer. We look forward hopefully that Mr. Conway will place, educationally, Louisiana along side of Massachusetts.

JOHNSON'S LAST.—An abstract of the President's message may be found in another column. We shall review the document at length at another time; at present we can only express our astonishment at the man's presumption, our admiration for his perseverance, and our contempt for his willful misrepresentations. It is not true that an attempt has been made to place the white people of the South "under the domination of persons of color," nor can it be done. He laments the bloodshed in the South, forgetting that he himself is the bloodshedder. He maliciously removed Sheridan from us, and to that one act may be traced all the murders of Union men in our State, since September, 1867. He complains of the increase of the public debt, but forgets that the stupendous frauds on the internal revenue and the thieves and plunderers in the "whisky ring," of which he has had certain knowledge, have withheld hundreds of millions of dollars from the United States Treasury, which would have reduced the debt of which he whiningly complains

But let us thank God that this mischievous man is near his official end; that he has delivered his farewell to a Congress that has had the firmness to resist his usurpations, and that soon he will descend to that oblivion over which the whole nation will sing one long and loud doxology to God.

DENNETT.—Mr. Dennett, of the Planters' Banner, proposes to discuss with us the "murder of Pope and Chase," but we decline to do so at the present time, for the reason that no practical good can ensue therefrom. Mr. Dennett would not believe what we might say, and we would not believe what Mr. Dennett might state. The proof adduced on both sides would be ex parte at best, and such is the reign of terror in Franklin, that the witnesses against the murderers would imperil their lives by deposing their testimony. But if Mr. Dennett will wait till after the fourth of next March, when an impartial trial can be held, and witnesses will be safe in person and property to testify, and their testimony given under oath and in open court, we will discuss the question with him in the paper or on the forum

Sheridan should return to Louisiana and remain here till the civil authorities are permanently established. He is a host in himself. His name is a tower of strength. He is an army of ONE. The Democrats hold him in respectful fear; and the "unterrified" become quiet as kittens in his magical presence. Now that Buchanan is going to the plains to issue rations to squaws and papooses, and Rousseau is going to Washington to console Andy in his last official moments, Congress should create a necessity for the immediate return to Louisiana of little Phil, whose presence would be the signal of one of the grandest ovations our city has ever witnessed.

WORTH ATTENTION.—We remind all our readers that they will consult their own profit as well as pleasure by providing themselves now with that most excellent, interesting and valuable journal called the American Agriculturist—though not exclusively an agricultural journal, as it has been enlarged to embrace the garden, and especially household labors and cares, and the wants and interests of children and youth. It is as valuable for the residents of cities and villages, as for country people. No other journal for the same money gives so large an amount of really useful, reliable, practical information. The paper is literally full of good things carefully prepared by intelligent, thoroughly practical men. The hundreds of beautiful engravings given in each volume, are pleasing and interesting in a high degree, and are alone worth many times the subscription price, which is placed very low on account of the immense circulation that enables the publishers to give a great deal for a little money. The Agriculturist is not a new enterprise of uncertain value and promise, but is just entering upon its twenty-eighth annual volume, with a long established, useful character.

DENTISTRY.—Operations in dentistry are performed by Dr. B. F. Wright, No. 153 Customhouse street, between Dauphine and Burgundy streets, in the best manner, and at about half the usual rates during these hard times. These low prices will be continued a few weeks more.

Prang's chromos, which are now so largely advertised, and which are considered the very best the country affords, are manufactured by L. Prang & Co., Boston, Massachusetts.

Harper's Magazine, Harper's Bazar, and Harper's Weekly, we suppose, have a larger circulation and meet with greater favor than any similar publications.

REV. Dr. NEWMAN will preach in his Church, corner of St. Charles and Calliope streets, to-morrow morning at eleven o'clock and in the evening at seven o'clock. Strangers in the city are cordially invited.

The following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, That this General Committee, acting jointly with the Bishops and the Board of Managers, hereby authorize the appropriation to each annual conference, where no other specific appropriation is made, of an amount equal to the excess of the collections, above one half of the amount assessed to each respectively—such appropriations in all cases to be made to individual churches, in accordance with the provisions of the constitution of this society.

Resolved, That in all cases where a specific appropriation is made to an annual conference, if such conference shall fail to collect the amount assessed to it, the amount of deficiency may be deducted from the appropriation; and any excess over the assessment shall be appropriated to it as in the first resolution.

The following are the provisions of the constitution of the society, and of the discipline as well, under which appropriations may be made to particular churches:

"All applications for aid from the funds of the society, shall be made in accordance with blank forms to be furnished by the Parent Board, and shall contain the information therein required.

"Every such application for aid shall be first submitted to the Conference Board of Church Extension, and said board shall certify its action thereon to the Parent Board, and aid shall be granted only by the concurrent action of both the Conference and Parent Boards; provided, however, that in any case in which such Conference Board can not be created, or act, the Bishop having charge, or a committee by him appointed, may perform the duties herein imposed upon the Conference Board."

TO REMOVE A MOTE FROM THE EYE.—Take a horse hair and double it, leaving a loop. If the mote can be seen, lay the loop over it, close the eye, and the mote will come out as the hair is withdrawn. If the irritating object can not be seen, raise the lid of the eye as far as possible, and place the loop in it as far as you can, close the eye and roll the ball around a few times, then draw out the hair; the substance which caused so much pain will be sure to come with it. This method is practiced by ax makers and other workers in steel.

The India and Germany and Switzerland Mission Conferences, and also the Chinese and Bulgarian Missions, to be visited by Bishop Kingsley in 1870.

DEATH OF DR. LABAN CLARK.—This venerable minister finished his earthly course, at his residence in Middletown, Connecticut, on Saturday night last. He continued to decline after the date of our last week's notice. On Thursday evening he became unconscious, and two days later ceased to breathe. He died without disease, and apparently without much suffering, simply of old age. His funeral is appointed for Tuesday, at 2 P. M., the first of December. As we go to press before that hour we defer further notice, both of his life and his funeral, till next week. He was in his ninety-first year—the sixty-seventh of his ministry—being the oldest itinerant minister of our church at the time of decease.—New York Christian Advocate.

Liberia.

Information about going to Liberia, from the African Repository, the organ of the Colonization Society.

We are constantly receiving letters in which the following questions are, in substance, asked. We have, therefore, condensed the facts in the following form:

Question 1. At what season of the year is it best to embark for Liberia?

Answer 1. The spring or fall is the time the vessels of the Colonization Society usually leave this country. There is very little, if any, choice between these two seasons of the year as a time to leave for Liberia.

Q. 2. How long is the voyage, and is there much danger that we shall be lost on the way?

A. 2. The length of the voyage is from thirty to fifty days; the average is about forty days. The Society have never lost a vessel with emigrants on board. The emigrants ought to be at the port of embarkation one or two days before the vessel is to sail.

Q. 3. What ought we to take with us, both for use on the voyage and after we get there?

A. 3. Every emigrant ought to be well supplied with clothing, both for summer and winter, similar to that which he wears in this country. There is no winter in Liberia, but during the rainy seasons, health is greatly promoted by wearing flannel or warm clothing. He ought also to have a good mattress and bed clothes, which he will need to use on shipboard and and after landing. If he is a mechanic, he ought to have the tools of his trade. If he is a farmer, he ought to be well supplied with axes, hoes, spades, saws, augurs, etc. And as every family is expected to keep house and live by themselves, they ought to have a good supply of table furniture and cooking utensils. It is not possible for them to take chairs, tables, bedsteads and other large articles of furniture with them, as they occupy too much room in the ship. But whatever is convenient and necessary in housekeeping and of small compass they ought to take. A keg of nails, a bale or two of domestics, and some money—five dollar gold pieces are the most serviceable—would be of use to them in erecting their houses, and paying for any labor they might need, during the first few months of their residence in Liberia.

Q. 4. How much land is given to each emigrant?

A. 4. By the laws of Liberia, each emigrant on his arrival is given a town lot, or ten acres of land. If he is the head of a family, the quantity of land is increased according to the number of his family, not exceeding twenty-five acres. This allowance may seem small, but it is aundantly sufficient for all his necessities until he is able to buy more for himself.

Q. 5. Can I educate my children there, and what will it cost?

A. 5. By a law of Liberia, all parents are required to send their children to school. In some of the settlements the schools are very good. A college, which cost $20,000 to build, is in successful operation. All the professors are colored men. The natives are at peace with the Liberians, and are generally anxious to have their children educated. A parent who wants to educate his children can do it better in Liberia than in any other place.

Q. 6. Will the Colonization Society pay my expenses in getting there?

A. 6. The Colonization Society will supply the people while on board the ship with water and provisions, with a knife and fork and spoon, cup and pan, and the necessary cooking utensils. It will also give a free passage to all who are unable to pay for themselves, and will support them during the first six months after they arrive, by furnishing them with provisions and a house to live in. During these six months they can become acclimated, raise a crop for themselves, build a house on their own land, open and plant a piece of land, and have everything in readiness to live comfortably thereafter.

Q. 7. How can you make a living in Liberia?

A. 7. In the same way that you would make one anywhere else; that is, by industry and economy. Those who are competent to teach school, can get from three to four hundred dollars a year for teaching. Good accountants can get from four to eight hundred dollars as clerks in stores in mercantile houses. Tailors, shoemakers, blacksmiths, carpenters, masons, brickmakers, cabinetmakers, shipwrights, etc., can always find employment at good wages. The farmer need fear no want. This question has been answered by the editor of the Liberia Herald, who has lived there for many years, and we can not do better than quote his own words, viz:

"For the information of those who are incorrectly asserting in America that 'Liberians have not anything else to eat but roots and wild animals,' we have thought proper to give a list of such animals, fruits and edibles as are ia general use with us in their appropriate sason.

Animals, domesticated—Cows, bullocks, swine, sheep, goats, ducks, fowls, pigeons, turkeys. Wild—Deer in abundance; partridges, pigeons, goats, cows, doves, red squirrels, summer ducks, rice birds, ground doves, etc

Fruit—Watermelon, muskmelon, orange, rose apples, sour sop, guava, tamarind, plantain, bananas, grammadilla, limes, lemons, mango plumbs.

Fish—Mullet, whitting, perch, bream, pike, baracouta, mackerel, cursalli, herring, drum, catfish, grippers, oysters, crabs, carp, sun.

Edibles—Sweet potatoes, arrowroot, turnips, carrots, shilote, cymblan, chiota, pawpaw, lima beans, ochra, peas, radishes, beets, cabbages, snaps, cucumbers, greens, sallads, cassava, yams, corn.

Besides the foregoing, there are many others which we have neither time nor room to arrange here."

The Rev. A. F. Russell, of Clay Ashland, Liberia, another citizen who has been there for years, writes on the same subject thus, (in speaking of what should be said to persons in the United States, who think of going to Liberia,) viz:

"If they be farmers, point them to the soil, the fertility of which can not be exaggerated, producing everything a tropical clime can produce in ample abundance, 'get by the sweat of the brow.' The arm answering, though not necessarily in all cases, the place of the ox; (oxen can be bought at any time, thank God, for the money, and broke and worked too by those who choose it, and it has been done;) the hoe answering for the plow, if we prefer, and in our light soil does almost as well perhaps. Labor and patience, two-thirds of the labor too, that it would take to support a man in the United States will reward the workmen thirty, sixty, a hundred fold—the profits will sweeten the toil.

A coffee tree once reared and planted (which takes four years) will yield its increase two crops a year, year after year, bringing its reward with it—a hundred, a thousand and tens of thousands will do the very same, and certainly the scions or the seed are to be bought in sufficient quantities in Liberia. Arrowroot, ginger, pinders and pepper grow with almost half trouble, yielding in full abundance if half planted. Indigo grows luxuriously beyond all possible expectation; and as for fruit, the orange, lime, lemon, sour sop, guava, mango, etc, we place Liberia against any country in the world, and with a fraction of labor, compared with the benefits they yield. Vegetables—the yam, potatoes, cassada, plantains, Indian corn, beans, peas. etc., time would fail us to tell. Put them in the earth, and they are as sure to produce as the God of nature is to bring about the seasons. Still the idle will not have them. The lazy man has no part in this lot of good things. The word labor frightens the lazy man, and he will not curse us with his presence and example. The industrious love that word, or the thing it means, will come determined to do it, and coming, will conquer and be rewarded."

Q. 8. Can I be as healthy in Liberia as I am in the United States?

A. 8. Some constitutions may be more healthy there than here. For old settlers Liberia is doubtless more healthy than many parts of the United States. The deaths there among such, for several years past, have not been more than three per cent.

We would here make this general remark in connection with the last two questions. The great advantage which the colored man gets by going to Liberia are not as to his eating or drinking or making money, but in his social, political and moral condition. He becomes a man. He is no longer despised as of another race, but is treated as an equal and as brother, and secures immense advantages for his children. Those who can and do appreciate these, and go to Liberia, will never regret it. Of such emigrants, Mr. Russell, whose language we have before quoted, makes the following remarks:

"They not only see that all their labor is their own, every improvement belongs to themselves and children, good sound sense and industry tells them to go forward, and they obey, looking upon Liberia as theirs, and the home of their children; its strength their safety, its wealth their property, and its prosperity their glory, and the salvation from degradation of their children. Such men as these, though they can not read a word, and never thought of writing, and perhaps spent much of their time in slavery, are an honor to any country that would allow them an equality. There are some of this stamp in Liberia, men 'worth their weight in gold.' They are industrious men, and look forward, and who love their children. Such are not only good but patriotic citizens. One thousand of them would make the soil of Liberia independent without a human declaration. As the hope of Liberia's glory, present as well as future, rises before such men, it beckons them onward. They enjoy freedom in every true sense of that word. They love our laws, because they are wholesome; they are ours; made by legislators of our choice. They love liberty for what it is in and of itself."

In conclusion, we have a particular request to make, viz: That all persons intending to emigrate to Liberia will give us early notice when they will be ready, and where they wish to settle. It requires considerable time to arrange necessary preliminaries and make indispensable preparations; so that it not unfrequently happens that persons almost ready when the vessel sails, are compelled to wait for months, for the want of a few days more in which to get ready.

We are expecting to send out a large number of the more enterprising and educated class. The independent position of Liberia renders this very desirable. They have the entire responsibility of their own government, and need all the talent, wisdom and energy they can summon to their aid. We should think that the very intelligent and wealthy colored people in this country would have some ambition to share in the splendid results soon to be achieved through the agency of her citizens for Liberia. Surely, to aid in laying the foundation for a nation, in maturing institutions and laws for the government of a great people, and in redeeming an immense continent from Pagan darkness and barbarity, is a work infinitely more sublime and glorious than can possibly be performed by any of the colored people in this country, however favored may be their position, enlarged their opportunities and determined their energy and perseverance! When the historian comes to write up the labors of their race, who will stand far above all comparison, if not the bold and prosperous pioneers in the only successful effort ever made for their social, civil and religious redemption.

In the Southeastern part of Rhode Island resides a well known divine, who a few Sabbaths since, gave notice to his flock that on a certain evening there would be a "love feast" at his house. A few days after he met a brother who accosted him thus: "Well, brother, I hear you are to have a love feast. Are you going to have pumpkin pie?" On being informed to the contrary, he quietly remarked, "I should think you might—I sent you pumpkins enough!" The parson went on his way, and well he might.

All the records, archives, etc., of Madison parish were last week removed from Richmond, the old parish seat, to Delta, the new parish seat.

Book Notices.

BEECHER'S SERMONS.—Harper & Brother has just published, in two handsome volumes, forty-six sermons of Henry Ward Beecher. They are selected from about five hundred of his published and unpublished sermons. They have been revised by himself, not however to change them, but to remove any special fault that might occur therein. Nearly all are published the same as they were preached, practical and direct. They contain also the theological views of the great preacher, whose breadth of thought, aptness of illustration, beauty and sweetness of expression, blithe humor, and sincere piety shine forth on every page. Those who have heard Mr. Beecher will desire to obtain these sermons as a remembrancer of the joy and satisfaction experienced as a listener. And those who have not listened to him will equally desire them, to know if his world-wide fame is merited. We bespeak for the work a wider sale than any other collection of sermons has ever known in America.

We are informed that Messrs. Krull & Dickey, 106 Canal street, New Orleans, whose extensive and varied stock of books is scarcely equalled in the South, have this work on sale.

IMPORTANT TO TRAVELERS.—Among the new books published by Harper & Brothers, of New York, we have noticed "Harper's Hand Book for Travelers in Europe and the East," being a guide through Great Britain, Ireland, France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Italy, Egypt, Syria, Turkey, Greece, Switzerland, Tyrol, Spain, Russia, Denmark and Sweden. The author is W. Pembroke Fetridge.

It contains nearly seven hundred pages, with a railroad map corrected up to 1868. This is two years later than any European hand book. It is beautifully bound in Turkey morroco, with tuck. It is the only hand book published in America, and the only one of one volume, published in the English language, in the world. It is not made up of heresay. The author spends most of his time in Europe, and the greater part is devoted to preparing and correcting this work, a new edition of which appears annually. It can be obtained, as can nearly every new American publication, at Krull & Dickey's 106 Canal street, New Orleans.

Notices of Periodicals.

PACKARD'S MONTHLY.—The following are the contents of this valuable magazine for December: "My Island Rock," a poem; "How a River Thief was converted in the Water street Revival;" "The Drama—Some of its Drawbacks;" "Recollections of Camp Life;" "To Young Men in Love;" "Wanted, a Balance Wheel;" "The Flower Girls of New York;" "The Greatest Living Inventor," &c.

THE NURSERY, a monthly magazine for the youngest readers, is very profusely illustrated with the finest wood cuts, and the reading matter will delight the little ones.

Price $1 50 a year. Address John L. Shorey, No. 13 Washington street, Boston, Massachusetts.

THE NORTHWESTERN FARMER, published at Indianapolis, Indiana, by Bland & Tyler, at $1 50 per year. Every farmer and in fact every other man who subscribes for this monthly will feel that his money is well spent. It comes promptly, and laden with interesting reading matter.

Baton Rouge Quarterly Meeting.

Rev. Emperor Williams, who was sent by the Presiding Elder to hold the fourth quarterly meeting at Clinton and Baton Rouge, makes the following report:

I left New Orleans on the twentieth of November for Clinton to attend the quarterly meeting on the twenty-second, and to return to Baton Rouge to hold quarterly meeting on the twenty-ninth. I arrived at Baton Rouge on the twenty-first, meeting Brother Hayward. The agent of the Freedmen's Bureau had told told him of the difficulty in Clinton, and he thought it best for me not to go there. I immediately wrote to Brother Yarborough at Clinton to call his board together, hold his quarterly conference, and get his reports all right and bring them down to Baton Rouge, where I would wait for him. I remained in Baton Rouge on the twenty-second, and preached at night to a crowded house.

The church is ceiled up neatly inside, so that the congregation can sit comfortably and listen to the gospel.

We began our quarterly meeting on Thursday at three o'clock. A thanksgiving sermon was preached by Brother Hayward. At night I preached to a crowded house. The preaching continued Friday and Saturday. Sunday morning Brother Hayward again preached to a large congregation. At three o'clock I preached the sacramental sermon from St. Luke xxii, 15, after which we administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, assisted by Elder Ready, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. I am happy to say that the spirit of the Lord was with us. Brother Hayward reports an increase on his circuit this year of fifty members, twenty-five probationers. On Monday night we held love feast, and received twenty-one in full membership; eighty-seven spoke in love feast, they spoke short, and all spoke reliable words. On Tuesday we had a glorious time. We held Quarterly Conference. The local preachers came in from different points. Their characters were examined and passed, and their licences renewed. Three others were licensed as local preachers. Brother Isaac Hayward was recommended for local deacon's orders; Brother Alexander Scott, an exhorter, was discontinued. During the quarterly meeting six joined the church on probation. We are not able to give any account of the church at Stony Point, as we learn by the young brother that came from there, that Brother Montgomery, the preacher at that point has been keeping himself very close since the election, on account of some difficulty.

The pastor has only received $239 from the congregation; from the missionary $100. Total received this year $339. Brother Hayward's salary being cut down from $400 to $100, makes it hard for him to get along. The trustees reported the value of the church property at $3650. Brother Hayward went over the river, where he was called to preach, and was attacked by an old Baptist preacher, by name Buck Phillips, who told him he should not preach there. He preached, however, and organized a small congregation of thirty members. They have gone to work to buy ground to build them a house of worship. On this circuit the deaths this year were three; left the church by letter, two; joined by letter, 4; baptisms, sixty; forty adults and twenty children.

EMPEROR WILLIAMS.

The President's Message.

According to the special correspondent of the Times the President's message was to be sent to Congress at one o'clock to-day. We copy the following abstract of the message:

The President begins by calling the attention of Congress to the continued disorganized condition of the Union under the various reconstruction laws. A timely revocation of these injurious and oppressive measures would be the greatest good that can be conferred upon the nation. The reconstruction laws have failed after a three years' trial, and proved pernicious in results, and should no longer remain upon the statute books. States to which the Constitution guarantees a republican form of government, have been reduced to military dependencies, in each of which people have been made subject to the arbitrary will of the Commanding General.

Although the Constitution requires that each State shall be represented in Congress, Virginia, Mississippi and Texas are yet excluded from the two Houses, and, contrary to the express provisions of the instrument, were denied participation in the recent Presidential election.

An attempt to place the white population under the domination of persons of color in the South has impaired, if not destroyed, the kindly relations that had previously existed between them, and mutual distrust has engendered a feeling of animosity which, leading in some instances to collision and bloodshed, has prevented that co-operation between the two races essential to the success of the industrial enterprises in the Southern States.

The entire Union has been agitated by grave apprehensions of troubles, which might involve the peace of the nation. The Federal Constitution is now adequate to the settlement of the questions growing out of the civil war.

The President reviews the condition of the country since the end of the rebellion. The acts passed are not warranted by the Constitution. The repeal of them is demanded; the repeal of the tenure of office bill is demanded by the best interests of the country. The appropriation act of March 2, 1867, interfering with the President's constitutional functions as Commander-in-Chief, and denying to States the right to protect themselves by means of their own militia, should be repealed.

The financial affairs need immediate attention. The public expenses are unprecedented. Here the President set forth substantially his letter to General Ewing. Congress should make an early provision for the payment of the indebtedness. The fruits of labor should be enjoyed by the citizens rather than used to build up moneyed monopolies in our our own and in other lands. Debt should not become permanent. The interest on the debt should be reduced, the owners of Government securities receiving seventeen per cent on each dollar. This favors a few at the expense of the many. The national credit should be sacredly observed. The six per cent interest now paid by the Government should be applied to the reduction of the principal in semi-annual installments, which in sixteen years would liquidate the entire national debt. The large amount of capital now invested in Government securities should be released.

The resumption of specie payments is recommended.

The condition of foreign affairs is reviewed, and the controversy with the Paraguayan Government is detailed.

The friendly relations with Mexico have grown during the past year.

Negotiations are pending for the construction of a ship canal across the Isthmus of Darien.

A comprehensive national policy would seem to sanction the acquisition and incorporation into our Federal Union of the several adjacent continental and insular communities as speedily as it can be done peacefully and lawfully, and without any violation of national justice, faith, or honor. Foreign possession or control of those communities has hitherto hindered the growth and impaired the influence of the United States. When finally established as an independent republic, or incorporated into the United States, they would be a new source of strength and power.

No reference is made in the message to our affairs with England relative to the Alabama claims, the naturalization treaty, etc.

The President renews his recommendation that the judgment of the people should be taken on the propriety of amending the Constitution, first, for the election of President and Vice-President by a direct vote of the people instead of by the agency of electors; second, by a distinct designation of the person who shall discharge the duties of President in the event of a vacancy in the offices of both President and Vice-President. Third, the election of Senators by a direct vote of the people of the several States. Fourth he limitation to the period of years of the terms of the Federal Judges.

Concluding, the President says: "Let us earnestly hope that before the expiration of our respective terms of service, now rapidly drawing to a close, an All-wise Providence will so guide our counsels as to strengthen and preserve the Federal Union, inspire reverence for the Constitution, restore prosperity and happiness to our whole people, and promote on earth peace and good will toward men."

ATTITUDES.—A religious writer says: "The attitudes of professing Christians toward the Lords work may be classified under the following heads: Decided hostility, attempted neutrality, timid co-operation and cordial identification." It is true that they may be so classified by men. But Jesus only allows of two classes, "He that is not for me is against me."

Romanism in Europe.

The following article by the Rev. Dr. Mattison, of New York, is from the Christian Advocate. It presents facts and statements concerning a question of deep interest at the present time, and about which many would like to have authentic information. Dr. Mattison says:

"As it is in a few minds a question whether Romanism is really declining in Europe or not, please allow me space for the following items upon the subject:

1. The Catholic World, in a recent article says:—

Paris is not a Catholic city, but a city which was Catholic and which Catholics are striving to conquer. The revolution abolished the Catholic Church and exterminated its clergy; and with all the efforts and zeal of the Catholics they have only gained a minority of the people to any real faith and connection with their establishment.

2. The author of the article entitled "Religion in Europe" in the last Advocate says:

Popery is doomed in Europe. * * Even in France itself it is well observed that the papal reaction is confined to the imperial policy, and to the hierarchy as a part of the machinery of that policy. The intellect and conscience of France go not with it, though they succumb to it.

3. An English correspondent of the Provincial Wesleyan, of Halifax, Nova Scotia, says:

A very interesting meeting was held last week in Exeter Hall to listen to addresses by two Bohemian pastors on the subject of evangelical religion in that ancient country. Greatly to the chagrin of the Pope and the Romish hierarchy, recent concessions made by the Emperor of Austria have opened a way for the spread of the Protestant faith in Bohemia, and as next year will be the fifth centenary of the Bohemian martyr, John Huss, it has been resolved to raise a fund to establish in his own city of Prague a college for the training of Gospel ministers. The religious liberty so unexpectedly granted by the Austrian Government is being taken advantage of. Bible depots are opened throughout the various Austrian States, and in Prague, where the Bible once was burned, there is now an annual average sale of 13,000 copies. The people are educating their children in their own faith, and favorable opportunities are being presented for the preaching and teaching of the pure Gospel of Christ.

4. An intelligent New Yorker, just arrived from Europe, and who has been in Austria most of the past year, said to me but a day or two since: "You can form no just conception of the change in Austria since the battle of Sadowa, and the passage of the laws respecting education, marriage, and the burial of Protestants, and the interference of the Bishops and the Pope in the matter. Opposition to the Pope and to the Romish priesthood is almost universal. Bibles and other Protestant books are freely circulated and read everywhere, and the priests are powerless to prevent it, and it seems as if Popery was almost dead already even in Austria." Even the New York Tablet for August 1, says editorially: "We are sorry for poor Austria. She has ceased to be a Catholic nation, and the wicked are in ecstacies over her. The Voltarian bureau-cracy has triumphed, for a time at least."

Now if all this be true of France and Paris and Austria, much more is it true of Italy, even in the domiions of the Pope himself. How all this can be and yet no decline in Europe, as a whole, it is difficult to understand, especially as there is no gain anywhere except in England, and that is not half equal to the decline in Ireland."

LAND FOR NEXT YEAR.—We copy this from the Madison Mail:

We advise our colored readers to remember that there are thousands of acres of land lying idle in this parish, and to insist upon a lower rate of rent next year. No land, at the present time, is worth more than five dollars an acre and that is the highest price which should be given for the most choice locations. Bear in mind that with oceans of good land to chose from that there is no necessity for paying exorbitant prices.

PRANG'S AMERICAN CHROMOS IN OIL AND WATER COLORS.

PRANG'S AMERICAN CHROMOS are fac simile re-productions of oil and water color paintings; so faithfully and skilfully done that it requires the experience of an expert to detect the difference between them and the originals.

For every purpose of decoration, for parlors, sitting rooms, nurseries, or chambers, nothing so exquisitely beautiful as these Chromos can be obtained for the same amount of money. No other ornaments of the same cost are so admirably calculated to adorn home, to cultivate a love for art among the people at large; to brighten up the dwellings of every class of our citizens, and to teach the rising generation, by their silent yet refining influence, to love the beautiful in Art and Nature. Hitherto Art has been aristocratic in its associations, none but the wealthy classes could afford to buy fine works of art; but chromo-lithography has changed all that, and brought exquisite paintings within the reach of every family. It is doing for Art what the printing press did for Literature. Let no family, henceforth, be without a few classical books and one or two masterly painting. Both should be regarded as indispensable to complete a home.

Ask for them at the art stores and book stores.

Our Chromos are sent free to any address within the United States east of the Mississippi, on receipt of price. Our journal of Popular Art, explaining how Chromos are made, mailed free. Send for a copy. L. PRANG & CO.,

THE STAR.

BY LU BILLINGS SPALDING.

I found a pearl with glow serene,
Soft beaming from the wondrous sea,
But when I sought to grasp it near,
I found the pearl was not for me.

I saw a rose of purest dye,
I strove to pluck it from its tree,
To cherish it within my heart,
The fragrant thing was not for me.

I caught a song so sad and low,
Borne sweetly o'er the turbid sea,
I tuned my harp its notes to lure;
Alas! the song was not for me.

I found a treasure, O, so dear,
More sacred than all else could be;
With raptured soul I drew it near,
The treasure was not meant for me.

I sat within my loveless night,
When beaming upward fair and free,
A star arose with tranquil light—
It seemed to shine alone for me.
And while I gazed upon its crest
I recognized its beauty free,
Of all the treasures I had sought
Hope's star alone belonged to me.
And thus the pearl, the rose, the song,
The treasure dear as life could be,
Were gathered in by fairer hands—
God only meant the star for me.
And e'er it glows upon my life;
The one bright thing my senses see;
I strive to say "Thy will be done,"
And trust my star that shines for me.

Mr. G. H. Dunford, Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives of Louisiana, was in St. Louis Tuesday.

Miss Alice Kingsbury has abandoned the stage and taken to the study of sculpture. She had much difficulty in obtaining profitable recognition on the stage.

The Bee publishes to-day an announcement of Mr. Ruffin C. Barrow, agent of the Barataria and Lafourche Canal Company, that the canal has been repaired from the Mississippi river to the Bayou Lafourche at Lockport, and the company is ready to commence operations.

Information has been received at the Governor's office that Damon Fontenal, a St. Landry parish murderer, was killed in Henderson, Texas, on the twentieth of October, by Louis Rousseau and John Squyers He is pronounced an outlaw and horse thief. Governor Warmoth had offered a reward for his arrest.

THE WHISKY RING.—The mighty "whisky ring" of this city, which has prospered so much under the corrupt administration of Andy Johnson, is finally "busted."

General Steedman has resigned his office of Collector of Internal Revenue. Other important resignations will doubtless follow. Good-bye, "whisky ring."

An old resident of Bayou Bœuf, Rapides parish, writes that the yield of sugar is 3000 pounds to the acre. He also states that 450 pounds lint cotton per acre is the average. Such crops have not been equaled for the past ten years. All the planters in that section have cleared handsome profits. The season has been highly propitious.

We were glad this morning to receive a visit from our old friend and one of the earliest subscribers to this paper, Hon. Michael Ryan, of Rapides. He has a certificate of election as a member of Congress, and if any Democrat is lucky enough, which we very much doubt, to get a seat as a representative from this State, we hope he may be the man. He is a true man and a "glorious fellow," although he was voted for by the Democrats.

A Western exchange gives vent to its poetical frenzy in the following stanza, which is old:

"I wud not dy in Ortum,
With the peaches fit for eatin',
When the wavy corn is gettin' ripe
And the candidates are treatin',
When sassidge meat is phryin',
& hickhory nuts is thick,
Ow! who would think of dyin'
Or evin gettin sick?"

The Picayune is indeed kind in its offer of Democratic aid to divide the Republican party. It is a pity that such generous co-operation as it affords will never be wanted or accepted. It says:

There is in all this the gleam of a promise that under the administration of General Grant there will be a real effort among Republicans to arrest the frenzied career of their Radical associates.

In this, whatever the issue, they may confidently rely on the co-operation of the few Democrats in Congress.

It is certain that the question of postal telegraph will be vigorously pushed in Congress this winter. The bill of E. D. Washburne, now in the Postoffice Committee of the House, provides for the building of new telegraph lines by the government. He says he has no particular partiality for this measure, and is entirely ready to co-operate in urging the adoption of the other bill, looking to contract with the existing lines, which Mr. Gardner Hubbard is now advocating before Western Boards of Trade, if it shall be found on further consideration that this has more friends than his bill.

Bonds of the Postmaster.

Washington telegrams have announced that the defalcations in the New Orleans Postoffice, while under control of the late Postmaster, amounted to thirty thousand dollars. A suit against the sureties on the bond of the delinquent official—tedious and doubtful in its final results—will have to be instituted in order to recover this sum to the public treasury.

In view of these facts, it is highly important that the head of the Postal Department sees to it that the present incumbent of this important position has given a good and valid bond. Not that we desire in any degree to cast doubts upon the integrity of the Acting Postmaster—it would be unjust to do so without sufficient cause—but this is a customary and plainly necessary precaution which the public expects and has a right to exact.

The fact that a majority, if not all, of the indorsers on Mr. Smallwood's bonds are subordinates in his department, would doubtless render it gratifying to him to have such official inquiry made.

SHOOTING AFFRAY LAST NIGHT.

St. Charles Street the Fighting Ground.

A Police Officer Wounded

About eleven o'clock last night the report of a pistol-shot was heard on St. Charles street, in the neighborhood of Commercial Alley, followed by another louder report, and still another. Then came the cry "stop thief," and a man was seen running up St. Charles street. At the corner of Poydras another shot was fired, and then the man who was running was seen turning down toward Poydras Market. A moment after, a fifth shot was fired, and two men were seen running out into the middle of the street about midway between St. Charles and Carondelet. There were heard groans of a man wounded, a cab drove rapidly off containing a wounded man, a crowd moved off toward the police station, surrounding a man who had been shot and was bleeding. Upon arrival at the station, it was discovered that the man who had been running, and who was shot, was Day Officer Sutherland. A ball had entered his back on the right side, and passed through to his right breast. On his person were about five hundred dollars in currency. His statement, as he sat groaning in his chair at the Station House, was that an attempt had been made to rob him, and that in his endeavor to escape, the cry had been started. He was subsequently removed to his home on Dryades street.

Meanwhile John Price, about to be appointed on the police force, had been found to be shot in the body, and was taken off, as previously stated, in a cab to a drug store near Poydras Market, where surgical attendance was procured.

After the occurrence a gentleman was standing in front of the theatre, telling a friend that the man who was shot and at the police station was a police officer. One of a group of policemen returning from the station overheard him and denied the assertion, at the same time seizing a younger brother of Mr. Hyams by the lappel of the coat and shaking him, and was about arresting him, with the remark that such trash caused all disturbances. The boy, however, was rescued by his brother. The fifth shot, which wounded officer Sutherland, is said by a St. Charles policeman, to have been fired when Sutherland was surrounded by several persons attempting to arrest him.

The foregoing was compiled from the morning papers. The following is the police record of the affair:

Sergeant McCann reports that about quarter past eleven P. M. five or six shots were fired on St. Charles street by some person or persons unknown, in which Patrolman Sutherland received a dangerous wound in the right side, the ball passing through his body, lodging in his coat, and which has since been found in the police station. He was taken to his residence on Dryades street. The wound is not considered fatal. Also John Price received a wound, the ball entering under his left arm and lodging in his shoulder. He was taken to a drug-store on Poydras street, near Baronne, where the ball was extracted. His wound is not considered dangerous. He was taken to his residence on Canal street.

From Captain White, Chief of Detectives, we learn that Mr. Price, who was to-day to be commissioned as a special officer, accosted Patrolman Southerland, who was known to have had a five hundred dollar greenback note, and asked him what he had done with it. To this Mr. Southerland replied: "This is what I have done with it," at the same time knocking Price down.

There are suspicions that the firing was done by Special Officer Webb, who, learning what the intimations were, surrendered himself and is now in custody. He denies that he fired a shot.

Patrolman Southerland, who was charged by a broker five per cent to convert his five hundred dollar note into small notes, says the money was his and the result of honest earnings and careful savings.

Both the wounded men are doing well and out of danger. The ball was extracted from Price's wound by Dr. Loeber, of No. 203 Lafayette street, who rendered prompt and gratuitous services.

LITTLE NEST OF BUSY-BODIES.—The Bulletin, in speaking of the Bond Ordinance Election, uses the following unkind language to the persons who at present usurp the functions of the city government:

The overwhelming vote against it is a decided and merited rebuke to the financial tinkers of the City Council. The small vote of three hundred and thirteen given in favor of it represents the little nest of busy-bodies that now infest the City Hall, and derive their sustenance from official pap.

Notwithstanding the activity and zeal of the Mayor and the chairman of the Finance Committee to obtain a favorable vote, a majority of 5650 votes was given against the adoption of this absurd and ruinous ordinance. These gentlemen city officials, however, can congratulate themselves upon the fact that by this election they have added another debt to the city of about eight thousand dollars. It is estimated that the expenses of this election will reach that sum. And what has been gained by it? Nothing but a protest from the people against the folly and extravagance of the present City Council, and an implied demand for a change in the administration of city affairs. If the originators and supporters of this measure desired such an expression, they have been more than gratified, and it is to be hoped that they will profit by this wholesome lesson.

In accomplishing this end the Property Owners' Association is entitled to a large share of the credit, and we think the press of the city, with the exception of the Crescent, that favored the scheme, can claim the rest. The power of this Association, especially when backed by the press, will be immense and fully able to defeat all schemes of any "ring," "clique" or faction.

THE CORNFIELDS OF THE GREAT WEST.—A gentleman of undoubted veracity, writing from Illinois, says:

While out hunting two weeks ago, I was in some cornfields which belong to a man named Sullivan. He probably owns more land than any farmer in the State. He is the proprietor of nine townships, each six miles square. This year he has 25,000 acres of corn. This seems like a big story, but it is nevertheless true. It was just the easiest thing in the world to get lost in his cornfields. I strayed into one field and walked four and a half miles before I came to the end of the row of corn which I followed. A party of six of us were absent four days and during that time killed two dozen geese, two hundred and sixty-three mallard ducks, besides chickens, cranes, etc., that we did not count.

Mr. Greeley says a good word for Andrew Johnson, now that good words are not of much account to him. "Venality," says Mr. Greeley, "is not among his faults. We knew him in Congress, where men are pretty accurately weighed and measured. He has since filled almost every important station, made many bitter enemies, and waged deadly war against men abler and stronger than himself; yet he has never been even charged with filling his own pockets at the public cost."

MURDER ON A BARRACKS CAR.

Driver and His Son Killed.

ESCAPE OF THE MURDERER.

The following is the substance of the report in the Times of yesterday morning:

About nine o'clock Saturday evening Michael Bradley, a car driver on the Barracks line, was, with his little son, cut several times over the head with a hatchet and terribly mutilated by a colored passenger, who made his escape. The old man died almost instantly from the effects of the wounds, but his son, who was brought in a fainting condition to the Poland street station, revived sufficiently to give some details of the horrible affair.

It appears that the colored man went down in the Dauphine street car, and as was his privilege, entered without paying, the car running from the stables to the Barracks. There was in the car at that time a policeman, a soldier, two men in citizen's dress, the colored man, the driver's son and the deceased. Reaching the Barracks, all got out but the colored man. The boy had come after his father to go to supper, and intended making that trip with him.

When the car started on the return trip the driver asked the colored man for his fare. Although the car is used as an accommodation to the passengers on the other lines, it is customary to collect fare from transient passengers going between the stables and the Barracks. The colored man refused to pay and the driver threatened to put him out.

A violent altercation ensued, and at length the colored man, starting up like a mad man, seized a hatchet lying on the seat beside him and buried it in the driver's skull. The boy screamed with terror, and received a blow on the head which laid him prostrate on the floor. The driver, falling over the rail in front of the car, was struck another blow across the forehead, the hatchet imbedding itself nearly to his ear. This, of course, produced almost instant death. Reaching out of the vehicle he seized the mule by the bridle, and turning the car off the track, escaped to the fields.

The tragedy occurred on a place called Coffee's Lane, which runs across from the down to the return track. The starter on duty at the stables becoming alarmed at the long absence of the car sent a messenger down to inquire about it. He found the victims weltering in their blood, the driver stark and stiff and his son barely breathing.

Using all possible haste, the car was replaced on the track and brought to the stables. There medical attendance was procured, and the boy revived as above stated. The body of the murdered man was taken to his residence on Enghien street. The boy was left at the stable, it being considered dangerous to move him.

Captain White, chief of detectives, went down to the Poland street station yesterday morning to see the boy and get from him a more particular description of the offender and the details of the outrage, but the attending physician forbid him to speak, and before five o'clock last evening the boy was dead.

It can hardly be possible that the perpetrator of these terrible crimes can escape. The police are making every effort to discover the murderer.

Coroner Avila, yesterday, held an inquest on the body of Michael Brady, and the jury rendered a verdict to the effect that he came to his death from complicated wounds of the skull, inflicted with a blunt instrument by some person or persons unknown, three of these wounds being mortal.

General Grant's Fortune.

The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Democrat says:

"General Grant is rich already, and by cautious investments he is destined to be very rich one day, ranking with the most opulent. He owns thirty-eight acres of land within the corporate limits of Washington, worth $2000 an acre. His house here is held at $60,000. A farm near St. Louis and houses at Galena and in Philadelphia should add $100,000 to the former items. Three hundred thousand dollars will probably not be in excess of the President elect's possessions. Meantime his commercial training and fondness of material speculations, added to his good luck and caution, are exemplifying themselves in judicious operations in many honorable fields. It is altogether probable that we shall have in General Grant a President who, exercising all due liberality and hospitality in the Chief Magistracy, will be the first President since Washington to be discreet and practical in the management of his private fortune. His comparative youth will permit him, should he live to the average age of Presidents, thirty years duration after the expiration of his term of office."

This is from the New York Tribune:

We are pleased to notice that General Rousseau is giving some splendid parties in New Orleans, and that the wit, the beauty, and the youth of the gay metropolis find no receptions more pleasant than those of the General commanding. Without wishing to interrupt these festivities we beg to suggest to General Rousseau that it would be wise for him to give some attention to the Red river country. The Iliad newspaper office was recently destroyed, and now we hear of the second demolition of the office of the Rapides Tribune, published in Alexandria. Here is the narrative:

The office was attacked by a mob a month ago, and the presses and types were thrown into the street; but Mr. McLean was subsequently enabled to restore his material. Something, however, in the next number of the Tribune was distasteful to the Ku-Klux Democrats of Alexandria, and they attacked the office on the fifteenth instant and destroyed it. They assaulted Mr. McLean with pistols and brickbats, but he escaped with slight bruises, and has taken refuge in New Orleans.

At West Brooklyn, Maine, a land slide took place about five o'clock Sunday morning, just below the Cumberland paper mills, which comprised about forty acres in area, and completely filled the channel of the Presumpscott river, so that the water is backed up within three feet of the top of the dam, and the lower story of the mill is submerged. One hundred hands are thrown out of employment. The loss by the land slide is said to be $100,000.

The Cincinnati Times has this editorial notice:

EDITORIAL CHANGE.—We are glad to welcome to the editorial chair of the New Orleans REPUBLICAN Michael Hahn, Esq., ex-Governor of the State of Louisiana, whose salutatory appears in the above paper of the twentieth. Mr. Hahn is a gentleman of fine ability, who, before the war, stood among the foremost members of the New Orleans bar, and whose record during the dark days of the rebellion is one of unsullied loyalty. A warm personal and political friend of the lamented Dostie, and one of the most earnest and indefatigable among those who labored to clear away the rubbish of barbarism in the new Constitution of Louisiana, and in seeking to place that noble State foremost on the road to progress, we have few faults of omission or of commission to bring against the Governor.

A SUSPICION OF FOUL PLAY.

HUSBAND'S CRUELTY TO HIS WIFE.

Her Death and Its Causes.

Mrs. Louisa C. DeBreton appeared before Coronor Avila yesterday, and stated that she desired the exhumation of the body of her daughter, who married a person also of the name of DeBreton, on suspicion that she had come to her death by foul means. Mrs. DeBreton's deceased daughter, she stated, was by her first husband, who was a brother of the husband of her daughter. Her daughter had married without consent of her mother, about the time of the latter's second marriage.

She went on to detail statements of alleged maltreatment of her daughter by her daughter's husband while her daughter was sick in this city, and nearly up to the day of her death, which occurred here on the twenty-fifth ultimo, in some rooms on Burgundy, between Conti and St. Louis streets, to which she had been removed to escape the alleged ill-treatment. Her daughter was bruised on the head and otherwise injured by the husband, so the relator says, her daughter told her on her death bed. The landlady, too, had told her of bearing screams which she could not account for. Her physician had also, she said, intimated that her daughter's neck had been dislocated and caused her death, and that the Coroner should be seen. The physician says that the injuries of the daughter may have effected the daughter's mind and thus her disease, but that he prefers in accordance with the certificate to attribute her death to dysentery.

The Erie Railroad Ring.

The release of the ten or fifteen millions in currency from the "lock up" by the "bear clique" in New York, has had the effect to temporarily make a slight improvement in the feeling here, but the light that has been thrown on the transactions of the Erie Railroad stock-gambling clique, discloses the unpleasant fact that a clique of four or five rich gamblers of New York hold control of possibly somewhere near thirty millions of dollars floating capital, which they can turn into currency and lock it up, as they did before, at any time when they choose to make a tight money market. By the legal trickery of getting himself appointed Receiver of the Erie Road Company, while he was yet its President, Jay Gould, and four or five of his associates, keep control of the funds which were the proceeds of the sale of the new—and as it is said fraudulently issued—stock of the Erie Company. The proceeds of this amount to about twenty millions; this, with the private capital of the clique, gives them control of thirty millions or more, and keeps in their hands a gigantic power, which, if we judge from the past few weeks, they are unscrupulous enough to use to the damage of the whole country, if they can make money by it themselves. While this clique is in existence and continues to hold such an immense power, we do not expect a complete restoration of confidence in financial matters. If the Erie funds were removed from their possession the amount is so great that it is to be feared it would only form the nucleus of another similar clique. It is understood that this vast sum was raised with the ostensible object of making a new through route of uniform gauge as an extension of the Erie road from New York to Chicago and St. Louis, and unless that or some similar project shall make a prospect of absorbing this vast sum of ready money and of ultimately dispersing it into many hands, it may be expected to be an element of disturbance in general money affairs until the present inflexible character of the volume of the currency is remedied by some action of Congress.—Chicago Tribune.

The Lost Steamship Star of the Union.

We copy the following from the Havana correspondent of the New York World:

From Captain Thomas W. Jones and one of the passengers of the ill-fated Star of the Union, I have gathered a few particulars about the loss of this steamer, additional to those reported to you in my letter of the eighteenth instant. The Star of the Union ran ashore on the coast of Bahia Honda about half-past six of the evening of the thirteenth instant. For more than a day before this the steamer had encountered very boisterous and tempestuous weather. The Captain mistook a light on shore for that of the beacon located on the coast and this led him out of his reckoning. Superadded to this, the wind was then blowing very violently, and the current was so strongly against the steamer that she was carried to the rocks, on which she struck and stuck, and was so injured that she will prove a total loss. Part of her cargo may be saved, but in a damaged condition. All of her passengers but two and all of her officers and crew were saved. The two lost passengers were a Mr. Clarke, of California, and an English gentleman of the name of Johnson. They were in the second boat that left the steamer for the shore, which was capsized and they drowned. The Spanish war steamer Francisco de Asis and the United States gunboat Penobscot, which left here on Tuesday for the wrecked steamer, returned here on Thursday, the former bringing a part of the vessel's furniture and a few small articles of her cargo, and the latter the saved passengers, officers and crew. The Star of the Union was of 1076 tons burden, five years old and belonged, as I have told you, to the Philadelphia, Havana and New Orleans trade.

The Memphis Appeal says:

The era of proscription has passed. Our people, too long a prey to an insular policy, with a Chinese wall of prejudices against foreigners, have at last begun to see that population is wealth. They realize that the more land is settled and cultivated, the more produce will be put upon our markets; that the more houses there are rented, the more prosperous our towns; and they have made up their minds that hereafter they will encourage immigration and immigrants. They want a share of the energy and activity that have made the great West, and that can only be recruited through the great army of immigrants that are looking for the safest population and the best land.

If the Appeal can prevail upon its readers who are land owners throughout the western division of the State to offer substantial inducements to immigrants to locate among them, it will have done much to atone for its multitude of political transgressions.

The Chicago Times, perhaps the most influential of the Western Democratic papers, gives some wholesome advice to its friends in the South, and the evidences are numerous that they are disposed to follow it. Hear:

We must, says the Times, abandon the policy which, while proposing nothing, opposes everything that any other body proposes, and gives no honest reason for anything. What further use is there to fight in a direction where defeat must be certain and inevitable? Why, for example, seek to prevent the execution of the Radical "reconstruction" acts? Why talk about State rights or Federal intervention? Why stand back and hurl the epithet "unconstitutional" at measures and doctrines which the people have already passed upon and approved? Is this the business of statesmen? Is this the way to win popular favor?"

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

IMPORTANT SUIT—Mr. Barelli Asserts Ownership to the Moresque Building, etc.—In the Sixth District Court, Judge Cooley, Mr. John C. Barelli, of this city, has filed his petition in a suit involving a claim to some very valuable property in this city—the Iron Moresque Building and the ground on which it is built, on Camp street, north-east corner of Lafayette Square. The petitioner sets forth, according to the Bee:

That on the twelfth March, 1860, petitioner purchased from D. P. Rogers, agent and attorney in fact of Mrs. Pauline E. Morgan, and others, the square of ground, with all the improvements thereon, situated in the First District and bounded by Camp, Poydras, North and St. Francis streets, as per notarial act.

That Emile Gauche is now and has been for some time in possession of said property and refuses to give possession, though amicably requested, he claiming ownership under a pretended purchase at a pretended sale by the Sheriff of the parish of Orleans, the fourteenth of November, 1865, in the suit of Samuel Jamison vs. J. C. Barelli, Sixth District Court.

But petitioner alleges the sale to have been illegal, and that it conferred no title on said Gauche, nor did Mr. Gauche acquire any right or title thereto whatever, but holds and pretends to hold, in violation of petitioner's rights, damaging petitioner in the sum of $12,000, and in the further sum of $1500 per month for the use of the property from judicial demand.

Petitioner further alleges that the Sheriff at the time of the pretended sale, had not under seizure, nor had he any writ of fieri facias or other process authorizing him to hold the property under seizure, or to sell the same, having returned the writ in his possession in said suit of Jamison vs. Barelli, keeping no copy of the said writ. That at the pretended sale the price bidden by said Gauche was less on the land portion of said property than the mortgage recorded prior to the claim of the seizing creditor, either as recorded or as actually resting upon the land portion of the property, and unpaid.

That the description of the property in the judgment under which the pretended sale was made was different from the property claimed; that from these and other defects the pretended title of said Gauche is null and void.

Petitioner therefore prays for judgment entitling him to the just and rightful ownership of the property, and, as owner, to the sum of $12,000 damages and $1500 per month rental so long as defendant may continue in possession and use, and for costs of suit.

TAX COLLECTOR MAHAN AFTER STATE DUES.—A new phase in the question of right to collect the lately levied State taxes has arisen in the position taken by Mr. Mahan, Tax Collector for the First District, who Saturday brought suit in the Seventh District Court, Judge Collens, against J. Samuel, John Klein, Wheless & Pratt, E. Salomon, A. Gray, C. A. Cohen, A. Duplantier, George A. Fosdick, A. Cassard, for licenses, and makes the following petition:

The petition of Francis C. Mahan, a resident of this city, now holding and exercising the functions of the office of State Tax Collector for the First District of New Orleans, respectfully shows:

That he, in his official capacity aforesaid, is authorized and required by law to collect all moneys due the State for licenses, among other dues; and to that end he is empowered to bring suit in the name of the State of Louisiana, if it shall seem probable that he might be enjoined if he seized without suit.

That (name of the person owing taxes), also of this city, is indebted unto the State of Louisiana in the full sum of the amount of money owed in dollars, for license as a profession or trade, in the year ending ——, day of 186—.

Your petitioner avers that the said amount has never been paid, nor any part thereof, although thereunto amicably demanded.

Your petitioner shows that he verily believes that if he should attempt to seize the personal effects and other property of the said person, without first obtaining judgment for the amount, that he would be enjoined by him from further proceeding.

Whereupon your petitioner prays, the premises considered, that the said person may be cited to appear and answer this demand, and that after due proceedings had that he be condemned to pay unto your petitioner in his official capacity aforesaid and for account of the State of Louisiana, the aforesaid amount of dollars with costs.

WEEKLY REPORT OF INTERMENTS.—According to the report of Dr. G. W. Dirmeyer, Secretary of the Board of Health, the total number of interments in this city last week was one hundred and nine. Eleven died of consumption, one drowned, two old age, four premature birth, eleven still born, one suffocation, ten trismus nascentium, one smallpox, two delirium tremens, one burns, two apoplexy, two not stated, and fifty-four of various diseases; fifty-one were males, fifty-four females, and four not stated; seventy-one were whites, twenty-two blacks, twelve mulattoes, and four not classified.

VOTE ON THE THREE MILLION BOND ORDINANCE.—The vote Saturday was nearly twice as large as we estimated it would be. The details are as follows by wards:

| | For Ordinance. | Against. |
|---|---|---|
| First | 37 | 332 |
| Second | 37 | 497 |
| Third | 50 | 852 |
| Fourth | 56 | 436 |
| Fifth | 25 | 718 |
| Sixth | 13 | 439 |
| Seventh | 11 | 836 |
| Eighth | 18 | 540 |
| Ninth | 9 | 296 |
| Tenth | 29 | 535 |
| Eleventh | 28 | 482 |
| Total | 313 | 5963 |
| | | 313 |
| Majority against the ordinance | | 5650 |

TOURO INFIRMARY DEDICATION.—The dedication ceremonies of the new Jewish hospital, corner of Gainnie and New Levee streets, took place yesterday, according to announcement. An overture from Rosini was followed by a pathetic, eloquent and appropriate prayer by Rev. H. S. Jacobs, and then a chorus by the choir of the Rampart street synagogue, "The Lord be gracious unto us," conducted by Rev. J. D. Leucht. L. L. Levy pronounced an English oration, in which he eulogized the late Judah Touro, the upright citizen, the noble philanthropist and spotless Jew.

An aria from Donizetti by the band, and a solo, "La Charite," from Rossini, sung by Mrs. Schwartz, assisted in the chorus by the Rampart Synagogue choir, and then an oration in German by Rev. Mr. Leucht. Rev. B. E. Jacobs made the closing prayer, which was followed by the thrilling hallelujah from the One Hundred and Twenty-first Psalm, and by Verdi's grand march, "Jerusalem."

A collation, and after dinner speeches, succeeded the dedicatory ceremonies. Professor Dimitry spoke at some length and in an eloquent manner. Mr. John J. Lane responded to a sentiment complimentary to the "Press."

The building and grounds were donated by the late Judah Touro, for the purposes of a hospital and asylum, some fourteen years since.

COMMUNITY OF PROPERTY.—In the Supreme Court the case of Mary G. Shaw, wife of Charles W. Wilson, vs. Artemon Hill and the Sheriff of Orleans parish, is an injunction taken out by plaintiff to restrain her husband's judgment creditor, Artemon Hill, from selling houses and lots, which she alleges is her paraphernal property, the same having been bought by her in her individual right. The deed was passed before H. Paul Caire, a notary, and was not recorded until after the seizure. It is admitted that the plaintiff was a married woman at the time of purchase, but was duly authorized thereto by her husband. The act of sale recites that the consideration was paid out of funds belonging to her personally. The property being seized to satisfy a judgment in favor of Hill against her husband, Wilson, an injunction restraining sale was granted, and on the trial was perpetuated, and the court decreed that Hill should pay plaintiff five hundred dollars damages. Hill thereupon appealed, and the court in rendering their decision, says: She was a married woman, not separate in property, and the community of acquets and gains existed between her and her husband, of which he was the head and master. All property acquired during marriage, whether in the name of the one or the other party, is considered community, and the debts contracted during marriage belong to the community, or are chargable to it. The court concludes that the property involved in this suit belongs to the community, and is not the separate or paraphernal property of plaintiff, and that the injunction must be dissolved. It was therefore decreed that the judgment of the court below be avoided and annulled, and that judgment be had in this case at the cost of the plaintiff.

BURGLARY IN A LODGING HOUSE.—Some time during Wednesday night the Age lodging house, at the corner of Gravier and St. Charles street, was burglariously entered by an unknown thief, who stole from under the pillow of a young gentleman boarding in the house about $150. The money consisted of United States currency in twenty, ten and five dollar bills.

Since writing the above, we learn the gentleman whose pocketbook was stolen is named Joseph Bills. The watchman of the house and an attache of the house have been arrested, charged with stealing the money.

It appears Mr. Bills came to the house at a late hour, somewhat under the influence of liquor. The watchman took him to his room, and afterward brought him some supper. The door was left open during the night, the watchman being the last to leave the room. The stories told by the watchman and that of Mr. Bills are quite different. The names of the parties are Williams and Moore.

A WILL CASE AND CLAIM BY THE STATE.—The original will of Joseph Field, who died without heirs, has been taken out of the Second District Court by S. Belden, on his own application, probably upon the law that the property of a person who dies without heirs reverts to the State. The following is a copy of the will:

CITY OF NEW ORLEANS, }
No. 422 Dryades street, October 16, 1862.

I, Joseph Field, of sound mind and memory, but now very sick, do hereby make this my last will and testament, revoking all former ones made by me. Having no living heirs, and owing no debts, I do hereby give and bequeath unto Amanda M. Cowand, the wife of H. D. Ames, of this city, the most prudent and careful of the daughters of my old friend, Jesse Cowand, who died at Bay St. Louis, all the property, both real and personal, which I have, or may have, at my death, for her own use forever, and to have immediate possession at my death. This I give her for the care she shows her father's old friend.

Paraphed ne varietur, February 27, 1865.

A MURDER TRIAL.—The examination of dam Navarre, charged with the murder of Bartolome Tecla, on the fifth of September, 1868, was begun yesterday before the First District Court, and continued till this morning at ten o'clock. The testimony for the State was all taken, and was substantially the same as that given before Recorder Gastinel and published at the time. A point in this case that will probably be maintained by the defense is, that the cause of death can not be established by medical or other authority, inasmuch as the cause of death is reported to have originated from a pistol bullet. But no bullet was found in the brain. Therefore it will be contended that no corpus delicte can be satisfactorily established. The evidence for the defense was to be taken to-day.

RED RIVER INSURANCE.—The Shreveport Southwestern has seen a petition, largely signed by ou merchants and others interested in the navigation of Red river, memorializing the New Orleans Board of Underwriters to reduce the rates of insurance above the Raft. At present the rates are from four to five per cent, which, we think, are altogether too high. The insurance companies have not lost a dollar above the Raft in ten years, and previous to that time their losses were very light. The exorbitant rates have driven the business pretty much off the river, and it is the boast of planters that they can compete with navigation with ox wagons, freight on the latter being about the same as insurance on the former. This should not be, and we trust the Board of Underwriters will see the error of their ways and afford us relief.

SUIT FOR RENT OF CONFISCATED PROPERTY.—The suit for rent of the building occupied by the agency of the Morgan line of steamers was decided in favor of plaintiff. W. R. Fish brought suit against Charles Morgan—the first a resident of Louisiana, the second of New York—for rent of the premises 50 and 52 Camp street. The defendant, Morgan, according to the allegation of the petitioner, having made a contract of lease for four years, from the first of July, 1867, at the rate of $7200 a year. Alleging that the rent for the months of July, August and September—eighteen hundred dollars—was due and unpaid, the petition concludes with a prayer for payment in the above sum. The defendant excepted to filing an answer, on the ground that John Slidell and the Merchants' Bank were each claiming the sum to be due in this case. A bill of interpleader was then filed "in Chancery," praying that all parties be enjoined from further proceedings at law until the court shall decide to whom defendant is to pay the sum. Judge Durell overruled the exception, allowed one day to file an answer, which the defendant failed to do. Judgment was then rendered for the full amount of the claim, and will be signed to-day, the third judicial day from the date of judgment. The injunction prayed for was not granted; the bill in Chancery falling through. S. S. Fish & Torrey for petitioner. Leovy & Munroe for defendants.

HOW THE VERDANT ARE FLEECED.—James H. Budd, who hails from Red River county, Texas, called on the Superintendent of Police yesterday. He had but a few days ago arrived in this city, on the Shreveport packet Judge Fletcher, and came provided with seven bales of cotton and a few hundred dollars in United States currency. It seems, says the Bee, that he considered himself a No. 1 poker player in the country, and that consequently nobody could poker him in the city. Alas, for his verdancy! All his knowledge and science in poker did not avail him against the cunning with which the hocus pocus contrivances known in all places of metropolitan pretensions like New Orleans, as the "little joker" is used, and almost be he was aw re n of them, which to all appearance was simply a tobacco box, was artfully enough maneuvered by means of double lids and bottoms and expert hands, to lessen his funds to the amount of $75, which he foolishly ventured on a wager, as to his ability to work it out of the mysterious box.

So far bad enough, but, alas, for Buddy, after he had sold his cotton and had something like a thousand or two dollars in his pockets, he sought other adventures in the hope, doubtless, of making back the money he had lost! He came upon the identical genius of the box, professedly one "Tony Wright," who of course could afford to sympathize with him, and treated and retreated him till Buddy, adopting him as his chaperone, was handed around by him in the usual style. He was taken to see the "tiger"—not the ferocious, but really less harmless importation from Bengal, at Ames's Museum and Menagerie on St. Charles street—but the voracious one, which almost anywhere prefers eating up a man's money to eating up the man himself. The "tiger" eat up for him $760, when "Tony" was kind enough to reappear, and tell him he was being cheated. Of course this was done—to make the least virtue of the interposition possible—about the time it was apprent Buddy would bet but a dollar or two more, if anything.

Still such apparent disinterestedness had its effect, and Buddy believed "Tony" to be his friend. Why not? "Tony" hadn't swindled him out of the $760, and so far from doing it, had advised him of the fact that he was being cheated. Of course, then, he would go with "Tony," and he did. They went together to a grand "mansion" on —— street—a young ladies' boarding school, as Tony called it—where Tony said he would introduce him to some of the "beautiful young ladies of New Orleans." Buddy found them both pretty and clever, till one of them swore he had insulted her, and, by preconcert, of course, a row ensued. This Buddy had to settle in the usual approved style, which he did, by compromising with the proprietress of the so-called "school," by paying her a round $250.

His object in visiting the Superintendent of Police, Captain Cain, was to get his money back. What he had paid at the "school" (house of ill fame) was fortunately recovered, but the rest was, of course, irrecoverable.

CHARITY HOSPITAL—Supposed Murder.—Catherine McDermott, aged thirty-one years, native of Roscommon county, Ireland, was sent by the Street Commissioner to the hospital from her residence on Delord street near Foucher last evening. She was accompanied by her son, a lad of about fourteen years, who stated that she had been badly beaten by her husband, and that he had left the city. Yesterday morning at half-past nine o'clock the woman died, and Coroner Roche, assisted by Dr. Root, Assistant Surgeon of the hospital, held a post mortem examination on the body, and rendered a verdict that she died from "a fracture of lower jaw and a contused wound of scalp on the right side of the forehead. Death supposed to have been caused by concussion of the brain." Step will no doubt be taken for the arrest of the husband.

RECORDER'S COURT.—The Crescent says that the following, which occurred last week, at one of the police courts is too good to be lost:

Lawyer—"May it please your honor, I wish to argue this case."

Recorder—"Sit down."

Lawyer—"But Judge ——"

Recorder—"I want no argument. I am tired of you lawyers. I will tell the people who you all are."

The lawyer made some remonstrance.

Recorder—"Sir, do you know that I was elected by the voice of the people?"

Lawyer—"Well, Judge, if you were, the people must have had a mighty bad cold that day."

THE PERUVIAN IRON CLADS.

Their Early Departure.

THEIR CREWS AND ARMAMENT

The Picayune of Saturday morning has a description of the iron clads Oneota and Cahawba, having been sold to the Peruvian government are now named Manco Capac and Atahauallpa:

They are single turreted monitors, armed each with two fifteen inch guns, and draw about fifteen feet of water, with six days coal on board. Their crews, counting officers, men and all hands number nearly two hundred each, all engaged at liberal salaries and paid in American gold. The firemen struck for higher wages a few days ago, and were re-engaged at sixty dollars a month in gold.

These iron-clads are propelled by double propellers, and have also recently been rigged with two masts—the foremast provided with a square sail and staysail, and the mainmast with a spanker. This amount of canvas with two jibs, it is thought, will tend to lift and ease them materially in a sea way.

When lying in port these vessels present a rather attractive appearance. Though their main iron deck is only about a foot above the water line, they are provided with light, movable hurricane decks, which answer very well for the purpose for which they were intended.

The turrets, which are moved by steam, are painted white.

These monitors are under the command of a Peruvian Commodore, and two Post Captains and a number of Peruvian minor officers. The executive officers are Americans, as well as the engineers, gunners, seamen, etc.

They are to be convoyed the whole distance by two steamships, the Havana and Monterey, which vessels are expected here daily from New York.

Collector Fuller has instructions not to interfere in any way with the departure of the monitors.

These instructions from Washington are doubtless based upon the position recently assumed by the Provisional Government of Spain toward Peru.

Bienville Parish.

The Sparta Rural Times says:

Our citizens are enjoying the opportunity of regaling themselves on Texas beef, driven in from that State and sold at moderate rates. All the farmers of the parish with whom we have conversed express uniform satisfaction with the yield of their cotton crops, and the picking, from what we learn, has been pretty generally, nearly or quite accomplished. An abundance of corn has been gathered for home consumption. Of the crop of potatoes and peas we hear no complaint. There seems to be an abundance of mast in the woods to fatten all the hogs in the country; but the porkers we presume, are scarce.

FIFTH DISTRICT COURT FOR THE PARISH OF ORLEANS.
Sarah E. Brooks vs. John M. Carr, her Husband—No. 20 157.

I HEREBY CERTIFY THAT ON THE seventeen day of November, 1868, judgment was rendered in this Court in the following entitled suits, in the words and figures following, to wit:
By reason of the law and the evidence in this case being in favor of the Plaintiff and against the Defendant, and by further reason of judgment of default herein and due proof of Plaintiff's demand in open court.
It is therefore ordered, adjudged and decreed that she have judgment against defendant in the sum of two thousand three hundred and twenty seven dollars, with legal interest from first January, 1861; that the community of acquests and gains be dissolved, and said plaintiff be permitted to control her paraphernal property separate from her husband; that her legal mortgage and privilege be recognized; that defendant pay all costs of suit to be taxed.
Judgment rendered November 17, 1868.
Judgment signed November 21, 1868
(Signed) CHAS. LEAUMONT, Judge.
In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the said Court, at the city of New Orleans, on this twenty-sixth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty eight and the ninety-third year of the independence of the United States.

SEVENTH DISTRICT COURT FOR THE PARISH OF ORLEANS.
Rosa Beer vs. Rudolph Beer, Her Husband—No. 5.

I HEREBY CERTIFY THAT ON THE SEVenth day of November, 1868, judgment was rendered in this Court in the following entitled suit in the words and figures following, to wit:
Rosa Beer vs. Rudolph Beer, Her Husband, No. 5—On motion of Cotton & Levy, Attorneys for the plaintiff in this cause, upon submitting to the Court due proof of her demand, the Court being of opinion that the law and evidence are with plaintiff—
It is therefore adjudged and decreed, that the judgment by default herein entered on the fourth instant, be now confirmed. That there be judgment herein in favor of the plaintiff, Rosa Beer, against the defendant, Rudolph Beer, her husband, decreeing a separation of property between the said parties, and a dissolution of the community of acquests and gains hitherto existing between them. That plaintiff be authorized to transact business as a public merchant in her own name and for her own account; and further, that said plaintiff have judgment against her said husband for the sum of four thousand dollars, with legal interest from judicial demand until paid, and cost, with privilege and mortgage according to law.
Judgment signed November 12, 1868.
In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the seal of the said Court, at the city of New Orleans, on this twentieth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred, and the ninety-third year of the Independence of the United States.

[Dispatches to the Associated Press.]

WASHINGTON, December 3.—The Supervising Architect of the Treasury reports in favor of alterations and repairs of the Alexandria, Charleston, Mobile, Norfolk, New Orleans, Richmond, Savannah and Wilmington, North Carolina, customhouses, Louisville and St. Louis marine hospitals, and the St. Augustine courthouse.

Mr. McCulloch has reduced the force at the New Orleans customhouse, comprising 126, including clerks, inspectors and laborers.

National banks, acting as depositories, are required to keep open until the collectors of revenue can close their daily cash accounts.

A treaty with Russia protects the citizens of either country in their trade marks.

Judge Fullerton had a consultation to-day with Secretary McCulloch, regarding revenue frauds.

Secretary McCulloch rejects William F. Conley as Supervisor for the Southern District of Ohio.

Internal revenue receipts to-day, $996,000.

The government loses a quarter of a million by the fire at Fort Lafayette. Only the walls are left standing.

Early legislation, favoring the Southern Pacific Railroad through Texas and Arizona, is expected.

Special Dispatch to the Cincinnati Gazette.]

WASHINGTON, November 30.—The government has begun suit against E. B. Olmstead, late disbursing clerk of the postoffice here, for $83,900, which, it is claimed, is the amount of his indebtedness at the time he recently absconded. Messrs. Snow and Coyle, of the Intelligencer, are his bondsmen, and suit has also been begun against them for $20,000, because of the failure of Olmstead to execute his duties according to law. It is not known how soon the trial will begin. Olmstead is out on $20,000 bail.

The Internal Revenue Bureau is in receipt of advices from the United States District Attorney for Texas stating that revenue officials there have signally failed in the duty of collecting revenue, and that gross frauds exist. In response the Bureau has given instructions to have Mr. Belger, the newly appointed Supervisor, inquire into the matter.

The statement heretofore given in this correspondence, that Reverdy Johnson's scheme for the settlement of the claims between our government and Great Britain was not satisfactory to the State Department, is fully confirmed by developements made to-day.

WASHINGTON, December 4.—General Reynolds, commanding in Texas, wants more troops and military commissioners.

WASHINGTON, December 4.—The contract for the California mail, via the Isthmus, has been awarded to the Pacific Steamship Company, McLain, President, at $150,000 per annum.

All present at the Cabinet to-day, but Secretary Schofield.

The Supreme Court meets on Monday. All the Associate Justices are here.

Customs receipts, twenty-third to thirtieth, inclusive, $2,766,000.

Internal revenue receipts to-day $677,000.

Commissioner Rollins decides that the manufacturer of tobacco, cigars and snuff, who sells his stuff away from the factory, is a tobacco dealer. Stuff, therefore, removed prior to March 23, 1868, from the factory to the place of business, for sale, or placed in the hands of agents, may be sold without stamps any time prior to the date prescribed in sections 78 and 94 of the act of July 20. Stuff manufactured since March 23 can not be removed from the factory for consumption or sale until stamped, even though inspected, returned and tax paid.

[Special Dispatch to the Missouri Democrat.]

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 1.—An investigation has been for some time going on in New York in the Customhouse, under the direction of the Commissioner of Customs. Frauds to a considerable amount have already been uncovered, and it is believed that others will be discovered before the inquiry closes. Among the articles seized was 100,000 cigars, a large quantity of costly silks and a great number of French clocks.

The aggregate of the seizures being about $100,000. In some cases it was found there was an under valution of goods, while in others goods were run through without paying any duties whatever, they having been taken from shipboard during the night. The conspiracy to defraud appears to have been quite extensive, and some of the custom house officials are implicated. One or two arrests have been made, but the Commissioner does not think the real or chief scoundrels have yet been caught.

WASHINGTON, December 7.—Both Houses have organized. Messrs. Christie and Whimpey contestants from the Sixth Georgia District were referred to the Election Committee. The credentials of Messrs. Miller and Hill, Senators from Georgia, are up in the Senate. The Clerk is reading the memorial of the negroes expelled from the Georgia Legislature. Mr. Menard, who claims to succeed Mr. Mann, from Louisiana, and is palpably a man of color, is on the floor of the House.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—General Schofield has returned.

Members of Congress are arriving rapidly.

The Dyer Court of Inquiry will adjourn from Saturday next to the tenth of January.

Internal revenue receipts to-day $352,000.

Mr. Woolley has withdrawn his suit in Baltimore against General Butler for false imprisonment.

There is a strong pressure here to keep the Georgia Senators out, but not to disturb the Congressmen, they being Congressmen representing constituencies not affected by the action of the State Legislature.

S. B. Florence, recently defeated for Congress in the Second Pennsylvania District, has been appointed Assessor for the same district.

Secretary McCulloch's report shows that the national debt is increasing.

Internal revenue receipts for the year will reach $120,000,000.

Yellow Snake, chief of the Omaha Indians, was killed by white ruffians at Durlay, Iowa. His warriors, numbering 1500, are mustering for revenge.

Governor Fenton has commuted the death sentence of Catherine Johnson, of Buffalo, who murdered Bridget McDermot, to imprisonment for life.

WASHINGTON, December 6.—There will be a quorum to-morrow.

It is not known when the President will send in his message, as its sanctity is carefully guarded.

Secretary McCulloch says the statements of his reports are merely approximations compiled from the reports of subordinates.

The American bark Alecta, from Sicily, for New York, with a load of brimstone, was lost in a terrific gale off Mansaia. The steward was lost.

Senators Hill and Miller, also Colonel Christie and Mr. Whemprey, from Georgia, are here. Colonel Christie holds Meade's, Whemprey's and Bullock's certificates as a member of the House from the same district.

WASHINGTON, December 7.—The Supreme Court, headed by Chief Justice Chase, Attorney General Evarts attending, visited the President to-day.

Supreme Court met—full except Greer.

The Georgia Senatorial question was warmly canvassed to-day. Hill's credentials only were presented. Miller will probably require removal on account of political disabilities, and it was thought best not to complicate Hill's credentials. The Republican party is divided on this question. The Georgia members of Congress, except Clift, urge Hill's admission. Governor Bullock and Mr. Blodgett, supported by Congressman Clift, urge delay.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue will, during the week, transmit to the President his resignation, to take effect at the close of the present month.

It appears that Mr. Menard is here without credentials from the Governor. It is stated to-day that the Colored Library Association have addressed a note to Mr. Menard, urging him to make no effort for a seat, as it would certainly work to the general disadvantage of the race.

Governor Bullock has addressed a communication to Congress, representing that the laws of Congress under which Georgia asks to be admitted into the Union have not been fully complied with, and holding that until such compliance Georgia's government must continue provisional. The failure lies in failing to exact from the officers elected the oath prescribed by Congress, administering instead that provided by the proposed Georgia Constitution; which failure to execute the law of Congress has resulted in the defeat of the purposes which Congress had in view in passing these acts, viz: Affording adequate protection for life and property, the maintenance of peace and good order, and the free expression of political opinion. The wisdom displayed by Congress in providing that only loyal men participate in the establishment of the Provisional Government, to be thereafter clothed with the rights and immunities of a State in the Union, is made apparent by the consequences arising from the failure of enforcing that legislation. The Governor calls the attention of Congress to this subject, to the end that steps be taken to obtain full information relative thereto, and to the end that loyalty may be protected and promoted by the enforcement of the laws enacted by the representatives of the American people.

The certificate of division in the United States District Court for Virginia was filed in the Clerk's office of the Supreme Court to-day.

WASHINGTON, December 7—Senate.—Sherman presented Senator Hill's credentials. Drake objected; would never admit representatives from reconstructed States wherein the supremacy of loyal men was overthrown; contended that Congress had the right to see the reconstruction laws enforced. Sherman insisted, stating that Hill's presence here would help cure the wrong. Thayer said the real ground of difficulty was the Georgia Legislature, which was an illegal body, and he requested the reading of a communication from Governor Bullock in substantiation of his statement. Various documents were read, opening up the whole question, when the matter was postponed to Wednesday.

Senator Rice, of Arkansas, introduced a bill requiring the Secretary of War to deliver to the Governors of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana and Arkansas, at their respective seats of government, as many arms for militia as the Governors may require, not exceeding two thousand rifles and two field pieces for each Congressional District. These arms must go into the hands of loyal men, but remain the property of the United States, subject to the order of Congress.

Several financial, naturalization and suffrage bills were introduced. Adjourned.

HOUSE.—One hundred and sixty-four members present. Several new members sworn in. After the proceedings reported at noon the credentials of Mr. Hamilton, of Tennessee at large, were presented. Credentials referred to a committee and the privilege of the floor refused to Mr. Hamilton pending decision.

Some half dozen bills and amendments to the Constitution, providing for the regulation of voting and naturalization in all the States, were presented and referred to appropriate committees.

The Judiciary Committee were directed to inquire what legislation was necessary to secure uniform compensation under the eight hour law.

Half dozen financial bills referred.

The correspondence with Minister Johnson, referring to the Alabama claims, was called for.

A resolution, censuring Reverdy Johnson and demanding his recall, was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The committee to wait on the President reported that his message would be transmitted at one o'clock on Wednesday.

The Committee on Reconstruction were directed to examine into Georgia affairs with power to send for persons and papers.

Mr. Mullins introduced a bill to suppress Ku Klux by national authority, and declaring members thereof outlawed. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Tift presented a memorial of the Georgia Legislature asking the removal of political disabilities from all citizens.

Referred to the Reconstruction Committee.

Mr. Kellogg, of Alabama, introduced a bill to improve Mobile harbor.

Referred to Committee on Commerce.

A bill was introduced providing for an election in Virginia in January.

Referred to Reconstruction Committee.

Preamble and resolution repealing the tenure of office bill was tabled.

The Reconstruction Committee were directed to inquire into the condition of Virginia, Texas and Mississippi, and report what legislation is necessary to protect life, liberty and property.

WASHINGTON, December 8.—The Senate did nothing but adjourn. The House is engaged in a fight over the tax and tariff on copper.

The motion is pending to return to the Legislature of Oregon their resolution censuring and requesting the resignation of their Senators, as impertinent. Cries from the Democratic side that Oregon is a sovereign State are disregarded. The motion will pass.

WASHINGTON, December 8.—In the Senate, to-day, Senator Kellogg introduced a joint resolution extending the provisions of the act of July 4, 1864, respecting the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims, to loyal citizens of Louisiana and Arkansas, and exempting the said citizens from the operation of the act of February 17, 1867, in regard to payment of claims arising from the conduct of the war. The effect of this resolution, if it becomes a law, will be to permit the institution of a large class of suits and the payment of claims of Union men now debarred.

WASHINGTON, December 8.—Senate—Bills were introduced for the election of President and Vice-President directly by the people, removing political disabilities, abolishing the franking privilege, continuing the Freedmen's Bureau in certain States, and extending the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims over Louisiana and Arkansas.

The President was requested to communicate, by Senator Pomeroy, information regarding our relations with the South American Republics and Brazil. Adjourned.

House—The bill making the tariff on copper three to five cents passed. Several department communications were presented.

The Oregon Legislative resolutions declare that Williams and Corbett have betrayed and misrepresented the people of that State. Among the acts specified are voting for impeachment and the reconstruction acts. The House passed the following resolution by 127 to 35.

Resolved, That the paper be returned to the presiding officers of both Houses of the Oregon Legislature, the same being scandalous, impertinent and indecorous.

Mr. Butler introduced a bill repealing the tenure of office act. Referred to Judiciary Committee.

The bill restoring Indian affairs to the War Department passed 116 to 23.

Mr. Robinson spoke in favor of active measures for the relief Fenians imprisoned in Great Britain for words spoken and deeds done in America. Adjourned.

WASHINGTON, December 8.—Attorney General Evarts has assigned his assistants, J. Hubley Ashton to the Supreme Court, and S. L. Dickey to the Court of Claims.

The senate is in caucus for the reorganization of the committees.

A full Cabinet was present to-day.

The Supreme Court was occupied in hearing the argument in a number of cases involving the constitutionality of the legal tender act and its application to trusts and contracts made before its passage. The arguments will probably occupy two days more.

Internal revenue receipts to-day $198,000.

A memorial was presented to Congress from members of the Georgia Legislature protesting against the manner of organizing the provisional government of Georgia, and the subsequent acts of the Legislature, wherein the following occurs:

"Your memorialists also respectfully submit to the decision of Congress whether the constitutional amendment has been adopted by the Legislature of Georgia, and whether further legislation is not necessary before the State can resume her status as a State in the Union, entitled to all the privileges of a loyal State.

"Your memorialists present these facts in behalf of themselves and over 650,000 loyal citizens of Georgia, and trust that their appeal will not be in vain."

The memorial is signed by Benjamin Conley, President of the State, and fifteen other Senators, and J. H. Bryant, J. H. Caldwell, and forty-four members of the House, including some expelled members.

WASHINGTON, December 9.—The President's message is published in New York and Western papers this morning in spite of all precautions.

WASHINGTON, December 9—House.—A bill was introduced submitting the Virginia constitution to the people of Virginia January seven.

Messrs. Butler and Washburn oppose an election in Virginia until after March four, Senate.—A bill relieving Judge Moses, of South Carolina, passed.

NEW YORK, December 1.—The Tribune to-day proposes an amendment to the Constitution, that the right of suffrage be extended to all male citizens of twenty-one years of age, and to foreigners who have resided in the country one year.

The Herald says, editorially: "We learn from the most unexceptionable authority that General Grant is emphatically in favor of so amending the Constitution as to limit therein the President to one term, and to make universal suffrage, or suffrage to male citizens of all races and colors, above the age of twenty-one years, the supreme law of the land. Next, with regard to universal suffrage, in respect to the constitutional amendment contained in article fourteen, which provides that the several States may regulate suffrage each for itself, but in proportion as suffrage is restricted, restoration shall be restricted, is not considered a settlement by General Grant, but a rule apt to result in an endless trouble from the conflicting plans likely to be adopted among the States. Hence, no doubt, General Grant has concluded an amendment making universal manhood suffrage the supreme law of the land in all the States and Territories, is the only decisive solution of this otherwise embarrassing question."

NEW YORK, December 5.—A skater was drowned by breaking in the ice on a pond on Staten Island, the first of the season.

NEW YORK, December 6.—Under final decision by the Court of Appeals, Mrs. Sinclair obtains from Forrest $85,000 costs and hitherto unpaid alimony.

The storm has ceased, the snow disappearing.

It is reported that E. A. Pollard, author of the "Lost Cause," has been appointed to a clerkship in the New York Customhouse.

General Grant has arrived, and will remain until Thursday.

NEW YORK, December 8.—The steamship Rising Star, from Aspinwall, arrived. A great flood had occurred on the Isthmus, checking for a time railroad operation. Her general news is unimportant.

Grant attended the wedding of Professor Benjamin, of West Point, and a daughter of ex-Governor Fish, to-day.

CINCINNATI, December 6.—The list of passengers of the steamboat United States can not be given, as the books are lost. Among those known to be saved are James Price and brother, of Louisville; Robert Nelson, Newport, Kentucky; John H. Green and lady and Sol. Harres, Louisville; McFarren and wife, Nashville; O. R. Clark, Memphis; Ole Bull, Master Pearce, but mother and brother are missing, and others, all residing North. Both boats are destroyed. The America, which lies against the Indiana bank, had ninety-six passengers, only one of whom is known to be lost. The United States lies in eight feet of water; she had seventy-five passengers—more than half lost. Reports conflict, but the loss is estimated at forty-five passengers, including eighteen ladies, seven crew and eighteen deck hands.

The following are missing, but supposed to be safe: J. Crawford and lady, Mr. Rugge, wife and daughter, B. F. Morris, Mr. Otter, B. Slishmeyer, J. Maddox, P. Hartman, Rev. Mr. Risley, Rev. Mr. Parvin, Mr. Harriet Warring, of New Albany, Mr. Bigley, John F. Barnes, J. M. Zedower, M. J. Lock, Mrs. Garvin, Mr. Johnson, Miss G. W. Griffin, S. Heiselberg, Mrs. Mary L. Johnson, State Bright, O. B. Sappington, L. H. Vance, William Hasmaer, Mr. Brigg, Charles Runk, Mr. Pope, Mr. Hegan, Mrs. Hays, of Nashville.

Lost of the crew: John Fannel, steward; Richard Marshall, second steward; James Johns, third clerk; James Fennell, barkeeper; Dave, colored, barber.

Mr. Hayes, of Nashville, was badly burned. The deck hands rushed for the yawl, sunk her, and were nearly all drowned.

Passengers lost: The wife of Commodore Thompson and lady companion; John Moore, Owensville, Ohio; Mrs. R. H. Jones and daughter Eva, of Waynesville, Ohio.

MADISON, Ind., December 5.—Immediately after the collision between the mail boats America and United States, the petroleum on board the United States took fire, and in thirty seconds the boat was in flames from stem to stern. It is supposed that about eighty lives were lost, including forty women. The America lost no passengers. The America was upward, and the United States was downward bound. The accident occurred at half-past eleven last night. The boats departed from their respective landings at noon on Friday.

RICHMOND, Va., December 5.—It is understood to-day that it is the intention of General Stoneman to proceed at once to apply the fourteenth amendment in filling the offices of clerks of courts and Commonwealth's attorneys in the State. A list of persons who are eligible is being prepared by the civil authorities.

It is officially stated that two per cent of the July interest on the State debt will be paid January 1, 1869.

In the United States Circuit Court this morning, the Chief Justice gave the certificate of a division of opinion on the motion to quash the Davis indictment. The case of Davis in this Court was then continued until the May term, in order that the motion to quash may be decided in the Supreme Court before the case is called again here. The Court directed a renewal of the bail bonds of the prisoner to be made.

Chief Justice left on the train for Washington.

AUGUSTA, December 6.—A Republican meeting was held at the City Hall last night and addressed by J. E. Bryant, a member of the Legislature, who referred with pleasure to the fact that Georgia was again in the Union and entitled to all the rights and privileges of any other State. He said that the Republican party had been defeated honestly and fairly in the late municipal election, and he was willing to abide by the result. Resolutions were passed pledging a new fealty to the Republican party and opposing further Congressional interference in reconstruction in Georgia, which State is in the Union.

The citizens of Augusta gave a complimentary supper to the troops under command of General F. N. Sweeny last night for their soldierly behavior and general good bonduct while stationed in this city. People speak in the highest terms of commendation of General Sweeny and his entire command.

The patrol retreated before superior numbers. Mr. Brodbecker was killed the first fire. Three others of his party were wounded, two of them probably mortally. This afternoon an inquest was held upon the body, and a verdict rendered that the deceased came to his death while discharging his duties as special policeman on the fifth of December, from gunshot wounds in face and head from the hands of a colored man, one of a party who were disturbing the peace on the Thunderbolt road, and that we earnestly recommend that the State and county authorities take some action in the matter in order to protect the citizens of this country from the brutality of the colored population. Considerable excitement prevails. About thirty arrests have already been made by the authorities.

LAWS OF THE STATE OF LOUISIANA

PUBLISHED BY AUTHORITY.

[No. 98.

AN ACT

To Define the Duties and Powers of the Police Jury in that part of the Parish of Orleans situated upon the Right Bank of the river Mississippi.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That it shall be the duty of the members of the Police Jury for that part of the parish of Orleans known as the right bank of the Mississippi river, within five days after this bill becomes a law, to elect one of its members to act as a President of said Police Jury for one year.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That the said Police Jury shall immediately after its choice of President proceed to appoint a Treasurer and all other necessary officers required by the regulations governing that part of the parish of Orleans, and said officers shall be appointed from the qualified electors residing in that part of said parish, and they shall be others than members of said Police Jury; and all offices now occupied by any member of said Police Jury, by virtue of any appointment of said Police Jury, is hereby declared vacant, and it is hereby made unlawful for any member of any Police Jury in said portion of the parish of Orleans to hold any office of profit by virtue of any appointment of the Police Jury of which he is a member.

SEC 3. Be it further enacted, That all laws or parts of laws making the Justice of the Peace of that portion of the parish of Orleans known as the right bank ex-officio President of the Police Jury, as well as all other laws in conflict with the provisions of this act, are hereby repealed, and this act shall take effect from and after its passage.

AN ACT

Defining more particularly the duties of Sheriffs, Coroners, Constables and Clerks of Courts, and providing penalties for their failure to perform their duties, and for contempt of Court, and the powers of the Judges over such officers.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That it shall be the duty of the Sheriff, by himself or his Deputy, the Coroner or Constable in whose hands any writ of arrest, bench warrant or other order to arrest any person charged with committing any criminal offense has been placed, forthwith to arrest such person, and to take him before the officer authorized to examine the case, if the accused has not already been indicted, or an information filed against him. If an indictment or information has been filed against the accused, the officer making the arrest under the warrant issued on such indictment or informatien shall confine the accused in jail until he executes such bond as may be required of him by the Judge of the Court before whom the indictment or information was filed, and if the accused is to be examined before any committing officer, the Sheriff or other officer shall hold the accused in custody until the close of the examination; and if required to give bond the accused shall be confined in jail until he complies with the order of the committing officer, and in either of the above cases, if the offense be not bailable, the accused shall be carefully confined in jail until discharged according to law.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That the Sheriff or his Deputy, the Coroner or Constable in whose hands any warrant to arrest a person accused of any crime has been placed, shall have the right, and it is hereby made his duty if he should deem it necessary, to assist or enable him to execute any such writ, to summon as many persons as to him may seem necessary in making such arrest, and all such persons so summoned by any of said officers, not under eighteen nor over forty-five years of age, who shall fail or refuse to render such aid and to obey the officer in executing such writ shall, on conviction thereof, be fined in the sum of not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, and be imprisoned in jail not less than one month nor more than six months, at the discretion of the court; and it is hereby made the duty of all such sheriffs, deputies, coroners, constables, or other persons authorized to make arrests, to report to the next Grand Jury any such delinquency or failure to assist such officer.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc. That the Sheriff or other officer in whose hands any writ or order of arrest is placed ordering the arrest of any person accused of crime, shall, within ten (10) days after such writ is placed in his hands, if he has not made the arrest, make return of such writ to the court or officer by whom the same was issued, under oath, stating the reason of his inability to make the arrest, and that he has used every means in his power to make such arrest. That the accused has either fled from the parish, or so securely conceals himself, that he has not, after careful search in good faith, been able to find him. That such return shall be made on a copy of the original writ, which copy shall be filed with the officer issuing the original writ and the original writ shall remain in the hands of the officer ordered to make the arrest, and under which he is still to proceed to make the arrest; and such original writ shall be a sufficient warrant at all times for the officer to make the arrest in any parish in this State without further certificate or formality. And it shall be the duty of the officer holding the warrant of arrest to pursue the accused into any parish in this State, and there to arrest him under such warrant; and when the arrest is made out of the parish from which the warrant issued the prisoner is to be conveyed to the parish where the writ issued for examination or imprisonment.

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted, etc., That if the Sheriff, or his Deputy, or the Coroner or Constable in whose hands a writ or order of arrest has been placed shall fail to make such arrest, or fail to make the return showing the reason why he has not done so, and the other facts under oath, as required by this act, such fact being brought to the knowledge of the District or Parish Court by the District Attorney or the District Attorney pro tempore, whose duty it shall be, if it shall come to their knowledge that there has been such delinquency, to bring the same to the knowledge of the Court in a written statement to that effect, filed in court; or if any other person shall, in a written statement filed in court and sworn to by them, bring such delinquency to the knowledge of the court, the court, after two days' notice to the delinquent of such statement being filed, shall proceed to hear the excuse of the delinquent, which shall be on oath and in writing, and such other evidence as either party may offer. And if it shall appear he has failed or refused properly to discharge the duties of his office as required by law and this act, the Judge shall suspend him from the discharge of the duties of his office, and it shall be the duty of the Judge to forward to the Governor of the State a copy of the proceedings and order of suspension, to be by him laid before the Legislature at its next session for their action, in either reinstating the officer or dismissing him permanently from office, and that during his suspension the Coroner of the parish, or in the event of his absence or inability to act, or the office being vacant, the Judge shall appoint some Constable of the parish to act in his place, who shall have all the fees and emoluments of the office, and shall also, for the same reason, should such occur, be dismissed from office and another appointed. If the suspension from office is affirmed by the General Assembly, then the vacancy shall be filled as other vacancies; the officer acting in the place of the one suspended shall continue to act until the vacancy is filled.

SEC. 5. Be it further enacted, etc., That it is the spirit and intention of this act, that the several judges of this State shall have a general supervisory control over the officers appointed by law to execute the writs issuing from, and the orders of their courts. It shall therefore be the duty of the several judges of the courts of this State, and they are hereby authorized, whenever the sheriff or his deputy or deputies, or the coroner or constable authorized to execute or serve any order or writ emanating from or in the name of any court in term time, or out of term time, shall neglect, fail or refuse to do his duty in the premises, if such neglect, failure or refusal shall occur in the presence of the judge or court, the officer shall be deemed in contempt of the court, and the judge may, in his discretion, fine such officer in a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars for each offense, and imprison him in the common jail not exceeding thirty days, and suspend him from the execution of his office, and supply his place as is provided for in section four of this act, he may inflict any one or all of the above penalties. If the neglect, failure, or refusal of such officer to perform his duties does not take place in the presence of the judge, but is brought to the notice of the judge, either in vacation or term time by the written accusation of the District Attorney, District Attorney pro tempore, or by any other person, if by any other person sworn to by such person, the delinquent shall be notified by the service of such written notice on him at least two days, to appear before the Judge at the time and place fixed by the Judge in an order to be issued by him to try such alleged delinquency; and if upon such trial, which shall be summary, and without a jury, the party is found guilty of such delinquency of duty, he shall be considered in contempt of court, and be fined, imprisoned and suspended from office, or either or all, in the discretion of the Judge as is provided in this section, when the contempt occurs in his presence; if it be a deputy of any of such officers, then the deputy shall be subject to the fine and imprisonment, or either above fixed, and shall be absolutely prohibited from acting in the capacity of deputy thereafter. That in the trial or execution of the sentence of the Sheriff or any of his deputies for contempt, as herein provided for, the Coroner, or any Constable of the parish named by the Judge shall act; and if there be neither Coroner nor Constable at hand, the Judge shall appoint some suitable person to act in executing his order, who may be dismissed or suspended, at the discretion of the Judge; and if it be the Coroner who is in contempt, the Sheriff or any of his deputies or Constable may act, and if it be the Constable who is in contempt, the Sheriff, or any of his deputies may, or the Coroner may act; and in all cases, if there be no officer at hand to act, the court shall appoint some proper person to do so.

SEC. 6. Be it further enacted, etc., That a neglect, failure, or refusal of any sheriff or his deputy or deputies, or the Coroner, or Constable, to serve any citation, levy any attachment, provisional seizure, sequestration, injunction, execution, arrest, or other legal process in either a civil or criminal proceeding by which any person, the State, parish, municipal corporation, or other corporation, or persons ordering the same, shall be injured, or lose their recourse on the claim sued on, or on the property which was liable to seizure under any of such writs at the time they were placed in the hands of such officer, said officer shall be responsible, as well as their securities on their official bonds, to the party so injured or damaged for the full amount owing on the claim sued on, or on the writ they have failed to execute, or other damage, and proof by the party injured that the failure of the said officer to serve the citation or other writ on the proper party or that he made illegal service thereof, so that prescription barred the claim, or the court was deprived of jurisdiction, or that when the writ of attachment, provisional seizure, sequestration, injunction, execution, arrest, or other legal process was placed in such officer's hands, the party or parties against whom such writs were issued, had property, rights or credits liable to seizure, and within the jurisdiction of such officer, and he failed to seize the same, shall be prima facia evidence of the liability of such officer and his securities on his official bond for the amount of such writ, provided always that the sheriff or other officer shall have the right to require an indemnifying bond in cases now provided by law.

SEC. 7. Be it further enacted, etc., That any clerk of the court who shall neglect, fail or refuse to issue any copy, paper, citation, writ or other process when so required to do by any party or their counsel authorized to require such service, who has made the proper deposit and complied with the requirements of law authorizing them to demand such service from the Clerk, such Clerk shall, on such facts being brought to the attention of the Court in writing, sworn to by the party making it, which shall be served with the order made thereon by the Judge, fixing the time for trial thereof, not exceeding two days from the date of the order, and on such trial, which shall be summary and without jury, if such Clerk shall be found guilty of the charge, he shall be considered in contempt of court and be fined in a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment not exceeding thirty days, or suspended from office, either one or all, and the Clerk and his securities on his official bond shall be responsible to any party for any damage that may result from his failure, refusal or neglect to perform any duty required of him by law. If such clerk is suspended from office, it shall be the duty of the District Judge to appoint a clerk to act in his place, who shall take the oath and give the bond required of clerks, and who shall receive all the fees and emolument of the office during the time he acts as clerk. That when any Judge shall suspend any clerk from office, he shall transmit to the Governor, the proceedings, evidence and judgment of suspension, who shall lay the same before the Legislature at its next regular session, to the end that the Legislature may ratify or reject such suspension from office. That if the suspension should be ratified, then such office shall be considered vacant, and be filled as provided by law. If the Legislature shall fail to ratify such suspension from office, then such officer is to be restored to his office, but shall be liable for any contempt or delinquency thereafter committed as in the first instance. A failure of the Legislature to act at the first session after such suspension shall leave the suspension in force, provided that the Legislature may act on the case at any subsequent session, and the consequence of their action shall be as above set forth.

SEC. 8. Be it further enacted, etc., That any failure of the Clerk of any court to comply with any legal formality in issuing citation, petition, or other process, or the same is not a true copy, or legal in form or substance, no fee shall be charged by the Clerk for issuing such copy or process; and he shall moreover be responsible to the Sheriff for any costs he may incur in executing, or attempting to execute any such process, and the parties to such suit shall not be charged with any of the Clerk's or Sheriff's costs above referred to, and any costs that may be incurred by any Sheriff in executing or attempting to execute or serve any writ or paper, or other process which has not been executed or served in the manner pointed out by law, shall not be charged against any party in any suit, but all such costs, and the expenses incident thereto, shall be borne by such Sheriff.

MY DARLINGS.

BY ALICE CARY.

My Rose, so red and round,
My Daisy, darling of the summer weather,
You must go down now, and keep house together,
Low under ground!

O, little silver line
Of meadow water, ere the cloud rise darkling
Slip out of sight, and with your comely sparkling
Make their hearth shine.

Leaves of the garden bowers,
The frost is coming soon—your prime is over;
To gently fall, and make a soft, warm cover
To house my flowers.

Lithe willow, too, forego
The crown that makes you queen of woodland graces.
Nor leave the winds to shear the lady tresses
From your drooped brow.

Oak, held by strength apart
From all the trees, stop now your stems from growing,
And send the sap, while yet 'tis bravely flowing,
Back to your heart.

And ere the autumn sleet
Freeze into ice, or sift to bitter snowing,
Make compact with your peers for overstowing
My darlings sweet.

So when their sleepy eyes
Shall be unlocked by May with rainy kisses,
They to the sweet renewal of old blisses
Refreshed may rise.

Lord, in that evil day
When my own wicked thoughts, like thieves, waylay me,
Or when pricked conscience rises up to slay me,
Shield me, I pray.

Ay, when the storm shall drive,
Spread Thy two blessed hands like lerves above me,
And with Thy great love, tho' none else should love me,
Save me alive.

Heal with Thy peace my strife;
And as the poet with his golden versing
Lights his low house, give me, Thy praise rehearsing,
To light my life.

Shed down thy grace in showers,
And if some roots of good, at Thy appearing,
Be found in me, transplant them for the rearing
Of heavenly flowers.

THE SONG OF THE SKIRT.

BY WOMAN HOOD.

"And the trail of the woman is over it all,"

With fingers scalded and worn,
With wash board placed aslope,
A woman stood by the steaming tub,
Plying her cake of soap—
Wash! wash! wash!
While the soap-suds spatter and spirt,
And still, with a voice of frenzied pitch,
She sang the "Song of the Skirt."

"Wash! wash! wash!"
While I sweat from every pore,
And wash—wash—wash—
Till I fairly flood the floor.
It's oh! to be a slave
Along with the barbarous Turk,
Where woman has never a skirt to wash,
If this is decent work.

"Oh, men with sweethearts dear,
Oh, men with women of kin!
It isn't the linen they're wearing out,
But the linen they're bringing in,
Wash—wash—wash—
While the soap-suds spatter and spirt,
Cleaning at once, with a single wash,
A crossing as well as a skirt.

"Oh, but to smell the breath
Of the perfume bottle so sweet—
With the chandelier over my head,
And the 'Brussels' beneath my feet,
For only one short hour
To feel as my lady feels,
Gaily tripping along Broadway,
With a yard or more at her heels."

With fingers scalded and worn,
With washboard placed aslope,
A woman stood by the steaming tub,
Plying her cake of soap,
Wash! wash! wash!
While the soap-suds spatter and spirt,
And still, with a voice you would'nt applaud,
(Oh, that its tones could reach Miss Maud),
She sang this "Song of the Skirt."

MY GUIDE.

I know not the way I am going,
But well do I know my Guide!
With a childlike trust do I give my hand
To the mighty Friend by my side;
And the only thing that I say to Him,
As he takes it is—"Hold it fast!"
Suffer me not to lose the way,
And lead me home at last."

As when some helpless wanderer,
Alone in some unknown land,
Tells the guide his destined place of rest,
And leaves all else in his hand:
'Tis home—'tis home that I wish to reach,
He who guides me may choose the way,
And little I care what path I take,
When nearer home each day.

THE UNTRIED BOAT.—"My boat has never been injured by the gale," said a sailor, pointing with pride to a gaily painted yacht that rode at anchor in the bay. "I have no doubt that she would resist the fury of the wildest storm that ever swept across the British channel."

"Your boat," replied the companion to whom he spoke, "is very fresh and bright to look at; but she has never yet been in a storm. Wait till you have tried her, and she has resisted the strength of the gale, before you talk of what she can do."

How many of us are constantly boasting, either in words or by our actions, that we or our friends have never given way to the sins which have overcome many of our neighbors; whereas if the whole truth were known, we should have nothing to glory in on that account, since our immunity from falling simply arises from the fact that we have never been exposed to the force of any great temptation.

THE ALABAMA CONFERENCE—METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH SOUTH—DR. T. O. SUMMERS — ORGANIZATION OF COLORED METHODISTS—THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH—QUARTERLY MEETING AT MERIDIAN.

MERIDIAN, Miss., Dec. 7, 1868.

MR. EDITOR: The Alabama conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, which embraces a large portion of Alabama and Mississippi is in session here and will adjourn tomorrow. About one hundred members are present. Some of them are the most prominent men in the Church. Among whhm are Dr. Keener, of New Orleans, and Dr. Summers, of Nashville. Bishop George F. Pierce is presiding and Bishop Andrews is present. The reports of the preachers are anything but promising, and a shadow of adversity seems to rest upon all. Some heroism for Christ is apparent, and we sincerely wish that ante bellum feelings, intensified by the late civil war, would be so disregarded that there could be a return to the "Mother Church" and an acceptance of the grand principles of truth and justice on which Divine Providence will alone permit the future of our country to be built.

One of the most interesting features of the conference was a lecture by Dr. Thomas O. Summers on the "Unity of the Human Race," delivered last night. Bishop Pierce had requested its delivery, and a large and intelligent audience, among which were many ministers, were present. The Doctor's text was Acts xvii, 26. The leading proposition was: "That all men are created of one blood, and were of the same species." His arguments in support of this were Biblical, historical, ethnological and theological. He quoted largely from the most eminent naturalists who have written on the subject, and with crushing force and burning satire confronted Agassiz and destroyed "Ariel." He said, "There are varieties of the human family, but they all belong to one species. There are no sharply dividing lines between the races of our species; the races cross each other in every conceivable direction that confound all distinctions." "The blood of all races is essentially the same."

Dr. Summers gave free play to his great intellect and higher nature as he ranged the fields of science in support of the great Bible doctrine of the unity of the races, and seemed like Paul at Mars Hill, and when he said that "Christ died for those only who sprang from Adam, and he died for the black man, therefore the black man sprang from Adam," he appeared to be an oracle burning with divine inspiration.

Had he stopped here I would have delighted to honor him; but as if to atone for doing right, to make an offering to the prejudices of his auditory who were only held to listen by the prestige of his name, he boldly declared as a proposition that the colored race was unchangeably an inferior variety of the human family. To prove this he sought not science, nor history, nor Bible, nor theology, but fulminated sophistry worthy of the New York Herald or Ben Wood's News. He had forgotten that in the outset of his most able discourse he had declared that the superiority of any variety of the human family was the result of climate, culture or accident or other providential circumstances.

Dr. Summers represents the more liberal sentiment of the Methodist Episcopal Church South to the colored people, and the policy of that Church in dealing with the colored people is clearly defined by this discourse, which he remarked had been prepared with great care. They base their efforts for the evangelization of the colored people in the South on the dogma of their natural inferiority, with which equality of ecclesiastical, civil and political rights is inconsistent. Their effort to organize the colored people is inspired by a desire to prevent neighborly contact with what they call the "Northern Methodist Church." And though they profess to have a holy horror of politics, it is a political consideration that moves them, which is to aid in maintaining sectarianism by attaching the colored population to them.

Rev. Thomas Taylor, of Jackson, Tennessee, is the general superintendent for the organization of the "colored work." He informed me that he had organized the Kentucky and Tennessee conferences, and that they had met with great success in Tennesse. He will commence the organization of the Mississippi conference at Hazlehurst next month. It does not promise to be a success.

The Mississippi conference of the "Old Mother Church" will meet under most favorable circumstances. The people throughout the district and the State are looking forward to it with bright anticipations. Bishop Simpson is greatly beloved by the brethren who have seen him.

JAMES LYNCH,
Presiding Elder Jackson District.

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, December 9.

Winter having waved his hoary locks in winds rushing from their treasury, and scattered his frost like morsels, gave to Congress a cool reception on Monday. Still the nation's wisdom assembled, and, after organizing, much work was outlined, and measures of great interest foreshadowed. The message has lost much of its interest by being delayed till Wednesday. Enough, however, is known to fix it in the groove where it has been running for four years. The delay to admit newly elected Southern members is significant, and may furnish examples of selfishness or self-sacrifice, as principle or passion may be ascendant.

The controversy connected with the expulsion of Mr. Bradley from the bar of the Supreme Court of this district by Judge Fisher has reached its termination by the recent answer of all the judges of that court to the action of the Supreme Court of the United States. Judge Fisher is sustained. It will be remembered that during Surratt's trial, the conduct of Mr. Bradley toward Judge Fisher while on the bench was rude beyond endurance, and for which his name was stricken from the court records as an attorney. The wonder with some of high position was that he was not committed to jail; the milder course seemed only the more to excite the bully, and the Judge was challenged, forsooth. Mr. Bradley, having exhausted his resources, stands new the victim of his own folly.

Judge Fisher is an upright member and very regular worshiper in the Methodist Episcopal Church, is an honor to the bench, the church and community. Would that all our public men were such, especially those who make and execute the laws.

Mr. Menard appeared in Congress, modestly seating himself on a sofa. Judge Chase and Mr. Moses, of South Carolina, occupied the same easy seat. This was a novel and interesting spectacle—an honorable member of color representing the State of Louisiana! The world does move! What thoughts and scenes that dark form suggests! days of Calhoun, John Quincy Adams and the twenty-first rule; Missouri compromise enacted and repealed; fugitive slave law; Clay and compromises! Menard will hardly get the seat because of the complications it involves.

We chronicle the departure of two more members of the Methodist Episcopal Church of this city during the past week, and consider a brief notice not inappropriate.

William B. Jackson was borne to his "long home" on Sunday afternoon. Eighty-eight years had been allotted him for the walks of life and preparation for its close, and well they had been employed. Time, so rude to many, had dealt gently with him, allowing the maintenance in a great measure of his erect and stately person, fresh complexion and beaming countenance as well as the faculties of his practical and well stored mind. Divine grace had wrought in the moral nature a life whose pulsations beat on far beyond the limits of four score and ten; that grace imparted such beauty and consistency to the character, marked by a life of such practical devotion to God as to extort from the religious scoffer, "Mark the perfect man; behold the upright!" and verily "his end was peace." Mr. Jackson's sound conversion was, under God, the result of the religious efforts of that remarkable sister, whose death we noticed a few weeks since. His sphere of religious duty differed from hers; but he filled it, and well. The light of his example shines clear and bright, while his spirit rests in "the house not made with hands."

Ann Winter was a remarkable woman. This is true in regard to her intelligence, solid piety, unwavering attachment to her church amid the storms through which the church in Alexandria had passed; her constant attendance upon its ordinances; her power as a leader in public prayer as well as her triumphant close of a life of over eighty years continuance. God's cheering promise was fulfilled, "Even down to your old age I will carry you." While these and other losses to the militant church are recorded, others are added to the ranks to battle for truth and virtue.

The religious awakening we last noticed in Georgetown continues, with accessions to the church.

The East Washington charge is sharing again the fruits of earnest toil in the conversion of numbers at one of her outposts—Uniontown.

Wesley chapel rejoices in some cheering manifestations. On the Sunday and week evening services several have professed justification.

The walls of McKendry still echo the shouts of gladness from hearts "born again."

The meeting of Bishops Ames and Simpson with the board of trustees of Metroplitan church resulted in arrangements to prosecute at once, and vigorously, that enterprise, and finish the beautiful structure at the earliest practicable moment. There has been considerable conversation about the removal from this city to Baltimore, as the seat of the next Baltimore annual conference, but the conclusion reached is to let the appointment stand.

The long litigated church case in Winchester, Virginia, has been decided by Judge Parker in favor of the Methodist Episcopal Church. This is the second time that jugde has decided on the same property—once before the war, when persons who joined the Church South laid claim to the church property and expected pro slavery influence would secure success, and since the war they repeated the effort, under the same delusion and with the same defeat. ## A New Methodist Paper in the South.

"At the late General Conference at Chicago the book agents at Cincinnati were authorized 'to establish and publish on or before the first day of January, A. D., 1869, a weekly religious journal at Knoxville, Atlanta or Nashville, whichever in their judgment may be deemed to be most advisable, the editor to be appointed by the bishops, with the concurrence of the book agents aforesaid; but the agents are at liberty to discontinue said paper in the event that its continued publication shall involve a greater loss to the Concern than $2000 per annum.'

"During their visit to this city last week, Drs. Hitchcock and Walden, after consultation with the book agents here and with the bishops, completed their arrangements for the new paper. It is to be issued at Atlanta, Georgia, under the supervision of Rev. E. Q. Fuller, formerly assistant editor of the Northwestern Advocate, and recently transferred to the Georgia conference and appointed presiding elder of the Atlanta district. The new paper is to bear the name of the Methodist Advocate. It will be one half the size of the Christian Advocate, and will be furnished to subscribers at two dollars per year. The first number is to be ready by the first of January. We believe the arrangements for its publication are the best that could be made for its early and successful issue.

"It is understood here that the Charleston Advocate will not be longer published, and that the type, fixtures, and subscription lists will be transferred to the office at Atlanta."

The above is from the Christian Advocate of November 26. Our readers are perhaps aware that the same General Conference that passed the above resolution in regard to the publication of a paper at Atlanta, also passed the following in reference to Charleston, and a similar one for New Orleans:

"3. Resolved, That the book agents at New York are hereby authorized to publish a paper at Charleston, the editor to be appointed by the bishops, with the concurrence of the book agents aforesaid; but the agents are at liberty to discontinue said paper in the event that its discontinuance shall involve a greater loss to the concern than $2000 per annum."

This action of the General Conference was had in view of the peculiar wants of our Southern work. It implies an obligation on the part of the book agents to start and continue papers at the points named, provided they do not involve the Book Concern in a loss of over $2000 per annum. The book agents, under the direction of the General Conference, had expended largely to establish papers on the Pacific coast, and at other important points, to vindicate the interests of the Church. The time was when we had our Charleston Christian Advocate and other papers at the South, but they were taken from the Church by the same influences that at a later day took Fort Sumter from the Government, and other important positions and material for national defense. As these guns were turned on the old government, so these Church organs were prostituted to the defense of slavery and the advocacy of those principles and measures that have drenched the land in blood. Next to the triumph of running up the old flag, to float again over the war-scathed and battered walls of Sumter, was the re-establishment of a paper in this old nursery of rebellion that should be loyal to the Government and the principles of liberty and equality advocated by Wesley and honored and cherished by the Methodist Episcopal Church.

At the General Conference of 1864 arrangements were made by which conferences could be organized at the South, and the banner of our Church could follow the triumphs of the national arms. Under this arrangement Charleston and other points at the South were visited and churches organized. But those who held these points found that the whole artillery of the rebel press was brought to bear upon them. They were assailed with personal slander and abuse, and refused the columns of those papers for any chance at self-defense; and what was more afflicting still, the Church they loved more dearly than their own lives was belied and defamed, and every possible influence was used to prejudice unjustly the Southern people against it. We must have some chance for self-vindication before the public, and especially to be heard in defense of traduced and abused Methodism. As we were made the target for rebel artillery, we could not well stand the bombardment without some means of reply, and we were obliged to start the Charleston Advocate, and with limited and private resources we have returned the fire with grape and canister as well as we were able.

The last General Conference admitted delegates from the newly organized conference, and appeared disposed to give sympathy and aid to our work, struggling under peculiar difficulties here, and there is no room to question the design of their action in reference to aiding the publication of papers at the South; and if this action is now rendered a nullity for the want of hearty approval and co-operation, it is because the noble and generous spirit that inspired the action has not been appreciated by those who have been entrusted to carry out the measures so wisely authorized.

The papers started at the South prior to the last General Conference must of necessity be started as private enterprises, but they were started solely in the interests of our cause here, involving private sacrifices, and with the expectation that the next General Conference would make the needful arrangement of having papers here sanctioned and sustained by the Church. With this expectation the Charleston Advocate has now been published for nearly two years, neither its editors nor publishers, during this entire period, having received one dime in payment for editorial or other services. One of the editors has been assassinated, another has paid out several hundred dollars from his private resources, to meet the expense of running the paper, amid the extreme poverty and financial pressure on all the interests of this portion of the country; and now, after struggling for two years to meet this obvious want of the Church here, we are refused any aid from the Church in publishing a paper at this place, notwithstanding our wants and the favorable action of the last General Conference. We have offered to make over our list, with its good will, to be the property of the Church, and at the control of the Book Concern at New York, the editor of the paper to be appointed by the Bishops, and then to give a bond, with ample security, to publish said paper at Charleston, to the satisfaction of the Bishops and book agents, on receipt of $2000 per year, until the next session of the General Conference, provided we be allowed to receive and control its finances. But, even on this condition, we are refused a church paper at this place, and some other locality of less importance and strength, must be experimented upon, where no such financial pledges can be given. If the men laboring here in the interests of our cause had funds of their own, they would not hesitate to devote their private means to sustain a Methodist paper here, relying in good faith upon the recent action of the General Conference finally to aid them in these sacrifices for the interests of our common cause, amid the trials and perils of this Southern field. Our peculiar wants, difficulties and embarrassments, we are sure, are not fully known and appreciated by a portion of our Church officials. It is an easy matter to take a map of certain sections of the country—for instance, one of Chicago, and the railroad communications that centre at that point—and show how readily St. Louis and Cincinnati can be supplied by a paper published at Chicago; but if St. Louis and Cincinnati were to be consulted, in regard to their local wants and those of the country that centre around them, a paper at each of these places might be deemed of essential service in meeting the demands of our work. We have a membership in South Carolina alone of not less than sixteen thousand, and a paper with us, as the means of information, education and defense of our rights, is of far greater importance than among the same membership in any Northern portion of the Church. We are persuaded that the Church have never had an opportunity to invest $2000 per annum in any enterprise that promised greater results in permanent good to the cause of Christ, Methodism and the Government, than the present opportunity of sustaining a paper at this place. We ought to have at this point a Charleston Christian Advocate, to more than make good to our cause the one stolen by the hands of slavery inte the interests of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. The pulpit and the press of the South have long been manacled by the fetters of slavery, and, as the result, the country has been well nigh ruined. These must be free, and true to God and humanity, in order to secure the redemption and elevation of the South.

As the representatives of the Church differ from us in regard to the necessity of a paper here, and refuse us the required aid, we are left without the means of starting or perpetuating here an organ of our Church. As we have done what we could, and the best we could under the circumstances, to secure a paper, we may soon be relieved of all personal responsibilities, anxieties and labors for this object. The Church has made a mistake in the men sent to this portion of the work, or they make a mistake in not sustaining them in those vital measures that are regarded here as indispensable to our success. Our soldiers, in reoccupying the South, did not need artillery more to aid them in their operations, than our Church the press to assist in our southward movements; but the Government never demanded that Fort Sumter should be bombarded as a private enterprise, nor should the Church expect that those sent out here in her interests should, from their own resources, plant and supply the well worked battery of the loyal press. It was the idea that the Government was doing this work that gave it prestige and power; so the Church should be known and felt in giving power and permanency in these efforts to plant Methodism on these historic battlefields of the once disloyal South.

We never asked or desired an appointment to this Southern work, and we now humbly ask to be transferred to some other field of labor, where we shall not be strangely divorced from the sympathies of the Church, and where, if we should fall a martyr to our fidelity to the great principles of an impartial Christianity, debased and fanatical political partisans would not combine to protect and honor those stained with our blood, and even to rob us of our good name, which is the only coveted inheritance we fondly anticipate leaving to our children after a life spent as a Methodist itinerant.

We notify the Bishop who will attend the next session of the South Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to bring with him to this field some new recruits from the cooling and refreshing shadows of New York and Cincinnati—men who have heard little and experienced less of the stern realities of life in this section of our work, who have ample financial resources that they can devote to the interests of the Church here, struggling amid poverty and deadly hostility from ecclesiastical and political foes, for some who are now here will expect to be relieved.

New Orleans and Ship Island Canal.

The invention of steam dredge boats has enabled channels and harbors to be made where once no access could be had; yet the Mississippi river deposits at its mouth sediment faster than it canbe removed by these dredging machines; even the invention of rakes and wheels to stir up the mud to float away with the current, has so far proved a failure, and so far every cubic yard of earth removed must have cost the Government not less than ten dollars. The machinery coming in contact with sunken hulls, anchors or logs, breaks, and the boat comes to New Orleans for repairs, and returns to find the work to be done over again. To obviate this difficulty, and to shorten the distance to tide water from the city and to lessen the expenses of towing vessels and other charges, the New Orleans and Ship Island Canal Company was chartered October 4, 1868. The Company are to build or excavate a ship canal, connecting with the Mississippi river near the upper line of Carrollton, passing through the unsettled portions of the city of New Orleans, thence to the Rigolets near Fort Pike, where deep water for vessels of large draft can be found, and with deepening a short distance of the channel in Mississippi Sound, which has a blue clay bottom, we find an outlet to the Gulf of Mexico, through South Pass, where we reach the fine harbor of Ship Island, distant seventy-five miles from the city. Vessels passing through this route could sail within twenty-five miles of the city, when by the river they have to be towed one hundred and twenty miles. We think the problem of a permanent and cheap outlet for the commerce of the Mississippi Valley for vessels which find a difficult passage over the bar is settled whenever this canal is completed. With the aid of dredging machines it can be speedily accomplished.

The ship canal is to be excavated to a width of one hundred and fifty feet, with a depth of twenty feet, and will require the excavation of about 13,000,000 cubic yards of earth, being about the amount annually brought down in solution by the Mississippi river and deposited at its mouth.

The difficulties attending New Orleans as a commercial port is well considered in the following extract from the Philadelphia Enquirer:

One of the greatest drawbacks to the prosperity of the port of New Orleans is the extreme port charges, which are thus stated by a correspondent of the Bulletin of that city. The figures represented the charges on a vessel of one thousand tons:

|---|---|
| Towage from sea $1 25 per ton registered tonnage | $1,250 00 |
| Quarantine fees | 20 00 |
| Levee dues, 20 cents per ton | 200 00 |
| Harbor master's fees | 30 00 |
| Port Warden, 5 cents, if called. | 50 00 |
| Towage down river, 50 cents per ton. | 500 00 |
| Out pilotage, $4 50 foot draft, say 16½ | 74 26 |
| Total | $2,144 26 |

Besides which, stevedore's bill commissions 5 per cent. in, 5 per cent. out and Customhouse fees, $10.

All vessels are compelled by the pilot laws to take on board a bar pilot; if the captain refuses, his vessel is accountable for all losses to cargo, and pilots can collect one-half the bill. Large vessels can not sail further up than English Turn, eighteen miles below the city, and tow boats charge nearly as much from there as from sea.

The natural result of such extreme rates as these is to so increase the freights as to drive produce to other parts, the inward trade being similarly affected. This is seen in the rising consequence of Savannah as a shipping port, and the change in the current of produce from the gulf ports northward through the border States, via St. Louis, Memphis, Cincinnati, Norfolk, etc. If the overland freight cost more, the reduction of ocean freights makes the export cheaper and swifter than by the New Orleans route, so that, other things being equal, that city is placed at a great disadvantage. even on products from a section of country for which the Southern metropolis is the natural outlet.

These matters need looking into now more than ever, perhaps, since earnest efforts are making to turn the produce trade of the great Mississippi valley down that mighty stream.

It is not alone the port charges at New Orleans that need looking after—the mouths of the Mississippi need deepening to the end that vessels of large draught may pass in and out without unnecessary delay. The subject has often been before Congress, and large appropriations have been made at different times, but the difficulty still remains. For a distance of one hundred miles from the Gulf, the river is obstructed by bars, over which the depth of water is often not more than twelve or fifteen feet, and the difficulty is increased by the fact that these bars are constantly changing position and character. By the aid of steam tugs, vessels can be made to plow into and through them, to a depth of two or three feet; but the river still flows on, and the temporary interruption to the work of formation is speedily repaired. It is apparent that the yearly advance of the outlets of the river into the Gulf—and this advance is constant and rapid—lessens the slope of the river near the mouth, and thus retards the current, increases the bars in size and number, and affects the whole valley for hundreds of miles back into the country.

The quantity of sedimentary deposit annually brought down by the current, and held in suspension until near the outlet, was estimated in 1850, after measurement extending over thirty years, as sufficient to cover twelve square miles to the depth of one foot. The formation of bars is not to be wondered at; nor is it child's play to grapple with the problem to be solved. Dredging can hardly be regarded as a thorough remedy; in fact, it gives but a temporary relief. But it is the only available remedy, until some effective system shall be adopted. Continuous dredging may keep the channel open, but it carries no results into the future. It is a national necessity that the mouth of the Mississippi should be kept open, and Congress should early make the whole subject of the levees, the delta and the "passes" of the river a subject of careful and thorough investigation. It will be strange indeed if modern science shall not be able to solve the problem.

THE TEST OATH.

The Crescent tries to defend the presidential electors for their neglect of duty by saying that no law provides for the manner of administering the oath of office, or by whom, and says "oaths of office are well enough as a form;" also, "there is nothing more nonsensical than an oath," etc. It also accuses us, and, in fact, Republicans generally, with a great fondness for oaths. The Crescent, although it has no ex-Justice of the Peace on its staff, writes the ablest legal editorials on Camp street; but we think it is mistaken in its views of the "nonsensicalness" of oaths, and in its conception of our views. We believe that oaths have been imposed and multiplied to too great an extent. The test oath particularly has had the unfavorable effect of keeping thousands of men out of the Republican party who are otherwise partial to Republican policy and laws, but could scarcely be expected to advocate the success of what included their own disfranchisement. A majority of the Republicans in this State are opposed, probably, to all test oaths, and we believe the time has come for their abolition. They would have been repealed long ago had it not been for the chronic violence and Ku-Kluxism in the Southern States. The test oath has kept more votes out of the Republican party than it has disfranchised men on the other side; but the turbulent and violent spirit manifested by a portion of the opposition party have made all efforts to abolish test oaths and disfranchisements unpopular in Congress as well as the Convention and Legislature of 1868. "Let us have peace" and the Legislature and Congress would doubtless at once institute measures to relieve all disabilities. Such are our views and nothing contrary to them has appeared in these columns. The test oath was instituted in time of war and was intended as a safeguard, not as a punishment; but though well meant it does not work well in time of peace, either for national purposes or those of the Republican party. It is variously interpreted and not susceptible of a fixed application.

To illustrate the truth of this remark, we give one or two notable instances of how curiously the test oath has been construed in this city.

Mr. Thomas P. May, the defaulting Sub-Treasurer, organized the "St. Stephens Guards," of St. John parish, with his own means, and was elected and served as Lieutenant of the company, and took an active part against the United States Government in the early days of the rebellion. He admitted this in the New Orleans Times of July 15, 1864, (of which paper he was the founder and the largest owner), as follows:

We desire to say, however, in conclusion, that there is truth in the statement that Mr. Thomas P. May was a "slaveholder" before the war, and we will add that he was a pretty large one. It is true that he was "a Lieutenant of the Stephens Guards," and it is also true that he, foreseeing that the inevitable result of the war upon the United States would be the emancipation of slaves in Louisiana, was one of the first to throw himself beneath the broad folds of his country's banner, notwithstanding her success was to him a loss of the full value of his slaves, not less than two hundred thousand dollars. He was willing to give something for the preservation of the Union, that was thus valuable, and his Lieutenancy of the Stephens Guards into the bargain. When the editors of the Era and La Renaissance can show that they have sacrificed as much, Mr. May will be ready to meet them on the question of patriotism. The editor of the Times has, however, at least, credit for one thing, that of being "well bred." In these days, when gentlemanly editors are scarce, this compliment is worthy of record.

On the arrival of General Butler, the ex-Lieutenant of the rebel service was the first to tender a public dinner to that distinguished Union commander, at John Galpin's, at which were present those distinguished patriots, J. S. Whitaker, J. A. Rozier, Christian Roselius and others. And subsequently, when appointed Sub-Treasurer, the same ex-Lieutenant took the test oath prescribed by the Radical Congress, and with uncovered head and uplifted hand swore thus:

"I have voluntarily given no aid, countenance, counsel or encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto; that I have neither sought nor accepted nor attempted to exercise the functions of any office whatever, under any authority or pretended authority in hostility to the United States; that I have not yielded a voluntary support to any pretended government, authority, power or constitution within the United States hostile or inimical thereto."

Notwithsfanding the curious position occupied by Mr. May, the Times, during his administration, was indecently eager to pick flaws in the records of other men.

We will close this subject by one more example. Mr. John Quincy Adams Fellows, a well-known politician, who has been an active Know-Nothing, a blustering rebel, then a pretended Union man, and who is now an ornament to the Democratic party, furnishes us the instance.

The fiftieth annual communication of the most worshipful "The Grand Lodge of the State of Louisiana," commenced in the city of New Orleans, at the Grand Lodge Hall, on St. Charles street, on Monday, February 10, 1862, at half-past six o'clock P. M.

The Grand Master, J. Q. A. Fellows, delivered an address in which are found the following paragraphs:

It is with a feeling of sadness that I notice the absence of many a face which I have had the pleasure to greet here during the last ten years. Many who have heretofore come up to this annual assembly and assisted us with their counsels, have, at the call of their country, left friends and home to serve its behests on the tented field and in the deadly strife of battle. A Mason's duty is to his country, next after that to his God and then to his neighborhood before himself. This is the order of a Mason's duties, and the true Mason knows best how to fulfill them. May we who remain behind remember them in our prayers; may their success be in proportion to the justness of their cause, and may they be permitted to return in God's own good time to rejoice with us in our country's deliverance and to receive the welcome of their friends and brethren. * * * *

On the twenty fourth of December last our Grand Secretary, Samuel G. Risk, departed this life at Memphis, Tennessee, whither he had gone in the delusive hope of regaining that health which he had lost in the service of his country. * * * *

I have called upon each Lodge to preserve a record of all who have gone to the war, and to state the fact in their returns as an interesting matter for future reference. In the present time of trouble it behooves our elder brethren to return again to their active duties in the Lodge, and by their exertions keep the order alive and provide for the wants of the families of the younger brethren now absent in the service of their country. As has been said of old, Masonry best flourishes in times of peace; yet, as we love the Order, our exertions to preserve it will be in proportion to the present necessities. Let us meet like men and Masons the greater calls upon us, and also remember in this our own time of peril that the charity of Free Masonry is universal, and is even to be extended, so far as safety will allow, to a fallen foe.

The Lodge of which I am a member has remitted the dues of its members for the entire period which they may be engaged in the military service of the Confederacy; and some others, I understand, have made a similar provision. This has met with my entire approval. * * *

I have granted but one dispensation for a new Lodge during the past year, and that was to Brother A. S. Herren and others, for a Lodge to be called Pelican Lodge, and attached to the Seventh Regiment of Louisiana volunteers, and of which Brother Harry T. Hays is the Colonel, and with instructions to receive no materials for work outside of that regiment. Several applications have been made to me for similar dispensations, and which I professed my willingness to grant on a proper showing, but the near approach of this session has prevented further action. I would grant one to proper parties in each regiment of Louisiana volunteers, on proper application, with the view that the tedium of camp life might be lessened by the practice of our rites on suitable occasions.

I have been informed that the Grand Master of Virginia has granted a dispensation to certain of our brethren in the Fifth Regiment of Louisiana volunteers. This we can not approve; for the soldiers of that regiment, though in Virginia, are yet our own citizens, and I can not but regard this as an invasion of our jurisdiction. We do not invade theirs, for we confine the working of our lodges to our own citizens and to the members of the particular regiment to which the lodge is attached. Our late and our present Grand Secretary have had some correspondence on this subject with Brother Dove, the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge of Virginia, but as yet no definite action has been taken. Such other Grand Masters as have granted army warrants, so far as my knowledge extends, have confined their jurisdiction to a particular regiment volunteering from their own jurisdiction.

* * * * * * * *

The absence of the Grand Treasurer from April last, in Florida and Virginia, and that of the Grand Secretary in camp at Proctorville, necessarily devolved upon me greater duties than usual, or than I had anticipated.

* * * * *

The greatest call upon me has been for dispensation of time, etc., in conferring the degrees upon candidates called to the service of their country. Where the work had been begun, and a proper showing mode, I invariably granted the request, and in a few instances dispensed with a portion of the time required in new cases, all other formalities being complied with. In one instance the three degrees in one night, in Perkins Lodge, on the captain of a company of artillery suddenly called into active service.

These particulars, with a number of others, were handed us years ago by the lamented Dostie, himself a distinguished Mason, for the purpose of exposing this Masonic pretender. This was not the only way in which Fellows recognized and aided the rebel government, as the following will show:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
State of Louisiana,
Office of the Register of Voters
In and for the City of New Orleans,
July 29, 1868.

I, A. Vallas, Register of the names and residences of all qualified electors of the city of New Orleans, duly commissioned and sworn, do hereby certify that in the book called "Original Registry of Voters," opened and commenced while the State of Louisiana was under the power of the so-called "Confederate States of America," in accordance with an act of the so-called Legislature of the State of Louisiana entitled an "act relative to the registry of voters in the city of New Orleans," approved December 21, 1861, and which book is now among the archives of my office, the name of John Q. A. Fellows appears on page 145 as having been registered on the fourteenth day of April, 1862, as a qualified elector of said city, under No. 3765, as residing then at No. 229 Philip street, in the twenty-second precinct, having resided in the State and parish eleven years; in precinct, three years, and being a native of the State of Vermont.

And I further certify that at the head of the column of said book of the signatures of the electors appears the oath prescribed by said act of the Legislature for all persons appiying to be registered, and which oath is subscribed by said John Q. A. Fellows, and reads as follows:

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I am qualified according to the Constitution and laws of this State to vote, I will be faithful, and true allegiance bear to the State of Louisiana and the Confederate States of America, and that I will support, protect and defend the Constitution of the State and the said Confederate States. So help me God."

In testimony whereof I, the said Register, do hereby grant these presents, as witness my hand and the impress of my seal of office, the day and date above mentioned.

A. VALLAS,
Register of Voters in and for the city of New Orleans.

Notwithstanding these acts, Fellows on the first of January, 1867, when testifying on behalf of the rioters, before Mr. Boyer, of the Congressional investigating committee, said:

"I was a Union man; I did not go so far even as to coincide with that party known here as the co-operationists; they were not Union enough for me, though I voted with them. I voted Union throughout to the end, though with some trouble, and have remained so ever since."

Fellows had already taken the test oath as follows:

I, J. Q. A. Fellows, do solemnly swear that I have never voluntarily borne arms against the United States since I have been a citizen thereof; that I have voluntarily given no aid, countenance, counsel or encouragement to persons engaged in armed hostility thereto; that I have neither sought nor accepted nor attempted to exercise the functions of any office whatever under any authority, or pretended authority, in hostility to the United States; that I have not yielded a voluntary support to any pretended Government, authority, power or Constitution within the United States, hostile or inimical thereto. And I do further swear that, to the best of my knowledge and ability, I will support and defend the Constitution of the United States against all enemies, foreign or domestic; that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; that I take this obligation freely, without any mental reservation or purpose of evasion, and that I will well and faithfully discharge the duties of an attorney, proctor and counsellor at law of the courts of the United States for the Eastern District of Louisiana. So help me God.

(Signed) J. Q. A. FELLOWS.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this eleventh day of May, A. D., 1865.

Clerk's Office—A true copy.

(Signed) K. LOEW,
Deputy Clerk.

We have other proofs and examples at hand, but the above are sufficient to show the manner in which the test oath is understood and taken in this city. We have selected the case of Fellows because that gentleman has been conspicuously busy in falsifying the political records of men much his superior.

But to return to our main subject. Many of the present Legislature, including Republicans, both white and colored, are opposed to State disfranchisement. What we have urged, and what the Crescent has misunderstood, is that laws are laws and must be observed while they last. Its legal point is answered by saying that the "manner of administering" need scarcely be provided by law further than by giving the form of oath as is done by act of July 2, 1862; the "person by whom" is provided for by general laws, giving to certain officers power to administer oaths, such as Federal Judges and United States Commissioners. As for the "nonsensicalness" of oaths, there can scarcely be anything more solemn and binding than an oath, with the help of God, to obey the Constitution of the United States and perform the duties of an office faithfully and impartially. The Electors erroneously considered themselves State officers, but singularly forgot even to take the State oath; and they could scarcely plead that statutes of the State do not show "how and by whom" oaths of office can be taken.

THE JEWS.

In passing along one of the streets of this city there is to be seen a large and elegant building, with a block of marble inlaid in the front, bearing the inscription "Hebrew Education Society." What is the exact meaning of this inscription, or the use to which the building is devoted we do not know, except that it shows how the people who compose this society are progressing under the benign influences of a land of freedom. It is truly astonishing to see all over this country how the Jews flourish and prosper. Go where you will into the most remote settlements of this Union, in State or Territory, and there the Jewish merchant and trader is to be found with his stock of goods ready for a bargain. In all the principal cities such as New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco and others of lesser note, the principal mercantile houses are composed of Jews, having large and ample capital to carry on their business. Besides the amount of money invested in business these houses and firms have built or purchased large and magnificent stores and warehouses which they own in fee. Especially in the cities of New York, Cincinnati and Chicago is this the case. These people are investing large sums of money in real estate in the city of New York, and whole blocks of residences in the upper part of that city are owned and occupied by Jewish families, and in many cases by such as have made fortunes and have retired from active business. It was remarked by one of the oldest stock and commission brokers in New York that where but ten years ago scarcely a Jew was seen on 'Change, now there are hundreds trading and speculating in stocks and engaged in the daily operations of Wall and Broad streets. These thrifty and energetic people in the increase of their wealth, have not neglected their religious interests, for they have built synagogues and places of worship in nearly every prominent city of the Union. In New York, out of some forty of these, of greater or less magnitude, one has just been completed, situated on the Fifth avenue, near Forty-fourth street, which in beauty of finish is unsurpassed in the annals of church architecture, costing over $1,000,000. To show the liberality of this class of our citizens in the support of their rabbis or teachers, we will state that when the sittings of this beautiful temple were disposed of to such as proposed to be its congregation, a surplus of $160,000 over and above the fixed price of those sittings was realized, the interest of which, together with the annual rental of pews, is more than sufficient to meet all the expenses of the synagogue. In the building of their houses of worship, like the old-fashioned Quakers, there is no mortgage or encumbrance upon the building or the land where they are located. It would be well for other denominations of religious sects to emulate this example.

The Jews are becoming more liberal in their religious views than they have been in the past, as is seen in the proceedings of the Convention recently held in New York called the B'nai Brith, where liberal and catholic views were expressed toward Christian denominations and a willingness to assist in all the eleemosynary or charitable enterprises of the day and age. They are a people who do not care to interest themselves in the political contests, for in this they see no profit or pecuniary advantage. It is well known that during the late war they were generally shrewd enough to avoid any outspoken expression of their opinions or sentiments on either side of the contest, but, taking advantage of their neutral position, made all the money they could from both sides. They are a people devoted to commercial purposes, and for the past few years have been remarkably successful in amassing wealth; they may now be considered the richest class of our citizens. In this city they are well represented in the professions as well as in commerce, as may be judged from the signs which are to be seen in the principal business streets; and if here they adopt the same course as their brethren do in the Northern States, their prosperity and success will be commensurate with their liberality and catholicity.

Many of our citizens of the Jewish faith have labored under the impression that General Grant, the noble leader of the Republican party in the last campaign, entertained a prejudice against their race. This was a mistake. General Grant, like all true Republicans, has no prejudices founded on race. Pending the election he was not willing that any letter from him, explanatory of any of his acts, should be published; but since the election the following frank, brave and noble letter has been made public in the columns of the Israelite:

GALENA, Ill., September 14, 1868.

Hon. I. N. Morris:

DEAR SIR—I am in receipt of a letter of Mr. A. Moses, of the third instant, inclosing one from you, bearing the same date. My first inclination was to answer Mr. Moses, because you desired it; then I thought it would be better to adhere to the rule of silence as to all letters. Were I once to commence answering all political questions asked of me there would be no time between now and the third of November to get through. Mr. Moses, I think, will readily understand this. In regard to Order No. 11, hundreds of letters have been written to me about it by persons of the faith affected by it. I do or did not answer any of the writers, but permitted a statement of the facts concerning the origin of the order to be made out and given to some one of them for publication. I do not pretend to sustain the order.

At the time of its publication I was incensed by a reprimand received from Washington for permitting acts which Jews within my lines were engaged in. There were many other persons within my lines equally bad with the worst of them, but the difference was that the Jews could pass with impunity from one army to the other, and gold, in violation of orders, was being smuggled through the lines; at least so it was reported. The order was issued and sent without any reflection, and without thinking of the Jews as a sect or race to themselves, but simply as persons who had successfully (I say successfully instead of persistently, because there were plenty of others within my lines who envied their success) violated an order, which greatly inured to the help of the rebels.

Give Mr. Moses assurance that I have no prejudice against sect nor race, but want each individual to be judged by his own merits. Order No. 11 does not sustain this statement, I admit, but then I do not sustain that order. It never would have been issued if it had not been telegraphed the moment it was penned, and without reflec-

Yours truly, U. S. GRANT.

JUDICIAL NOVELTIES.

We have given and reviewed the decision of Judge Leaumont in the Metropolitan case, but our columns are scarcely equal to the task of giving all that is rich and racy in the judicial department.

On Wednesday the gang sometimes spoken of as the Chicago thieves, composed of Essex and others, were released by the Seventh District Court on habeas corpus. It must not, however, be supposed that we allude to Judge Collins, who is an old-fashioned Judge, and does not furnish us with much that is either startling or novel. There is nothing particular to remark concerning his decision, except that the prisoners were held and committed by Recorder Becker upon an insufficient showing, and the jurisdiction of the Seventh District Court was not made a point by counsel. The history of the case, however, in its previous stages, has been interesting. The parties were arrested first upon the authority of a telegradhic dispatch, showing a robbery at or near Hazelhurst, Mississippi. Affidavit was made, warrant issued, the parties arrested, and after a partial hearing committed to the Parish Prison into the hands of that vigilant, wiry, and tenacious public officer, Sheriff Wurzburger. This commitment was for a further hearing.

Councellor Sherburne, late Democratic candidate for elector, had the prisoners taken before Judge Abell on a habeas corpus. The latter did not see it his province to interfere while the prisoners were only committed for a further hearing, and sent them back until the prisoners should be finally committed, as nothing could be predicated upon the incomplete action of the Recorder, who must necessarily at times make such commitments as this case disclosed. There is nothing very singular in the case thus far as Recorder Becker, Sheriff Wurzburger, and Councellor Sherburne are matter-of-fact personages, and Judge Abell is only lively and interesting when he gets upon politics.

Anxious reader, you must wait the developments of the case. At this stage enters on the scene Counsellor Atocha, who, educated in the office of Charles O'Conor, brings to the New Orleans bar an ingenuity fully equal to that of his world-famed preceptor.

Counsellor Atocha initiates proceedings for a resort once more to the time-honored old English writ of liberty, the habeas corpus. There are some things in medicine which only calomel will cure; if it fails once it must be renewed again and again, each time in another shape, for it is the only cure. Just so with the habeas corpus. The experienced practitioner at law, like a good old-fashioned doctor, tries it again and again, until success comes to crown his efforts.

The proceedings now taken are before United States Commissioner and ex-Governor of Ohio and California, and ex-Senator of the United States, Hon. John B. Weller. That officer promptly issues the writ of habeas corpus, directing Sheriff Wurzburger to bring the bodies of the prisoners before the Commissioner, and show wherefore he keeps them in custody. But the Sheriff, who is known of old to the bar as a man of a very doubtful and negative turn of mind, coupled with occasional belligerency, allowed the latter quality to get the better of his usually serene temper, and taking with him as his counsel that warrior of a hundred battle fields, General Harry T. Hays, brandished and ripe for a legal tournament, appeared before the Commissioner minus the prisoners.

What there took place 'twere needless to relate. Nor can we tell the points of law that were then and there disputed; in fact we do not know. Whatever the restrictions or limitations may be to the powers of Commissioners, we know of no law preventing ex-Governors and ex-United States Senators, of which we are one of the former, and constructively one of the latter, from issuing the writ of habeas corpus or any other writ, and we would take it in dudgeon were Sheriff Wurzburger to fail promptly to comply.

But Mr. Weller is a better natured man than we, and in fact has the reputation of being a first-rate joker. He even got ahead of President Lincoln once, as the following anecdote will show. Mr. Weller was recalled from the ministry to Mexico just after the beginning of the war, and Mr. Seward reported to the President that he had returned a clean portfolio. Mr. Lincoln congratulated Governor Weller upon this, and the latter said:

"Yes, Mr. President, I have done the clean thing. I have come home to support you in your arduous task of putting down the rebellion, although I have been opposed to you in politics. I only ask to be put in a place where I can be useful to you and the country."

President Lincoln—"What sort of a place would you like to have, Governor?"

Governor Weller—"A commodoreship in the navy."

President Lincoln—"I was not aware, Governor, that you had any experience in that line."

Governor Weller—"Oh, I thought that would make no difference, from the manner you are appointing Brigadier Generals."

President Lincoln acknowledged himself outjoked, and slapping the ex-Minister to Mexico good-naturedly on the shoulder, said, "I owe you one, Governor."

The probability is that the witty Commissioner soon assured the Sheriff and General Hays that he had only been perpetrating one of his best jokes, and after telling them another good one or so, the Sheriff and General were permitted to retire without a commitment of the former for his disobedience, or giving the latter any occasion to exhibit his strategy in a forensic battle.

Resort was next and finally had to Judge Collins with result as aforesaid. Thus ends our tale.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The length of this document, we confess, discouraged us at first and led us to dread a perusal and review of it; but the Times has dissipated much of this by characterizing it as "the words of truth and soberness"; and the Crescent has excited our curiosity—not an idle curiosity—by assuring its readers "that there is a degree of interest, at once sad and peculiar, with which reflecting minds will be likely to peruse the last message of President Johnson." What the Times means by truth and soberness we shall not attempt to decide; but we can not believe it means any reflection on President Johnson's character for sobriety and truthfulness; nor can we believe the Crescent means any reflection when it says, "there is a degree of interest, at once sad and peculiar, with which reflecting minds will be likely to peruse the last message of President Johnson.' If this is the last message of President Johnson, and it is a good one, we can not see why there should be anything "sad and peculiar" about it. But if, on the other hand, President Johnson, differing with most of the great and good men who have filled the Presidential chair of this nation, since the formation of its Republican form of government persists in setting up his own will against the will of the people and continues defiantly to make war on them by making war on Congress, why, then, there is something really sad and peculiar in his conduct, and something to excite suspicion in the minds of the people that he is lacking in truth and soberness—those great essentials in an honest ruler of a free people. If it is his pride to be "consistent," only in resisting the will of the people, and persistent in having his own way against the laws of Congress, why then he is guilty of a great public wrong—a wrong that must arouse the severest condemnation of the people from which he can not hope to escape. His own peculiar friends may praise him and try to bolster him up, but their praise can be of no service to a man who persists in doing wrong in the interest of a fraction of our people against the interests of the whole. President Johnson then is responsible for all of the useless excitement during the last three years in this country on the subject of the reconstruction of the States that were in rebellion. If he had have bowed to the will of the people upon this subject much of the bad feeling that has been aroused by politicians would have been avoided and the country would have long since been at peace. All of the States would have resumed their functions as States, and would have had their representatives in Congress looking after their interests. In that case his countrymen could have thanked him upon his retirement from office for his wise and statesmanlike conduct, but now they have to condemn him as vain-glorious and false, and look to the President elect, General Grant, for that peace which the nation had a right to expect when General Lee surrendered at Appomattox.

The Picayune, like the Times and Crescent, leans toward the President in his fight against the oft expressed will of the people, and damns him with faint praise. It says, "He has a history to record, a character to vindicate, and a Constitution to defend." His history will be written in the history of the country, and will be recorded in this way: President Johnson, having gained the confidence of his countrymen by professing a veneration and profound respect for them and their institutions and laws, as adopted by them to meet the order of progress and civilization, was chosen Vice President of the United States at a time when the enemies of liberty were making war upon the country with a view of breaking down the Government and establishing on its ruins a government in the interest of slavery. The men who were engaged in this infamous work procured the death of the President, the illustrious and good Lincoln, and through the diabolical act Andrew Johnson became President. It was not expected that he would side with the enemies of his country; but he did so, and attempted to establish himself, in their interest, dictator, invested with every power—legislative, executive and judicial, civil and military. But the people who were able to put down a huge rebellion were able to stifle the efforts of a would-be tyrant, and send him to that retirement he deserves.

THE STATE LIBRARY.

In 1838 an act was passed by the General Assembly of Louisiana establishing a State library to be located in the capitol on the square now occupied, in part, by the Mechanics' Institute. A meagre appropriation of one thousand dollars per annum was made for the purchase of books, and a librarian at a salary of six hundred dollars, was elected by joint ballot for the term of four years. We believe the selection to that position fell to the lot of Peter L. Jore, a somewhat erratic citizen, well remembered by our ancient inhabitants as a standing candidate for the mayoralty of this city.

The Commercial Library had been in existence some years prior to the establishment of the State Library, and was located in the Arcade buildings, on the corner of Magazine and Gravier streets. It was supported by the subscription of merchants, clerks and mechanics, many of whom were not very punctual in their payments. At the session of 1838 the Legislature made an appropriation of one thousand dollars per annum for five years to this library, and subsequently granted the use of the old arsenal building, situated on the Baronne street side of the State House square, conjointly to the Commercial and State Libraries. The two libraries thus brought together in the same building, formed the nucleus of a very respectable collection of choice standard works in the French and English languages, and for some time continued to be a place of popular resort.

The numerical increase of the State Library up to the year 1843, when Governor Roman's second term of office expired, had been gradual; but under the judicious management of his two able Secretaries of State, Messrs. Eustis and Levi Pierce, the selections were of a solid, rare and valuable character. In 1843 the office of State Librarian was abolished and the library placed in charge of the Secretary of State, "without additional expense to the State."

At the subsequent session of the Legislature in 1844, the act of 1838, to establish a State Library, was revived, and a competent person was to be appointed annually by the Secretary of State, at a salary of six hundred dollars per annum, under whose charge and responsibility were placed "all books, statutes, manuscripts, plans, maps, papers and documents of every description, belonging to the State." By the same act provision was made "to exchange any books of the State not needed for the use of the public offices for such works as may be useful to the State library." This was an important proviso, but was not carried out to any great extent until after the removal of the State House to Baton Rouge, where, at the outbreak of the war in 1861, might be seen a library of which any State in the Union would be proud; consisting in works of every description, and numbering not less than one hundred thousand volumes. During the war two-thirds of the books were either destroyed by fire, or promiscuously appropriated. By order of General Butler, in August, 1862, some twenty-five thousand volumes were removed from Baton Rouge to the City Hall, in this city, where they remained in heaps, without any especial care or attention until 1864, when they were rearranged in as tolerable order as the cramped space allotted to the Librarian would admit. In April, 1866, an order was given for their removal to the Mechanics' Institute, where they were placed in the third story, and subsequently were removed to the most remote corner of that building in the fourth story, as if to screen them from the eyes and knowledge of the public, for whose use and benefit they were always intended and by whose money they were purchased. The present condition and location of the State Library is a matter of necessity, over which none but the Legislature could have control. The Librarian, Mr. Bovee, father of the Secretary of State, can only act under the direction of his son. His salary is but twelve hundred dollars per annum. Now, as we understand there is soon to be another removal, would it not be well, and most desirable, that the Library should be placed in some locality easy of access, where the lawyer could consult the acts of Congress and of the different States, the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, and of the various State courts, and where the merchant and student could peruse and consult the valuable works yet remaining of that once magnificent collection?

THE GOVERNMENT AND CONSTITUTION.

No political spectacle was ever more grand than that of the American Government defending its life against the gigantic efforts of the late rebellion to destroy it. It has ever been proclaimed by its enemies that its acts were unconstitutional, and having to their own satisfaction proved them to be so, they await the return tide of popular condemnation with commendable patience and ever-reviving hopes, which, as we think, they will continue to do for a long time. It is the peculiar triumph of the Government that it possessed a vitality it did not derive only from the Constitution. The Government and Constitution are in no sense identical. The latter was framed for the Government to rest on, its foundation principles being adapted, as was thought, to every need that could arise in the course of human events. With objects so sublime, a care so beneficent and a wisdom so exalted, as characterize that great instrument, it was not dreamed that any emergency could arise involving the nation's life at the hands of its own people. When that event came and the Constitution seemed and was declared inadequate to the work of preservation, what was to be done? Was the Government to perish supinely without a struggle, or should it invoke the power which made the Constitution, in a glorious effort for preservation? The sovereignty had never been merged in the Constitution, but remained in the people. The vitality which constituted the government was there. Should it not then exert its prerogative, and, putting aside the constitution if necessary, rely upon its might, and in a struggle of life and death, vindicate its authority and redeem its power? This is precisely what necessity imposed and what was done. In the stupendous emergency, it probably rose over the constitution, and in place of that charter proclaimed and enforced the will of the people—the source of constitutions and the sole repository power. They who hold the Constitution to be more sacred than the justice it enshrined or the glorious ends it was intended to achieve, will cling fast to their idolatry and put away the true sovereign. But the vitality which infused itself in the Government was a living principle, and it remains to vitalize the future as it has the past, and to lift above all cavil its inexorable justice, indomitable majesty, and its glorious destiny in the coming time.

THE JUSTICE'S COURTS.

Among the thousand and one suggestions made by members of the Property Holders' Association and the citizens for other relief of the treasury of the State, we have heard it mooted that the laws concerning Justices' Courts may be revevified and reenforced. The law says that Justices of the Peace may receive fees to the extent of three thousand dollars per annum and no more, for their account. All received above that sum belong to the State, and if retained constitute the offenses of embezzlement, breach of trust, misdemeanor in office, malfeasance, etc., etc. Justices are required to make a just and true return, we believe under oath. It is said that George Y. Bright and D. F. Mitchell have been the only Justices for some twenty years past who have the reputation of having complied with the law on this subject, although there may be some uncertainty in such a negative statement. This remark, if correct, can not apply to the present Justices of the Peace unless they have been re-elected, for their first time, for making returns will not come until January first.

It is the interest of every taxpayer to see that all funds belonging to the State should reach the treasury. If these sums are in the hands of Justices of the Peace, past or present, they will add so much to the public coffers, and diminish to that extent the burdens of the taxpayers. It would seem the duty of the State Auditor to attend to this matter, and demand payment of funds and sworn returns; or, if not forthcoming, take a mandamus. If we are mistaken in this particular, then this remedy could be taken by any citizen, and would be eminently within the province of the Property Holders' Association, representing so numerous a body of taxpayers.

POLITICAL DISABILITIES.

Senator Kellogg has introduced a bill providing "that all legal and political disabilities imposed by the United States, and resting upon the following-named citizens of Louisiana, under the provisions of the proposed (!) amendment to the constitution known as article fourteen, and the act entitled "an act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States,' passed March two, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, and the acts supplemental thereto, be, and the same are hereby, removed, to wit: John L. Lewis, Robert J. Caldwell, George W. Mader, Ethan Allen, Thomas G. Wilson, W. H. Haskell, John E. King, J. R. Head, J. J. Stringer, Anthony W. Faulkner, Field F. Montgomery, John W. Fairfax, James H. Wingfield, George W. Dirmeyer, Emile La Sere, William B. Meredith, Josiah F. Ellis, Frank W. Delesdernier, Joseph P. Horner, Philip H. Winfree, St. Clair Johns, John W. Blanks, Emmett D. Craig, John J. Meredith, Robert D. Bridger, J. C. Bridger, senior, Jacob Humble, Thomas J. Hough, P. R. Smith, S. W. Wood, a citizen of Mississippi, and William H. Wills, a citizen of Arkansas."

We hope the Judiciary Committee, to whom this bill was referred, will be in no haste to pass it, as we think the past course and present status of some of the persons named will justify some examination.

THE COURT OF CLAIMS.

The joint resolution recently introduced in the United States Senate by Mr. Kellogg, and which, after two readings, was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, provides:

That the provisions of the act of the fourth of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-four, entitled "An act to restrict the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims," is hereby extended to the loyal citizens of the State of Louisiana, anything in the act to declare the sense of an act entitled "An act to restrict the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims, and to provide for the payment of certain demands for quartermasters's stores and subsistence supplies furnished to the army of the United States," passed February nineteenth, eighteen hundred and sixty-seven, to the contrary notwithstanding.

Sambola vs Campbell.

The case of Sambola, contestant, vs. Campbell for a seat in the Senate of the State is draging its slow length along before the Committee on Contested Elections. Mr. Campbell was the candidate first returned by the Board of Registry to the military authorities as having a majority. He was also returned as elected by the Board of Registration of the State appointed by the Constitutional Convention. With these advantages the Legislature gave him the prima facie seat. On the other hand it was contended that errors were subsequently pointed out by Mr. Sambola to the military, who sent the returns back to be corrected in his favor. Mr. Sambola was ruled out as sitting member on the ground that the military should have restricted themselves to reporting the returns as officially made to them, without subsequent alteration; and this seems to have been the rule observed by the military in all other cases, leaving similar frauds and mistakes, if any, to be investigated by the Legislature. To offset the mistake alleged to be discovered by Mr. Sambola, the frauds committed by the Democratic party and their Commissioners will be allowed, as they were in favor of Messrs. Pinchback, Hall and Heidenhain as against Messrs. Jewell, Stringer and Zacharie. Mr. Sambola will be likely to obtain his seat about the year 1901. He is personally a very estimable gentleman, barring his extreme Democracy, which leads him into vain contests such as this, likely to result as did the famous tilt of Don Quixote against the windmill.

Board adjourned till seven o'clock this evening, when bids for Morancy Levee will be opened.

The banking capital of Boston amounts to more than the total sum in the four States of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island.

Boston is to have a [illegible] 250 by 110 feet. The building is [illegible] be one of great beauty.

During the past week or two many families have passed through Natchitoches in wagons, bound for Texas. In many instances they were accompanied by a number of freedmen.

The weather last night was the coldest of the season. Ice formed to the thickness of a quarter of an inch. A cold, piercing, disagreeable wind to-day renders it uncomfortable anywhere except by a good fire.

The Alton Telegraph having mentioned a father and his six sons all voting for Grant, the Quincy Whig says that one of its subscribers writes that himself, seven sons, two sons-in-law and two grandsons—twelve in all—voted for Grant—and not a single vote for Seymour.

Wendell Phillips says: "The South creates an ideal Yankee; he does not exist; he never did exist. The North creates an ideal Southerner; he never existed. The United States lavishes thousands of millions of dollars in an endeavor to deal with an ideal Indian; he never existed."

No credentials have yet been forwarded to Mr. Menard, declared elected for the unexpired term to represent Louisiana in the Second Congressional District. Nor have credentials been furnished for the full term to any member elect except Hon. Michael Ryan.

Governor Warmoth has appointed Charles Poydras Supervisor of Registration for Pointe Coupee parish, and ordered an election to fill the vacancy created by the death of Hon. William Smith, late one of the Representatives from that parish, the time to be designated by the Supervisor.

Captain Goodspeed, of the schooner Etna, from Ruatan Island November 28, which arrived yesterday, reports the British bark William Edwards, of Liverpool, from Omoa for Liverpool, with a cargo of fustic, stranded on the south side of Ruatan Island on the twenty-first November and a total loss. All hands and a portion of her cargo saved.

CHARITY HOSPITAL.—Our reporter learns from Mr. P. M. Tourne, clerk, that Daniel Phillips was brought to the hospital yesterday afternoon, by Officer John Purdon, with one of his legs badly crushed and broken by being run over by a float laden with ten bales cotton. The accident happened on Liberty street, near Lafayette, at half-past four o'clock, the wounded man having fallen from his seat whilst intoxicated.

The following is the list of persons who have filed petitions in bankruptcy since December 1: James J. Teavy, Lemuel A. Rawls, Allen J. Poole, Rufus C. Holt, Lewis J. Phillips, Ford Hines, James H. Burt, Joseph H. Erwin, P. Gallaher, W. C. Cutler, Francis J. Sapineau, Sigismund S. Bamberger, Thomas Donnelly, Charles Smith, Joseph Israel, Henry Polkinghorne, Jr., George P. Murchison.

The desks, carpets and other furniture of the State of Louisiana, used for the Senate and House of Representatives, are being removed to-day to the bank building, corner of Royal and Conti streets. The offices of the Governor and Secretary of State will probably be removed Monday or Tuesday to the building on Conti street, next to the bank building, which is a part of the bank property, and which was formerly occupied by its officers.

A suit was instituted a few months ago in the Fourth District Court by Miguel Gennaro de Lizerdi, a citizen of Mexico, against the Canal Bank of New Orleans, for the possession of a very large and valuable plantation, below the city, in St. Bernard, with heavy damages and the recovery of the revenues since 1861 or '62. The answer filed by the bank, a day or two ago, pleads a general denial and occupies only two or three lines.

The citizens of Fredericksburg, Virginia, have held a meeting to encourage immigration to Virginia. Several speakers addressed the meeting, all of whom insisted that it was folly for the people of that section to delay effort to secure a portion of the tide of immigration now sweeping by, and also to secure a suitable agent or agents to go to Germany and induce immigrants to come directly to Fredericksburg.

Among the passengers lost on the steamer United States, which came into collision with the America on the Ohio river, we find the names of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hutchins, of Concord, New Hampshire. They were the parents of Major Hutchins, of the Sixth United States cavalry, who has been on duty for some time past as an officer of the Freedmen's Bureau in this city. The warmest sympathies of his friends are extended to Major Hutchins in this terrible bereavement.

THE LAST MASSACHUSETTS MURDER.—Boston, December 4.—Denis Reeme (not Keene) is suspected of the murder of Gronau, but denies it. The murder took place in Furbisher's sausage and lard factory, and the position of Gronau's body indicated that he was stooping over the chopping-block at work, when a blow was given from behind, severing his head from his body.

[And this in Massachusetts.]

We copy the above from the Bee of this morning. [And both of these men were Democrats, the murderer and the murdered.]

New Orleans, like other great cities, has been frequently the scene of disorders and violations of law, but we doubt if it ever witnessed a spectacle so defiant of statutory provisions, and so insulting to morality and good taste as that exhibited in New York at the funeral of Felix Larkin, a low, brutal prize fighter and notorious law breaker, recently killed in a low pot-house row. The procession marched through the principal streets of New York, attended, besides the prize ring delegation, by a State Senator, a member of the Assembly, an Alderman, and five hundred members of the New York Volunteer Regiment, while eight prominent citizens bore the pall.

If this be a specimen of the higher civilization the Radicals wish to introduce, we'll none of it.—Times.

As New York is a good Democratic city, with four or five Democrats to one Republican, and a Democratic majority of fifty to seventy thousand, the above seems to be a severe left-handed fling at the Democratic party. The introduction of the word "Radicals" is merely, as Artemus Ward would say, "for sarkazzum."

COMMODORE MEADE IN AN [illegible]

CONSPIRACY TO MARRY HIS DAUGHTER.

Success of the Conspiracy.

RELEASE OF THE COMMODORE.

The New York Tribune of a late date says:

Commodore Richard W. Meade, brother of Major General George G. Meade, is in the Bloomingdale Asylum for the Insane, and in connection with his imprisonment the following story is told:

A gentleman residing in New Jersey had been paying his addresses to the daughter of the Commodore, but the Commodore had strongly and repeatedly objected to his attentions—first, because the girl was too young to think of marrying, and secondly, because even if she were of age this person could never be considered as a proper suitor for her hand. The young man, however, finding certain of the daughter's relatives to back him, persisted in his attentions. Commodore Meade thereupon threatened to take such action as would preclude the possibility of this individual paying further attentions to Miss Meade, or to anybody else, and thereupon certain nearly interested persons, together with others whose names will all appear at the habeas corpus trial, so the story runs, sought to obtain a certificate of Commodore Meade's insanity, to the end that he might be incarcerated in a lunatic asylum until after his daughter should be married. To obtain this certificate they employed two United States naval surgeons, with both of whom the Commodore was on unfriendly terms, neither of whom had seen him for some years. They made no examination of his mental state, but simply signed a certificate of his insanity. Armed with this document, the persons aforesaid, with detective officers, lay in wait for a favorable opportunity to abduct Commodore Meade. On the thirteenth ultimo, while writing letters in the private office of Messrs. Smallwood, Hodgkiss & Co., at No. 10 Beaver street, New York, Commodore Meade was suddenly seized and forcibly abducted by these detective officers, and placed in the Bloomingdale Lunatic Asylum. Information of this fact was at once telegraphed to the would-be husband, and that person hastened to Staten Island, where, next day, his marriage with Commodore Meade's daughter was consummated. The Commodore, in a letter from the Asylum, remarks that "God Almighty has sustained him so far through the severest trial of his life, and he believes He will not 'go back' on him now." He is still a close prisoner at Bloomingdale. Until within a few days it was hoped by the Commodore's friends that settlement could be effected without publicity. Commodore Meade has had for many years a claim against the United States government growing out of his father's ownership of large tracts of land in Florida at the date of the cession of that State by Spain. This claim the government has been for many years ready to settle by compromise with Commodore Meade; but he has always insisted upon "the whole or none," against the wishes of all of his family, who desired the compromise. A suit is before the United States Court of Claims, and as the Commodore says, interested persons are determined to keep him indefinitely immured, to the end that they may control and enjoy the vast sum of money which the Government is expected to pay during the ensuing winter. The Commodore declares that their intention is to have him pronounced non compos mentis, so that they may perpetually wield the fortune which his pertinacity will have secured within a few months. Several friends of the Commodore and one prominent physician, says the Evening Post, have visited him at the Asylum, and the testimony of all is that he is in no sense insane. Of course the mode of relief is by a writ of habeas corpus. This has been attempted, but in the crowded state of the New York courts it is difficult to get a hearing. The court was compelled to send the case to a referee. To avoid the effect of this procedure, an attempt was made to have the matter heard by a Judge in Brooklyn, but the Brooklyn Judge declines to hear it, as the New York Judge has prior jurisdiction. The case therefore comes back to Judge Sutherland.

Two or three days since the telegraph stated that Commodore Meade had been released from the Bloomingdale Asylum, after a close examination by competent and skillful physicians, who pronounced him perfectly sane. But in the meantime his daughter had married against his wishes.

The Levee Bids.

We published Saturday the proposals for building levees, that were opened that day by the Board of Public Works. The following bids were accepted and the contracts will be signed as soon as the funds in possession of the Board will warrant it:

L. H. Theakston, Bass Levee, 31½c; P. J. Kennedy, Savage Levee, 27¾c, and Duckport, 28¾c; Vernon & Reid, Delta, 31c; C. Boyle, Gillespie, 31c, St. Joseph, 31c, and Grand Island, 30c; H. C. Doherty, Marengo, 33c.

Bass levee, in Carroll parish, contains 150,000 cubic yards, being 3700 feet long and of a probable average of fifteen feet embankment. Savage levee, in Carroll parish, contains 100,000 cubic yards, being 7200 feet long. Duckport levee is in the parish of Madison and contains about 16,000 cubic yards, being 1200 feet long. Delta levee, Madison parish, contains about 85,000 cubic yards, being 3500 feet long. Gillespie levee, in Tensas parish, contains about 2700 cubic yards and is some 300 feet long. St. Joseph levee is in Tensas parish, is 400 feet long and contains about 3500 cubic yards. Marengo levee, in Concordia parish, contains 100,000 cubic yards and is 2800 feet long. Glasscock levee, in Concordia parish, is about 3000 feet long and contains 27,000 cubic yards.

The contracts specify that all these levees shall be commenced within twenty days of the signing of the contracts and shall be completed by the first of March, 1869.

The board, previous to the opening of the bids, passed a resolution reserving to itself the right of withdrawing the awarding of any contract for which the funds which they may have on hand will not permit them to pay. It is expected, however, that sufficient funds will be on hand to complete all contracts already advertised.

The building of Morancy levee, in Madison parish, was not awarded, as the planters in the vicinity of the levees were not prepared to make the advancement as formerly proposed, and the board will not have sufficient funds to defray the whole cost of the work. A committee representing the police jury of Madison parish was present, but could not offer any substantial inducement to warrant the Board in undertaking the work.

Messrs. Flood, Sawyer and Van Winkle were appointed a special committee to examine into the solvency of the sureties of the parties to whom contracts were to-day awarded. Also for the examination of the Red River improvements authorized by act of the last Legislature.

After deciding to remove their present location, the Board adjourned subject to the call of the President.

This is from the Chicago Post of Monday:

The first colored gentleman that ever desecrated the floor of the American Congress, sat upon a sofa of the House yesterday, waiting for its action upon his credentials as one of the members elect from the State of Louisiana. As the admission of Mr. Menard would involve the recognition by Congress of the farcical election held in Louisiana, it is probable that he will have to be content for a time with the privileges of the floor. In the meantime we suggest to Brooks, of New York, or Ross, of Illinois, that the country would be vastly the gainer if one of them would immediately exchange places with Mr. Menard, who is represented by the correspondents as being a very intelligent and very honest man.

Park Street Congregational Church, in Boston, has a remarkable history. Since its organization nearly sixty years ago, no fewer than twenty thousand have been connected with it, and two hundred who became foreign missionaries, received religious instructions from its pulpit. Among its pastors were the late Drs. Beecher, Dwight, Linsley, and other distinguished names.

SUIT AGAINST THE BOARD OF CONTROL.

RESTORATION OF ORDER IN PENITENTIARY.

The case of Jones et al vs. the Board of Control of the Louisiana Penitentiary was fixed for trial on the ninth instant before Judge Posey, of the Fifth Judicial District, at Baton Rouge. Plaintiffs, the lessees of the institution, obtained a writ of injunction against defendants to restrain them from the appointment of the employes of the Penitentiary under the act of 1865, extra session. Plaintiffs claim the right of appointing such employes by virtue of the provisions of a lease made to them by Governor Joshua Baker and General Hancock. The attorneys for the Board of Control, Messrs. Belden, Field and Chaney, filed a peremptory exception denying the right of plaintiffs to sue or stand in judgment for the reason that neither Governor Baker nor General Hancock had any right either under the State laws or reconstruction acts to make the lease and thereby override the laws of the State.

This exception was argued on the eleventh, and submitted to the Court. The grounds of the exception are so plain that there can be no doubt but that it will be sustained. It is high time something should be done to restore some sort of order in the Penitentiary. We understand that the convicts, instead of being put to proper, healthy and legitimate labor, are dragged all over the neighborhood, and made to work on plantations and coal boats. One of the first duties to be performed by the Legislature next month will be to investigate the manner in which the convicts sentenced to the Penitentiary are treated by the lessees, and apply the remedy.

OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

Congress Reconvened—The Turn of Legislation—The Second Congressional District—Jones versus Menard—Disabilities Removed from Louisianians—Longstreet on the Floor of the Senate—Steedman's Resignation, Etc.

WASHINGTON, December 8, 1868.

The fever is on. Congress is again in session, and the streets and hotels, for a long time nearly deserted, are filled with life. You have ere this discussed the matters introduced on the first day. The question of finances, and the resumption of specie payments will be the leading topic of the present session. The question of a uniform and national system of naturalization, growing out of the gross frauds in the recent elections in the Northern States, was looked toward in bills presented in both houses. The case of Georgia coming up, more "reconstructing" is considered necessary before her Senators can be admitted, and various proposed amendments to the Constitution favoring impartial suffrage in all the States alike, were submitted in both houses.

Looking nearer home and at local interests: Hon. F. W. Kellogg, of Alabama, introduced into the House a bill to provide for the improvement of Mobile harbor.

The question of the contested seat in the Second Congressional District in Louisiana did not come up and, it is understood, will not for some days. Mr. J. Willis Menard is here to claim the seat, but has not yet received his credentials from the Governor. There seems a manifest intention on the part of the House to first try the case of Colonel Jones on its merits; if the seat is then declared to have been legally held by the late Colonel Mann, Menard will have the seat now. Mr. Hunt has not appeared and, it is reported, will not, to contest the claims of Menard. Indications are decidedly in favor of Jones.

Judge Kellogg introduced into the Senate to-day a bill providing for the extension of the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims in Louisiana; also an act to remove from legal and political disabilities some thirty citizens of Louisiana who were engaged in the late rebellion, including among others John L. Lewis, John E. King, James H. Wingfield, George W. Dirmeyer, Emile La Sere, Joseph P. Horner and F. W. Delesdernier.

General Longstreet is in town, stopping at Willards'. He was upon the floor of the Senate yesterday, and was the "observed of all observers." Judge Kellogg presented him to several of the grave and reverend Senators, who, knowing Grant's pronounced partiality for him, and of his heroic course in New Orleans, where his moral heroism outshone the brightest acts of his martial career, greeted him with pride. You may not be surprised to see him in your midst before many days.

President Johnson yesterday received and accepted the resignation of General J. B. Steedman as Collector of Internal Revenue in Louisiana.

Parties here in the interest of the Chattanooga Railroad Company represent the affairs of the concern as in a most favorable condition. Two and a half millions of stock have been already subscribed by leading capitalists in the North, and labor on the road will be commenced on the first of January. Five per cent a month will be paid down to meet expenses, while it is estimated that the travel from New Orleans to Mobile alone will pay all running expenses of the whole road and a handsome dividend besides. The watering places along the route will greatly increase in importance, and will be bought up by Northern men, improved and beautified, and run on principles of Saratogian grandeur. ROB ROY.

BEEF PACKING.—The Shreveport Southwestern says:

That many of our readers may have some view of the utility of beef packing, we will relate a few facts that came under our observation. Some five or six weeks since the steamer Cuba No. 2 was lying at our landing with an overload of cattle. Before leaving the wharf ten of them died and were thrown overboard. The owner, standing on the bank, remarked, "There goes one hundred and seventy dollars." Dr. Stoner, who was standing by, remarked, "No, I reckon not; tow them down to the packery, and I will try them up and give you half the proceeds." No sooner said than done. The hides, hoofs, horns, etc., netted twenty dollars per head—three dollars more than they cost on foot. This, too, without using any of the flesh.

DEATH OF A WHILOM EDITOR.—The Washington Republican says:

Major James M. Macrea departed this life on Wednesday last at his residence on Pennsylvania avenue. His age was sixty-six. He was well known in this city, and has, during his eventful life, made many acquaintances, and we can truthfully say that all persons who knew the Major held him in high esteem. Years ago Mr. Macrea edited a paper in New Orleans, and was also at one time connected editorially with a journal in Mobile. For several years he was the Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune. He held a facile pen, was a ready writer, and as a conversationalist he had but few equals.

A child, speaking of his home to a friend, was asked, "Where is your home?" Looking with loving eyes at his mother he replied, "Where mother is!"

SUIT FOR INTEREST COUPONS.

Original Cost of the Road.

IMMENSE INCREASE OF ITS DEBT

No sooner, says the Crescent, has the great lawsuit of James T. Tucker vs. the Opelousas Railroad Company been argued, than another important case comes before Judge Durell for decision. This time it is, however, the Circuit Court before which the argument is made.

It seems that Mr. D. D. Withers holds some $60,000 of interest coupons of the first mortgage bonds of the Jackson Railroad Company, dating from 1861, up. Lately the road paid some of the coupons of its second mortgage bonds, and has succeeded in compromising a great many of its first mortgage coupons. But Mr. Withers declined compromise, and last spring asked the intervention of the United States Circuit Court. Two masters in chancery, Messrs. Cohen and Weller, were then appointed to investigate the affairs of the road and report them to the court. The report was made; when, basing his claim upon the statements made in that report, Mr. Withers alleges that the affairs of the company are now badly managed; that events may happen which will prevent the payment of his coupons, while the company applies its current revenues to the payment of other claims, over which his has the prior right, and prays that the Court either order that the current revenues of the company shall be returned to the Court to be by it disposed of fairly and equitably or that the Court appoint a receiver, who shall take charge of the real estate and other property of the company which is pledged to the redemption of Mr. Wither's coupons, and hold it until the claim has been satisfied, or until there is a reasonable prospect of its being liquidated. The defense made by the company was that its affairs are such as to warrant the expectation that the coupons will be taken up ere long, and that the action on the part of the court asked for by the plaintiff would be injurious to the company and ultimately injurious to the plaintiff. In the course of the argument the following extracts from the report of the masters in chancery who investigated the affairs of the road were adduced by Judge Bradford, counsel for Mr. Withers, to show that the condition of the company is now such as to demand prompt interference on the part of the court to protect its creditors:

The debt of the road increased from February 28, 1867, to February 29, 1868, $39,492-08. In the latter quarter of that year, viz: from November 30, 1867, to twenty-ninth February, 1868, the debt was increased to the amount of $64,607 75. This was caused by the accumulation of the accounts of the employes of the road, payment of which had been postponed till the close of the year. The cost of the road originally was $4,680,-320. The total debt of the road on twenty-eighth February, 1866, was $3,469,766. It is now $4,702,502, thus showing an increase of the debt of $1,232,736 in two and three-quarter years.

If this case is decided for Mr. Withers it involves the virtual taking of the control of the affairs of the company out of the hands of the present directors. It is a case, the termination of which is full of interest to all the citizens of New Orleans.

ANOTHER GREAT STORM.

Snow in the West—Rain at the East.

ST. LOUIS, December 7.—An Omaha dispatch says the snow storm which has been raging for the past thirty hours is the heaviest ever experienced in Nebraska. In many places there are about eighteen inches of snow now on a level, and the storm still continues. So far trains have managed to move, but it is feared that a slight wind will cause a serious blockade both East and West.

A Helena (Montana) dispatch says that snow to the depth of six inches fell on Friday night. The storm continued all night, and it has not entirely stopped snowing yet.

NEW YORK, December 7.—Heavy easterly rain storm here.

LEXINGTON, December 7.—A snow storm has prevailed here all day. The weather is severe and turning very cold.

CHICAGO, December 7.—It has been snowing moderately all day, but the mildness of the atmosphere has caused it to thaw about as fast as it fell. The streets are in a very disagreeable condition.

ST. LOUIS, December 7.—The weather turned cold this afternoon; the mercury fell to twenty-four degrees. The prospects now are that navigation will be suspended on the upper rivers.

NEW YORK, December 7.—Railroads generally are in good running order, notwithstanding the recent heavy snows, and the mails to-day were all on time.

[Special Dispatch to the Missouri Democrat.]

OMAHA, December 7.—Since early this morning the weather has been clear and cold. Floating ice prevented the ferry-boats running, and the river is not crossable to-day. Trains on the Pacific Railroad are running as far west as Sydney; also between Laramie and Bryan.

[Special Dispatch to the Missouri Democrat.]

ST. JOSEPH, December 7.—A furious snow storm, accompanied by a driving wind, set in Sunday, and continued throughout the night. The snow is badly drifted. The morning train for Quincy was blockaded about twelve miles out. No trains left the city to-night on the Hannible and St. Joseph Railroad. Trains on the Missouri Valley and St. Joseph and Council Bluffs Railroads came through all right, though behind time.

[Special Dispatch to the Missouri Democrat.]

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., December 7.—The snow storm which commenced in this vicinity yesterday afternoon continued with but slight intermission till this afternoon, when the wind changed to the north, and a stiff gale from that quarter is now blowing. The thermometer is down to fifteen degrees above zero and falling, with a clear atmosphere; so that winter weather in earnest may be expected. The snow is about nine inches deep and pretty fair sleighing is anticipated.

The Vicksburg Republican has the following relating to an outrage in Madison parish:

The statement of Mr. William R. Tullidge, of the barbarous outrage perpetrated upon him by armed and masked citizens of Madison parish, Louisiana, is printed over his own signature in to-day's Republican. Mr. T. is well known in this city as a quiet and unobtrusive gentleman, who does not "meddle" in politics. But he is a Northerner by birth, who came South after the war; and this fact, coupled with perhaps a vague suspicion of Radicalism, is enough, it seems, to exclude his free feet from the soil of Louisiana. We doubt not that there are many citizens of that parish who would scorn to participate in these disgraceful proceedings; but, as is the case in many places, in Mississippi and all over the South, there are no citizens who feel sufficient interest in the rights of Northern men, and the public peace and good repute of their neighborhood to take the proper steps for ferreting out and identifying the authors of outrages like this, and having them punished according to the laws. The active villainies of "the few" are connived at by many, tolerated by all, and discountenanced by none.

Our education should be adapted to the full development of both body and mind.

Arrest of the Supposed Murderer.

THE CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

Captain Schoenecker, of the Fifth District Police Precinct, desired this reporter yesterday morning to make no mention then of the arrest of a colored man named Daniel Lewis, suspected of being the murderer of the Barracks street car driver and his son.

The circumstantial evidence against him is strong. His arms were bloody on the night of the murder; his shirt and pants were spotted with blood and he secreted them, but they have since been found. The police authorities are investigating the matter thoroughly and hope to obtain sufficient testimony to convict the murderer. Evidence is accumulating.

SALE OF LEVEE BONDS

DISPATCH FROM THE COMMISSIONERS.

Governor Warmoth received this morning a dispatch from Colonel Lynch and General Lee, commissioners for the sale of levee bonds, communicating the information that the sales already made are sufficient to provide the State with funds to pay for building the levees now under contract. This will advance the value of State warrants and aid in restoring the credit of the State.

CARROLL PARISH LEVEES.

Long and Hard Struggle.

INFLOW OF CAPITAL PREDICTED

The last number of the Elton Eagle, published in Carroll parish by Captain George A. Sheridan, says:

The citizens of our parish have had a long and hard struggle with the river, and the river has been ahead in the fight for the last three or four years. We are of opinion that our time has come at last, and confidently expect to send the river on to the gulf by its proper route, instead of letting it seek new channels through Carroll and adjoining parishes. Judge Benham has done splendidly for Carroll.

The Levee Board had $300,000 to spend for the entire State, of which amount Judge Benham has had appropriated $00,000 for work in Carroll. The contracts for building the "Elton" levees has been awarded to Major Burke of New Orleans, at twenty-nine cents, and the "Arlington" levees to Mr. McGinty, at the same price.

A number of citizens from Carroll bid on the above named levees, but they were all too high.

The "Bass" and "Savage" levees are to be advertised, and will certainly be built this winter. The dangerous places near "Wilton" will probably have temporary run rounds for this year. Next year the big levee at "Ashton" will certainly be constructed.

With the proper kind of levee at Ashton, we think Carroll will be moderately safe. The Arkansas levees will be all up next year, and then we shall be safe beyond a doubt; and the fine plantations that have laid idle for years will grow busy and bring forth as in the old days before the war. Old Carroll is bound to come up again.

The recent election, in passing off as quietly as it did, has had its effect in directing attention to this portion of the State, and we predict a large inflow of capital to our parish the next year. With energy and enterprise, properly directed, we can soon take the first position in our State. Let all strike hands and go in.

GEORGIA AND RECONSTRUCTION.

Governor Bullock's Letter to Congress.

Ineligible Members of Legislature.

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

Having, as Provisional Governor elect, under the Reconstruction acts, been authorized by "An act to admit the States of North Carolina, South Carolina, Louisiana, Georgia, Alabama and Florida to representation in Congress," which act became a law June 25, 1868, to convene the Provisional Legislature of Georgia, and having by proclamation, under date June 25, 1868, acted upon that authority; and having, on the fourth day of July, 1868, been appointed Provisional Governor of Georgia by Major General George G. Meade, commanding the Third Military District, under and by virtue of the power vested in him by the Reconstruction acts, I deem it my official duty to represent to your honorable body that the laws under which the State of Georgia was to have been admitted to representation in Congress have not been fully executed; and to present for your consideration the reasons which lead me to this conclusion.

By section VI of "An act for the more efficient government of the rebel States," among which States is enumerated the State of Georgia, it is provided that "until the people of said rebellious States shall be by law admitted to representation in Congress, any civil government which may exist therein shall be deemed provisional only." The government of the State has, therefore been, and must continue to be, provisional, until the conditions required by the act which became a law June 25, 1868, shall have been complied with by a Legislature organized in accordance with the reconstruction acts previously adopted.

By section IX of the supplementary reconstruction act, passed July 19, 1867, it is required that, "all persons hereafter elected * * to office in said Military Districts * * * shall be required to take and subscribe the oath of office, prescribed by law, for officers of the United States."

The government having been provisional at the time of the assembling of the Legislature referred to, the law, therefore, required that such persons only as were eligible under the reconstruction acts should be permitted to participate in the necessary provisional legislation precedent to recognition as a State. The fact, however, is, that all the candidates for the General Assembly who had received the highest number of votes were, without regard to their eligibility under the law, permitted to take seats in the provisional legislative body, and to participate in the organization and the legislation thereof; having first been simply invited to take an oath prescribed in the new Constitution, which Constitution had not at that time become, and under the law could not then be of force.

The result of this failure to execute the law has been a defeat of the purposes which Congress had in view when passing the acts—these purposes having been the establishment of a loyal and Republican State government, affording adequate protection for life and property, the maintenance of peace and good order, and the free expression of political opinion.

The wise discernment displayed by Congress, in requiring by its legislation that none but those who were loyal should participate in the establishment of a provisional government which was thereafter to be clothed with the rights and immunities of a State in the Union, charged with the care and protection of the lives and property, and the civil and political rights of its citizens, is made the more apparent by the consequences which have ensued from this failure in the enforcement of that legislation.

I would therefore respectfully invite the attention of your honorable body to this subject, and ask that such steps be taken as may to you seem wise and proper for the obtaining of full information in relation thereto; and to the end that loyalty may be protected and promoted by the enforcement of the laws enacted by the representatives of the American people.

RUFUS B. BULLOCK.

EUGENE DAVIS,
Executive Secretary.

The Advocate for 1869.

A new volume of the New Orleans Advocate will commence January 1, 1869. It is our purpose to make it one of the best weekly religious journals in the Southwest. Primarily promoting the interest of the Church, it will still be the defender of liberty, and the educator of the freedmen. Thankful for past patronage from our friends, both in the North and in the South, we earnestly hope they will continue their subscription for another year; and we expect to add many new subscribers to our list.

But that there may be no misunderstanding in the matter, we hereby give notice, that unless otherwise informed, we shall continue to send the paper to all present subscribers, and in due time will send their bills.

It is our intention to publish the Advocate in its present form and size, at three dollars per annum, and furnish such religious, literary and political matter as will best promote the present and future interests of man. Send on your names and your money.

Methodist Book Store.

On the first of January, proximo, we shall open a Methodist book store at No. 203 Camp street, between Julia and St. Joseph. And here also will be the office of the New Orleans Advocate, where subscriptions and advertisements will be received and where single copies of our paper may be had, as early in the week as Friday morning. The store and office will be in charge of Messrs. Spranly & Co.

It has been a part of a programme which we drew up five years ago for the planting and development of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southwest, to have a place in New Orleans, where the literature of our Church could be purchased; but we have not seen our way clear to do so until the present time. It is, therefore, a pleasure to announce to our members and friends, that at the "Methodist Book Store," No. 203 Camp street, they will find an excellent assortment of Bibles, hymn books, books of discipline, church records and class books, marriage certificates and certificates of church membership, Clark's and Benson's Commentaries, Wesley's and Watson's sermons, Steven's Church History, the biographies of eminent saints, and a large amount of rich and valuable miscellaneous works.

There will kept on hand Sunday school books and tune books, containtaining the best selections of the day. Officers and teachers of our Sunday schools will do well to call and purchase supplies for their schools.

A good assortment of stationary will also be kept for sale—such as paper, ink, pens and envelops.

And we also inform our German brethren that a good quantity of church books, in their native language, will also be for sale.

Our presiding elders can send their orders at any time, which will be promptly filled and on reasonable terms. Address Spranly & Co., Methodist Book Store, New Orleans, Louisiana.

Rev. F. Ball, of the West Virginia conference, and pastor of Zane street Methodist Episcopal church, in Wheeling, Virginia, is now spending a little time in the Crescent City. About three months since, through overworking the vocal organs, he lost the power of speaking aloud. He hopes by rest in our mild climate to regain his former power of voice. We are glad to report that he has improved much since his arrival.

Sanctification.

This subject is now being brought more prominently before the Church than it has been for a number of years. Not that it is in any sense a new doctrine, except in so far as the Church having departed from it, may have given it, with some, a phase of novelty.

The two great national camp meetings, held for the promotion of holiness, one at Vineland, New Jersey, in 1867, and the other at Manheim, Pennsylvania, in July last, have been the means, under God, of spreading the leaven through nearly if not quite all the States in the Union. The pentacostal baptisms sent upon the Church as represented at these feasts of Tabernacles can not possibly be appreciated by those who were not present to witness and partictpate in these wonderful visitations of power.

With many it is believed that this is the great subject to which the Church is called upon to address herself, now that our centennial has passed, and God has been pleased to pour such treasures of wealth into her lap, and add such vast numbers to her, and answered her long and importunate prayers in breaking every yoke and letting the oppressed go free. And it does seem that if our million and a quarter of members, with their vast wealth, their general intelligence and the high national position they have attained, should seek and obtain the "gift of power," the world must soon surrender to Christ.

IS THIS A BIBLE DOCTRINE?

"For I am the Lord your God: ye shall therefore sanctify yourselves, and ye shall be holy: for I am holy."

"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in Heaven is perfect." "But as he which has called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; because it is written, be ye holy for I am holy."

We might quote scores of passages of similar import, but as these cover the ground, let them suffice. We have not space to elaborate, but refer the pious reader to the law and the testimony for corresponding Scriptures.

IS IT DISTINCT FROM JUSTIFATION?

To the Christians in Rome, Paul writes—"I beseech you, therefore, brethren, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, which is your reasonable service, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God."

To the Hebrews he writes—"Therefore, leaving the principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us go on to perfection."

John writes to Christians at large—"If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness."

In each of these passages a separate, a distinct work is clearly taught.

IN WHAT SENSE IS IT A DISTINCT WORK?

It is the same in nature and only differs in extent. Doubtless it might be experienced at the same time the individual is converted, by a mighty act of faith, but the prayer of the penitent sinner does not reach so far as this. His faith does not comprehend so much. The burden of his prayer is, "God be merciful to me a sinner." His faith reaches no farther than the work of pardon, hence the extent of his faith is the extent and the limit of the blessing he receives, and God gives just what the penitent seeks, and what his faith comprehends, and according to his faith it is done unto him, when Jesus says—"Thy sins be forgiven thee."

We offer definite prayers and receive corresponding blessings and answers upon the same principle, "What man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent?" In this work of justification the man of sin is placed in fetters, but not slain. Sin is subdued, but not destroyed And it is not long before the converted man feels the strugglings of the enemy within and the risings and movings of inbred sin. Then with his new and increased light, seeing that a more thorough work is needed, he comprehends a complete and full salvation as his privilege, and cries out in Charles Wesley's language:

"Break off the yoke of inbred sin,
And fully set my spirit free;
I can not rest till pure within,
Till I am wholly lost in thee.

I would, but thou must give the power;
My heart from every sin release;
Bring near, bring near the joyful hour,
And fill me with thy perfect peace."

Of the converted man, Bishop Janes says: "Oh how changed now your thoughts, feelings and the condition of your heart! The things you before hated you love. Prayer, the Bible, good people, and God, and Heaven! How you hate sin, abhor it! How unclean it is in your sight! What a change of character! And now, with your heart so changed, you love Jesus and God, and hate sin and every evil way. Oh how it troubles you that you find in yourself yet thoughts and feelings, and motives, and suggestions that are unholy; that God can not approbate; that you do not approbate, but hate. And now there remains that further work to be done, stated in the text—If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.

• • • And what we have to do now, in order to realize this full salvation, is to confess to God our sinfulness—what remains of sin within us—what we still find of evil in our hearts, to do it with penitence, with godly sorrow, acknowledging how helpless we are, and that nothing but the blood of Christ can cleanse from all sin; and at the same time that we do this send up our struggling desires to God for the sanctifying influence of the Holy Spirit. When we thus confess, God sends down his spirit to effect this work in our hearts. He is faithful and just to cleanse us from all our righteousness."

IS THIS WORK GRADUAL OR INSTANTANEOUS?

It may be both gradual and instantaneous in a certain sense, both in justification and in sanctification. A man may be seeking religion for years, and growing better and reforming all the time; yet he reaches a point when and where he must cast his helpless soul on Christ and by faith receive pardon, regeneration, adoption. But would it not have been better for that man, and more honoring to God if he had done this at first, and been through all these years of personal and painful effort, a happy child of God? Thus it may be after conversion in seeking sanctification. "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ, his son, cleanses us from all sin." This walking with God, reading his word, observing the sacraments and ordinances of God, all tend to sanctify and make men better. And if the converted man continues thus to "walk in the light," there will come in his experience a time when he will rejoice in being cleansed from all unrighteousness. But the question is: may we receive this sanctifying power sooner? "If," says the author above quoted, "you or I had to do it, it would be a very progressive work, but as God does it, he can do it as quickly as he created the world. He who 'spake and it was done,' can speak to thy soul, and life, and love, and power shall flow through every part of thy redeemed nature. Expect it now. Now is the accepted time, and now is the day of salvation! Let this be the hour when the tidings shall go to heaven that you have fallen into the fountain opened for sin and uncleanness. Let God, for Christ's sake, sanctify you wholly, and then look to him, and continue to look to him that you may be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Oh, be not satisfied, but continue seeking until you find cleansing from all unrighteousness, until there is no guilty stain, no unholy affection, no sinful desire, no wrong motive lurking within your spirit, but all be cleansed away by the power of the Holy Ghost."

Much might be quoted from Wesley and the fathers, as well as from others who have received "an inheritance among the saints in light," and scores of living witnesses, corroborative of these views if our limits would allow.

Let as give this subject that prayerful consideration to which its great importance entitles it, and not live satisfied while so far beneath our high privileges. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." "Hitherto ye have asked nothing in my name; ask and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full." How abundant are the provisions of the gospel! And if we will but turn the key of faith these treasures will be poured into our hearts. "Lord, increase our faith."

Church Extension.

Naturally and logically, our Church Extension Society follows our Missionary Society in immediate succession. The missionary should go first and the church-builder should follow. The former is the John the Baptist of the latter; the harbinger of him who shall erect a house in which the Lord shall dwell and the place where His people shall worship at his footstool. With or without a church, the Gospel should be preached to the people. The Master confined himself not to the temple at Jerusalem, nor to the synagogues of imperial cities, but He sought the multitude and preached to them along the way-side or the sea-shore, from the deck of a fish boat, from the mountain's summit, in private dwellings and in temples made with hands. Compelled by a like necessity, His apostles did likewise; but in process of time, and to give permanence to their work, stability to their organization and afford facilities to the administration of the ordinances of religion, the apostles secured permanent places for Divine worship, and the history of the Christian Church, and especially our branch thereof, is but the repetition of apostolic history. The cause of missions has the prior claim upon our affections and liberality, and will to the end of the world; yet there comes a time when the missionary can advance no further, and is compelled to fall back and invite the aid of the church-builder. It were better that the two go hand in hand, and such has been the practical goings forth of our noble Missionary Society. But the work is too vast, and the demand too great for any one organization to perform. It seems to be a law of our being, especially of our giving to charitable purposes, to double our donations for the same object, when presented to our claims under different names and by different organizations. Were it possible, it were wise and better, that the erection of churches and the sending forth of the herald of the cross, should be confided to our Missionary Board; but human nature is such that a man would give a dollar to each of two charitable objects, who would not give two dollars to either of them separately. Man loves multiplicity. And it is equally a law governing the same class of our faculties, that we give about so much to the same object year after year, and that our donations quadrate with the unfoldings of an "old charity" under new names.

But there comes a time when the erection of churches is a positive necessity; as when the Gospel has been preached throughout the land, and the people have heard its glad tidings. The fruits of that preaching must then be garnered up—and the Church is the garner. There are vast sections of our own country, where the great need is churches and not preachers; that is, the preacher has done what he could, and has reached the limit of his power and the boundary of his mission for lack of a place consecrated to the rites and offices of our holy religion. Until then all that he has done is as naught; the ripened grain which he has cut down lies in the open field, to be scorched by the sun and to rot in the storm. Until then, he is a shepherd with a flock but without a sheep-cote, and is unequal to defend his lambs from thieves and beasts of prey. In the newer portions of our land, the people clamor for churches rather than for preachers, and the voice of God is to the Church Extension Society, "Build me an house where the people may worship Me." In the Acts it is stated that Paul said unto Barnabas, "Let us go again and visit our brethren in every city, where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do; and he went through Syria and Cilicia confirming the churches." And during this second visit he gathered the faithful into stated places of religious worship.

This is the simple and beautiful object of the Church Extension Society. And we deem ourselves happy as a denomination, that the management of this great interest has fallen into the hands of wise and godly ministers and laymen, who seeketh not their own but the good of those ready to perish; and especially is it a matter of praise that Dr. Kynett is the chief executive officer of the Society. Upon him has fallen the mantle of Monroe. Profoundly penetrated with the importance of his work, conscious of the abundant capacity of our Church to respond to his calls, a clear-headed, large-hearted man, a powerful speaker and a person of unwearied energies and far-seeing faith, he should make his society an unparalleled success, and the whole church should rally at his call. Associated with him is one whose spirit is gentler, but whose soul to charm is greater; whose musical voice is like the falling of rain-drops on plates of silver, or the lyre of Æolus, touched softly by the fingers of Zephyrus, whose persuasive eloquence is only excelled by a power to endure and a will to act, which insures success. How can the good cause fail with Kynett to plead and McCabe to sing?

One hundred and sixty thousand dollars is all that is asked for 1869. We can give the sum and we should, Nor should we neglect the loan fund to which we can now only refer. One thousand dollars given to this fund, may in every two years aid as many churches as there shall be years divided by two, until the end of the world. Have you thought of this sowing and reaping plan of giving. It is the grandest elemosonary conception of this or of any other age. It is like Joshua and Caleb going forth empty and returning ladened with the fruits of the goodly land of promise. But on this, more anon.

C. C. North, Esq., one of our most prominent and active laymen of New York, arrived in this city last Saturday and left on Tuesday. Sabbath morning he worshiped at Ames Church. He addressed both the morning and afternoon Sunday schools of this church. From the afternoon school he proceeded through a hard rain to the Boys' House of Refuge, in answer to a pressing invitation, to address the Sunday school there in session. At six o'clock he had still another appointment to be present at a Sabbath school concert and address the school. The people here have learned that Brother North is both able and willing to make himself useful, and the consequence is that as soon as his arrival is known he is besieged with as many invitations to speak as he can well meet. We bid him God speed in his many efforts to do good.

Our Book Agents and Our Southern Advocates.

We are in receipt of a "Circular," issued jointly by Messrs. Carlton & Lanahan, of New York, and Messrs. Hitchcock & Walden, of Cincinnati, the general Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, giving us notice that in January, proximo, they will commence the publication of a church paper at Atlanta, Georgia, to be called the Methodist Advocate. The first two paragraphs of their circular are as follows:

As you are aware, the General Conference authorized the book agents to publish three papers in the South—one at Charleston, one at New Orleans and another either at Nashville, Knoxville or Atlanta. After consulting, as far as practicable, with those best acquainted with our work in the Southern States, and keeping in view the limit of expenditure expressly indicated by the General Couference, it is thought advisable to unite in the publication of one paper, and concentrate all our interests upon it for the present.

After a careful examination of the different cities mentioned by the General Conference for the location of a paper, Atlanta, Georgia, has been fixed upon as the place of its publication. It will be published jointly by the agents at New York and Cincinnati, and be called the Methodist Advocate.

In another part of this week's issue will be found a lengthy and vigorous protest against a part of the above action, copied from the Charleston Advocate, of December 5. In this article there is a manly courage which we greatly admire, but while we do not approve of the all tart sayings therein, we consider our Charleston brethren right in the main. And we now take up the subject, not so much to defend the Charleston Advocate or the New Orleans Advocate, as to vindicate a great church interest, which we consider has been imperiled by the action of our Book Agents. Holding these gentlemen in the highest personal esteem, and happy in numbering some of them among our personal friends, yet when great religious interests are at stake, we "know no man after the flesh," and must, therefore, deal with this subject with that plainness which responsibility demands. To come to a perfectly clear understanding of the whole question, it will be well to recur to the history of the subject under consideration.

During the session of the late General Conference, Dr. Pearne, T. W. Lewis and the editor of this journal, appeared before the committee on the Book Concern and urged the importance of our Church having an official organ in New Orleans, in Charleston and one, either at Nashville, Knoxville or Atlanta, and a like application was made to the Committee on the State of the Church. On May 20, Dr. Barrows, Chairman of the Committee on the State of the Church, presented report No. 1 in which were these resolutions:

Resolved, 1. That there shall be established and published, by the Book Agents at New York, on or before the first day of January, A. D. 1869, a weekly religious journal, at Knoxville, Atlanta or Nashville—the place to be determined by the amount of local advertising and subscription patronage which either of these places shall offer beyond the others.

Resolved, 2. That in the judgment of this committee, the New Orleans Advocate and the Charleston Advocate, at Charleston, South Carolina, ought to be published as official journals. (See Daily Christian Advocate for May 21).

These resolutions did not meet the approval of Dr. Hitchcock, our senior book agent at Cincinnati, and in consultation with the above named brethren, it was agreed that a substitute should be reported to the Conference. The question again came before the Committee on the Book Concern, and on May 28, Dr. Wiley offered the following three resolutions as a substitute for the above two:

Resolved, 1. That the Book Agents at Cincinnati are hereby authorized to publish the New Orleans Advocate, the editor to be appointed by the Bishops, with the concurrence of the Book Agents aforesaid; but the agents are at liberty to discontinue the said paper in the event that its continued publication shall involve a greater loss to the Concern than two thousand dollars per annum.

Resolved, 2. That the Book Agents at Cincinnati be authorized to establish and publish, on or before the first day of January, 1869, a weekly religious journal at Knoxville, Atlanta or Nashville, where in their judgment, may be deemed most advisable. the editor to be appointed by the Bishops, with the concurrence of the Book Agents aforesaid; but the agents are at liberty to discontinue said paper in the event that its continued publication shall involve a greater loss to the Concern than two thousand dollars per annum.

Resolved, 3. That the Book Agents at New York are hereby authorized to publish a paper at Charleston, South Carolina, the editor to be appointed by the Bishops, with the concurrence of the Book Agents aforesaid; but the agents are at liberty to discontinue said paper in the event that its continued publication shall involve a greater loss to the Concern than two thousand dollars per annum. (See Journal of General Conference, pages 267 and 268).

These resolutions were adopted by the General Conference as part of the report of the Committee on the State of the Church. (See same journal, pages 563 and 564).

From these recited facts is is clear: That it was the intention of Messrs. Pearne, Lewis and Newman to have church papers published respectively at New Orleans, Charleston, and at one of the three following places, to wit: Knoxville, Atlanta or Nashville; and in their simplicity they thought they had carried their desirable point. Secondly, That the Committee on the Book Concern and the Committee on the State of the Church, and the Book Agents did recommend the publication of said papers. Thirdly, That the General Conference did intend to have the above three papers published in the South, and so voted. (See Journal of General Conference, pages 267 and 268).

But what is the nature of these resolutions? Are they permissive or mandatory! We think mandatory. There is but one contingency, namely: "They are at liberty to discontinue said papers in the event that their publication shall involve a greater loss to the Concern than two thousand dollars per annum." But the contingency presupposes a trial, and could not be ascertained without said trial. They must publish said papers for at least one full calendar year, and then having ascertained by actual trial that more than two thousand dollars would be required; then, and not till then, had they the right to disobey the expressed will of the General Conference. But they have not made that trial, indeed, they state in their printed circular that they do not intend to do so; that they think it "advisable to unite in the publication of one paper." In so doing they have reversed the action of the General Conference, and assumed to do what they were not authorized to do. It becomes us as representatives of the Church to inquire whether our Book Agents have acted within the law or contrary to the law, for all must see that it is a dangerous precedent to establish, that four men shall act contrary to the expressed will of the General Conference. The language of the resolutions adopted is simple and not ambiguous: "That the Book Agents are hereby authorized to publish a paper at Charleston." They are "authorized," that is, "empowered," "commissioned," "instructed." When this word is not absolute it is qualified by some limitatation. Here there is but limitation, one that they shall not expend more than two thousand dollars per annum on any one of the three above named papers. Evidently the agents consider the authorization discretionary, permissive, contingent, without trial. We do not, or we should not have failed to have pushed our efforts to the last day of the session for a sufficient number of religious papers in the South and we trust that the preachers whom we had the honor to represent will so consider our opinion in the case.

There is no authority given to merge three papers into one. Three journals were authorized. Yet our agents give us notice that they believe in unity and not in triunity. We are trinitarians. As the agents were not authorized to expend more than two thousand dollars per annum on any one paper, so they can not lawfully combine the six thousand dollars authorized for three and expend it on one. They are limited to two thousand dollars on their Atlanta paper. New Orleans and Charleston each claim their two thousand dollars a year, and the claim is inviolate. To combine the six thousand dollars on one is to concede the correctness of our interpretation of the law. The old logicians used to say that a "dilemma has two horns." Choose ye. Nor can any one practically acquainted with the religious wants of the South suppose that one weekly journal is equal to those wants. There should be one within the bounds of each annual conference, that is, in each State, and the action of our agents may lead to this result. Like Wesley and the fathers, our preachers in the South much use the pen, and little help from the agents would produce mighty results. There has been more accomplished by the Charleston and New Orleans Advocates for the Church in the South than by any other agency. They have gone where it was not safe for the living preacher to go, and have preached the word to those who otherwise would have remained in darkness. We know poor colored people who have denied themselves of life's physical comforts to have the Advocate come to their homes and be read by their children, and its weekly coming has been like the visit of an angel. To these papers thousands look for instruction in religion, business and political duties, and a stranger they will not have. We therefore trust that our agents will reconsider their action and multiply church papers in the South.

(As we go to press, letters from our preachers come to hand on this subject. We shall give them next week.)

General Longstreet.

It was to be expected that some of the Southern people would manfully and practically accept the situation, and would cordially join the friends of the Government in the good work of reconstructing the States of the South. Chief among this noble class is General Longstreet, who, with a military record as proud as that of any other Confederate general, has now also the sympathies and affections of the great mass of the American people. In doing so he has been subjected to no humiliating confession and no conditions of which any true man need blush for shame. The general Government was bound to protect itself by such measures as were wise and salutary, and in true sympathy with this sentiment the whole American people have stood with open arms to receive with joy and gladness every Southern man, from Lee down through the rank and file of those who fought to destroy the nation's life. We venture the assertion that had Lee and his companions in arms, with the citizen leaders of the rebellion taken the stand that General Longstreet has, when the war ended, the policy of reconstruction would have been essentially changed. It was the universal sentiment of the North at that time to "kill the fatted calf" in sublime token that the era of good feeling had returned. And with General Longstreet's appreciation of what Lee's surrender meant, the whole South might have been rejoicing over the restoration of her ancient prosperity. But a different spirit prevailed. What was lost by the sword was to be regained by the ballot. What was lost by Lee was to be regained by Johnson. The severity of the reconstruction policy graduated with the spirit of dissatisfaction displayed in the South, and Congress, "slow to anger," simply kept pace with this spirit in its direful march, which has been more injurious to the Southern people than "Sherman's march to the sea."

General Longstreet occupies an enviable position, and there are not a few of his companions in arms who do not covet his moral courage, his practical wisdom and the "good part which shall not be taken from him." Yet it requires a loftier courage to imitate his step than to meet an "army with banners." Many a man can brave death on the field of carnage who has not the moral heroism to stand up against public opinion, and no where in the nation is public opinion so absolute, so exacting, so withering as in the South. There are not a few merchants and professional men in New Orleans who secretly wish for the power to rise above what they are conscious is a wrong course, and what is destined to ruin them and all who follow the same. Gentlemen, take courage and do your whole duty. With the new administration imitate Longstreet's illustrious example. General Grant has a heart to favor such men, and he has a heart to defend the Government against the plans of those who are of a different spirit. We hold that the cure of Southern troubles is in the hands of the Southern people. "Why will ye die?"

As an earnest of the appreciation of such men as General Longstreet, we believe that under the new administration he will be advanced to a position of trust, emolument and honor such as he has proved himself worthy to receive.

Freedmen's Bureau.

The poor blacks of the South will bless God through a lifetime for the Freedmen's Bureau, and their daily prayer is for its continuance. It has saved them from a state of peonage to which they were inevitably doomed, both by their past condition and their social status after their emancipation. It has preserved them from the horrors of starvation, which war and poverty would have brought upon them. It has created for them a tribunal of justice, before which they could have an impartial hearing, when prejudice denied them the rights of such a trial in ordinary courts. It has opened to them hospitals for their sick and aged, and asylums for their orphans, when no other houses of charity would receive them. It has established for their children schools of learning, when by law they had been doomed to perpetual ignorance. It has retained for them their churches, which hate would have wrested from them.

The necessity for the continuance of the Bureau is gradually disappearing, and will soon cease to exist altogether. But that good time has not yet come. Society is too unsettled, too tumultuous, too unjust, too prejudiced, too revengeful, for the discontinuance of the Bureau. The blacks are a separate class in society and no amount of legislatien can unify the races—the power to effectuate such a union must come from God. They are "wards" at best, and their very simplicity is a reason why their interests should be under the supervision of a special branch of the General Government. But in legislating for the continuance of the Bureau, Congress should provide for the gradual transition of the blacks from their political pupilage into a state of ordinary citizenship, and mutually share with the whites the advantages and disadvantages of common society, and the final discontinuance of the Bureau should be made subject to the will of the President, who should abolish it within two years from date.

Since the above was written, the following appeared in the New Orleans Crescent, of December 16, to which we all the special attention of Congress:

At a meeting in Alexandria, Louisiana, on the fifth, of the planters and landholders of Rapides parish, it was resolved hereafter not to rent, lease or give any portion of their lands to freedmen; reserving, however, the right to settle known conservative freedmen, who are to be under the eye and direction of the planters or landholders. It was also resolved "that any planter or landowner among us who is so unmindful of what is due to himself, the society in which he lives, as to let out lands in opposition to the will of a large majority of our people, as above expressed, deserves to be and will be branded as a public enemy and treated accordingly. That in coming to the conclusion we have on this subject, we are not influenced by any feelings inimical to the freedmen of our parish; but, on the contrary, we have the kindest regard for them, and that we are acting for their good as well as our own." The meeting, in view of the frequent instances of bad faith on the part of freedmen, recommended the propriety of requiring of all freedmen seeking employment, certificates of discharge, testifying to their good behavior and industrious habits, as well as their honesty; and further, should any freedman leave, after having contracted for the year, before the expiration of the time, without permission, that this certificate of discharge be denied him.

The New Orleans and Charleston Advocates.

The following article is so apt that we do not judge it necessary to add another word on the subject. But in this issue we consider the whole subject involved in the action of the late General Conference, touching the above named Advocates:

No braver defenders of liberty are there in all the South than in the Charleston and the New Orleans Christian Advocates. For their boldness several of the Northern Advocates have attempted to cut them off from the support of General Conference. Alas! alas! what kind of Christian advocate is it that has been lukewarm in such a time as this? Out upon such Methodism! John Wesley would have spewed it out.

The Western Advocate rather tartly takes the Church Union in hand for so grave a mistake as it made in the above paragraph, in thus calling our humble sheet and the one issued at New Orleans Christian Advocates. This is a mistake, however, which other wise and good men beside the editor of the Union have frequently made. The truth is, we are rather too modest in this section of our work to take upon ourselves a title which not only indicates an official organ but implies a degree of elevated moral excellence which by far too few of the journals of this age can justly claim. In addition to this, it seems in this section unfortunate for the name of Christian Advocate that all the former papers of the South, bearing that title, became the advocates of slavery and secession in Church and State, and lent their influence to that state of affairs that has involved the land in the horrors of war, and brought the South to the verge of ruin. We think, without stopping to discuss "what is in a name," neither the Charleston nor New Orleans Advocates have shunned to contend for liberty and Methodism on the line marked out by Wesley. In regard to being cut off from the support of the General Conference, we are much in the condition of Jack, who could not lose his supper for the reason that he never had it.—Charleston Advocate.

Importation of Firearms.

It is a painful fact that the importation of firearms into New Orleans was never larger than it is this day. For the present we will not mention the names of those merchants who are thus importing death into our midst, but will only remind them of the tremendous responsibility they are incurring in so doing. You may drive a brisk trade, but orphans and widows will trouble your dying hours, and posterity will visit upon you that severity of judgment your avarice merits.

It is equally painful to know that these firearms are bought up rapidly, and are daily carried about the persons of our citizens. We do not allude to this from fear of any serious disturbances, but as an indication of the destitution of that moral courage that scorns the use of weapons of death in the time of peace, and which seeks the remedy of political and social evils in manly discussion and in an honorable appeal to the courts of law and order. The mere act of carrying these instruments is a temptation to use them, and many a quarrel would have ended in words, but which ended in death, had not the knife or revolver been within reach.

It is barely possible that these firearms are to be used to disperse the General Assembly in January proximo; and it may be done, but let us solemnly warn those who attempt it that it will be the last General Assembly they will ever disperse. Justice will have a resurrection on the fourth day of next March, and then the guilty shall not go unpunished. But we trust that the city press will condemn this almost universal custom of carrying revolvers, and will aid in bringing in an era of good feeling and fellowship.

Conference Meetings.

The Mississippi Annual Conference will meet at Canton, on Thursday, January 7, and not on the twenty-first, as published in the ADVOCATE. The change in the time has been made by Bishop Simpson.

All of the members of this Conference, and all who desire to join, should be at Canton on the sixth of January, and meet the Committee of Examination on the evening of that day.

Ministers on arriving will call on Rev. Alfred Handy, who will assign them to their lodgings.

JAMES LYNCH.

LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.—The fourth session of the Louisiana (formerly Mississippi Mission) Annual Conference will be held in Wesley Chapel, in the city of New Orleans, commencing Wednesday, January 13, at nine o'clock. All those on probation in Conference, and all who have been recommended to the traveling connection or for orders, will meet the committee at Wesley Chapel, on Tuesday, the twelfth of January, at ten o'clock A. M.

Preachers on arriving in the city will proceed to Wesley Chapel, where Brother Anthony Ross will be found to direct them to their places of entertainment.

TEXAS ANNUAL CONFERENCE.—The Texas Annual Conference will convene at Austin, on Tuesday, January 21, at nine o'clock A. M.

Methodist Episcopal Church Statistics for 1868.

The full summaries of the Methodist Episcopal Church for the year 1868 have just been completed for the General Minutes. The following is the list of totals:

| | 1868. | Increase. |
|---|---|---|
| Annual conferences | 71 | 3 |
| Bishops | 9 | ..... |
| Traveling Preachers | 8,481 | 477 |
| Local Preachers | 9,891 | 430 |
| Total Preachers and Bishops | 18,381 | 910 |
| Members | 1,255,115 | 109,034 |
| Total ministers and members | 1,273,496 | 109,944 |
| Adult baptisms | 67,065 | 7,982 |
| Infant baptisms | 46,207 | 3,549 |
| Total baptisms | 113,272 | 11,531 |
| Churches | 11,692 | 570 |
| Parsonages | 3,810 | 240 |
| Value of churches | $41,693,922 | $5,808,483 |
| Value of parsonages | $6,206,579 | $915,284 |
| Value of churches and parsonages | $47,970,501 | $6,723,767 |
| Sunday schools | 15,885 | 544 |
| Sunday school teachers and officers | 181,666 | 6,721 |
| Sunday school scholars | 1,145,167 | 63,276 |

During the year eighty-four traveling preachers died and ninety-seven located, making a total loss to the itinerancy from these two causes alone of 181. The number of preachers received on trial during the year was 691.

During the year 12,772 members died. The figures for the two departments of the membership are as follows: Members in full connection 1,060,265, a net increase during the year of 88,399; members on probation 94,850, a net increase of 20,635.

The gains in the Church in the various items named have been more generally distributed than during any preceding year. In most of the items every annual conference reports an advance; in numbers all except four report a net gain, and in the excepted cases a part of the loss was occasioned by a change of conference boundaries. The increase of members in the several German conferences is shown by the following figures:

| | 1868. | Increase. |
|---|---|---|
| Central German | 9,891 | 229 |
| Eastern German | 2,805 | 146 |
| Northwestern German | 7,071 | 548 |
| Southwestern German | 7,729 | 172 |
| Germany and Switzerland | 6,334 | 406 |
| Total | 33,830 | 1,571 |

The number of members in the conferences organized in the Southern States since the close of the war presents the following summaries:

| | 1868. | Increase. |
|---|---|---|
| Alabama conference | 11,554 | 2,345 |
| Georgia conference | 15,134 | 4,521 |
| Holston conference | 25,723 | 2,003 |
| Mississippi conference | 16,164 | 8,265 |

In 1866, the close of the first century of our church history, the total number of members, including preachers, was 1,038,480. Since that date, or during the last two years, there has been a net increase of members of 223,828, and during the same period an increase in the value of church edifices and parsonages of $13,955,539.

Notices of Periodicals.

Golden Hours.—A monthly magazine for boys and girls. Published simultaneously at New York and Cincinnati. Among the contents of the January number, which is the first issue, we notice: The Dwarf's Mirror; The Orphans; Michael Angelo; Florinda's Treasure; Six Steps to Ruin; Games for the Children's Evening; The Night Before Christmas; Morning Prayer; Make the Most of Yourself; Hugh's Silk Worms; The Little Old Woman and the Giants; That Sweet Story; Cocoa and Cocoanuts; A Sponge, What is it? etc. It contains also two pieces of music, The Harp of Gold, and Our Absent Brother. Besides the above it contains the editor's portfolio, etc. It is gotten up in superb style, and amply illustrated We consider it one of the best magazines for the young, judging by the first number, that is published. Terms, two dollars per year. Address Carlton & Lanahan, 200 Mulberry street, New York, or Hitchcock & Walden, Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Household.—A monthly journal devoted to the interests of the American household. Published at Brattleboro, Vermont, by George E. Crowell, at one dollar a year. This we can cheerfully recommend as one of the very best papers of the kind that we have ever seen.

Peters's United States Musical Review for December contains about a dozen large pages of musical reading and the following music: If Ye Love Me, Do My Will; Let Me Rest Where My Loved Ones are Sleeping; Infinite Joy, and an instrumental piece entitled Heavenward. Published by J. L. Peters, No. 198 Broadway, New York. It is to be greatly enlarged with the January number, and will contain sixteen additional pages of music and reading matter. And remember for all this music and musical information you are to pay but three dollars a year.

The American Artisan contiues to be filled with interesting reading matter. Among the articles in the last number we notice: The Microscope and its Revelations; Krupp's Eleven-inch Breech-loading Gun; Tooth's System of Boiling Sugar; Improvements in Building Operations, etc. Published weekly by Brown, Coombs & Co., 189 Broadway, New York, at $2 50 per year.

MAYOR TUCKER OF FRANKLIN.—A lady of our acquaintance who has been engaged in teaching in Franklin, Louisiana, for several months, when on a visit to this city recently, in speaking of the murder of Pope and Chase in that village, exonerated Mayor Tucker from all complicity in the affair. She stated that the difficulty in obtaining a coffin for the body of Colonel Pope was not through any acts or words of Mayor Tucker. On the contrary he was the one who finally ordered the coffin, and, if we mistake not, paid for it. She further stated that though he acknowledged that he did not like Colonel Pope, yet he manifested sympathy for the widow, and the assassination he denounced as outrageous and cowardly.

Considering it due to Mr. Tucker, both as an individual and as an officer of the law, we gladly publish this statement lest he be the subject of false impression.

You want it, you wife wants it, and your children want it—a pretty extensive want! We refer to that magnificent journal, the American Agriculturist, which is just entering upon its twenty-eighth annual volume. As it is now taken and read by more than one hundred and fifty thousand families, we suppose most of our readers already have it; yet there may be some who do not know its value, and to such we would say, unhesitatingly, give it a year's trial, beginning now with the volume. It is full of good, reliable information, illustrated during each year with hundreds of beautiful, pleasing, and instructive engravings. Though its name indicates that it is an agricultural journal, and as such it was originally started, it has been gradually enlarged, to embrace industrial pursuits generally, and especially household labors, and it is adapted to meet the wants not only of farmers and gardeners, and of merchants and mechanics, having their little plots of ground, but it is also of great utility to all classes in cities and villages. The department for children and youth is worth to every family far more than the subscription price, which is only $1 50 a year, or four copies for $5. Let every one take our advice and subscribe for a year. It will pay. Orange Judd & Co., 245 Broadway, New York city, are the publishers. A post paid specimen copy can doubtless be obtained on remitting ten or fifteen cents to the publishers.

RECONSTRUCTED.—We publish the following, which we clipped from one of the "reconstructed" papers published in western Louisiana. It is only a portion of the article, but enough to give the sentiments of the gentle editor:

A St. Domingo is not what we fought for; we do not want it, and will not have it; and that the niggers, whether white or black, may understand as well first as last. Nations are cruel when driven to despair; and, rather than surrender our white nationality, we will massacre or enslave every colored man in the States. This may be bold language, and unconventional, but we ask our readers whether it does not meet the confirmation of their hearts? We have sacrificed too many whites for a principle to stop at taking the lives of a few worthless blacks.

ANECDOTE OF DR. RUSH.—The Medical and Surgical Reporter states that, long before the temperance reform, a missionary from the West Indies sought medical advice from Dr. Rush, and when a very unpalatable medicine was prescribed, the patient asked if he could not take a little "good old Jamaica" with it.

"No, sir," the doctor decidedly replied.

"Why, sir, what harm will it do?" demanded the West Indian.

"What harm will it do?" continued Dr. Rush; "I am determined no man shall rise on the day of judgment and say: 'Dr. Rush made me a drunkard.'" Wise and noble reply.

The Commission on Church Union.

Bishop Clark sends us the following note under date of December 2:

At a recent meeting of the Board of Bishops the following brethren were appointed members of the commission ordered by the General Conference, (see Journal, page 238, and also page 264), and authorized to treat with similar commissions from the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church and other Methodist bodies, namely: L. Hitchcock, D. D., D. Curry, D. D., J. M'Clintock, D. D., Rev. J. G. Bruce, J. Lanahan, D. D., T. M. Eddy, D. D., James Pike, D. D., W. L. Harris, D. D.

The portions of the General Conference Journal referred to by Bishop Clark, are as follows:

Resolved 1. That we, having received the official communication from the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, proposing union with the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States, and also the representations of the Rev. S. T. Jones on the same subject, with great satisfaction, hereby express to them our Christian regards and deep interest in their progress and prosperity as a Church of the Lord Jesus Christ. 2. That this Conference entertain favorably the proposal of union between the two bodies aforesaid. 3. That whereas the time of the session of these two Conferences is so far spent that it will be impracticable to have the necessary negotiations, and discuss and determine the details of the terms of union before their adjournment, that eight members of this body be appointed, who, with the Bishops, shall constitute a commission to confer with a similar commission of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and report to the next General Conference. 4. That a copy of the foregoing action of this body be given to the delegate, and by him be forwarded to the General Conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.

Subsequent to the adoption of the above by the General Conference, the following was adopted:

Resolved, That the commission ordered by the General Conference to confer with a like commission from the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, to arrange for a union between that Curch and our own, be also empowered to treat with a like commission from any other Methodist Church that may desire a like union.

Important Church Case Decided.

At the close of the war Dr. Lanahan, now one of the book agents at New York, was presiding elder, having charge of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Winchester, Virginia. In his work he came to Winchester to hold services in connection with Rev. B. H. Creaver, the pastor assigned to that charge. While in the pulpit on Sabbath morning, awaiting the time for opening the service, Rev. Norval Wilson, of the Church South entered and took forcible possession, and conducted the meeting, announcing that he would do so twice each Sabbath thereafter. Dr. Lanahan stated to the congregation that while, for the sake of order, he had submitted to the intrusion, the congregation might expect that the pastor and himself would that evening and subsequently occupy the pulpit in accordance with his previous announcement. In the evening Dr. Lanahan and Mr. Creaver were present, the latter preached.

Since that time the Church has remained in the possession of our preachers and their congregation. The seceders carried the case into court. After a full hearing, Judge Parker, on Tuesday, December 1, delivered his opinion. The Judge enters into a history of the Methodist Church, as an organization in this country, from its birth to the present time. His decision is based upon the deed of conveyance, which recites that the property was conveyed to trustees for the benefit of "the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the town of Winchester and vicinity." The amount of property in dispute was about $24,000. The Judge decrees that the bill of the plaintiffs (Church South) be dismissed. This is one of several decisions of like import recently made in Virginia and Maryland, all of them in favor of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Surroundings of the Theatre.

We have seen with our own eyes a once quiet and orderly portion of a great city thoroughfare so changed in character by the opening of a theatre there, as to make it anything but pleasant, if not actually unsafe, for a woman to pass the spot after nightfall without a protector. With what singular constancy the gin-palace, the gambling hell and the house of the lost woman make their appearance in its vicinity. How comes it that these means and appliances of dissipation and vice so constantly spring up in the place whither theatre-goers resort? Why do these breathing holes of perdition open their devouring mouths around the theatre as naturally as ashes gather around the crater of a volcano? What mean these striking affinities? Dr. Bellows admits that "the immorality and recklessness of society, its folly and vice, have clustered around the theatre." Now why is this, if not because "birds of a feather flock together?" As long as the theatre attracts such a companionship, no sophistries of special pleading will persuade thinking minds that the source of attraction is other than the sympathy that naturally springs up between similarities of taste and character.

Of the French revolution the celebrated Edmond Burke writes: "While courts of justice were thrust out by Jacobin tribunals, and silent churches were only funereal monuments of departed religion"—when Paris "was like a den of outlaws—a lewd tavern for revel and debaucheries"—there were in that city "no fewer than twenty-eight theatres crowded every night!" From debauchery, blasphemy and butchery in the day time to the theatre at night—from the theatre at night back to butchery, blasphemy and debauchery in the day time! What is there in a theatre that can adapt itself to tastes and passions so beastly? Are schools of virtue, are our churches so facile, plastic and pliant?—Rev. W. P. Breed, D. D.

Progress of Excavations at Jerusalem.

A correspondent of the New York Times writes from Jerusalem:

The discoveries made hitherto may be summed up briefly. The south wall of the sacred area, Haram El Sheerer, within which stood the temple, has been explored to the very foundations. It is found that in one place the wall was no less than one hundred and eighty feet high. At the lowest point of the wall which is now determined to be also the lowest point of the Tyropæon Valley, he discovered a small passage which he explored for some one hundred and fifty feet, of very ancient construction, and evidently intended to carry off superfluous water. Previous to this discovery it had been supposed that the lowest point was the southwest angle of the wall where the great arch known as Robinson's Arch. Visitors to Jerusalem will remember the spring of the old arch at this point. They will be gratified to learn that all the conjectures with reference to what formerly stood there have been abundantly verified. Not only was there a splendid arch crossing the Tyropæon valley (the span of which was forty feet across, and the voussoiers and ruins of which now lie buried in the debris), but beneath this old arch, covered over with a pavement built presumably to cover these ruins, lie the stones of an arch older still, perhaps the arch built by Solomon himself. The complete investigation of the arch has been a long and costly undertaking, but its importance is very great.

On the east side of the Haram wall lies the valley of the Kedron. Lieutenant Warren, by a series of shafts and springs, has ascertained that the present bed of the stream is no less than forty feet higher than the old bed—the bed having been raised by the enormous masses of debris and ruins that have been hurled over into the valley. By the last letter from Jerusalem we received a plan of the system of chambers discovered at "Wilson's Arch," higher up on the western wall, near the "Walling Place" of the Jews. Lieutenant Warren has discovered at a depth of some fifty feet below the surface of the ground a vast system of chambers and passages. The chambers, whose use has not yet been decided, are mostly about twelve feet square, vaulted and filled up with water. About eighteen have been opened, of which it is conjectured that two or three are of Saracenic origin and the rest of Jewish. They branch off right and left along a great passage. This has been followed up for a distance of 250 feet, its destination being yet uncertain, and its use problematical. Perhaps, however, it was a secret passage for troops. The discovery is intensely interesting, and may lead to singular and most important results.

RICHARD WEAVER.—This converted prize-fighter and collier was ignorant, brutal and a terror to his neighborhood. His first act after his reformation was to drive a Bible van within the inclosure of a horse race, and taking off his coat and handkerchief, went to work selling Bibles and singing sacred songs, undaunted amid threats of personal violence till he actually broke up the gambling booths and spread consternation among the revelers. He is now one of the most persuasive and eloquent preachers in England. Popular alike in the rural districts and in the cities, he can crowd the largest theatres, overflow the largest churches, and among the miners, colliers and operatives in factories, he can count his audiences by thousands when he preaches in the fields. His graphic, story-telling style of presenting divine truth, the thrilling personal incidents in regard to himself and his experience, his peculiar style of relating anecdotes, and withal, his ability as a singer, for he intersperses his sermons with touching songs, make him one of the most attractive speakers in England. He wears a gray suit of clothes, that he may not prejudice those who will not hear a clergyman preach. His great success has not turned his head or clouded the simplicity of character which has marked him for so many years. He has the full confidence of the churches, and ministers of every name invite him to their pulpits. His theology is of the most unmitigated Calvinism, but of his religious earnestness and sincere effort to do good there can be no question. We learn that a wealthy New York gentleman is making an effort to bring this collier preacher to America.

"LET THEM BURN."—At a recent session of an Eastern Conference Bishop Thompson, on the first day, made some remarks on the necessity of cultivating brotherly love. To aid in this blessed work he mentioned an incident in relation to Constantine. On the eve of a church council there was given into his hands a file of documents containing complaints of deacons and bishops mutually against each other. Without breaking the seals, and slowly placing the documents in a chafing dish of burning coals, they were entirely consumed, and no person the wiser—the pious emperor, by this significant act, intimating that there should be no animosities among brethren. "So," said the bishop, referring to the fire of Divine love enkindled in the heart by a contemplation of the sufferings of Jesus, brought to which all hatred and animosity will be consumed. "so let them burn—so let them burn!" And let all God's people say amen!

Dr. Arnold was a noble and cheerful worker, throwing himself into the great business of his life, the training and teaching of young men, with his whole heart and soul. It is stated in his admirable biography, that "the most remarkable thing in the Laleham circle was the wonderful healthiness of tone which prevailed there. It was a place where a new-comer at once felt that a great and earnest work was going forward. Every pupil was made to feel that there was a work for him to do; that his happiness, as well as his duty, lay in doing that work well Hence an indescribable zest was communicated to a young man's feelings about life; a strange joy came over him on discerning that he had the means of being useful, and thus of being happy; and a deep respect and ardent attachment sprang up toward him who had taught him thus to value life and his own self, and his work and mission in the world. All this was founded on the breadth and comprehensiveness of Arnold's character, as well as its striking truth and reality; on the unfeigned regard he had for work of all kinds, and the sense he had of its value, both for the complex aggregate of society and the growth and protection of the individual. In all this there was no excitement; no predilection for one class of work above another; no enthusiasm for any one-sided object, but a humble, profound and most religious consciousness that work is the appointed calling of man on earth; the end for which his various faculties were given; the element in which his nature is ordained to develop itself, and in which his progressive advance toward Heaven is to lie."

The Nails of the Cross.

The following is a specimen of Papal nonsense. It is translated for the Richmond Christian Advocate from the Italian:

According to Signor F. Govean, "Il Romanziere del Ropolo," of Turin, the nails of the cross on which Jesus Christ was crucified by the Jews, have increased with the flight of time from three to twenty-seven, "although," says this pleasant writer, "there was, in fact, not one, as persons condemned to the death of the cross were not nailed, but tied to it."

Here is the history of these twenty-seven nails:

Theodore, the historian, who lived in Constantinople in the sixth century, mentioned three of them in the second volume of his history.

One of which was cast into the sea by the Empress Helen to calm a tempest.

The second she had set in the rich crown of her son.

The third, Constantine the Great had made into a bridle bit.

But Theodore says, and Gregory di Tours repeats it in his "Book of Relics," that there were two of the nails in the bit, which gives the consoling number of four.

The iron crown which was carried from Monza to Vienna, and thence taken to Turin by Count Minabrea, who, while traveling, watched his reflection in a mirror to assure himself that it was on his head, and was afterward returned to Monza, has a band made of a nail, which makes the fifth.

Over the great altar of the Cathedral of Milan, illuminated (?) by five large lamps which are not lit, is a sixth nail.

A seventh is mentioned by Ribadeneira in his "Flowers of the Life of the Saints," which was presented to the abbey of St. Diongi by Charles the Bald. The eighth can be seen in the Cathedral of Nuremberg. The Church of the Holy Cross, in Rome, has the ninth. A tenth was given to St. Maria's church, Rome, by St. Gregory, and the eleventh, also in Rome, belongs to the chapel of St. Helen.

Of the remaining sixteen Paris has two, the Carmelite friars one, Naples two, Carpantrapo one, Florence, Ancora, Siena, Venice, Colonie, Treves, Bourges, Braghinand, each have one The twenty-sixth is venerated in the abbey of Tenaglia, and the twenty-seventh belongs to Santunghia, the country of St. Francis.

PRANG'S AMERICAN CHROMOS IN OIL AND WATER COLORS.

PRANG'S AMERICAN CHROMOS are fac simile re-productions of oil and water color paintings; so faithfully and skillfully done that it requires the experience of an expert to detect the difference between them and the originals.

For every purpose of decoration, for parlors, sitting rooms, nurseries, or chambers, nothing so exquisitely beautiful as these Chromos can be obtained for the same amount of money. No other ornaments of the same cost are so admirably calculated to adorn home, to cultivate a love for art among the people at large; to brighten up the dwellings of every class of our citizens, and to teach the rising generation, by their silent yet refining influence, to love the beautiful in Art and Nature. Hitherto Art has been aristocratic in its associations, none but the wealthy classes could afford to buy fine works of art; but chromo-lithography has changed all that, and brought exquisite paintings within the reach of every family. It is doing for Art what the printing press did for Literature. Let no family, henceforth, be without a few classical books and one or two masterly painting. Both should be regarded as indispensable to complete a home.

Ask for them at the art stores and book stores. Our Chromos are sent free to any address within the United States east of the Mississippi, on receipt of price. Our journal of Popular Art, explaining how Chromos are made, mailed free. Send for a copy.

THE OLD BROOD NEST.

Respectfully Dedicated to Mrs. Major George W. F. Wood.

BY LU BILLINGS SPALDING.

In a lonely thicket dense and brown,
An old nest clung with haggard hand;
Moldering away in the shades forlorn,
Tossing about at the wind's command.

Old nest, unfold your story sad;
Tell us of birdlings soft and fair;
Of days of toil and nights oppressed,
Ere thy fair doves spread their wings to air.

Old nest, each twig, each straw so brown,
Is rich with memories kindly blest;
My soul with mournful sadness stirs,
While musing on the empty nest.

Sad time, when the silver wings first spread,
Took their vague unsteady way,
To nestle no longer, breast to breast,
So fondly tended day by day.

But a time will come when the tired young doves
Will backward toil to the old home-nest,
And sob for the days forever gone,
When nestled so tenderly breast to breast—

For a touch of the mother's wing once more,
And the warmth of her snowy, sheltering breast,
For the pure, sweet notes of the mother song,
Gratefully trilled by the old home-nest.

Poor doves, thy tired, soiled wings will trail
Oft in the lowly, cankering dust,
When the wild storms burst and the whirl-winds howl,
Till feebly burns thy first, great trust.

Those young hours gone know no return,
But memory has wreathed those days loved best,
And heart-hands cling with a strength untold,
To the pure peace found in the old-home nest.

Jackson Barracks, La, Nov. 27, 1868.

EARNING A WIFE.

[From the Phrenological Journal.]

"And so you want to marry my daughter, young man?" said Farmer Bilkins, looking at the young fellow sharply from head to toes.

Despite his rather indolent, effeminate air, which was mainly the result of his education, Luke Jordan was a fine looking fellow, and not easily moved from his self-possession; but he colored and grew confused beneath that sharp, scrutinizing gaze.

"Yes, sir; I spoke to Miss Mary last night, and she referred me to you."

The old man's face softened.

"Molly is a good girl, a very good girl," he said, stroking his chin with a thoughtful air, "and she deserves a good husband. What can you do?"

The young man looked rather blank at this abrupt inquiry.

"If you refer to my abilities to support a wife, I can assure you—"

"I know that you are a rich man, Luke Jordan, but I take it for granted that you ask my girl to marry you and not your property. What guarantee can you give me, in case it should be swept away, as it is in thousands of instances, that you could provide for her a comfortable home? You have hands and brains—do you know how to use them? What can you do?"

This was a style of catechism for which Luke was quite unprepared, and he stared blankly at the questioner without speaking.

"I believe you managed to get through college—have you any profession?"

"No, sir; I thought—"

"Have you any trade?"

"No, sir; my father thought that with the wealth I should inherit I should not need any."

"Your father thought like a fool, then. He'd much better have given you some honest occupation and cut you off with a shilling—it might have been the making of you. As it is, what are you fit for? Here you are, a strong, able-bodied young man, twenty-four years old, and never earned a dollar in your life! You ought to be ashamed of yourself. And you want to marry my daughter. Now, I have given Molly as good advantages for learning as any girl in town, and she hasn't thrown 'em away; but if she didn't know how to work, she'd be no daughter of mine. If I choose, I could keep more than one servant; but I don't, no more than I choose that my daughter should be a pale, spiritless creature, full of dyspepsia and all sorts of fine lady ailments, instead of the smiling, bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked lass she is. I did say that she should not marry a lad that had been cursed with a rich father; but she has taken a foolish liking for you, and I'll tell you what I'll do: Go to work, and prove yourself to be a man; perfect yourself in some occupation—I don't care what, if it is honest—then come to me and, if the girl is willing, she is yours."

As the old man said this he deliberately rose from the settle of the porch and went into the house.

Pretty Mary Bilkins was waiting to see her lover down at the garden gate, their usual trysting-place. The smiling light faded from her eyes as she noticed his sober, discomfited look.

"Father means well," she said, as Luke told her the result of his application. "And I'm not sure but he's about right, for it seems to me that every man, rich or poor, ought to have an occupation."

Then, as she noticed her lover's grave look, she said, softly:

"Never mind, I'll wait for you, Luke."

Luke Jordan suddenly disappeared from his accustomed haunts, much to the surprise of his gay associates. But wherever he went he carried with him those words which were like a tower of strength to his soul: "I'll wait for you, Luke."

One pleasant, sunshiny morning, late in October, as farmer Bilkins was propping up the grapevine in his front yard, that threatened to break down with the weight of its luxurious burden, a neat-looking car drove up, from which Luke Jordan alighted with a quick, elastic step, quite in contras with his formerly easy, leisurely movements.

"Good morning, Mr. Bilkins. I understood that you wanted to buy some butter tubs and cider barrels. I think I have some that will just suit you."

"Whose make are they?" asked the old man, as, opening the gate, he passed by the wagon.

"Mine," replied Luke, with an air of pardonable pride.

Mr. Bilkins examined them one by one.

"They'll do," he said, coolly, as he set down the last of the lot. "What will ye take for them?"

"What I asked you for six months ago to-day—your daughter, sir."

The roguish twinkle in the old man's eyes broadened into a smile.

"You've got the right metal in you, after all," he cried. "Come in, lad; come in. I shouldn't wonder if we made a trade after all."

Nothing loth, Luke obeyed.

"Molly!" bawled Mr. Bilkens, thrusting his head into the kitchen door.

Molly tripped out into the entry. The round white arms were bared above the elbows, and bore traces of the flour she had been sifting. Her dress was a neat gingham, over which was tied a blue checked apron; but she looked as winning and lovely as she always did wherever she was found.

She blushed and blushed and smiled as she saw Luke, and then, turning her eyes upon her father, waited dutifully to hear what he had to say.

The old man regarded his daughter for a moment with a quizzical look.

"Moll, this young man—mayhap you've seen him before—has brought me a lot of tubs and barrels, all of his own make—a right good article, too. He asks a pretty steep price for 'em, but if you are willing to give it, well and good; and hark ye, my girl, whatever bargain you make your father will ratify."

As Mr. Bilkins said this he considerately stepped out of the room, and we will follow his example. But the kind of bargain the young people made can readily be conjectured by the speedy wedding that followed.

Luke Jordan turned his attention to the study of medicine, of which profession he became a useful and influential member; but every year, on the anniversary of his marriage, he delights his mother-in-law with some specimens of the handicraft by which he won what he declares to be the best and dearest wife in the world.

TRIAL OF DEACON ANDREWS.

Strange Scene in Court.

An exchange says:

At the trial of Deacon Andrews at Plymouth, Massachusetts, for the murder of Cornelius Holmes, a constable, named McCoy, testified that he brought the prisoner to see the remains of the murdered man. Andrews stood at the head of the coffin and stroked Mr. Holmes's face, at the same time kissing him; that evening, Deacon Andrews desired witness to read a chapter in the Bible, and Mr. Peckham and Andrews both offered prayer.

At the trial on Friday, Joseph S. Beal was sworn—I am the brother-in-law of Cornelius Holmes. After giving an account of what he saw at the scene of the murder, he stated that he subsequently went there and counted in all twenty-seven stones that were bloody, some bearing the imprint of fingers; he also noticed four different pools of blood in different places; on Wednesday, about half-past twelve o'clock, I saw a stranger passing through my lot, coming from the river, who proved to be the prisoner Andrews. This witness further testified to having a lengthy conversation with Andrews about what he did in the garden the night before the murder, and also concerning the homicide, the will and the funeral. He also testified to being in company with Andrews and Macoy on Friday in front of his (Beal's) house; Mr. Macoy then said to me, "Mr Andrews says there was a copy of the will found in Holmes's coat pocket which he had on when he was found dead." I turned toward Andrews, and he said to me, "Yes, merely a copy; I think the will gives me more than the copy."

The prisoner (in a loud and excited tone) interrupted by saying, "I never said that, Mr. Beals," and shortly after, while the trial was progressing and all was silent and attention in the courtroom, there was a sensation caused by his jumping from his seat in the prisoner's box and crying out suddenly, and very sharply and quickly. The spectators became excited and rose to their feet, expecting a scene of some importance; but Andrews immediately took his seat again. His counsel visited him directly afterward and inquired how he was troubled. The prisoner replied that he thought somebody had struck him in the face. He was then told to be of good cheer, but for nearly an hour afterward the effects of his sudden fright did not disappear, and he looked dejected and unhappy, frequently bathing his temples in cold water, and paying no attention whatever to the evidence.

The telegraph has already informed us that Andrews was convicted of manslaughter, and sentenced to twenty years confinement in the State Prison.

The Louisiana Election.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune, writing from this city, says:

In New Orleans the murders and riots began during registration. The entire absence of protection, the massacres of Republican processions, the patroling of the city by armed bands of so called Democrats, who even halted the military; the assassinations of colored men, and the sackings of their churches and the Grant Club rooms, so terrified the colored men that two-thirds of them refused to register. As an instance of the state of affairs, two gentlemen, one the Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives, the Hon. William Vigers, and the other Minute Clerk called on General Rousseau in the midst of the excitement and asked him for protection, stating that they had trustworthy information that their houses would be visited that night by the mob. General Rousseau replied to them that he had not sufficient troops to give protection to them; but, in his opinion, if they would resign their positions, they would not be molested, as the government was obnoxious to the people; that it would be necessary to have 20,000 men to maintain the State government, and that he did not intend to have his men killed for the sake of a few officeholders, "though," said he, "I am sent here to keep order, and I intend to do it all hazards." Another little incident about the same time: A deputation of Democratic citizens from Algiers, which is in this Metropolitan District, waited on the Superintendent of Police to inquire if they would be allowed to patrol their town for the protection of their property. General Rousseau was present in the office. The Superintendent referred them to him. The General replied that he knew of no law to prevent a man from standing guard over his own property, and that there would be no objection to such a patrol. Dr. Mackay, a well-known and respected Republican of this city, was present and said to the General: "General, how is it about the colored people? Will they, too, be allowed to patrol their property?" Whereat the General, after a slight musing, turned fiercely to the questioner and said: "Sir, you are one of the very class of men who are stirring up all this trouble." The logic of the General was not so potent as his temper. With such a state of affairs, it was impossible that a fair election could have been held, even if the small fraction of the Republican voters who had registered had all voted. But with the bloody record of the last two months, their exclusion from registry, and the firm belief that if they should attempt to vote in any force they would be shot down like sheep, all staring them in the face, the body of the Republican voters decided to treat the pretended election as a sham and nullity, as it was, and to remain quietly at home. In seventeen parishes of the State a similar condition of affairs existed, and in those parishes there was almost an unanimous vote for Seymour and Blair, in spite of the known fact that in almost all of them the Republicans had a decided majority. Can an election carried by such means be for one moment sustained? The fact is, that, as the Philadelphia North American says, "these outlaws fancy that they are beyond the power of Congress; but they will have to learn a different lesson." Indeed, they will, if we are to have any form of Republican government here. The rebels now fancy that they can always control the colored vote by intimidation. There is no doubt that a free election at this moment would cause this State to give 30,000 Republican majority.

A Revelation.

We find the following in the St. Louis Democrat:

An important revelation, recently made by Mr. George Wilkes, excites general comment. Mr. Wilkes gives a detailed account of an interview between Mr. Lincoln, General Grant, General Sherman and Admiral Porter, at Fortress Monroe, and for the truth of his statement he claims that either of the three distinguished persons still living can be called as witnesses. He asserts that it was Mr. Lincoln who inspired and in fact dictated to General Sherman, in that interview, the terms of surrender which General Sherman afterward submitted, as agreed upon, between himself and General Johnson. This agreement, it will be remembered, was set aside by Mr. Johnson, Mr. Lincoln having just been murdered. General Sherman was for some time subjected to harsh criticism on account of his action in that matter, yet if Mr. Wilkes' statement is correct, the General acted according to strict instructions from President Lincoln and not according to his own impressions. This account, remarkable as it may seem, is still by no means incredible when we remember the order for the reassembling of the Virginia Legislature, which Mr. Lincoln gave, and which Secretary Stanton induced him to countermand. In that order, quite the same spirit and idea of policy to be pursued were shown, as in the Sherman-Johnson protocol, which, if Mr. Wilkes is right, was dictated at the very same time.

The fact in this matter ought now to be known. No injustice can be done to any one by giving it full publicity, for both Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Stanton hold so high a place in the regard of the people that if either erred we need not conceal it. On the other hand, it is but but justice to General Sherman, who has so long passed in silence criticisms which, if Mr. Wilkes is right, did him great injustice. That the terms proposed were, like the Virginia order, far too loose and lenient in political bearing, the country then felt and doubtless still feels. But if they were dictated by Mr. Lincoln, justice to the living demands that they should not be held responsible for his acts. General Sherman, who has so long preserved a scrupulous silence, will not be expected to say anything now, but either General Grant or Admiral Porter could with perfect justice and propriety state whether Mr. Wilkes has given a correct account of the interview.

The Report of General Reynolds.

We copy from the New York Herald an editorial on this report:

This report, which we published yesterday, contains some hard truths. It is terse and to the point, and shows the necessity of holding Texas by military law. Speaking of the Ku-Klux Klan the General states: "The precise object of these organizations can not be readily explained but seems in this State to be to disarm, rob, and in many cases murder Union men and colored, and, as occasion may offer, murder United States officers and soldiers; also to intimidate every one who knows anything of the organization, but who will not join it. The civil law east of the Trinity river is almost a dead letter. In some counties the civil officers are all, or a portion of them, members of the Klan." At the political meetings in several counties "men have been indicated by name from the speaker's stand as those selected for murder. The men thus pointed out have no course left them but to leave their homes or be murdered on the first convenient opportunity." The murder of colored men is so common as to render it impossible to keep an accurate account of them."

We suggest that this condition of affairs in Texas calls for prompt action on the part of our executive power. A commission should be appointed to consider the condition of the State and report upon it. In case of the confirmation of General Reynold's report, which is without doubt, from what we know, correct, Texas should at once be turned over to military rule. This will be the quickest method to restore it to peace and prosperity. Nothing but inexorable military law will produce quiet there, and the quicker it is put in force the better for our whole Southwestern country, which is sadly afflicted by this Texan cutthroat government.

THE OHIO STEAMBOAT DISASTER

New Orleans Lady Lost.

The Cincinnati Gazette of Wednesday has the following additional details of the Ohio river steamboat disaster:

Reports in regard to the recent steamboat disaster come in slowly and are unsatisfactory. Captain Frank Carter, Superintendent of the United States Mail Line at Louisville, and Mr. A. Harrigan, second clerk of the United States, are at Warsaw, doing all in their power to secure the bodies of those who perished in the wrecks. It is ascertained that twenty-eight bodies have been taken from the wrecks, ten or twelve of whom were passengers. Mr. Harrigan, a part of whose duties it was to pay the crew of the United States, is better able than any other person to identify the bodies, having become familiar with their names and faces.

So far, the only dead bodies which have been recovered from the wreck and recognized out of the number above given are John Fennel, steward; Elijah Fort, porter, and Miss Johnson, of Louisville. The body of an unknown lady was taken out of the river at Warsaw, supposed to be either the wife of Commodore Thompson or Mrs. Geo. W. Griffin, of New Orleans. The bodies of Mr. A. Speidelberg and Mrs. Pearce, of Louisville, have been recovered and delivered to their friends. We find in the Louisville Democrat the following painful incident connected with the loss of Mrs. Griffin:

The young wife of Mr. George W. Griffin, of the firm of Griffin & Porch, New Orleans, was on her way to this city from Philadelphia, to meet her husband. She was in company with the wife of Commodore Thompson, and took passage on the ill-fated United States.

On Sunday morning the proprietors of the Louisville Hotel received a dispatch announcing the loss of Mrs. Griffin. At one o'clock P. M. Mr. Griffin arrived here by the Nashville Railroad and proceeded at once to the Louisville Hotel. He fully expected to meet his wife at the hotel, and did not suppose for a moment that she was one of the passengers by the United States. The reader can imagine the horror of Mr. Griffin upon being informed that his wife was among the lost. The dispatch had been forwarded to him at Corinth, Mississippi, but he passed through before it arrived. Mr. Griffin expected that his wife had arrived here upward of a week ago, and was not moved more than other persons who had no relatives on the boats when he first heard of the disaster. He left on Sunday evening for Warsaw to recover, if possible, the remains of his beloved wife. They had only been married a few months.

The body of Mr. James W. Johns, receiving clerk on the United States, was recovered. It is said that he was the last man to leave the boat. He kept with the ladies, placing life preservers around them, until the vessel was ready to sink. After working to the last moment to save the lives of others, he found it too late to save his own life. He perished in the flames of the burning oil on the surface of the water. Mr. Johns died a hero.

Richard Marshall and Elijah Forte, (brothers-in-law), porter and second steward of the ill-fated United States, were found in the river near the boat on Monday.

Grain Shipments.

The Crescent has received a visit from Mr. Sitter, of Dubuque, a large grain merchant. He is in the city to make arrangements for the shipment here of a large amount of grain from Iowa, to be sent hence to Europe. The elevator here is now in working order, and ready for any grain that may arrive. Mr. Sitter proposes to try the experiment of grain shipments to Europe via New Orleans on a large scale, as about 300,000 bushels are to be sent. We are glad to learn from this gentleman that he proposes, ere long, to make New Orleans permanently his home. Men like him we want here. Our citizens will always extend to them a hearty welcome. Mr. Sitter left yesterday evening to complete his arrangements at the North for the shipment of his grain.

The same paper mentions the expected arrival here of Mr. Thomas Emsley, of London, one of the wealthiest capitalists of England, who will probably arrive here soon. Mr. Emsley is largely interested in the grain trade, and has come to the United States for the purpose of investigating the advantages of the proposed new route of shipping grain to Europe via New Orleans, instead of New York. Mr. Emsley has been to Cairo and to Chicago, and now comes to New Orleans to see what is being done here to forward the new branch of commerce. We trust that what he discovers will induce him to throw the weight of his influence toward changing the present route.

A writer in the Journal of Agriculture says that for the purpose of determining the propagating power of a plant of pursiane, he counted the number of seed pods upon it. There were 4,613. Fourteen of these—seven small, four medium, and three of the largest—were selected and the seeds counted. They gave an average of ninety seeds to the pod, or 415,170 seeds to a single plant.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

CITIZENS' MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANY.—In the case of the Receiver vs. the Citizens' Mutual Insurance Company, an appeal has been taken from Judge Theard's decision to the Supreme Court. The appointment of a receiver is alleged to be illegal, and his claim of $456,000 denied on that ground, and in denial of the alleged fraud in issuing scrip. The case possesses many points of interest, not only in a commercial but a legal view. The entire question is involved in the motion to dismiss on the ground that the proceedings should have been commenced under the bankrupt act.

THE MARKETS.—The following adjudications were made Saturday by the Controller of the public markets for 1869:

| | 1869. | 1868. |
|---|---|---|
| Poydras Market | $67,850 | $52,300 |
| St. Mary's Market | 26,000 | 23,300 |
| Dryades Market, ℔ month | 3,600 | ...... |
| Claiborne Market, ℔ month | 1,000 | ...... |
| Treme Market | 48,700 | 46,750 |
| French (Beef) Market | 50,400 | 54,000 |
| French (Vegetable) Market | 63,000 | 57,300 |
| French (Fruit) Market | 16,000 | 12,000 |
| Washington Market | 2,000 | ...... |
| St. Bernard Market | 5,100 | ...... |
| Port Market | 17,100 | ...... |
| Le Breton Market | 1,100 | 2,800 |
| Magazine Market | 34,100 | 28,150 |
| Soraparu Market | 8,050 | 7,000 |
| Ninth Street Market | 17,800 | 9,000 |

On account of the suit instituted by the Livandais heirs, the Dryades Market was rented only by the month, and the Claiborne Street was also rented monthly, because the city has granted the right of way through the site of that market to the Chattanooga Railroad.

The adjudications for the coming year show a large and flattering increase over those of the year now expiring. The three markets in the Fourth District alone show an increase of $15,800 over this year.

DEATHS LAST WEEK.—According to the report of Dr. G. W. Dirmeyer, Secretary of the Board of Health, the whole number of interments last week was ninety-seven. Of these two died of wounds, five old age, one apoplexy, one concussion of the brain, fourteen consumption, one delirium tremens, four fevers, one heart disease, three pneumonia, four rheumatism, one softening of the brain, ten stillborn, and the balance various ordinary diseases. Forty-five were males, forty-seven females and five not stated. Sixty-seven were whites, twenty-nine colored and one not classified. Forty-three were children under five years, three between ten and fifteen, eleven between twenty and thirty, ten between thirty and forty, nine between forty and fifty, three between fifty and sixty, eight between sixty and seventy, three between seventy and eighty, one between eighty and ninety, one between ninety and one hundred, and two upwards of one hundred. Sixty were natives of the United States, eleven not stated, and twenty-six were foreigners.

DRUIDS.—The Grand Grove of Louisiana of this Order held its second and principal session of the annual convocation on Sunday morning, R. H. Schmidt, Esq., of the Price Current, in the chair. Mr. Schmidt has held the position of Noble Grand Arch of the State during the past year. The following officers were elected and installed to serve during the year 1869:

George Henry Pabst, Noble Grand Arch.
Charles Assenheimer, Deputy Grand Arch.
George B. Ebeling, Grand Secretary.
John Reich, Grand Treasurer.
Valentine Fuchs, Grand Marshal.
Caspar Schneider, Grand Guardian.
John H. Muller, Grand Sentinel.

Magnolia, Oak, Pioneer, Gœthe and Mispel Groves were represented, and new charters were given to Mistletoe Grove No. 9 and Orient Grove No. 10. These Groves are represented by M. H. Nicoll and J. T. Barrett and presided over by J. M. Wiemann and J. M. Terrell.

A PRINTER LOCKED UP.—On Saturday night a printer, whose alias is Mulligan, had been drinking more than usual at a St Charles street coffeehouse. Just as he was coming out, one or two patrolmen were arresting an offender. The enebriated printer in his confusion of mind thought, if he thought anything, that he ought to side with the weaker party, and sailed in to resist the officer. He drew his revolver, presented both barrels to the breast of the officer and was about to pull the trigger, when one or two other officers came to the rescue, and at the moment when the patrolmen would have been instantly shot through the body, knocked the belligerent printer down and saved the life of a policeman.

The printer, this morning, shows two or three severe cuts on the head, and has evidently got the worst of the affray, for which he may thank his good fortune, as otherwise he would have been arraigned for murder, instead of appearing before Recorder Becker this morning to answer to the charge of assault and battery with intent to kill, resisting an officer and carrying concealed weapons. He was released on bail for future appearance. He has never been before the Recorder before, and declares that his memory is a blank from the time he was drinking in a coffeeehouse till he found himself locked up in the station.

GRAND CONCLAVE OF S∴ W∴ M∴—The Grand Conclave of S. W. M. for the State of Louisiana held its annual convocation on Thursday evening, at the hall, 48 St. Louis street, under the presidency of Anthony Sambola, Esq., acting in the absence of the Hon. Alexander Dimitry. We have been kindly furnished with a list of the grand officers who were elected at this meeting, and will be installed with all the ceremonial of the order at a meeting soon to be called specially for that purpose. The names of their Conclaves are annexed:

Grand Archon, William E. Fitzgerald, of Ætna No. 15.
Grand Chancellor, M. H. Nicoll, of Dean No. 12.
Grand Provost, William De Lacy, of Aurora No. 14.
Grand Scribe, L. A. Richards, of Ætna No. 15.
Grand Treasurer, H. Brand, of Schiller No. 6.
Grand Herald, E. R. Boehler, of Boehler No. 19.
Grand Inspector General, Stephen M. Terrell, of Dean No. 12.
Grand Prelate, M. A. Calonge, of Ionia No. 11.
Grand Guide, Joshua Corprew, of Allen No. 18.
Grand Warder, M. O. Lawrence, of Washington No. 20.
Grand Sentinel, H. P. Walter, of Oliver No. 16.

On Friday evening the newly elected officers attended the annual installation of Ionia Conclave No. 11, over which M. A. Calonge presides as Chief, with E. A. Louis as Scribe. This Conclave is in a very flourishing condition, and is preparing to give a ball, on the seventeenth of December, for the benefit of its benevolent fund.

PARAGRAPHS.—The body of the man found dead on Common street proves to be that of Lawrence Lyon, a tinner, at No. 349 Common street. He was seen in a state of intoxication Friday night, and Saturday morning, between six and seven o'clock, he was seen barely alive on the spot where he was afterward found dead, by a colored man, who feared to render assistance lest he should be suspected of an assault upon him.

There were no less than five deaths last week from old age—two of these were over one hundred years of age. The present cold weather seems particularly hard on old people. One colored woman died in Algiers last week 125 years old. The mortuary reports the year round in New Orleans will show at least one death of a centenarian every month, sometimes more. There is great mortality here among children under ten years, and in times of epidemic unacclimated young men between twenty and thirty-five die fast; but for all that we believe our city can boast of being healthier and having more centenarians than any other on the continent.

LETTER TO PRESIDENT JOHNSON.—The following letter was recently addressed to President Johnson by a lady of this city:

Accompanying this you will find thirty pieces of metal. In number they are equivalent to the amount your illustrious predecessor, Judas, received as the price of treachery. They are not silver, for that would be too refined, and would doubtless gratify your avarice by adding to your coffers. But they are tin—more appropriate in representing the character and the acts they are intended to reward, with a thin outward dazzling brightness, which, with little use, is soon removed, only to expose the rusty, baser metal within. Judas received his as the price of blood; but you are worse, inasmuch as Jesus had no fond wife or loving children whose tears were caused to flow in scalding torrents at the duplicity of your prototype. Your "My Policy" and infidelity to liberty has inaugurated a reign of terror throughout the South, periling the very life of your country and instigating the late terrible riots and murders in this city. You have struck hands with traitors and assassins. Yes, you have knelt at the altar of Moloch and worshipped at its shrine. You will please receive this proffered reward of your duplicity, and may they sink and as a die cast their impression on your heart, should you escape the just punishment your conduct merits in this life, that when you stand before the altar of your God, He may see their impress and reward you in accordance therewith.

I am, with high respect for the position you occupy, MRS. K. E. C.

CHATTANOOGA RAILROAD.—Yesterday, says the Crescent, the maps and plans for the portion of the New Orleans, Mobile and Chattanooga railroad to be constructed between this city and Mobile were exhibited at the office of the company, in Gallier Court, for the benefit of those who may desire to make proposals for contracts prior to the twentieth proximo. A map sixteen feet long, representing the New Orleans division of the road (i. e., from here to Mobile), and drawn upon the scale of 4000 feet to the inch, is exhibited, and affords in one glance a comprehensive view of the region lying between the two points, including the marshes, the Rigolets, the watering place villages, the oyster and sand banks, and the piny woods beyond Pascagoula, where turpentine orchards abound.

By a bee line Mobile is distant from us 132 miles—by the proposed line of the road 138 miles, measuring from the foot of St. Joseph street to Dauphine Way. From this city to the Rigolets, an embankment about six feet high will be thrown up by dredging machines for the track, the excavation forming upon one side of the track a canal useful for drainage, and which will be about twenty-five feet wide. The company have a belt of about two hundred feet in width along these marshes. At Chef Menteur there is to be a bridge of 770 feet, at Lake Catharine a trestle work of 2600 feet. The great bridge at the Rigolets will be 3600 feet long, with a draw of 100 feet. The sections of the road are numbered from one to thirty-one, beginning from this end of the line. January, 1870, is to be the farthest time allowed for the completion of any of the contracts.

Meanwhile the company is busy in getting ready all their carriages, rolling stock and locomotives. Samples of every description of car to be used upon the road are now completed, and remain in the workshop of the New York Central road at Albany, New York, for transportation. Plans for station buildings, machine shops and depots are all complete, and we can not but confess that with some impatience we await the twentieth of January, when proposals will be opened and this great work be at once placed under contract.

BOARD OF METROPOLITAN POLICE COMMISSIONERS.—At the meeting of the Board yesterday the following cases were disposed of on the trial of officers:

Patrolman John Cavanaugh, No. 124. Charge, neglect of duty. Sentence, forfeit one day's pay.

Patrolman Thomas Stapleton, No. 93. Charge, drunkenness. Case dismissed.

Patrolman James Cushman, No. 71. Charge, neglect of duty. Sentence, forfeit three days' pay.

Patrolman William Kelly, No. 46. Charge, neglect of duty. Case dismissed.

Patrolman William Donovan, No. 41. Charge, neglect of duty. Sentence, forfeit five days' pay.

Patrolman J. Buckley, No. 2. Charge, neglect of duty. Sentence, forfeit five days' pay.

Patrolman J. Kasch, No. 69. Charge, neglect of duty. Case dismissed.

Special Patrolman C. Contronosky. Charge, neglect of duty. Sentence, dropped from roll.

Patrolman M. Hanneman, No. 51. Charge, neglect of duty. Sentence, forfeit five days' pay.

Patrolman F. G. Maroney, No. 39. Charge, neglect of duty. Sentence, forfeit one day's pay.

Patrolman P. M. Brier, No. 67. Charge, neglect of duty. Sentence, dismissed the service.

Patrolman G. Desam, No. 50. Charge, neglect of duty. Sentence, forfeit one day's pay.

Patrolman J. Adams, No. 31. Charge, neglect of duty. Case dismissed.

MUCHLY MARRIED.—According to the Times's report, nearly five years ago the city papers announced the death of Captain Thomas Hukle, attached to a Massachusetts regiment composing a part of the Army of Occupation under General Butler. The Captain, quite a handsome man of perhaps thirty years of age, and extremely fond of ladies' society, had speedily gained an introduction in the Union families residing in the city, and became quite a lion. The circumstance attracted attention from the fact he had recently married one of the fairest daughters of the then Exclusive Union Society. Notwithstanding the stringent order existing at the time relative to officers' funerals, we heard of no special display at his, nor have we ever made the acquaintance of one who attended it.

Years elapsed, and finally two or three weeks ago, a lady in deep mourning came to the city in search of his remains. An attorney, employed for the purpose, searched the records of the Board of Health, and finding no mention, the lady was compelled to visit each of the cemeteries, including the one at Chalmette. Each investigation was equally fruitless. Neither the Charity, Marine, or Sedgwick hospitals had any record of the case. She then remembered that the Captain had at one time a number of relatives of the same name residing in the city, and as a dernier resort, determined to look them up.

Captain Cain was applied to, the lady stating she was the widow of the deceased, and desired to have his remains interred in the family vault at Mount Auburn. Fortunately he did know a gentleman of that name, and being a peculiar one, felt convinced he must in some way be connected with her deceased husband. The location of his residence was given, and the lady called.

Mr. H. was not in at the time, but the visitor was courteously received by Mrs. Hukle. Singular to state, she had never heard of but one Captain Hukle, (her husband,) and was not aware another of the name was attached to the army here. She, however, insisted on the lady's remaining to dinner, assuring her that a personal interview with her husband would settle at once the relationship.

What was the wife's surprise, at the return of her lord and master, to find the lady suddenly drop into a chair, and the man's face turn pale as marble.

The mystery was soon unraveled. The death notice published as a joke was considered too good to be contradicted, and his laughing companions had dubbed the gallant captain "the dead man" for months. By judicious manipulations of cotton he acquired a handsome fortune, and remembering the unpleasant curtain lectures of the chilly North, determined to bask in the smiles of another.

We hear there is to be no prosecution. The wife claims the five years' desertion clause in the divorce law, and the proper papers are now being made out. To the lady he has so basely injured, every reparation possible is promised. As soon as he legally can they will be married over, and in the interim she resides in a separate house.

BURNING OF THE STEAMSHIP CRESCENT.—About seven o'clock last night a private watchman on the levee at the steamship landing discovered smoke, as he thought, coming from the steamship Crescent, which arrived here yesterday morning from Galveston, and was lying at the foot of St. Joseph street. Closer investigation disclosed the fact that a fire had broken out in one of the coal bunkers of the ship. The alarm was at once turned in from the box at the corner of Julia and Levee streets, and the firemen were there in a jiffy. But the flames spread rapidly, first below the deck and then breaking ont above, enveloping the upper works and wheelhouses, and presenting a spectacle beautiful to look upon, but sad to contemplate. Streams of water were poured in by the engines, but the flames enwrapped the vessel from stem to stern, and, powerless upon the hull, made rapid havock with the wood work and timbers.

The Crescent was to have sailed to-morrow morning, and had already taken on board about one thousand barrels of freight. She was not insured, Mr. Morgan, her owner, taking his own risks upon his vessels. The Crescent was built in Wilmington, Delaware, about four years since, at a cost of about $200,000.

Shippers will be glad to learn that most of the freight for the Crescent had not been put on board, but had been left temporarily on the levee while the vessel was coaling. Two kegs of gunpowder which had been shipped were removed to the shore, but some of the contents are supposed to have fallen out, as a slight explosion is reported

The above is from the Crescent. The Bee says the vessel had partially received her cargo, some of her freight being still on the wharf. She had on board between 1500 and 2000 barrels of freight, consisting of pork, flour, whisky, etc., and several thousand packages of other freight, all of which was burned. Some blankets and other furnishing articles of the vessel were thrown overboard, but all or nearly all lost. Freight on the wharf was not much damaged.

The loss on cargo is probably $30,000. The safe, books and papers were all saved. There was about $5000 in specie on consignment on board which, we presume, was saved.

At ten and three-fourths o'clock, an explosion of the powder on board occurred, injuring the following members of Engine Company No. 6: James Comfort, first assistant, dangerously; John McCabe, dangerously; James Vaughie, dangerously; William Plunkett, Thomas Bolman, Pat Gallagher, Thomas McCormick, George Hamilton, Daniel Hurley and Thomas Portous, slightly.

AFTER HAM IN A SNAKE TENT.—There are frequent complaints to the police that one of the tents on the line of Canal street, near the Algiers ferry landing, is a den of thieves, and that men who go in there to see the snake show have their money and other valuables snaked out of their pockets. This morning, about six o'clock, according to his own statement, a rather verdant looking man, just over on the ferryboat from Algiers, was walking up the levee in search of a piece of ham for his own and his wife's breakfast. He was accosted by a man in front of a tent, who asked him where he was going. The simple countryman told his mission, whereupon he was asked to walk in and get some ham there. He went in, and somebody immediately went through him, robbing him of $90 in greenbacks and a $20 gold piece, but he did not get any ham, though he is quite sure he saw the "ham fat man." Another man got $30 in greenbacks. The police will take charge of the matter and investigate the case on the affidavit of the party who was robbed.

A THIEF FOOLED.—Yesterday, about three o'clock, while Mr. O'Connor, the Deputy Coroner of the First and Fourth Districts, was at his dinner, Coroner Roche being also absent, some individual entered the Coroner's office, on Magazine street, near Melpomene street, and stole therefrom a tin box containing all the processes verbal of inquests held since Coroner Roche has held his office. There were also a few private papers in the box belonging to Mr. O'Connor, and some eight or ten two-cent revenue stamps. The thief expected, probably, he had secured a cash box; but he must have been rather disgusted when the examination of his prize showed its utter worthlessness to him. The Coroner will of course be inconvenienced sadly by the loss of his papers.

EXPLOSION IN POYDRAS MARKET.—This morning, about half-past seven o'clock, a pan of burning charcoal was sitting on the flagging in Poydras Market, over which Messrs. Welch and Mattines, farmers or commissaries, were standing to warm themselves. Suddenly the heat of the burning coal caused an explosion of the flagging, fragments of which flew up with considerable violence, slightly injuring both the gentlemen named.

SERGEANT BATES IN GRIEF.—Sergeant Bates, the Western soldier, who walked from Vicksburg to Washington, bearing the stars and stripes and proclaiming himself a Democrat, came to New Orleans lately and was entertained or was on exhibition at the display of Democratic banners at Masonic Hall. But the Sergeant found himself among thieves last night, who at Irvin's lodging house, corner of St. Charles and Gravier streets, robbed him while he was gently sleeping, of ninety-five dollars in greenbacks and the pocketbook presented to him by President Johnson. The Mobile people to which he goes to lecture, will make up the Sergeant's losses in the Crescent City.

PARAGRAPHS.—Mr. H. F. Sturcken, the Assistant Alderman and Recorder, has recovered from a severe attack of sickness. In a few days Mr. Sturcken will re-enter upon the sphere of his usefulness.

James S. Tallman was garroted and robbed of ninety-five dollars and a gold watch on the steamboat landing, on Thursday night, by unknown thieves.

The residence of Mr. Simon, No. 412 Rocheblave street, was entered Thursday evening by thieves, who opened armoirs bureaus and drawers ad libitum, but without securing much booty.

J. B. Houston was arrested yesterday on a warrant from the Recorder's Court, charged by A. B. Mason with embezzling $840. He was released on bail, to appear next Wednesday for examination.

James T. Nelson and Thomas Williams have been arrested in the Third District, charged with attempting to garrote Louis Phillips. Nelson was arrested as principal and Williams as accessory.

Corporal Flannigan reports that at 4:45 P. M. yesterday, at the corner of Liberty and Lafayette streets, Dan Phillips, a colored man, employed in hauling a load of cotton, fell off from his float and broke one of his legs. He was conveyed to the Marine Hospital.

Cuthbert H. Slocomb was severely injured on lower Canal street yesterday, while driving out with a friend in his buggy. In nearing a cart driven by a colored man, the cart-horse shied, bringing the cart in collision with Mr. Slocomb's buggy, smashing it to pieces and throwing its occupants violently out. Mr. Slocomb was severely hurt in the leg, face and head, and had to be carried to a house near by; his companion fell on his hands and knees, and, though considerably bruised, escaped any serious injury.

EFFECT OF OUR INSTITUTIONS.—There are 70,000 Chinamen in this country, principally in California, whose numbers, wealth and ability are securing increasing toleration and respect. At the dinner given there to the Chinese embassy, six of the wealthiest merchants of San Francisco, who had imbibed the spirit of personal equality and independence characteristic of our people, refused to attend until they were assured that the Mandarins would receive them as equals, and not demand the prostration that Chinese etiquette requires to be paid to government officials.

Up to Wednesday night the weather was beautiful—cool and very favorable to the works of the field. Thursday morning opened with rain, and one of the heaviest showers seen here for many a day fell at half-past ten o'clock. The weather up to this writing continues mild, cloudy and damp. It is to be hoped that it will not continue long. Most of the sugar planters have not finished their grinding, and should warm and damp weather continue for many days they will no doubt lose a portion of their cane. Up to this time no season or weather could have been more favorable for them. The cane has yielded, as a general average, over two hogsheads to the acre, and the quality of the sugar has never been better.—Iberville South.

CHICAGO, December 9.—In Chicago this morning the thermometer stood at four degrees below zero.

PEORIA, Ill., December 9.—The thermometer this morning indicated twelve degrees below zero. It has abated but little since. The lake is covered with skaters, though the intense cold renders skating rather uncomfortable.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., December 9.—Severe cold has succeeded the heavy fall of snow on Sunday and Monday. This morning at dawn the thermometer fell to four degrees below zero.

ST. JOSEPH, December 9.—The weather today has been cold. The thermometer was at zero. The river is giving every indication of closing soon. To-night the heavens protend more snow.

CAIRO, December 9.—The weather has been clear. Mercury thirty-four degrees.

NASHVILLE, December 9.—The weather has been clear. It is freezing.

MEMPHIS, December 9.—The weather has been clear and cold.

HOW TO COURT IN CHURCH.—A young gentleman happening to sit at church in a pew adjoining one in which sat a young lady for whom he had conceived a sudden and violent attachment, was desirous of entering into a courtship on the spot, but the place not being suitable for a formal declaration, the case suggested the following plan. He politely handed his fair neighbor a Bible, opened, with a pin stuck in the following text: Second Epistle of St. John, verse five—"And now I beseech thee, not as though I wrote a new commandment unto thee, but that which we had from the beginning, that we love one another."

She returned it, pointing to the second chapter of Ruth, tenth verse: "Then she fell on her face, and bowed herself to the ground, and said to him: Why have I found grace in thine eyes, seeing I am a stranger?"

He returned the book, pointing to the thirteenth chapter of Third Epistle of St. John: "Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with pen and ink, but I trust shortly to come unto you and speak face to face, that our joy may be full."

From the above interview a marriage took place the ensuing week.

THE RECORD OF A BRAVE SOLDIER.—The following is the war record of Captain John G. B. Adams, of Lynn, elected by the Electoral College of Massachusetts as messenger to convey its vote to Washington: "Enlisted as private July 26, 1861, in Company A, Nineteenth Massachusetts Regiment. Promoted to First Sergeant February, 1862. Was in all the battles of the Peninsula. Promoted to Second Lieutenant after the seven days' fight. Was at the battles of Antietam and Fredericksburg. Promoted to First Lieutenant after the battle of Fredericksburg and placed in command of Company I. Was in the battle of Chancellorsville. Was twice wounded at Gettysburg, in the hip and groin; one ball remains in his body. Was in the battle of the Wilderness, and all others of the Army of the Potomac, until June 22, 1864, when he was taken prisoner. Was in Selma, and afterward at Macon, and was one of the six hundred prisoners whom the rebels placed under fire at Charleston, remaining three months. Was then sent to Columbia, South Carolina. Escaped, traveled three hundred miles, and was recaptured when within ten miles of Sherman's army. Was exchanged March 1, 1865, and discharged July 22, 1865.

We copy the following from the New York Sun:

General Rousseau, in his report to General Grant, defends his inaction during the late election on account of the small number of his force. He consoles his military honor, however, by saying that "the United States military uniform on the persons of his officers was always protection against violence or disrespect." Why didn't he try the effect of it on the persons of his soldiers, and parade them before the Louisiana mobs? Why not have marched a bayonet with every voter until he had deposited his vote? If the uniform was so magical in its results when decorating the backs and fronts of the officers, was there not every reason to believe that it would have been respected on the men while performing an act of duty to the commonwealth?

AN ACT

To Amend and Re-enact an Act Entitled An Act Providing a Remedy against Usurpations, Intrusions Into, or the Unlawful Holding or Exercising a Public Office or Franchise in this State, approved September 8, 1868.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That the act entitled an act providing a remedy against usurpation, intrusion into, or the unlawful holding or exercising a public office or franchise in this State, approved September eight (8), eighteen hundred and sixty-eight (1868), be and the same is hereby amended and re-enacted so as to read as follows: That an action by petition may be brought before the proper District Court or Parish Court by the District Attorney or District Attorney pro tempore, and for the parish of Orleans by the Attorney General or any other person interested, in the name of the State, upon his own information or upon the information of any private party, against the party or parties offending, in the following cases:

First—When any person shall usurp intrude into or unlawfully hold or exercise any public office or franchise within this State; or

Second—When any public officer shall have done, or suffered to be done, an act which by the provisions of law shall work a forfeiture of his office; or Third—When any association or number of persons shall act within this State as a corporation without being duly incorporated.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That in the cases mentioned in the foregoing section it is hereby made the duty of the District Attorney or District Attorney pro tempore of the parish in which the case arises, and for the parish of Orleans by the Attorney General, to bring action against the offending party or parties, when so required to do.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That service shall be made in such cases as are provided for in the foregoing sections the same as in other civil suits, and the answer of the defendant shall be filed within the legal delays as in other suits; such cases to be tried by preference over all other cases, without being fixed for trial after issue joined.

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted, etc., That when an action shall be brought by virtue of the provisions of this act by the District Attorney or District Attorney pro tempore, or the Attorney General, as the case may be, on the relation or information of any person interested, the name of such person shall be joined with the State as plaintiff.

SEC. 5. Be it further enacted, etc., That whenever such action shall be brought against a person for usurping or intruding into a public office, the District Attorney or District Attorney pro tempore, or the Attorney General, as the case may be, in addition to the statement of the cause of action, may also set forth in the complaint the name of the person rightfully entitled to the office, with a statement of his right thereto, and in such case, on proof that the defendant has received fees or emoluments belonging to said office, an order may be granted by a competent court for the arrest of said defendant, and for holding him to bail, and thereupon he shall be held to bail, subject to the same rights and liabilities as in other civil actions when the defendant is subject to arrest.

SEC. 6. Be it further enacted, etc., That if the judgment be against the defendant, and rendered upon the right of the person so alleged to be entitled, and the same be in favor of such person, he shall be entitled, after taking the oath of office, and otherwise complying with the requirements of law, to take upon himself the execution of the office, and it shall be his duty immediately thereafter to demand of the defendant in the action all the books and papers pertaining to said office.

SEC. 7. Be it further enacted, etc., That if the defendant shall refuse to deliver over such books or papers upon demand, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and prosecution thereof by indictment or information, and upon conviction fined not less than two hundred dollars or imprisoned at the discretion of the court, not exceeding one year.

SEC. 8. Be it further enacted, etc., That if the judgment be rendered in favor of the person so alleged to be entitled, he may recover by action the damages which he shall have sustained by reason of the usurpation by the defendant of the office from which such defendant has been excluded.

SEC. 9. Be it further enacted, etc., That where several persons claim to be entitled to the same office or franchise one action may be brought against all such persons in the same action, in order to try their rights to such office or franchise.

SEC. 10. Be it further enacted, etc., That when defendant, whether a person or a corporation, against whom such action shall have been brought, shall be adjudged guilty of usurping, or intruding into, or unlawfully holding or exercising any office, franchise or privilege, judgment shall be rendered that such defendant be excluded from such office, franchise or privilege, and also that the plaintiff recover costs against such defendant, and such damages as are proven to have been sustained.

SEC. 11. Be it further enacted, etc., That all laws or parts of laws in this State, touching on the subject of quo warranto, conflicting directly or indirectly with any of the provisions of this act, be and the same are hereby repealed.

SEC. 12. Be it further enacted, etc., That appeals to the Supreme Court may be taken from any of the actions provided for in the foregoing sections, the same as in other cases. But all such cases shall take preference when they come before the Supreme Court over all other cases in the order of trial, and shall be made returnable to the Supreme Court, either in New Orleans or at one of its sessions in the country, on motion of either of the parties.

SEC. 13. Be it further enacted, etc., That all the cases coming under the provisions of this law may be tried before a Judge of the District in Chambers, or at a special term called by said Judge, on legal notice being given the parties interested; and if required by either party, the Judge may order a special jury, to be summoned according to law, to try such case.

SEC. 14. Be it further enacted, etc., That this act shall take effect from and after its passage.

LATEST BY TELEGRAPH.

WASHINGTON, December 14, 1868.

Senator Kellogg offered a resolution in the Senate calling upon General O. O. Howard, head of the Freedmen's Bureau, to furnish Congress with all the information in his possession, derived through the Freedmen's Bureau of Louisiana, concerning Ku-Klux outrages, murders and intimidation before and during the late election in Louisiana.

He also introduced a resolution calling for information as to the amount of public lands still belonging to the national government in the five States of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas and Florida with a view of putting them immediately into the market and selling them to loyal citizens.

He also introduced a bill granting immense tracts of land in Louisiana, to the New Orleans, Mobile and Chattanooga Railroad Company, of which Mr. Raynor of New York is President, and Hon. Oakes Ames, of Massachusetts, one of the chief stockholders.

General Butler to-day is addressing the Supreme Court in an important case, involving the power of pardon and amnesty by the President. He is being listened to by a large assemblage, including some of the ablest men of the American bar.

Mr. Sypher to-day introduced in tne House two bills of importance to the people of Louisiana, which were referred to appropriate committees; one of them provides for the issuing of the bonds of the National Govern ment for $300,000 to the Mississippi River and Lake Borgne Canal Company, of which Dr. Noyes is President and General S. L. Brown one of the chief stockholders. The other grants a large amount of public lands in the States of Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and Alabama to the New Orleans and Ship Island Canal Company, recently incorporated by an act of the Louisiana Legislature, and of which Mr. George F. Brott is President.

Hon. Frank Morey has been here. He differs with other gentlemen of Louisiana, inasmuch as he thinks the election of Congressman in the Fifth District should be considered valid. He says the Democrat who has been declared elected is ineligible, and that the next highest candidate should be admitted. This course would give Mr. Morey the seat.

On motion of Mr. Whittemore all contested elections and all matters growing out of the recent elections in the States of Louisiana, Georgia and South Carolina were referred to the Committee on Elections.

The Pesident sent to the Senate to-day several nominations, some of them supposed to refer to Louisiana offices, but they have not transpired.

Hon. J. Willis Menard is generally dissatisfied. He complains that Governor Warmoth has not sent him his credentials, and denounces the authorities in Louisiana as having concocted a "put-up job" against him. Jones, who is now quite jubilant over his own prospects for admission, says that when admitted he will vote for paying Menard mileage.

Senator Wilson, who, it is now generally admitted, will be the next Secretary of War, ridicules the idea of any men from Louisiana having credentials growing out of the late election, and is gathering up proofs furnished him by Louisianians.

He declares that soon after the fourth of March General Mower, Sickles or Reynolds will relieve General Rousseau from his present command.

The different candidates for the Secretaryship of the Treasury are now giving up the contest, convinced that E. B. Washburne is the coming man.

Telegrams received from Mr. Creecy indicate an immense amount of rottenness in the Internal Revenue ring of Louisiana. Colonel Tisdale is reported as having omitted to deposit the public moneys in his possession into the Sub-Treasury at New Orleans for the past six months; and the amount thus kept back is estimated at $175,000.

Both Secretary McCulloch and Commissioner Rollins express the most unbounded confidence in Mr. Creecy's ability and integrity, and say that if such a thing is possible, he will be able to smoke out the rascals who are defrauding the Government in Louisiana.

ROB ROY.

WASHINGTON, December 16, 1868.

The bill repealing the act prohibiting the organization of militia in the lately rebellious States is sure to pass.

Mrs. Edmondson, the New Orleans poetess, is here electioneering to secure Steedman's office for her brother, Colonel Edmondson. She is quite earnest and persuasive in her efforts, but has little chance of success.

In the Georgia case of Wimpy versus Christy, the former a Republican, and the latter a Democrat and ineligible, Governor Bullock gave the certificate of election as a Representative in Congress to Wimpy, though the latter had the largest number of votes. The House Committee on Elections has decided to sustain Governor Bullock and report in favor of Wimpy. Similar action in Louisiana would count out St. Martin and McCranie, both of whom are ineligible.

Hon. J. Willis Menard leaves here on Saturday next for New Orleans.

Colonel Simon Jones was yesterday admitted as an attorney and counsellor in the Supreme Court of the United States, and before many weeks expects to be admitted to a seat by the side of Butler in the House.

Representative Sypher has followed in the wake of Senator Kellogg and introduced a bill to remove political disabilities from a number of repentant Confederates.

A bill has been prepared and will probably pass, dividing the State of Louisiana into two Districts, and providing for two United States Courts, as formerly. The new law will assign the present District Judge to the Northern District, and leave a vacancy at New Orleans to be filled by some friend of General Grant.

ROB ROY.

WASHINGTON, December 10.—In the Supreme Court to-day argument commenced on the following confiscation cases: No. 35, United States appellants, vs. steamboat Nina Simmes; No. 44, steamboat General Beauregard appellants, vs. the United States. These cases are from New Orleans.

Mr. Elliot, of Massachusetts, succeeds Mr. Washburn as chairman of the Committee on Commerce.

Government expenses for the month of November were: Civil list, $2,852,000; interest on public debt, $24,250,000; war, $6,500,000; navy, $1,250,000; interior, $3,250,000.

General Grant is expected here to-morrow.

The Virginia election bill, as passed the House, directs a meeting of the Legislature in September.

Texas was not reached in the Senate today.

Nothing will be done regarding the Louisiana election contest until after the recess. Hill's credentials will also probably remain in the hands of the Senate Judiciary Committee until after that time.

Increase of the public debt $11,902,000 currency; in the treasury $250,000.

Compared with the October debt statement the present report shows an increase of coin bearing interest, $258,000; decrease of currency bearing interest, $185,000; decrease of matured debt not presented, $500,000; increase of debt bearing no interest, $4,000,000; coin decreased, $15,000,000; currency increased, $7,788,000; coin in the treasury, $88,500,000.

The Lighthouse Board report says particular attention has been given to ear signals as aid to navigation, and to lighthouse illuminations, with a view to their increased power and economy.

WASHINGTON, December 10.—Senate—The committee to investigate corrupt influence used to procure impeachment votes was renewed. Standing committees were appointed. No important changes. A motion to add a member to the Pacific Railroad Committee, giving the South representation on the committee, was postponed till to-morrow.

Mr. Sumner's Georgia bill was referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Drake's bill regarding General and Lieutenant-General of the army, was referred to the Military Committee.

The bill restoring the Bureau of Indian Affairs was, after a short struggle, referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs. Several Senators intimated that if the bill went into the hands of the committee it would never be heard of again.

Mr. Wilson moved to repeal the law compelling all military orders to pass through the hands of the General of the Army. Referred to the Military Committee.

Mr. Hill's credentials were referred to the Judiciary Committee, with the papers and the memorials in the case.

Mr. Rice made an effort to put on passage his bill arming the militia, but failed. It was referred to the Military Committee.

The conclusion of the President's message was then read, and the Senate adjourned to Monday.

House.—The bill authorizing the sale of Harper's Ferry passed; also, the bill selling the Chattanooga Rolling Mill to the Chattanooga Iron Company.

The bill establishing a system of national military education was tabled.

The Speaker announced the following additions to the committees: Commerce, Kellogg, of Alabama: Reconstruction, Norris, of Alabama; Military, Dewees, of North Carolina, and Sypher, of Louisiana; Freedmen's Affairs, Bowen, of South Carolina; Education and Labor, Whittemore, of South Carolina; Revolutionary Pensions, Jones, of North Carolina, Clift, of Georgia, and Blackburn, of Louisiana; Revolutionary Claims, Dockery, of North Carolina, Gass, of South Carolina, and Edwards, of Georgia; Mileage, Young, of Georgia; Enrolled Bills, Callis, of Alabama; Expenditures in State Department, Vidal, of Louisiana, Corley, of Georgia, and Bates, of Arkansas; Expenditures of Treasury Department, Lash, of North Carolina, and Tift, of Georgia; Expenditures of Navy Department, Buckley, of Alabama, and Gore, of Georgia; Expenditures Post Office Department, Newsham, of Louisiana; Expenditures of Interior Department, Pierce, of Alabama, and Prince, of Georgia; Expenditures Public Buildings, Haughery, of Alabama.

The bill relating to bridging navigable streams was argued at great length, and finally referred to the Committee on Roads and Canals.

A resolution for a recess from the twenty-third to the fifth of January was adopted.

The claim of Joseph Seager, after great effort to throw it into the Court of Claims, was referred to the Committee on Claims.

Various bills were referred and the House adjourned until Monday.

[Special Dispatch to the Missouri Democrat.]

The colored member elect from Louisiana, Mr. Menard, a young and intelligent looking man, occupied a seat on a lounge in the House, and was literally the observed of all observers. He expects his credentials in a day or two, and will present them and his claims to the House, though he really has no chance of getting a seat, as the giving of it to him would recognize the validity of the recent election in Louisiana.

[Special Dispatch to the St. Louis Republican.]

WASHINGTON, December 7.—The appearance of Menard, the colored gentleman from Louisiana, who claims a seat in the House, made vacant by the death of Colonel Mann, created a decided sensation. He was "the observed of all observers," and bore the fixed gaze of the spectators unflinchingly. He sat on a settee, umbrella in hand, for a considerable period, as if waiting for something to happen. But as it did not, he finally departed. It is thought he will not be admitted, notwithstanding his certificate of election.

About one o'clock the joint committe of Congress to wait on the President appeared to inform him that that body was ready to receive any communication from his excellency. This consisted of Senators Henderson and Dixon and Representatives Brooks, Washburne and Garfield.

Just before they were admitted Mr. Washburne remarked that he had not been in the White House before for a year. Mr. Brooks replied, "I am afraid you will be there too often after the fourth of March." This reply elicited much laughter. Mr. Washburne said he thought he would look in oftener after that time.

The President received the committee and after the usual civilities they left.

The following letter has been addressed by General Howard to the Secretary of War:

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 2, 1868.

To J. M. Schofield, Secretary of War:

SIR—I have the honor to request that this letter may be considered as supplementary to my annual report to Congress. The object of it is to request, through you, that Congress appoint a committee to make a thorough examination and report of the administration of the Bureau of Freedmen and Abandoned Lands from the twenty-eighth of May, 1865, to the fifth of December, 1868, when the Bureau proper is closed by limitation of law.

Such an examination will enable Congress and the country to ascertain the facts with regard to a work of great importance, that cost a large outlay of the public money and anxiety and labor on the part of those officeas who have endeavored conscientiously to execute the trusts committed to them—a work that claims to have been largely instrumental in carrying out the benevolent purpose of the general government toward those who were to pass suddenly from the condition of slaves to that of freedmen, endowed with the rights and privileges of citizenship.

The propriety of asking for such an examination and report will, it is believed, commend itself to your judgment as the best method of placing on record an impartial history of emancipation, its consequences and its further demands on this country.

Very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed) O. O. HOWARD,
Major General Commissioner.

The Reconstruction Committee meets to-morrow to arrange for investigations regarding Texas, Virginia, Mississippi and Georgia, involving great labor. The committee will probably make no report before recess.

WASHINGTON, December 11.—The Hous Election Committee meets on Monday to consider a Missouri contest, which will occupy the session. Next in order is the Georgia contest between Christy and Wimpey. A report on this case is improbable before recess. The Louisiana case will not be reached.

AN ACT

Defining the Duties of Notaries Public and Sheriffs for the Parish of Orleans in certain Cases.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That it shall be the duty of every Notary Public and Sheriff of the parish of Orleans, before passing any act or deed of sale, to demand a certificate from the Register of Conveyances showing that the vendor had not alienated in any other way the property about to be sold by him, said certificate to give a clear description of said property, and the fee of two dollars for said certificates each shall be paid by the vendor.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That any Notary Public or Sheriff in the parish aforesaid neglecting to procure the aforesaid certificate before passing any sale as aforesaid, shall be liable to a fine of not less than two hundred and fifty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars, and costs of court, one-half for the benefit of the complainant and the other half for the benefit of the State.

AN ACT

Supplementary to an act entitled "an act to Incorporate the New Orleans Mechanic Society," passed February seventeenth, one thousand eight hundred and twenty-one.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That the Mechanic Society for the further encouragement of industry and relief of distress, are hereby authorized to establish, in the city of New Orleans, a Savings Institute, to be styled the Mechanics' Savings Institute.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That the New Orleans Mechanic Society shall, at its regular meeting in the month of February of each year, elect twelve Trustees, to whom shall be added the President of the Society, who shall be ex-officio President of the Board, and when so elected, they are hereby constituted by this act a Board of Trustees, and shall have the entire control and management of the affairs of the savings department hereby created.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc. That the Board of Trustees shall have power to make such by-laws and regulations as may, from time to time, be found necessary, provided such by-laws or regulations are not repugnant to the provisions of this act, the Constitution and laws of this State or the United States; and they shall elect or appoint such officers and clerks as may be provided for in the by-laws, requiring from them bonds with good and sufficient security for the faithful performance of their duties, provided the Cashier shall be elected by the members of the Board. They shall have power to fill any vacancies in their Board, which may occur from death, resignation, or other cause; Provided, That in case of death or disability from any cause of the President, the presiding officer of the Mechanic society shall assume the position. The quorum for transaction of business shall consist of seven members. They shall have power to deputize an officer empowered to administer oaths in all cases where it may be required by the by-laws or regulations. They shall have power to hold and possess such real estate as may be necessary for carrying on the business of the Savings Institute, and such other real estate as may be acquired from the foreclosure of mortgage in the collection of its debts.

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted, etc., That any trustee, officer or clerk or agent of the Institute who shall approprite to his own use, or to the use of others, any money or funds or effects, of what kind soever, belonging to the Institute, shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary, at hard labor for a term not less than one year nor more than ten years, at the discretion of any court of competent jurisdiction.

SEC. 5. Be it further enacted, etc., That no trustee or other officer of the corporation shall, either directly or indirectly, borrow, nor shall the corporation loan any of the funds to any such trustee or officer as aforesaid, nor shall any funds be loaned to parties or securities furnished by or belonging to such trustee or other officer of the corporation.

SEC. 6. Be it further enacted, etc., That the said corporation shall be authorized to receive on deposit, from all persons, sums of money from one dollar upward, and to pay out the same, by check or otherwise, without the authorization of the parent or tutor of minors, or the husband of the married woman; for which sum of money interest shall be allowed in accordance with the provisions of this act and the by-laws of the Institute.

SEC. 7. Be it further enacted, etc., That the investment of the funds of the corporation shall be strictly limited to the purchases of the public debt of the United States, of the State of Louisiana, or of the city of New Orleans, contracted by authority of the Legislature of the State, and to loans secured by mortgage upon unincumbered and improved real estate within the limits of the city of New Orleans: Provided, That no loans shall be made on any bond or evidence of debt before enumerated to an amount exceeding sixty per cent of its market value, or on real estate exceeding fifty per centum on the appraised cash value of the property offered as security: Provided, That the Board of Trustees shall have the power to make temporary deposits in any of the incorporated banks of the city of New Orleans for the safe keeping of the unappropriated funds of the corporation, and to stipulate for an allowance of interest on such deposits.

SEC. 8. Be it further enacted, etc., That all pledges of bonds or other securities for loans, made under and by virtue of the preceding section, shall be made to the President or such other officer as shall, by the Board of Trustees, be thereunto appointed; and that such pledges, when by him accepted and accompanied by a delivery of the subject pledges, shall be valid as well against third persons as against all pledgers thereof.

SEC. 9. Be it further enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of the Board of Trustees to publish annually, under the affidavit of the Treasurer or Cashier, in at least one newspaper of the city of New Orleans, a full and detailed statement of the condition of the corporation, which shall be laid before the General Assembly of the State at the regular session of that body, and shall contain the amount or deposit and number of depositors; the amount invested in the public debt of the United States and of this State and of the city of New Orleans: the amount loaned on mortgage of real estate, the names of the banks in which the unappropriated funds are deposited, and all other particulars which may be requisite for the complete exposition of the affairs of the corporation.

SEC. 10. Be it further enacted, etc., That no misnomer of the corporation in any deed, gift, grant or demise, or other instrument of contract or conveyance, or by testamentary disposition, shall vitiate or defeat the same; Provided, That the corporation shall be sufficiently described to ascertain the intentions of the parties.

SEC. 11. Be it further enacted, etc., That the corporation shall be capable in law of receiving donations, bequests and legacies, whether of money or of real estate, and shall employ the rents, profits and interest of property so donated for the uses and purposes for which the corporation is by this act created.

SEC. 12. Be it further enacted, etc., That all sums deposited with the Savings Institute shall be repaid to the depositor under such regulations as the Board of Trustees shall prescribe.

SEC. 13. Be it further enacted, etc., That this act shall take effect and be in force from and after its passage.

BY THEODORE TILTON.

"Are they not all ministering spirits?"

I leaned upon a burial urn,
And thought how life is but a day,
And how the nations each in turn
Have lived and passed away.

The earth is peopled with the dead
Who live again in deathless hosts,
And come and go with noiseless tread—
A universe of ghosts.

They follow after flying ships,
They flicker through the city's marts,
They hear the cry of human lips—
The beat of human hearts.

They linger not around their tombs,
But far from church yards keep aloof,
To dwell in old familiar rooms
Beneath the household roof.

They waken men at morning light,
They cheer them in their daily care,
They bring a weary world at night
To bend the knee in prayer.

Their errand is of God assigned,
To comfort sorrow till it cease,
And in the dark and troubled mind
To light the lamp of peace.

There is a language whispered low
Whereby to mortal ears they speak
To which we answer by a glow
That kindles in the cheek.

Dear shadows, fairer than the day,
With heavenly light they wrap us round,
Wherein we walk, a gilded way,
And over holy ground.

Oh what a wondrous life is theirs!
To fling away the mortal frame,
Yet keep the human loves and cares
And yearning still the same!

Oh what a wondrous life is ours!
To dwell within this earthly range,
Yet parley with the heavenly powers—
Two worlds in interchange!

Oh balm of grief to understand
That whom our eyes behold no more
Still clasp us with as true a hand
As in the flesh before!

No longer in a gloom profound
Let memory, like a mourner craped,
Sit weeping by an empty mound
Whose captive hath escaped!

So, turning from the burial urn,
I thought how life has double worth,
If men be only wise to learn
That heaven is on the earth.

CHRISTMAS THOUGHTS.

A dreamy stillness rests upon the flocks
That now in Bethlehem's sweet vale repose;
While in majestic beauty, o'er the arch
Of blue above, in zenith brightness move
The stars, that to the waiting shepherds tell
The midnight hour is come. Yet one glows with
A splendor they have never seen before,
Though long accustomed thus the starry host
To view; and as they wonder at the sight,
And strive to comprehend its import, lo!
An angel of the Lord to them appears,
And glory from the throne eternal shines
About them, while in consternation low
They bow.
"Fear not!" the heavenly messenger
Exclaims. "Behold, good tidings now, I bring,
And all shall in the blessing share.
For unto you, in David's city, there
Is born a Savior, which is Christ, the Lord.
And this shall be a sign unto you; in
A manger cradled, shall the babe be found."
Then suddenly a multitude are with
The angel, and the hills of Bethlehem
Resound, as earth and heaven join in praise
To God: and "glory in the highest, peace
On earth, good will to men" is the refrain.
But soon this grand, celestial choir depart
On high; and the astonished shepherds stand
In rapture mute, still listening, the last
Faint echo of their song to catch.
At length they go the truth to prove of this Strange revelation. As the angel had Foretold, the babe divine they find, and bring
Their offerings of love; then lowly bend
In humble adoration to the King
Of kings.

Though centuries have passed since first
Good tidings in a Savior's name were sung,
Yet ev'ry harp in heaven's orchestra
Still vibrates with the harmony of that
Most glorious Christmas hymn. Earth, too, with each
Revolving year, by countless voices, swells
The chorus of salvation's anthem—thus
The consummation bringing of a world
To Jesus's sceptre bowing.

ONLY A BABY'S GRAVE.

Only a baby's grave!
Some foot or two, at the most,
Of star-daisied sod, yet I think that God
Knows what that little grave cost.

Only a baby's grave!
To children even so small,
That they sit there and sing—so small a thing
Seems scarcely a grave at all!

Only a baby's grave!
Strange! how we moan and fret
For a little face that was here such a space—
Oh! more strange, could we forget!

Only a baby's grave!
Did we measure grief by this,
Few tears were shed on our baby dead—
I know how they fell on this.

Only a baby's grave!
Will the little life be much
Too small a gem for His diadem,
Whose kingdom is made of such?

Only a baby's grave!
Yet often we come and sit
By the little stone and thank God to own,
We are nearer to Him for it!

A Morning with the Gamblers.

BY REV. JOHN M'CLINTOCK, D. D.

In the earlier years of my ministry I formed a special fellowship with a very intelligent and pious family. The father and mother were of the vigorous Scotch Irish stock; clear-headed and sound-hearted people. The children inherited strong health of mind and body, and were all quick witted and lively. I loved them all dearly, and came at last to make their family destinies, their joys and sorrows my own.

One of the sons, Edward, was a fine fellow of eighteen, exuberant in life and strength, but full of sweetness and good humor. Young as he was, he showed great talent for business, and was already a trusted clerk in a large mercantile house, with a liberal salary for these times.

I was called out of bed one morning, at about four o'clock, to see this young man. He was in great distress, and could hardly tell his story; but it came out at last, and was bad enough when it came. "I have been spending the night at different faro tables, and have lost about three hundred and fifty dollars."

"Whose money was it?"

"It belonged to my employer. I must go to the office this morning and account for it. What shall I do?"

I found, on questioning him, that he had been gambling for two or three months. He had begun by learning to play cards of a fellow-clerk; played at first merely for the pleasure of it, but soon found that a "small stake was necessary to give interest to the game." In short, he had gone the road which thousands have trod before him. From "innocent card playing" to betting at whist, and from the whist table to the faro bank. Of course I was very angry at the boy. But I was sorry, too, as I looked into that fair, young face, now agonized with fear and shame—sorry for him, and still more sorry for the proud father and fond mother, who must soon know of their dishonor.

But I had to brush away these emotions, and answer the practical question, "What shall I do?" It was plain that the first thing to be done was to get the money back, if possible. I dressed rapidly, went to the house of a legal friend, and woke him up. His advice was soon given. "Don't try law with these people. Go to them yourself, alone, and demand the money on the ground that they won it from a minor." I decided to try.

I confess that this decision made me nervous. I had never handled a card, had never been in a gambling house, nor spoken with a professional gambler. Moreover, it was not yet six o'clock in the morning. I went home, swallowed a cup of coffee, and set out on my strange errand.

Edward had lost seventy dollars at Franklin's gambling house; one hundred and fifty at Hodgson's, and one hundred and thirty at Dufour & Clark's. He gave me each address, street and number; my task was to go to these men, talk with them face to face, and get the money—if I could.

Franklin was my first man. It was seven A. M., when I knocked at his door, there was no bell to pull. A maid admitted me, after some parley, and led the way into a back room, where I found Franklin shaving before a little glass hung at the [illegible]. His appearance was not prepossessing; a bullet-head, covered with a heavy shock of iron gray hair, and set strongly on a pair of brawny shoulders; a bull-dog expression of face; the whole figure indicating animal force, brutality and obstinacy. His gruff "what do you want at this hour in the morning?" did not tend to reassure me. The upshot of my conference with him was a blunt refusal. "The fellow took his risk and must stand by it." With that I left him.

Hodgson was my next man. His "place of business" was shut, but a negro who was hanging about, told me where he lived, in a distant part of the city. A carriage soon set me down in front of a grocery store, with the sign "W. B. Hodgson, family groceries." A decent, even handsome woman, with a good honest face, presided at the desk. The place was in perfect order, with all the air of prosperous trade. She told me that Mr. Hodgson had gone down town on business. "I must see him this morning, Madame, on private business." The word "private" arrested her; an expression of fear and trouble gathered rapidly over her honest face. It was clear she was no partner in the gambling trade except to share its shame. I told my errand plainly. "You will find my husband at his place by this time, and he will give you the money."

I found Hodgson a man of five-and-thirty, or thereabouts, with the look of a well-to-do tradesman, and an open, frank expression. My story was hardly begun when he asked:

"Do you not recognize me?".

"No."

"Well," said he, "you paid me my wages many a day, when I worked in the Methodist Book Concern, and you were cashier."

He told me the steps of his fall, hoped "some day to give up this part of his business," and bore the lecture I gave him with the best possible feeling.

"As for Edward," said he, "I have often warned the boy not come into this or any such place. Here is the money," handing me out one hundred and fifty dollars.

I told him of my failure with Franklin.

"Go first to Dufour & Glark's—you will get your money there; they have no principle, but are arrant cowards. Then tell Franklin that Hodgson and Dufour have paid up, and say from me that he had better."

There was an emphasis on the had better which was full of meaning.

In five minutes I had reached Dufour's. He was not at home; but I would find him at No. 23 Jones street.

"Whose place is that?"

"O, it's a house where many of the gambling fraternity gather of a morning."

To Jones street, therefore, I went, and found No. 23—a smart, three-story brick house. The front entry was open; but the way was soon stopped by a green baize door. At my rap, it was opened a little.

"Is Mr. Dufour in?"

"Yes; up stairs."

I could see that the ground floor room was nearly full of men; and I confess to a little tremor when I was told to go a story higher. Here, again, the baize door stopped the way; but the doorkeeper called Mr. Dufour out.

"What do you want with me?" he asked.

Come down stairs; I will tell you my business below."

A little to my surprise, he put on his hat and came quietly down to the front door. Here he stopped and demanded my errand.

"Walk with me," said I.

"Not a step till you tell me what you want."

He was a young man, apparently about twenty-five, of good person and manners. I put my arm within his, and said:

"Now, if you will walk quietly with me, like a gentleman, toward your place, I will tell my errand as we go; if not, I will call the police."

My grip of his arm was pretty firm. He looked at me for a moment, and submitted.

At first he scouted my demand for a return of Edward's money, but by-and-by he softened, and told me his own history. It was the old story of temptation and weakness, with the old excuses and palliations. He gave me a half promise to reform, but would not fix a time to begin. We reached the door of his den, in the second story of a very good house. Without rapping, he walked in, and I followed. A stout, ruddy man, of thirty or so, sat at a table, writing or casting up accounts.

"Well Clark," said Dufour, "we must shell out freely for last night's work."

Clark looked up from his desk, saw me behind Dufour, and in a sudden excess of cowardly fright, ran out of the door and hurried down the stairs. In a moment more I saw him scaling the fence of the back yard. Dufour burst into a hearty laugh:

"He's off!" He took you for a judge or a policeman, to say the least. But that won't stop our settlement."

He drew out a drawer of the desk, counted the money in gold, and handed it over.

"Tell your young friend never to enter this place or any other of the sort again."

"And let me tell you," I replied, "that the place is just as bad and it will be just as fatal for you as for him."

The poor fellow seemed softened and saddened as he bade me good-bye.

It only remained to see Franklin again. I told him that the other two had disgorged. "What is that to me? You will not get nothing here." "Mr. Franklin," said I "Hodgson says that you had better pay up." He looked at me for a moment, opened his pocket-book, and counted out seventy dollars,

By ten o'clock in the morning the money was in Edward's hands, and he was spared the shame of acknowledging himself a defaulter. But I made it a condition that the facts should be made known to his parents and to his employer, with strong promises for the future. One would think such a lesson as this might have saved him. Alas! the poison was in his veins; in a few months he was "bankrupt in purse and character," and he has never risen again.

TACT IN CHRISTIAN WORK.—We use tact in business, why not use it, too, in leading others to Jesus? One friend of mine asked a watchman in New York the way to a place in the city. After receiving direction he hands him a little tract, "The way to Heaven," and, with the kindest looks and a gentlemanly manner, and with a heart burning for the salvation of souls said: "You have kindly showed me the way; now let me show you the way to a better land. We have but little time here, and must soon go there. I shall follow your directions—may you follow mine. Good evening!" and was gone. In the still, lone hours of night, the watchman stands by the lamp post reading the direction to a better land, left by the stranger. The kind face, the gentle words, that burning love for Jesus, and the title of the tract, will all burn deep, though the book were torn in fragments snd scattered to the winds.—The Christian at Work.

Christmas Gifts.

BY M. ANNESLEY.

In this season of the year we read the beautiful words of the Bible about the visit of the wise men from the far East, who brought their presents to the infant Jesus—infant King of Saints, infant King of Glory. How often we have had in our mind's eye those Magi bowing down in worship before the child Jesus, and presenting to him the precious perfumes and gold, all they could carry with them on their long journey, and were never satisfied until they were able to rest in the setting of the guiding star over the young child. They were filled with joy in finding Jesus, as all have ever since rejoiced in finding the Saviour. Presents to friends and from friends will be widely abounding, and what present have we to bring to Jesus?

Methinks I hear a young mother say, here is my darling baby; I will present it to Jesus, and lay it in his arms, not only to bless, but to keep. Who so likely to feel for him in his helpless infancy as he who consecrated that same infant helplessness in the manger at Bethlehem? And who so able to save through all the slippery paths of youth as he who was subject to his parents in Nazareth? Another is deeply questioning what he shall bring to Jesus this Christmas.

He has often felt that all he is and has he owes to the Master, but never came to the decision to give up some things in his way as hindrances in getting to the manger or the cross. Friend, this may be the last Christmas you may have an opportunity of making a present to Jesus.

Shall I tell you what he wants you to bring as your present to him, and what you may think a poor, miserable gift? It is your heart; he will gladly accept it and make it all over new, so that you will be better pleased with it than you have ever been before. Another has been waiting for success in this and that thing, and then would present a goodly offering to Jesus, but has always failed. The wise men made it their sole business in their long journey to find the infant King; nothing diverted them from their great purpose, and they were satisfied. There sits a solitary one discouraged with himself and all about him, and says in a low murmur, no one would accept of me and all I have; I am a poor miserable creature.

Yes, the infant Jesus in his humble manger, he will accept of thee as his offering, and will be well pleased with the gift.

The Christmas carol sings "Come to Jesus, come to Jesus," with all your offerings, the poorest as well as best; he will despise no gift.

"Vainly we offer each ample oblation,
Vainly with gifts would his favor secure;
Richer by far is the heart's adoration,
Dearer to God are the prayers of the poor."

Washington Correspondence.

WASHINGTON, December 15.

That remarkable document, the President's message, continues to be the subject of remark, variously expressed in merciless criticism, vehement denunciation and profound disgust; it will, therefore, be remembered. This state of things brings no pleasure to any, and generally gives rise to legislation not the most beneficial to the country. A very spirited controversy it likely to rise in both Houses of Congress on the proposed transfer of the Indian Bureau from the Interior to the War Department; that something approaching a system of treatment of those frontier rovers is a necessity beyond doubt; that system must be one of justice and humanity. No matter to which Department of Government the bureau may belong unless a course of justice is pursued: nor is the difficulty in the case traceable to anything but to the political policy heretofore pursued toward that debased people. It is not to be supposed that only speculators oppose the transfer of the Bureau; men of large views, humane sentiments and spotless integrity are found on both sides of this question; intelligent officers of the army, as well as civilians, are of opinion that the troops heretofore stationed on the plains, have been the chief cause of difficulty. It is further advisedly stated here, that honest men connected with Indian affairs have had the greatest difficulty to keep their places; and was there ever a more infamous assault made upon an upright man, than the directed against Secretary Harlan, because of the stern resistance offered by him to immense speculating schemes connected with Indian affairs. Last session instances of the most singular ex parte statements were received by members, and a deaf ear turned to the most positive proofs to contradict them.

A proposition has been made in certain quarters for the appointment of a commission invested with authority to establish some system by which the peace of the country on the Pacific coast may be secured and perpetuated. That part of the country needs a pure religion; and without it all measures adopted for its prosperity will fade like a vapor from the saphired heavens.

An effort will be made to continue the Freedman's Bureau in Virginia, Texas and Mississippi; we venture a prediction of success. As to any hopes for the success of the Virginia Constitution, adopted by the late Convention, they are regarded as idle, unless a change, the most extraordinary, has come over that infatuated people; and of such change there is now no evidence. The removal of political disabilities from Judge Moses, of South Carolina, is very cordially approved in view of his past record.

General Grant, with his staff and other officers of the army, have left to participate in the great reunion at Chicago.

The object of Mr. Caleb Cushing's mission has sprung a topic fruitful in surmise, and most provoking to the anxious heralds of confidential information.

As a chronicler of facts and rumors, there is one considerably out of the ordinary current, that must not be omitted—the name of Bishop Simpson is passing around in a Congressional circle in connection with the office of Secretary of State. Could he, with propriety, suspend his episcopal functions, or take the State Department in connection with them, a power would be wielded there before unknown.

Business was resumed on Monday by Congress, and both Houses displayed great activity; many and important changes in existing laws and branches of Government were proposed, which, if carried into effect, may or may not be of advantage—time or experience is the great vindicator of all legislative measures.

The District of Columbia is beginning to share the attention of Congress to an appropriate extent.

The navigation of the Potomac has been interrupted by the ice, and winter seems to have set in with great regularity as though it intended to stay. A novelty of some interest appeared on the streets a few days since, in the cadet gray uniform worn by the letter distributors; it is quite a safeguard against improper persons manipulating the letter boxes.

Brevet Lieutenant Colonel W. H. Manaydier, of the twelfth United States infantry, was borne to his long home on Friday last.

The late terrible disaster on the Ohio river continues to be the subject of remark and heartfelt regret; some of the details are appalling indeed; "you have talked and danced with me to-night," said a shrieking woman to a gentleman fellow-passenger, "O, can't you save me!" So true, "they take the timbrel and harp, and go quick down to the grave!" Who would not prefer the place and attitude of the thousands gathered and kneeling within the walls of the vast cathedral in South America, when upheaved by the earthquake! If calamity must overtake one, let it find him bowing in worship before God, rather than whirling in the dance.

Circumstances beyond control have hindered the details of religious interest in the churches this week. At Wesley Chapel it is still progressing.

MORDECAI.

Severe Ministerial Criticism on the Young Men's Christian Association.

On Sunday Rev. H. C. Westwood, pastor of the First Methodist Church, delivered a sermon at the Academy of Music to a large congregation. He selected as his text, "Abstain from all appearance of evil," taken from the First Epistle to the Thessalonians, fifth chapter, second verse. He commented on the evil character of egotism in high moral matters, and showed the advantages resulting from a practical recognition of the amenities of life. Incidentally he remarked, "the Christian man has just as much right to be bold as a sinner has." Soon afterward he said: "I enter my solemn protest against the dancing on this stage, on Friday evening, in connection with the tableaux. The Young Men's Christian Association had no right to introduce anything of the kind, because it had the appearance of evil. I have nothing to say against the tableaux, nothing against the Freedmen's Bureau. But when I speak against the dancing I have no doubt I express the sentiments of very many who are present here." He then considered the demoralizing influence of gambling, whether in the most trivial or most extensive, lowest manner, or in the highest, such as with stocks. He did not consider it Christian like, because a man had capital he should use it in a way oppressive to those who were not possessed of capital, or poor. He had no doubt that some who condemned stock gambling would be greatly tempted to practice it if they had the material means to do so. He criticised closely how men change base by degrees from purity until at last they are awakened to a sense of danger, but only when they are in the midst of excesses. He did not believe in tempting individual moral force; he did not think that those men were brave in individual moral force of character who went to the edge of a precipice to convince people they could go so near danger without falling over. He believed in intuitive sense of right and wrong. He believed that one reason why women were more fortunate in life than men was because they did not ponder and stop to coldly reason. They were usually impelled by impulse and acted accordingly. If they intuitively thought a thing was wrong, they condemned it as wrong; they believed it was wrong. He did not see any evil in the act of dancing, but he did see evil in the bearing it had. He closed by advocating that those who desired to be Christians should not do anything which had even the appearance of evil. The sermon was listened to throughout with great attention.

In the evening the same reverend gentleman delivered a sermon from the text, "A live dog is better than a dead lion." Incidentally, while commenting on enterprise, and after having shown how inactive wealthy men are incubus on the general welfare of society, he said "some enterprise might be shown in this city in relation to sidewalks."—Omaha Herald, December 1.

Maternal Affection.

"There is none,
In all this cold and hollow world, no fount
Of deep, strong deathless love like that Within the mother's heart."
Hemans.

What love can equal that a mother feels toward her offspring? Earth has none, no tie so tender, none so firm; none like it in intensity, and none so pure. 'Tis an emotion that springs into existence on the birth of the object; 'tis as enduring as time, and while life lasts, ceases not. With what solicitude, what tender watchfulness the mother hovers around the cradle of the sleeping infant, with hushed breathings and muffled foot-tread, lest the little slumberer should be disturbed.

Do symptoms of illness appear, 'tis the eye of the mother that first discerns them. Is the form of the beloved child made languid and attenuate by disease, who so ready to alleviate each pang—yea to bear them, if possible, as the mother? She guides the tottering steps of infancy, she firmly, but gently, directs the heedless, giddy steps of youth; and when childhood is over, when timid girlhood shall be merged into womanhood, when the youth shall become a man, when the gentle influence which once directed them seems to be withdrawn, still the mother's watchful eye is over all their ways.

Hast thou, reader, a mother? Then love her with all the intensity of thy heart; cherish her as you would some rare jewel; heed her counsels; follow her advice, and know that her timely warning may shield thee from harm. Is she old, do her feet walk the declivity that ends in the grave? Then care for her tenderly, let no word or look harrow the kind heart that o'erflows with love for thee and thine; be gentle as a child, that her dying words may be a benediction on thy head. Art thou bereft of a mother's love? Then may'st thou only mourn! Let thy falling tears bedew the sods that cover her grave; let them and her memory be ever kept green.

Tasteful Churches.

At the opening of the new Free Church at Crathie, in Scotland, Dr. Guthrie said:

I highly approve of the resolution of our friends that led them to build such a house as this; because there is no greater mistake in the world than to fancy that while God is a God of holiness, a God of power and of justice, he is not also a God of taste, just as much as he is a God of anything else that is lovely and good. And how do I prove that? you ask. I prove that by just asking you to go to the seashore and find out for me a shell that is not pretty. I prove that by just asking you to go to those meadows and find out a flower that is not pretty. Let me tell you that the flowers would have produced their kind according to the law, although they had never been painted. It is not necessary for the rose and the lily that the one should blush so beautiful a red and the other bloom as white as snow. God has made a useful flower, a useful rose and useful lily, and then painted them. It is as certain as that the Bible is true that he is a God of taste, as much as he is possessed of those other attributes. And therefore it is, I say, that I rejoice in the erection of such a building for God's service. Our old, stupid notion was that God never was so well worshiped as in an ugly house. It is a great mistake, a mistake contrary to the Bible, contrary to reason and common sense.

THE COMING GIRL.—She will vote, will be of some use in the world, will cook her own food, will earn her living, and will not die an old maid. The coming girl will not wear the Grecian bend, dance the German, ignore all possibilities of knowing how to work, will not endeavor to break the hearts of unsophisticated young men, can spell correctly, and understand English better than French; will preside with equal grace at the piano and the washboard, will spin more yarn for the house than the street, will not despise her plainly clad mother, her poor relations, or the hand of an honest worker, will wear a bonnet, speak good, plain, unlisping English, will darn her own stocking, will know how to bake doughnuts, and will not read the Ledger oftener than she does her Bible.

The coming girl will walk five miles a day, if need be, to keep her cheeks in glow, will mind her health, her physical development and her mother, will adopt a costume both sensible and conducive to comfort and health; will not confound hypocrisy and politeness, will not place lying to please instead of frankness; will have the courage to cut an unwelcome acquaintance; will not think that refinement is French duplicity, that assumed hospitality where hate dwells in the heart is better than outspoken condemnation; will not confound grace of movement with silly affectation, will not regard the end of her very being to have a beau; will not smile and smile, and be a villain still.

The coming girl will not look to Paris, but to reason for her fashions; will not aim to follow a foolish fashion because milliners and dressmakers have decreed it; will not torture her body, shrivel her soul with puerilities or ruin it with wine and pleasure. In short, the coming girl will seek to glorify her Maker and to enjoy mentally his works. Duty will be her aim and her life a living reality.—Church Union.

THE GIVEN MESSAGE.—A preacher whose name was John Fletcher went up into his pulpit one Sabbath to preach a sermon. But somehow he forgot the text and sermon. He was thinking what he should say, when all at once he thought he might say something about the three young men who were put into the fiery furnace, and how the Son of God was seen with them in the flames. He did so, and felt God so wonderfully near. The next Wednesday a woman came to see him and said, "Every word in that sermon was for me. My husband forbade me going to any religious meeting, and said he would do me harm if I did. When I came down stairs ready for church he said, 'I will heat the oven and throw you into it the moment you come home.' All the way to church I prayed that God would help me. Your sermon so encouraged me that going home my heart leaped for joy. God seemed so near. When near the house I saw the flames bursting out of the bake-oven, but I feared not to go through them into heaven. I opened the house door, and what a sight! God had brought my husband on his knees. He was praying for mercy. He caught me in his arms, begged my pardon, and has since been a broken-hearted penitent." 'Tis true, as said the dying Wesley, "The best of all is, God is with us." Let us then "walk with God." For the promise is, "Draw nigh to God, and he will draw nigh to thee."—Long's Letters to Children.

GETTING THE WORST OF IT.—"Do you want to buy any berries to-day?" said a poor little boy to me one afternoon.

I looked at the little fellow, and saw that he was poorly dressed. In his hand he held a large basket full of ripe raspberries.

I told him I should like some; and taking the basket from him, stepped into the house. He did not follow me.

"Why don't you come in and see if I measure your berries rightly?" said I. "How do you know but I may cheat you, and take more than I agreed for?"

The boy looked up at me and smiled. "I am not afraid," said he, "for you would get the worst of it, ma'am."

"Get the worst of it?" I said. "What do you mean?"

"Why, ma'am, I should only lose my berries, but you would be stealing. Don't you think that would be the worst for you?"

Let us think of this when we are tempted in any way to cheat another. How often do we hear persons pity any one who has had his property stolen from him. Yet, though a man lose all and keep honest, he is rich indeed compared with the man who has robbed him.—Winning Words.

Governor Warmoth has issued a requisition on the Governor of Mississippi for the return to this State of Bob Portwood, who murdered Jack Hubbard in Madison parish, some weeks since. Portwood is now in jail at Vicksburg.

The Sheriff will sell at auction to-morrow at ten o'clock A. M., on the premises, the contents of a distillery, situated on St. Peter street, between St. Claude and Treme, Second District. Also, all the furniture and movable effects therein contained.

Governor Warmoth has appointed the following gentlemen as administrators of the Louisiana Insane Asylum at Jackson: William H. Sterling, Willis Hamilton, John McElwe and Carols Wilcox, of West Feliciana and S. E. Beauchamp, of East Feliciana.

OUTRAGEOUS.—A letter from Henrietta L. Louis, published in the Revolution, dated New Orleans, October 14, and addressed to Madame Anthony, says: "To-day I send you a copy of the New Orleans Times which handles you roughly."

We stated on the eighth instant that Mr. P. J. Kennedy, the great levee contractor, would commence work in two or three days on Grand levee. He has done so, and his present force of about three hundred will shortly be increased to fifteen hundred men. Mr. Kennedy knows how to "push things."

The Bulletin very properly takes the ground that a fraction of one class of citizens have no right to dictate to others the manner in which they shall dispose of their property and to whom they shall rent their lands. It regards it as unlawful and subversive of personal rights.

CONTUMACIOUS OF CONGRESS. — Notwithstanding the beneficent and highly successful reconstruction measures of Congress, the Times still speaks disrespectfully of that body, and talks of "the usual diabolical persecutions of the South, heretofore the favorite amusement of Congress." Werry diabolical!

At elections held on Wednesday and Thursday last for officers and Directors of the Bank of America, the following gentlemen were chosen to serve for the ensuing year:

A. Fortier, President; J. E. Pascal, Cashier; W. B. Schmidt, M. Puig, C. J. Leeds, P. Maspero, D. Fajo, I. Scherck, J. I. Fernandez, I. Caulfield, T. W. Tilton, Aut. Giraud, J. I. Adams, Aug. Couturie.

General O. O. Howard had an interview with forty of the Methodist Episcopal clergymen of Baltimore last week, to enlist their influence in behalf of the education of the colored people in Maryland. It was stated that there are over thirty schools for colored children now closed in that State, because places to board white teachers can not be found in the neighborhood of the schoolhouses, and suitable colored teachers can not be obtained.

The Mansfield Times states that on the morning of the twenty-first ultimo, Palmer and Rutherford, confined in DeSoto parish jail for the murder of a colored man, came very near making their escape by means of instruments furnished by their friends. They were detected just in the act of making their escape. A day or two after, as the jailor was opening the door, Palmer rushed by him and made good his escape. He is still at large.

Judge Durell yesterday called the attention of the United States District Attorney to the published letter addressed to Mr. Carl Kohn, purporting so be written by a committee of three appointed by citizens in Pointe Coupee parish, warning him against renting a plantation to a colored man. The Judge directed the District Attorney to inquire into this matter, with a view to bring it before the Grand Jury under the Civil Rights bill.

A heavy seizure of tobacco was made by order of the collector of internal revenue, on Wednesday evening, upon the strength of statements made to Supervisor Creecy to the effect that the tax had not been paid upon it. The whole quantity seized amounts, to about 35,000 pounds of manufactured tobacco in plugs, owned in different quantities by Messrs. Calloway and Johnson; Simms, Levy & Denegre; J. M. Lewis & Co.; King & Meyer; H. Spiro, and G. M. Bayly & Co. Keepers have been placed in charge of the tobacco until it shall have been libelled and the matter properly investigated in court.

We have received from Quartermaster General M. C. Meigs, "Roll of Honor" No. 16, names of soldiers who died in defense of the American Union, interred in the national cemeteries and other burial places at Brookline, Cambridge and Worcester, Massachusetts; Buffalo, Chautaugua, Cypress Hills, Fort Niagara, Lockport, Lodi, Madison Barracks, Plattsburg Barracks and Rochester, New York; Gettysburg, Mercersburg, Reading, Philadelphia, Tamaqua and Upton, Pennsylvania; Brattleborough and Montpelier, Vermont; City Point, Danville, Glendale, Richmond and Yorktown, Virginia. Also volumes two and three "Statement of the disposition of some of the bodies of Union soldiers and prisoners of war whose remains have been removed to national cemeteries in the Southern and Western States."

The Lebanon, Missouri, Chronicle says this:

Hon. Michael Hahn has assumed control of the editorial department of the New Orleans REPUBLICAN, the leading Republican paper of Louisiana. Thus another shining light has been added to the newspaper fraternity. He was the first man who advocated immediate and unconditional emancipation in the columns of a newspaper in Louisiana. Success.

A Chattanooga paper states that a French gentleman, named Bryant, has purchased land on Missionary Ridge, with the intention of establishing there a colony of French wine growers. The site is said to be admirably adapted to the purpose.

OUR BRETHREN—THE INDIANS.

"I tremble for my country when I remember that God is just." Thus said Thomas Jefferson as—constrained by the irresistible weight of his own belief in the great declaration, with its solemn warning to the world of the equality of the whole race of man before the law—he meditated on all the wrong and all the villanies of our system of negro slavery. In view of the bloody issue of this wrong, well might the occupant of Monticello be deemed prophetic in the utterance which expressed his agitation of soul, were it prophecy to foretell what is only an inevitable sequence of a law—the resistless law of retribution.

But the humblest thoughtful intellect can assert the memory of Nemesis for evil deeds and the touch of her compensating hand, even after the lapse of generations as well as the mightiest and most far-seeing human mind. On the thirty-seventh anniversary of the Fourth of July, (eighteen hundred and twenty-six), on which Jefferson and John Adams died, two great armies, composed of brethren for whom the two dead patriots had labored and hoped and trusted were fighting each other in the fiercest and most deadly strife. By the going down of the sun of the Fourth of July, eighteen hundred and sixty-three, leaving darkness to vail the ensanguined field of Gettysburg, the side that wrought on those terrible summer days for the great principle proclaimed eighty-seven years before, had triumphed, and the death blow of human slavery had been struck. But in the conflict of which this battle was only a sad incident, victor as well as vanquished suffered. Of the wickedness of slavery, the whole country had been guilty, and with the close of the dies irae of retribution North, South, East and West, were bowed in lamentation and suffering.

Has this nation yet learned the lesson thus given to it? Count him its foe and worst traitor who would beguile this people from its truths or dull the ear to its warning, as one who would again bring upon his country the avenging sword of justice.

May the full meed of right, rendered to that race whose wrongs we were compelled to expiate, testify the effect of our punishment. But to go unscathed of correction, we must do right to all; are we doing it? A young American, full of pride in his country, with all its faults so full of true glory, determines to journey over its grand expanse and view it in all its beauty and grandeur of nature and art from the noble rock-edged State by the sea, which guards our most Northeastern border, to the golden shores of the Pacific, and from the pure regions of Minnesota to this sunny State by the gulf. But with all the varied objects which crowd upon his mental and physical eye, the sympathetic, free-born youth remarks with sadness, among the throngs of his own people, those who seem to represent a far different race. It is a marked and peculiar one. He encounters its solitary children in the woods by the Kennebec and Penobscot, on the borders of the Guyandotte and the Chattahoochee, in the lovely valleys of the Teche and the Alabama, and by the waters of the Dakota and the Yakima. But wherever he meets them, whether—with yet independent air—in the wilds of the far West, or among the people whose vices, so strange to his nature, have blasted their once erect forms, the young inquirer sees either the hostile, defiant glance of the Ishmaelite or the broken, crouching aspect of the Pariah. Who are these strange beings whom our roving Childe thus notes in his wanderings? They are the remnants of a mighty nation who once possessed this broad land. They are the constant witnesses of the foulest wrongs and the blackest injustice of us who now lord it over this fair heritage. And at this very time, with the judgments of the God of nations yet heavy upon the country, this Government—always of course of the superior race—now tolerates the most outrageous and shameful oppression of this "peeled and scattered" people.

The Treasury coteries, the whisky ring and other like circles are foul enough, and in due time we will do full justice to them; but the basest and meanest villainy sneaks and prowls under the sheltering wings o the "Indian Bureau."

That this contrivance, for its inability to effect the objects of its establishment, as well as for the fraud and crime it begets and conceals, shall, by the will of an indignant, humane, though thoughtless people, cease to exist ere many moons, let us hope and believe. Doubtless, however natural the retaliation of the aborigines for the wrongs they have suffered from us—always of course, the superior race—it must be firmly repressed and peace established on our borders. But we are sure that by far the most of Indian hostility and its consequent acts are the result of the outrageous impositions of wicked and corrupt men—always, of course, of the superior race—under the civil administration of Indian affairs.

Read the graphic reports of General Sherman and others, which do credit to their humanity as well as prove their sound judgment, and from them note the real causes of our Indian troubles. They declare that of the many millions annually appropriated to the Indians, as their right, they only receive a small share. More than this, these distinguished officers place the responsibility of all their disturbances, massacres and raids upon the swarm of scoundrelly, thieving, loafing whites connected, either officially or unofficially, with the "Indian Bureau." Many of these, broken down at home, have gone to the border to thrive and flourish in any way possible. But to the natural greed of gain, which this class possesses, is added that damnably mean feeling of superiority, which prompts them to ill-treat the Indian because he is an Indian. Just as in this region, aye, and elsewhere—in the North as well as the South—the assassin, the heartless corrupter of innocence, the defaulter and the robber are quick to abuse a decent member of the African race, because he is an African, so the shameless debauchee, the detected embezzler and the profligate, outlawed from decent society to the frontiers, proudly considers the lone Indian, whose fathers would have spurned his presence, as a fit subject for his contempt and abuse. General Grant has repeatedly recommended the transfer of Indian affairs to the War Department. We believe this to be right, and we earnestly entreat the representatives of the people, who meet at Washington, in the coming week, to speedily take measures—without fear or favor—to accomplish this necessary action.

With all our other duties, let us do right and justice in this matter ere it be too late—ere the last representative of a race fast passing away shall cease from the land.

Let the red man, ere his people shall all be gathered to the happy hunting grounds, cease to curse a race, which, through ages of oppression and feudal wrong, has spared not its own color more than races of a darker hue, as the remnant of his people tell their children of the late returning justice of the white man.

[From the New Orleans Republican.]

Bigney has a long explanatory article in this morning's Times concerning the battle-flag which he presented to Jordan's band of "dusky heroes." The account is long and circumstantial, leaving out, however, many important circumstances. He complains very much of us for "amplification" and also for not coming to time to assist him on that occasion, which he attributes to our want of readiness to meet his "dusky heroes" as "men and brothers." We acknowledge the corn so far as it may tend to show that we have never been fast enough to "keep step" to Bigney's circumgyrations. Bigney belonged to that famous school of antebellum patriots who parroted Unionism till the Union was in danger. He was the author of "Keep step to the music of the Union," but no sooner was the Union in danger than he seemed beset with a terror that his previous shining patriotism would be misunderstood. Accordingly, he ceased to pipe his Union music, and fell to setting examples of Confederate heroism worthy the inspired pen of a Homer to delineate, but which now he accuses us of "amplification" of. We deny the charge; we have not half celebrated the achievements of his tongue and lyre.

Not satisfied with his own heroic performances, he abuses us for falling short of his example and not coming to time. The Times man is difficult to satisfy. What would he have us do? One day he finds fault with us for failing to keep the step, when the fact was that he had ceased to pipe the music. Another day he takes the other tack, and accuses us having fallen a victim of his example.

The truth is, he is hard to please. We might, on the other hand, accuse him of "amplification," but we do not; for the fact is, we rather like it. He has amplified vastly on what he has been pleased to term a bowie-knife, a rapier, a sword and a dagger, which he has held, like the sword of Damocles, over our poor head, and flourished like an uplifted dagger before our eyes, until we thought Durant's phantom dagger, or something of the sort, was after us for sure.

Now we are not going to go into a long explanation like Bigney, and try to dodge the point. The truth is Bigney's story of us has its foundation in fact, and that is a great deal more than can be said of the rest of his editorials. But he shall not say that, like him, we dodge or evade the question. On the contrary, unlike him, we shall always face the music under every circumstance that shall arise.

We were invited by a friend of ours, a Captain of the British Guards, not Baker's British Guards, but the other ones, to take a seat at his convivial board. Midway in the repast, when wine and wassail held their sway, his friends surprised him with a sword presentation. Enthused with the fire of Bigney's address to his dusky Confederate heroes, the inspiration of his example got the better of our modesty, and we were prevailed upon, "involuntarily," to make "a few remarks."

This is the famous bowie-knife and dagger of the editor of the Times and the only one we were present at the presentation of during that memorable era. We were, indeed, present and made a "few remarks." The contagious military ardor of Bigney is our only excuse. Congress has forgiven us and we throw ourselves upon an indulgent public. It may be unimportant to add that the article presented was of wood, and we and some of our friends got into sad and serious trouble, for the good captain did not take the joke kindly. He was a brave and kind-hearted fellow though, and has long since forgiven us.

But why should the Times man be expected to mention the irrelevant and unnecessary fact that the article was of wood, when that wooden-headed editor has been grinding wooden editorials to an indulgent public until he thinks himself an oracle of wisdom. "Oh, wad some power the giftie gie him to see himself as ithers see him." But that would be unkind. It would make him ridiculous in his own estimation, as he is already in that of others.

We never, like Bigney, made any hypocritical pretenses of ultra Unionism or ultra Confederateism before, since or during the war. We are not of the ultra-pretending kind. It was Bigney, who has gone through all these circumgyrations, always taking the extreme of each. When the social, anti-Butler sentiment was popular here, just after the Federal occupation, he swaggered in the company of safe friends over a matter of $1500 in Confederate money, which he showed around, saying it was worth more than that amount in gold and would yet bring that value. We have at hand a great deal more of his swaggering nonsense on both sides, of which we are told daily by those who have been more observant of his movements than we. But space admonishes us to close the present article.

As for ourselves we rather like this controversy, which Bigney has been keeping up at the expense of making himself perfectly ridiculous. We do not ask him to stop; go ahead; he is welcome to all the capital he can make off of us; if he keeps on we will satisfy him that he had better retire to the junk-shop business. But for the present we have only to say:

Lay on, Macduff! and damned be he Who first cries: Hold! Enough!

THE CLEMENCY BILL.

The clemency bill recently offered by Senator Kellogg in Congress embraces a large list of our citizens. Senator Kellogg has evinced in most instances a very judicious discrimination. It is a very delicate duty, at the present state of reconstruction, to select from the large list whom it has been judged best from prudential public motives to disqualify from holding office deserving exceptions for Congressional clemency, through whom to excite a proper emulation to live obediently to the national laws, and rekindle the embers of patriotism in the South. General John L. Lewis was formerly Mayor of New Orleans and in the rebellion was a Major General of Louisiana militia. He was not much of a general, however. It was chiefly in the times of the cornstalk militia, on Sundays and parade days that he flourished. He used to gallop up and down the street with General Palfrey on the fourth of July, and the prints of his horse's hoofs used to mark the parade ground of the old Place d'armes, now Jackson square, on training days and reviews. George W. Mader was honestly elected to our State Senate last spring, but some how or another was ruled out, and incumbents seated whose right to sit under the Constitutional amendment are much more doubtful than his. Ethan Allen has been long connected with the notarial business in this city; he is a quiet gentleman, and not much addicted to politics. John E. King was formerly Speaker of the House of Representatives and Secretary of State of Louisiana. He is a citizen of St. Landry and was elected to Congress in 1865, but not admitted to his seat. John W. Fairfax is a gentleman now connected with the revenue service. He is a clever writer, and has been connected with several of the press of New Orleans, lastly with the Times. Frank W. Delesdernier used to be a lumber merchant. He was formerly connected with the Democratic party, but early joined the Know-Nothing movement, and was elected an Assistant Alderman. He hails from down East, in the State of Maine, but does not rank as a carpet-bagger. James H. Wingfield, we believe, holds an important post on the Jackson railroad. He was formerly an active and very popular fireman. He deserves a great deal of credit for having killed the Know-Nothing thug, Logan, several years ago, and would be still more deserving if he would kill a few more who still infest the city.

In the war he was an officer of the Fifth Regiment which left this city, with Hon. Theo. G. Hunt as Colonel and Henry Forno as Lieutenant Colonel. Joseph P. Hornor is the senior member of the law firm of Hornor & Co., the successors of Durant & Hornor, of whom the latter was his father. He has all the vigor and empressement of his father, and is one of the most rising members of the bar. He was taken a prisoner at Port Hudson, and was severely spoken of by the street corner secesh for taking the oath of allegiance and not returning to be exchanged, which was very sensible on his part. In the celebrated Street Commissioner controversy he defended Baker and got him off, beating Alexander Walker and other legal luminaries. Philip H. Winfree was a Pointe Coupee editor, and later was an officer of the Legislature of 1865, and more recently of the New Orleans Customhouse. He has had much experience in the public employment. Emmett D. Craig is a young lawyer in Commercial place, and emanates from New Jersey. We do not know whether he is a carpet-bagger or not. Emile La Sere was once member of Congress from the First Congressional district. Later he was connected with the Tehuantepec transit business. He was a man of great energy, and used to do a great deal of the heavy political work for Slidell, in engineering the Democratic conventions before the war. The list contains some dozens of others more or less known. It is understood that Senator Kellogg has selected the names in the bill with the most scrupulous care from the mass of disfranchised with a view to the encouragement of loyalty. They all accept the civil and political equality of all men, at least so-so. If they do not, they might as well; for the civil and political equality of all men is a solemn fact.

LITERATURE OF THE SOUTH.

In contemplating the Southern portion of our Republic we are astonished to find how little it has advanced in general literature as well as in the arts and sciences. With free avenues of trade and commerce, an unrivalled climate, an abundance of wealth and all the facilities which this golden age of invention and discovery has afforded during the last half century, the South has been stationary in the march of progress. Compare her with other countries in the same latitude, such as Italy, Greece and France. Italy, four hundred years ago, was at the very zenith of opulence and enlightenment, and genius and learning were almost literally worshipped by the people. Sculpture, painting and music attained their highest perfection, and no poets ever sung in so sweet a strain as those of Italy. It is true that now she is but the semblance of what she was, yet had she possessed the military prowess of our South combined with a good government, she would at this time have been unrivalled in commercial opulence and elegant scholarship, and at the meridian of knowledge and prosperity.

The operations of the financial establishments of Southern Europe are of astounding magnitude and help to control the enlightened world while the advance of science and literature exceeds that of any other portion of the habitable world. In making this comparison it must be a source of peculiar regret to every cultivated mind that this portion of the United States is so far behind. Possessing great martial valor in common with the whole American people, with unrivalled advantages in every other respect the intellect of the men and women of the South has lain dormant and the chef d'œuvres of literature have emanated from the northern portion of the country.

In belles lettres, Kennedy, Simms, and a few others have indeed illustrated the capability of Southern intellect. Richard Henry Wilde, the sweet singer of "My Life is like the Summer Rose," and that brilliant meteor, S. S. Prentiss, also must be remembered. Although not natives—the former a scion of Erin's Isle, the latter from the cold State of Maine—yet their genius was of the South; for Wilde's poetry was fervent and thrilling, while the oratory of Prentiss was characterized by the passionate improvisation of sunny Italy. Must we not attribute this mental stagnation in the South to the prevalence of the moral mildew of slavery? Many a divine inspiration has been checked, and the ode to liberty stifled in its birth by a fear lest it might infringe upon the "peculiar institution." The orator faltered in his invocation to freedom, while the pen prompted by the outgushing of sympathy for the oppressed, was arrested lest it might uncover the odious form of that which Wesley styled the "Sum of all Villanies."

Some of the most sparkling gems of thought have been carefully culled from Southern literature and flung aside lest they might prove hurtful to the ruling power. So the public men of the South carried the same principle into all their deliberations, carefully abstaining from any sympathy with the downtrodden, whether of dusky Liberia or their white brethren of suffering Hungary. Thus many an effort to advance in literature was paralyzed and checked in its progress Slaveocracy, too, prompted idleness, that insurmountable barrier to all improvement, mental as well as physical. The wealthy planter, surrounded by serfs who anticipated every physical want, relapsed into indolence and effeminacy and allowing his talents to rust, folded his hands and closing the eyes of his mental vision passed away, leaving nothing with which to benefit the world or immortalize his own name.

But now that in the course of time this incubus is removed and thought and speech are untrammelled, we may look for an improvement in general literature as well as in every thing else which pertains to the welfare of a nation. True, we are still struggling against the evils which the late war has brought upon us—an immense expenditure, destruction of commerce, disruptions of society, and an enormous accumulation of debt; but soon, we trust, that this chaotic condition of things will be transformed, and with union in council, energy and patriotism in high places, commerce reviving, and with our national honor redeemed, the South as well as the North may stand foremost among the most enlightened and literary people of the world.

RESUMPTION OF SPECIE PAYMENTS.

Paper money is objectionable to all classes of our citizens, from the fact that it may be counterfeited without detection. Uttered by the necessities of the hour, its volume increases with the real or imaginary wants of those who may feel so secure in their financial credit as to have their promises to pay accepted by the public. Based on nothing substantial—else the necessity for its issue would not exist—paper money is bound to be sold for less than its face calls, hence whether issued by a nation, a State, a city, or an individual, it alike creates suspicion in the minds of hard money capitalists; and, unless soon withdrawn by the maker, must entail upon him bankruptcy and ruin.

The fact is notorious that what is now known in New Orleans as city money, issued during and since the war, is double in volume what the city records demand. The excess of issue has doubtless gone into the pockets of dishonest officials, but the impossibility of discriminating between the genuine and counterfeit bills throws upon the taxpayer the responsibility and loss attendant upon their redemption.

Although the State is not in a condition of equal impecuniousness, the war has caused the displacement of many of her securities. The large crops of this year will, however, give her renewed financial vitality; and the settlement of the labor question make her commercial institutions occupy the rank they held prior to the rebellion.

Various suggestions have been made as to the easiest path to reach the desired goal of specie payments. The withdrawal of the fifty dollar bill of a recent national issue, for the reason that it has been counterfeited and that none of the experts at Washington are able to correctly point out the fraudulent issue, has created among the Northern papers a spirit of discussion on this question.

The policy of the individual whose acceptances are on the market is, when in funds, to buy them in; and we hold that the plan holds good in the case of a nation. As surplus gold reaches the United States treasury, the Treasurer should spend such surplus gold in the redemption of the nation's obligations which are bearing the greatest amount of interest, and thus by a wise contraction give strength to his other outstanding securities.

It matters little which of the many courses open to the national Government be adopted so long as the taxpayers fail to comply with the legal requirements imposed upon them by the necessities of the Republic. Evasion of the payment of taxes by those who "profit by the miseries of mankind passes for a virtue." Dishonest officials are always ready to aid them for a share of their profits. Honest men—if put into office—have to contend with efforts to bribe them, and if they are greenback-proof they have too often to fight against wealthy corruption, dressed in the garb of seeming virtue. To not pay a tax on spirits or tobacco, is to rob the poor man who pays the government a license imposed to raise revenue for carrying on the government. It is to steal from an honest taxpaying neighbor just the same as if your hand was inserted in his pocket; and it requires no argument to prove that the public officer who permits the evasion of a tax is no better than the delinquent taxpayer.

[From the New Orleans Republican.]

HIRAM POWERS.

Some little indignation is manifested by certain people at the reception the New Yorkers are about giving Hiram Powers, the eminent American sculptor. One of the chief counts against Powers by "certain people," is that he dared to erase from his visitor's book at Florence the name of an individual who signed himself as hailing from the "Confederate States of America." This was at a time, we believe, when Mr. Powers was engaged upon a great national work, the statue of the Chief Magistrate of his nation—Abraham Lincoln. Whatever "certain people" may think, we think with Mr. Powers that the action of the "individual" was not only in bad taste, but, under the circumstances, contemptously insulting. Mr. Powers knew of no such nation as the Confederate States of America, but he did know that certain people had seen fit to pretend the existence of such undiscovered land, and were then in hostile array against the government of his own native country. We will not deny that we have a certain sort of admiration for the "individual." Sublime, superb impudence will always command a certain respect. It was certainly what is called cheek to introduce himself in such manner, but the brass of his friends, "certain people," in complaining of the action of Mr. Powers goes beyond all expression. A charitable construction can be placed upon Mr. "Individual's" conduct. He was perhaps, like Joey Ladle, overcome with "wapors"—whether received through the pores or convivially we are, of course, unable to state—and he may have been humoredly fond of an after-dinner joke; but those of his friends who at this time find fault with the patriotism displayed by the American artist lay themselves liable to be suspected at least of as much love, even now, for the Confederate States of America as for the United States of America.

As to the imputation cast upon Mr. Powers's courage for "prudently waiting" till his visitor had withdrawn before obliterating his name from the book, we have only to say that in the most civilized States of Europe, as in our own country in the present age, that man's reputation stands highest who endeavors to avoid quarrel rather than his who is constantly seeking it. Mr. Powers's hand has ever been more conversant with the sculptor's chisel than the combatant's knife or pistol, and every true American will applaud his conduct.

STATE LAND OFFICE.

By resolution of the last Legislature, D. H. Reese, Esq., Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands and Levees, is authorized and directed to prepare a report in detail showing the condition and disposition of the public lands of the State since the twenty-sixth day of January, 1861. To accomplish this work Mr. Reese has three clerks employed overhauling the records of the State land office. It is an undertaking of some magnitude, and when completed it is to be hoped will prove of sufficient value to more than compensate the State for the expense incurred in having the object of the resolution carried out. It is a work that might have been performed by the Register of the land office and his assistant, as the Register is required by law, we believe, to make an annual report to the Governor of the State of the condition of things connected with his office. This would have obviated the necessity of the expense of a commission for that purpose. However, we suppose the Register will be gratified to have the work thus done, providing it is well done, as it will enable him to give a full and complete report of his office and the condition and disposition of the public lands of the State since 1861 to Governor Warmoth when the Legislature comes together again in January. As a considerable amount of lands belonging to the State, donated to it by the United States, were sold after the twenty-sixth day of January, 1861, the date of the passage of the infamous ordinance of secession, and as such sales, we believe, have not been confirmed or rejected by legislative action under the reconstruction laws, it will be necessary for the Legislature to look into the subject and grant all proper and equitable relief to actual settlers on lands obtained in good faith on their part from parties then in possession of the Land Office, exercising authority under those who were in rebellion against the United States authority. Wherever it is found that purchasers of this description are in actual possession and are cultivating these lands it would seem wise and just to have their titles perfected; but where this is not the case it would be right to reject sales made in this way, and declare the land vacant. This can be done by the Legislature, and it is something that should claim its earliest attention when it meets again. The annual report that W. B. Armstrong, Esq., the present Register of the Land Office, will make to Governor Warmoth in the incoming year and the report of the Chairman of the Committee on Public Lands and Levees, it may reasonably be expected, will throw all the light necessary for legislative action on the important subject of public lands in this State.

The report of Mr. Reese will, we understand, give an abstract of the laws by which the public lands have been acquired by the State, showing by what laws the levee bonds were granted and for what purposes; also an abstract of the laws under which the lands were disposed of by the State. How much was granted for school purposes, for the Seminary of Learning, for internal improvements, for draining swamps and overflowed lands; how much has been disposed of, and the amount on hand. It will show in detail the public lands sold since the twenty-sixth January, 1861, and give an interesting history of the working of the land department in this State.

FUDGE!

The Times speaks of persons who supported the claims of their country in preference to those of rebel leaders, as "false to the people" among whom they live. Is it not time that this twaddle should cease? No one of enlarged views can pretend to maintain that the community in which a man lives has a greater claim upon his fealty than the country of which that community forms a part. As for accusing the Union men of the South of self-interested motives, is it not rather to the supporters of the rebellion that the accusation applies? Were there not thousands, aye, tens of thousands, of residents of the South who joined the rebellion solely from self-interest, and stuck to it solely from shame, who hated it most cordially from the beginning, but coolly made up their minds that it was the best policy to do as the people did, "among whom they had cast their lot," regardless of principle and patriotism, and every lofty motive that should influence a citizen? Out on such assumptions of superior virtue, such impudent self-glorification for that which is a shame! Talk of a man's supporting the rebellion from motives of pride, passion, prejudice, self-interests, flunkeyism, but do not, for decency sake, mention it as a duty. If there are people still so narrow-minded as not to know the difference between their residence and their country, let not the press confirm them in such ignorance.

[From the New Orleans Republican.]

"We (Bigney)" evidently thinks himself not a wee Bigney, for he says he feels toward us as a "lordly mastiff." Because he has written so much doggerel he considers himself a very big dog. He also complains on the score of his privacy, of our occasional use of his name, he not being an "ex-Governor and constructively an ex-Senator' like ourself. The lordly mastiff should take better care of his privacy; it is his own business if he gets up wrong end foremost and exhibits himself as he ought not to do before the public. The moral boot-leather of an offended public will be applied to him, a posteriori, if he continues in his ungracious attitude; and the same advice applies a fortiori to his well known circumsaltatory movements which he partially denies, partially attempts an explanation of; but the explanation is sleepy and prosy in its style, and not half so "robustuous" and beautiful as his poetry, for instance, the following. See Bigney's poems, page 206:

"Strength is robustuous, earthy, tyrannical,
Man has his fierceness in love as in hate,
But the true woman 's all beauty and sympathy;
Meek as a flower, she bends to her fate."

Is there not a good deal of the "fierce" and "lordly" (Bigney's words) vein in thes lines. The book is all full of brilliancies like the above; and the "lordly" vein seems to run through it. To resume: He pleads that his behavior for twenty years needs no vindication. That's so; in fact it does not admit of any; and the need is to keep quiet about it. When Bigney exhibits his clownish antics so much before the public, is it not unbecoming in him to plead privacy? He says further, that his record will not be tarnished by a comparison with ours. We don't believe it will; his is past all tarnishing; nothing could possibly tarnish it any more.

Then he talks about committing suicide like Judas, and shows that he is studying the story of Judas hanging himself. Bigney will never be hung; he has not the courage to hang himself, and the indulgent spirit of our laws will effectually interpose the plea of insanity against his getting his deserts from others.

Bigney knows so well what he would do if he got an opportunity to betray and oppress the people, that he very naturally accuses us of having done so. But as he never had and never will have the public confidence to a sufficient extent to get the chance, it is useless to discuss what he would do under the circumstances. He declares in his Sunday morning's article that he was never "seduced," even by the most wonderful considerations to do such things, and appeals to us to say whether we can truthfully assert that he was. We do not think he ever was. Bigney's idea of being led estray is as comical as getting his record tarnished. It can not be done. Besides we do not believe any one has ever felt the slightest ambition to tempt our lovely and amiable cotemporary. His course has been too tortuous to render such a thing possible.

There is a vicious bird in our midst, to describe which would stagger Agassiz himself. We will gladly send it on to him if he will promise to stuff it with bran and perch it in an ornithological case at Harvard University as a wondrous anomaly. It has long imagined itself the noble pelican, rearing from our State escutcheon in wrath at false Republicans, fluttering its vengeful wings and disclosing a remarkable capacity of pouch, to which no sufficient official crumbs having been thrown, abundant reason for its disquiet appears. Just now, abandoning for the moment the pretensions of the pelican, it stalks about upon lank moral stilts, obtrudes its neck into Democratic sanctums, and despite its general metamorphosis, has preserved, with beautiful consistency, so formidable a length of beak, sharpened with hunger, that none fail to recognize the miserable Crane. Poor bird! We devoutly wish he were a swan inasmuch as he could have his little song and then disappear—but he isn't. So grevious is his plaint, however, that we shall not be surprised if with his usual defiance of natural history he change into a very melancholy crow. His croak will be irresistibly funny. We have long wondered what is his mission in life, and have at last discovered it.

The Picayune has its eagle, let the Times have the crane surmounting its brick-pile. This post may not be very flattering to the bird, but really the suggestion is the best we can do for it. It is not our fault if the Times isn't worthier.

A sudden and violent disorder has seized on a valued contemporary—and in this fit he wars on representative men of the nation. He says, "it is now said that Grant is going to make Washburne Secretary of the Treasury. The choice is eminently fit to be made—by Grant. It is eminently unfit to be made for the country." Our valued contemporary then proceeds to institute a comparison between Washington and Grant, and Hamilton and Washburne, but not in a friendly way. He evidently don't like Grant and Washburne. Our cotemporary has no doubt read history, and recollects very well that Washington, "the father of his country," was not without his political enemies in his day who hurled their thunderbolts of detraction at him, and used every means to destroy his military and civil character. Hamilton also had his enemies, and finally fell pierced by the bullet of one of them in mortal combat. Grant and Washburne, like Washington and Hamilton, have their enemies who will see no good in them; but then their country can see good in them, and reward them for their abilities and services. This is justice

[From the New Orleans Republican ]

A prominent Radical Senator says Grant is opposed to placing military or naval officers in civil position. Perhaps Grant don't consider himself much of a military man.—Crescent.

You know very well, friend Crescent, that the people consider Grant a good military man, and good man generally. Men are so much in the habit now-a-days of over-estimating themselves, that it is a rare circumstance to find one to come up to his estimate of himself. If Grant has erred in this respect—if it be an error to underrate one's self—the error has been made manifest by the brilliant deeds performed by him in the service of his country. It is not so much the value a man places on himself as the value his countrymen place on him. If he has intrinsic worth they will find it out when they have weighed him in the public balance. General Grant has been weighed and not found wanting, as the recent verdict rendered by the American people clearly shows. President Grant, it is believed, will not be found wanting in any of those good and great qualities that make up a wise and efficient ruler of a free people. We predict his civil career will prove as glorious as his military, for he has wisdom, honesty, patriotism, patience and modesty to back him up—qualities that are seldom combined in public men in this age of vaulting ambition, selfishness and corruption.

Good citizens generally speak in terms of commendation of the recent appointment of a young colored man as notary public, and many recommend that qualified men of color seek admission to the bar. Such a suggestion will be but the forerunner of the fact, and nothing will so much tend to dispel absurd prejudices against equal civil rights as the appearance of colored men as practitioners at the bar. Let the Supreme Court see to it that it have a committee on examinations that will throw no obstacle in the way of colored applicants for admission to the Supreme Court. Let them have like privileges in the law schools. We do not know who the committee on admissions are and have no reasons to prejudge partiality on their part. But let competent colored men test the matter by application. Those who are thus qualified can apply to the committee directly, and afterward be admitted in open Supreme Court. Those who wish to prepare themselves for the bar may address themselves to the study of the text books, with or without a preceptor and with or without attending the law school.

The Times man takes up the cudgel in favor of the parties in Pointe Coupee who notified Mr. Kohn that his lease of a plantation to colored men could not be carried into effect. It also says:

The negro has in every instance been demonstrated to be too improvident and too indolent to ever make his labor remunerative, except under a more intelligent control than his own.

The Picayune and Crescent, on the other hand, disapprove of the Pointe Coupee proceedings.

It has been a sort of rule of ethics in some communities to encourage persons not of good repute to turn their attention to lawful business. But here is a place where the matter is in some doubt, for the Times says that in Pointe Coupe "there is, we are assured, no prejudice against colored men, simply because of their color, and no desire to prevent those of a good repute from engaging in any lawful business that they may feel inclined to follow."

The Times winds up by saying that "the people of Pointe Coupe can not be blamed for the action they have taken in the premises."

It has come to the knowledge of Supervisor Creecy that some worthless characters have extorted money or have made efforts to make a "raise" from the present confused and frightened whisky ring and defaulting revenue officers, on the pretence that they were friends of his or had influence over him. The victims must have been worried and green indeed to have been so easily duped.

Mr. Creecy desires all the information on this subject which can be furnished, and he will be thankful for any assistance which will enable him to prosecute and convict any persons paying or receiving money in the mannar above mentioned. He is determined to expose and punish all kinds of scoundrels within the sphere of his duties.

Plantations.

The Ouachita Telegraph reports these sales:

George Chamberlain has purchased the Dortch plantation on Bayou DeSiard, paying $10,000 for the same—an average of about twenty dollars per acre.

Messrs Hardy & T. D. Head have purchased the fine place of James Frantom, in the island, giving $6000, about twenty dollars per acre. From these sales it will be noticed that real estate is improving in value.

The Times has this report:

We understand that the plantation of Dr. Wiendahl, about forty-seven miles above the city, in the parish of St. John Baptist, was sold last week for $24,500. There was on this place a fine sugar house and a two-story dwelling. The movables and crop was sold separately. An adjoining proprietor became the purchaser. The plantation consisted of a thousand acres of land, and before the war would have brought $150,000.

The Crescent says:

Many planters in Avoyelles parish are dividing their estates into small farms, and offering to rent them to freedmen.

The Sabine Salt Mines.

The Picayune says:

We had the pleasure, yesterday, of meeting with General Price, of Missouri, the associate of Mr. Choteau, of St. Louis, in the exploitation of the great salt mines on our Southern border, and who, with that gentleman, has made several attempts to lease the road called the Opelousas railroad, with a view to its being built to connect with Houston, Texas. General Price has just arrived and comes with two objects, in view: first, to inspect the work going on at the salt mines, and, second, to make another effort to be allowed to extend the road from Brashear to the Sabine. He says he wants to save the interests of State, city and individual stockholders in the road while promoting his own, and that as he is living in a region where railroad progression is so active and well rewarded, even in a much more inhospitable climate, he can not see why this road, which may be made the most profitable one in the Union, should not be built and built as rapidly as the Union Pacific. To show how much our road to Texas is needed, he tells us that on the Union Pacific they have been carrying Texas beeves, driven to it for transportation eastward, at the rate of 48,000 per month. He thinks that such a country should have a nearer and better outlet, and so think we

ARMY REUNION.

Grand Gathering of Distinguished Soldiers.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE DIFFERENT ARMIES.

EVENING MEETING AT THE OPERA HOUSE.

Gen. Sherman's Welcome Address

Our Western exchanges bring full reports of the Army Reunion at Chicago. We present an abstract of Tuesday's reports:

CHICAGO, December 15.—Chicago is alive with soldiers to-day, and what is peculiar, all of them are officers, ranging from the general of the army down to second lieutenants; men bearing names that have become historic, and will be handed down to future generations as inseparably connected with the life of the Republic. At the hotels were located all the headquarters of the different armies, which are alive with excitement and enthusiasm. Around, and in the hotels, are great crowds of citizens desirous of paying their respects to the distinguished soldiers, and to catch a glimpse of the great leaders, Grant, Sherman, Thomas and Schofield.

At an early hour in the day the different armies gathered at the various places named for the purpose of transacting the business connected with their organization.

The army of the Ohio, at the Briggs House, organized thus:

President—Major General John M. Schofield.

Vice-Presidents—Major General George Stoneman, of New York; Major General J. D. Cox, of Ohio; Major General U. S. Pascall, of Indiana; Major General Cooper, of Tennessee; Major General G. J. Henderson, of Illinois; Major General G. S. Hartsuff, of Michigan; Colonel W. E. Hobson, of Kentucky; Colonel Stewart, of New Jersey; Colonel Thomas, of Minnesota, and Major General E. A. Burnside, of Rhode Island.

Recording Secretary—Major General J. White, of Illinois.

Corresponding Secretary—Colonel J. A. Campbell, of the District of Columbia.

Treasurer—Colonel W. W. Wheeler, of Illinois.

General Schofield, the President, then took the chair, and General Grant, Lieutenant General Sherman, Major General Thomas and all staff officers connected with them were made honorary members. The constitution and by-laws were then adopted and the society adjourned.

The army of Georgia, at the Sherman House, organized as follows:

President, Major General H. A. Slocum; Vice-President, General Jeff. C. Davis, A. S. Williams, Mower, F. W. Ward, Baird, Jackson, Carlin, Morgan, Casey and Wolcott. Corresponding Secretary, Captain R. W. Brown; Recording Secretary, Captain B. Taylor; Executive Committee, Generals Robinson, Barnum, Mitchell and Colonel S. Johns; Treasurer, General Whittlesly.

In the Army of the Tennessee General S. A. Hurlbut, after prefacing with some elegant and appropriate remarks, offered a resolution that a committee be appointed of the Army of the Tennessee to attend the inauguration of General Grant, the first commander of this army, as President of the United States on the fourth of March next, and tender fitting congratulations.

General Rogers opposed the resolution on the ground of its political bearing, and General Hurlbut defended it, insisting that it contained nothing of a political nature.

Final action on the resolution was postponed till the succeeding day.

A committee was appointed to wait on Generals Grant, Sherman and Thomas, and request them to meet the members of the rank and file of their old commands some time Tuesday.

In the army of the Cumberland, Rev. Granville Moody offered a long preamble and resolution, that

WHEREAS, The National Lincoln Monument Association of the city of Washington had adopted a design for a monument prepared by Clark Mills, which, when completed, will be unequaled as a work of art, etc.; and that,

Whereas, Among the figures already selected from the army, we are gratified to find Generals Grant, Sherman, Howard and Wadsworth; and

Whereas, The name of General George H. Thomas has been before the Board of Managers, and will be adopted at the ensuing meeting; therefore, the Army of the Cumberland

Resolve, That we approve the important enterprise; that we have learned with pleasure that an equestrian figure of General Thomas will be placed by the side of the other persons named, and that we pledge ourselves to co-operate most cheerfully with the Board of Managers in the furtherance and completion of the work.

The resolutions were read amid great applause. In this movement General Thomas was taken completely by surprise. He came forward, and with great emotion said he felt obliged for the flattering tribute. He had done nothing but his duty, and he had tried to do that with all his heart. He earnestly desired that the committee would lay the resolutions on the table. At this point Colonel Loomis, one of the Vice-Presidents, came forward, and in a ringing voice put the resolutions. With one accord the entire assemblage rose to their feet and shouted a prolonged aye, aye, that fairly shook the building.

An organization of the thirteenth army corps was commenced, Major General John A. McClernand presiding.

The organization includes all persons who ever reported to the corps as a member, as well as all the generals to whom General McClernand reported to as his superior officers. A number of officers joined the association, including General C. C. Andrews, General McClernand, General Fisk, General Ruggles and General Lippencott.

In the evening the Opera House was crowded to its utmost with the soldiers of the grand armies and citizens. Major General G. H. Thomas presided, and after music by the great Northwestern band and drum taps by Nevins, introduced Lieutenant General Sherman, who made the welcome address:

GENERAL SHERMAN'S WELCOME.

Fellow-soldiers: It is made my pleasing duty to address you this evening words of welcome for the deeds that have been spread before you. From the city and from the country, from the town and the village, you have come together, the representatives of your grand volunteer armies, which responded to the country's call in her hour of danger, and fought her battles, sometimes side by side, and sometimes far apart, yet always in unison. (Cheers).

At her bidding you returned to your homes as farmers and as mechanics, as artisans and citizens, and after a short rest you have again assembled as it were upon a pinacle to look back toward that vale wherein you struggled so long to point out to each other the spots of greatest interest, and to live over again those hours and days and months of deepest anguish or of joy. I know that you have laid aside forever the feelings of animosity and anger which you may have entertained, and that you have dropped into oblivion the little jealousies and rivalries of the hour. You now stand here with hands extended in fraternal friendship. You have gloried in the right to defend the flag of your country on land and sea. You have fought for the Union of our fathers—(Cheers)—and the flag of our whole country. (Cheers). No more self-glorification now animates you, but a just pride in your own actions, and a deep, intense love of the comrades who stood by your side in the hour of deadly strife, and shouted with you in the hour of victory. (Cheers).

Happily, my friends, you did not belong to that class of our people in whose hearts was planted from youth the pernicious doctrine of State power, and that the citizen should love a part of the country better than the whole. (Applause). You were reared in a better school, and taught to revere the constitution of your whole country, and to love the wise and genial influences under which are assured the largest measure of security and happiness consistent with the safety of the whole.

The attempt to prepare for the danger was called cowardice, and the whole civilized world was taught to believe that the broad stripes on our flag were to be trailed in the dust, the stars sunk forever from view, and that our fair fabric of union was broken up beyond recall. Our attempts to reason were laughed at; our laws subjected to scorn. The public property was seized and a war begun. Men wasted their eloquence in the vain attempt to avoid this storm. Statesmen exhausted the last peaceful remedy, and not until this time was the last arbiter resorted to. The volunteer soldier then stepped forth into the field, and offered his life and his service to defend and maintain the Government against all its enemies, and swore an oath that rebellion and anarchy should not rule this land of ours, but that liberty, justice and law should be restored to their rightful throne. (Cheers). He has kept his word, and you now behold the good ship of state again full rigged and once more on her free course toward a glorious future. You know that flag is still there. (Cheers). There has been lost not a stripe—that same flag we have followed so often in the glare of a scorching sun, by the moon's pale beams, by the light of the blazing pine torch—now waves aloft in victory and peace. Shall I not, then, claim for you who represent this ideal volunteer, the higher honor, yea, the highest honor that is conceded by mortal on earth.

You casily recall how long the war seemed to us in its progress, but how short even now, looking back on it after a period of little more than three years, how inconceivably short, then, will it appear to those who a hundred years hence will grope through the pages of its history to learn of its events, and what led five millions of people to rebel when no act of oppression or tyranny was ever alleged; we leave it to them while still in the vigor of life and health to record the parts we played in this grand drama of life, with the motives and feelings that actuated us through its various stages. Many a time and oft you have lain upon the bare ground, with no canopy above you but that of Heaven, with its host of glittering stars, and I know you have dreamed of a time to come when, seated in peace and security, surrounded by admiring friends, you would be crowned with a tiara of light such as now hangs over your heads. Accept this, then, as the fruition of your dreams, and enjoy the hour. (Cheers).

Four of your comrades, one from each of the armies specially represented here, will address you and tell you of the deeds you have done. Give them a willing and attentive ear, and when you go back to your homes tell them all that these armies, though dispersed in the flesh, yet live in the spirit, as strong and enthusiastic as they were four years ago, when in the very death grapple with the enemies of our country and civilization, and how in the name of the convention that had made these preparations, I tender to you all a cordial greeting, to the veterans of 1861, to the recruit of 1865, yea, to the convert of the very last hour of grace. In the name of the people of Chicago, who have provided the means, I bid you welcome, and assure you that a seat awaits you at every fireside, and in the name of every patriot in the land, I give you welcome, and tell you that the lightnings flash not swift enough to satisfy their yearning hearts to know what is done here to-night. The presence of the men about me, their high office, and the duties they have left to be with you here, all attest the interest and grandeur of the occasion, and in their names, too, comrades, I bid you thrice welcome. (Tremendous applause).

Addresses then followed by General Belknap, of the Army of the Tennessee; General Croft, of the Army of the Cumberland; General Cox, of the Army of the Ohio; and General Cogswell, of the Army of Georgia.

The Alaska Purchase.

A Washington special to the Times, dated yesterday, says:

The Committee on Public Expenditures had before them this morning the Alaska purchase, in pursuance of the resolution to investigate the alleged payments of money to procure the appropriation to pay the Russian Government.

Hon. R. J. Walker was examined, and testified that so far as he was advised the only money paid to advocate the appropriation was twenty-six thousand dollars paid to himself, and that after the money was received by the Russian Minister, he, Walker, advised Baron Stoeckl to pay Colonel Forney three thousand dollars in gold for his kindness in giving the use of the columns of the Chronicle to Mr. Walker, for the discussion of the subject. Colonel Forney declined to receive the money, on the ground that he was an officer of the Senate, and he, therefore, did not think it proper to take the proffered funds. Mr. Walker insisted, nevertheless, that the Chronicle publisher must have the coin, and after much persuasion by himself and Baron Stoeckl, Mr. D. C. Forney, the publisher of the paper, accepted the money.

Mr. Walker states that no intimation was given of any intention to pay anything to the Chronicle until after the appropriation was made, and the publisher in the first instance gave the use of the columns of the paper gratuitously.

Mr. W. W. Worden was examined as to the source of information upon which he based his telegram to newspapers in relation to the Alaska purchase, etc. He testified that of his knowledge he did not know of any payments of money, and from the best information he could obtain he did not believe any had been paid to newspaper men in Washington.

New Orleans and Chattanooga.

The New Orleans dispatches have informed us that the Mobile, New Orleans and Chattanooga Railroad Company have placed on exhibition in that city, maps, profiles and plans preparatory to placing the road under contract. This road, when completed, will give almost an air line from New Orleans to New York, connecting at Chattanooga with the Knoxville, East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad. Leaving New Orleans, it will touch Mobile, Chattanooga, Knoxville, Lynchburg, Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia to New York. The road must be built before the expiration of the chartered rights. Perhaps the best assurance of the certainty of its construction is found in the list of incorporators, embracing such substantial names as those of Oakes Ames, William Sprague, and other large New England capitalists. The corporation is exempt from all taxes in the State of Alabama, through which it passes, including State, county, town, city and municipal, except a State tax of three per cent on all dividends to stockholders, to be paid to the State through which the road may pass. It is also empowered to cennect and consolidate with other railroads. In view of the fact that the road at Elyton will intersect the Nashville and Montgomery Railroad, it is all important that the former road should be pushed forward to give Nashville, at the earliest moment, another outlet to the gulf, besides that contemplated by the proposed extension to Montgomery. The New Orleans road must be completed within four years, and is certainly one of the most important commercial enterprises now projected, and one in the completion and success of which Nashville and Tennessee are deeply interested. We are glad to learn the work is about to commence.—Chattanooga Republican.

A Spasm of Sense South.

A gentleman who has traveled extensively through the South, relates that on one occasion, while sitting in a promiscuous assemblage of men at Augusta, Georgia, he heard a discussion in relation to the Southern tour of John Quincy Adams last fall. They seemed to be pondering the excellent advice which Mr. Adams then gave them. One of the party said: "Adams told us some pretty strong things. They may be true—I think they are—but it was hard to take. No Black Republican would dared to have told us so in Sotuh Carolina." An old man who had sat quietly listening, here arose and addressed the one who had last spoken in the following trenchant little speech:

"My friend, you have stated the cause of all our present difficulty. Until a Black Republican, or any man, of any party, can safely and freely give his opinion and point out your faults in a respectful manner in South Carolina, or elsewhere, this country is not what it should be, nor what it will be." Perfect silence followed the old gentleman's remarks, and all present seemed to be impressed with the truth of what he had said. Let all our Southern friends "grapple to their souls with hooks of steel" the idea enunciated by this wise old gentleman; let them practice the toleration which it teaches, and they will not lack for emigrants from the North to settle their vacant acres and develop their idle resources.—Mineapolis Tribune.

Question of Contract and Repairs.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

The Alleged Damages in Docking.

Judgment for the Repairs.

In the United States Circuit Court yesterday an interesting question of contract and repairs was pronounced in the case of the Southern Dry Dock Company vs. Steamship Wm. Tabor et als.

The Judge says substantially as follows, according to the Times report:

The defendants, Hawes & Bowen, bought in February, 1866, the steamer Wm. Tabor from the United States Government.

At the time of the purchase the vessel was in good condition, with the exception that she leaked sufficiently to make it proper to have her docked and her caulking and coppering repaired, not to such an extent as to render her unseaworthy—this was required by the Board of Underwriters, and the fact of her having been in government ownership was another reason why these Underwriters would not insure her or freight upon her until she had been docked.

Her other defect was that she was badly "sagged"—that is, her bottom had become curved and bent and had sunk below its original line.

The defendants, in the beginning of March, made the usual verbal application for docking their vessel in the dock kept by the plaintiffs, at that time the only dock in this port capable of receiving and lifting a vessel of the size and weight of the Wm. Tabor.

The plaintiffs consented to hire their dock as requested; had they refused, the vessel would have been here a comparatively worthless piece of property, as they could not have employed her usefully as a commercial vessel, as the defendants would have been compelled, without insurance, to send her to some distant port for dockage.

The nature and terms of the contract between the plaintiffs and defendants are to be gathered from the testimony of many of the witnesses, all of whom agree (Williams and Foley having testified to the agreement), that in the docking (receiving and lifting the vessel and securing her on the blocks), the dockmaster had and must have the entire and absolute control of her.

The principal alterations the owners determined on making, upon acquiring the vessel, for the purpose of making her suitable and profitable to the Texas trade, was the building of a large new cabin, the work upon which was actually commenced before the application for docking.

On the fifteenth of March, the Tabor proceeded to the dock, and was taken charge of by the dock manager, Mackay, who proceeded to put her in. He made a mistake in estimating the extent and shape of the Tabor's "sagg," an extraordinary one, being of much greater size than usual, but the mistake, from the nature of the contract, must be treated as one against which the defendants were warranted.

The consequence of this mistake was, that as the dock rose out of the water, lifting the steamer, the whole weight of the vessel rested upon the blocks amidships, the blocks fore and aft being too low for the bow and stern to bear upon them. He raised the vessel higher, and her immense weight upon a single point of the dock caused a part of its frame to give way and sink. At this a second effect took place, the sinking of the dock frame lowered the blocks amidships and the vessel lowered with them, so that her ends, fore and aft, now bore upon the blocks, which had been placed at those points, and the vessel rested securely.

It has been contended that the vessel was strained and made leaky by this accident—butts were started out by the shock—but I do not find this to be the fact; on the contrary, the whole direct injury was suffered by the dock. To say the least it does not appear from all the evidence taken together that any injury whatever happened to the steamer herself by the giving way of the dock, or if there were any such injury, what it amounts to.

After the steamer, on the breaking down of the dock, went to her former mooring, Hawes and Bowen suspended the improvements previously commenced on her, discharged the workmen who were building the cabin, and this was left very far from a finished condition.

Plaintiffs proceeded to repair their dock, and they strengthened it, under inspection of experienced marine surveyors and engineers.

In the meantime the defendants elected not to dissolve their contract with plaintiffs, nor to seek dockage elsewhere, and wrote several letters desiring to be informed when the dock would be ready for the Tabor, etc., in none of which did they demand an immediate compliance nor hint an intention to claim damages for delay. On the contrary, the wording indicating a disposition to accommodate the dock company, and on one occasion, when one of the defendants was expressly interrogated if they intended to claim damages for delay, the answer implied they had no such intention.

On the first of June, 1866, the plaintiffs wrote to defendants to send the William Tabor to the dock as early to-day as you can. We shall be ready to take her up as soon as she comes alongside. On the third or fourth the Tabor was successfully docked, stripped, caulked and recoppered, and plaintiff's bill for the same in $5017 16 is proved to be correct.

The Judge now proceeds at considerable length to pass upon the probability, or whether, during the interval between the first and second docking, the Tabor could have made money, and then follows the decree that there be judgment in favor of plaintiffs for $5071 16.

THE GREAT TOBACCO SEIZURE.

A CURIOUS TRANSPORTATION BOND.

Our readers will recollect that a few days ago a large quantity of tobacco, valued at about $70,000, was illegally removed from the government bonded warehouse, No. 12, in charge of Mr. Slack, and was seized by order of Supervisor Creecy. This tobacco was withdrawn under a bond executed by John C. Newman, as principal, and Wm. Alstatt and Ernest Baschal, as sureties, in the sum of $99,310, each party justifying under oath for one half of that amount. Some curious features present themselve in connection with this transaction. The goods were bonded for transportation to San Francisco via the isthmus of Darien, a route of communication not generall known to our commercial men, by the brig Amelia from this port We understand that instead of there being any shipment by said brig, as was conditioned in the bond, the customhouse records do not even show that there was any brig Amelia at this port.

The seizure of this tobacco has created quite a commotion in the commercial circles of this city. It seems that the only way in which loss can be avoided by those interested, will be by exeuting the same sort of bond before Judge Durell, when they apply for a release of the tobacco under the libel to be filed as the bond given for the contemplated transportation. When application to bond is made, we hope Judge Durell will take into consideration the peculiar character of the case and the interests of the Government, and see that no straw bond is accepted.

Children are impartial Judges, and their judgment, as in the following case, should be heeded. A girl in a neighboring city had often heard of the fame of a popular preacher, and desired her mother to take her to church. The mother gratified her request, and when the little child was returning home she looked up and said: "Mother, I don't like the preaching of Mr. ——." "And why do you not?" "Because, mother, he speaks of God just as if he was his cousin."

MURDER ON FRANKLIN STREET.

A COLORED MAN KNOCKED DOWN.

THE MURDERER NOT KNOWN.

Post Mortem Examination.

TESTIMONY TAKEN SATURDAY

ARREST OF THE SUPPOSED MURDERER

About half-past eleven o'clock last night a colored man, Hanse Bailey, was knocked down and badly beaten on Franklin street, between Bienville and Customhouse. The weapon used was a heavy club. Bailey died this morning at half-past eight o'clock.

Dr. Bayon, city physician, held a post mortem examination Saturday on the body of Henry Bailey, the colored man killed at midnight preceding at a house on Franklin street. The following is Dr. Bayon's certificate as reported by the Crescent:

My opinion is that Henry Bailey died from the effects of a fracture of the skull, made with a blunt instrument, and having caused hemorrhage within the cranium, said fracture lying on the right side of the cranium, the right parietal bone being split to the extent of three inches, more or less.

The following is the testimony:

Josephine Coffee, colored, sworn.—Is landlady of the house where deceased died about 1 A. M. Friday. Deceased came to my door and knocked, saying, "I am dying, Joe, open the door." I opened my door, when he fell down on the gallery in front of the door. I awakened some other men who were sleeping in the house, and who picked him up and laid him on the sofa. I washed the blood off his face, and sent for the watchman. Before he came the corporal of police arrived. He got a cab, but the driver would not take Bailey for less than $2 50. Bailey did not speak at all. He was in liquor; drank very hard. I knew him in Cincinnati.

Question by juror—"When did you see him?" He came to my house about ten, and asked for a bed. He smelt of liquor when talking to me then and when he came back. The last time was very drunk. He was a very quarrelsome man when drunk. Had been put in prison several times for fighting when drunk in Cincinnati. Know nothing of his behavior in New Orleans.

Celeste Thompson, colored, sworn—Was sitting by the fire, about one, with the landlady, when deceased knocked at the door, and said, "Joe, let me in, I'm dying; and as she opened the door he fell, and she got some men to put him on the sofa. He did not speak much; but after the watchman arrived he told the latter, first, that a white man had struck him, and then that it was a colored man. He was alone when he came to the door. After his wound had been washed, witness went home. Resides next door to the house where deceased died.

Frank Williams, residing at 14 Cypress street, Fourth District, sworn—Last night, between eleven and twelve o'clock, was standing at the corner of Franklin and Bienville streets; the deceased went in to get something to drink; did not pay for his drink and they were both arguing about payment. The barkeeper took his hat and shoved the deceased out of the grocery; deceased told him he would like to have his hat and went inside for it. The barkeeper ordered him out again; the barkeeper then ran out with a club and with both hands struck deceased over the head. If I saw the man that struck the deceased I would recognize him. I did not see a knife in deceased's hands.

Thomas Welsh, keeper of a grocery store on Franklin street, between Bienville and Customhouse, was arrested Saturday morning about ten o'clock, on suspicion of being the murderer of Hanse or Henry Bailey, the colored man who was beaten with a club Friday night, and died from the effects of the blows Saturday morning.

Officers Walsh and Canonge were assigned to duty in the fourth precinct Saturday morning, and the first duty they performed was to accompany three colored women and a colored man (arrested as witnesses, who were at the house where Bailey died) to Recorder Gastinel's court. On the way the colored man stated that he could point out the man who inflicted the blows, and he said that he kept a grocery store on Franklin street. Captain Kelly subsequently went to the grocery store of Welsh, accompanied by the two officers named, and when the grocer, Welsh, was taken to the station, the colored man referred to fully identified him as the man who struck Bailey on the head, under these circumstances:

While in the grocery, Friday evening, a dispute arose between Welsh and Bailey. The latter took up a large cheese knife, which is now in possession of the officers, as if to strike at Welsh. Welsh, thereupon, struck Bailey several blows on the head with a wooden club that had an iron ferule on it.

Welsh was formerly on the police, under the military administration, and was a sergeant of the police when the administration of Mayor Monroe came into power. He was by that administration dropped from the police.

The colored man Bailey was a steamboatman, and belonged to Cincinnati, as was also the colored man who identifies the grocer as the party who struck the deceased.

JEFFERSON PARISH COURT.

Alleged Breach of Trust.

NOVEL SUIT AND EXCITING TRIAL.

THE COUNSEL DRAW REVOLVERS.

JUDGE BREUNING IMPOSES A FINE.

Last Saturday, Judge Breuning, the Parish Judge of Jefferson, had a novel and exciting case before him for trial. Major Frederick Frye, Justice of the Peace for the City of Jefferson, was arraigned on the charge of breach of trust and embezzlement. The Major was elected at the State election in April last, a Justice of the Peace, on the Democratic ticket.

He was chairman of the Board of Registrars of the parish of Jefferson, and run the machine in the interest of the Democratic party. One of his appointees, Judge Collins, of Chenerie Camandida, a Commissioner of Election for that precinct, gave vouchers to the amount of $148 to Major Frye for collection, to compensate him for services and expenses as Commissioner. Judge Collins now charges Major Frye with having received payment on those vouchers and with embezzlement of the amount named.

During the trial and investigation of the case, the evidence against the Major being pretty strong, the amiable counsel for the accused, Hon. R. King Cutler, became somewhat irritated and lost the balance of his ordinary courtesy and urbanity. Some remarks of an unpleasant character passed between the eminent gentleman named and R. L. Preston, Esq., counsel for the prosecution, which led to the drawing of revolvers and the threat that more blood would be spilled than three colored women could wash up in a day.

The scene was exciting. Judge Breuning imposed a fine of five dollars on each of the counsel, and then adjourned the court in the hope that more pacific counsels will prevail at a future time.

The Cornell University paper says that a few days ago a gentleman from Ithaca saw a farmer's boy standing by the roadside holding a horse, which he recognized. He asked the boy who was the owner of the horse, and the boy replied: "It belongs to a crazy Dutchman looking for birds' nests over yonder in the woods." The "crazy Dutchman" was Professor Louis Agassiz.

Tisdale Suspended from Office.

The Charges Against Him.

UNCLE SAM LOSES HEAVILY.

Supervisor Creecy yesterday suspended from office Colonel Eugene Tisdale, Andrew Johnson's Collector of Internal Revenue for the Third District of Louisiana. Tisdale is charged with gross neglect of duty, large frauds on the revenue, embezzlement of public money, positive and repeated violations of the law and instructions from the Treasury Department.

The amount supposed to be embezzled is about $175,000. In answer to Supervisor Creecy's dispatches to the Secretary of the Treasury setting forth the above facts, Mr. McCulloch gave instructions to prosecute Tisdale to the full extent of the law.

Tisdale used to be located in this city, and was fond of writing bad poetry for the Times. He made a pilgrimage to Washington and succeeded in getting a commission as a revenue official, since which time he has kept house in Monroe, Ouachita parish, where he has been a shining light in the Democratic party. When first appointed he was without means, but in less than two years he became the owner of much real estate in Ouachita parish, contributed liberally for Democratic torchlight processions, and on his frequent trips to New Orleans he would treat all the passengers and employes on the boats to champagne from morn till night.

But his official career is now brought to an inglorious close. Creecy, who won't be bribed, wined, dined or bullied, is after him. Honesty and fearlessness in Federal officials in this city have been so rare, that the coming among us of a man like Creecy, seems to stir up all the rascally elements of the whisky ring. There are others besides Tisdale who need looking after. Uncle Sam has been too long trifled with and swindled by his hired servants in this State, and it is high time that some of the taxes paid by our citizens should reach the public treasury. It is some consolation to know that whatever can be done to this end will be done by Supervisor Creecy.

SPECIAL OFFICER CANONGE IN COURT,

Dismissed by the Recorder.

Entering a House Without a Warrant.

Yesterday, Special Officer Canonge, of the Metropolitan Police, was examined before Recorder Gastinel on the charge of entering a house on Customhouse street without a warrant. This is the testimony:

Annie Adams—I reside on Customhouse street. On the seventh of December, at one o'clock Officer Canonge came to the door, rang the bell and asked me if I was the landlady. I answered yes, whereupon he shoved me aside and walked in. I asked him what his business was. He shoved me aside, walked in and seated himself in the parlor. He said he wanted to see me privately. I asked him what authority he had for coming into the house. He showed me his badge and said this is my authority; said there were certain complaints made against my house; said that I need not look at him in such a suspicious way. He said that the house had been indicted. He remarked, I am a little in liquor, but I know what I am doing. He talked in a harsh manner, but did not offer violence or try to get money. I keep a house of assignation.

Mr. Duffy testified—I do not know what the conversation was. I saw them talking, and it seemed to be private. Saw them walk off to an adjoining room. Do not know what conversation took place. There was no noise at all. Canonge came out when I did. Did not hear her complain about being insulted.

Mr. White testified—Mr. Duffy and I were standing on the corner when Canonge went into the house, and we went in about six minutes after. Canonge was sitting down when we went in. The lady made some remark. Do not know now what it was. I went up stairs. When I came down I found the two in a private room, together sitting on a sofa. We all left the house together.

This closed the testimony, after which the counsel for plaintiff remarked:

If your honor pleases, he rings the bell and goes into the house. After he got in what occurred? No one knows. She states that he came there under color of the law. I contend that a police officer has no right to enter this house unless he has an order of court. The Constitution of the United States, from which the Constitution of this State is framed, guarantees to every one liberty of their own house. It states that no one's premises shall be searched except with a warrant. In this case he had none. If he went there as a police officer he should have had a warrant, and not merely a badge. The idea that police officers have a right to enter any premises without a warrant is a mistake, and in doing so I say that he has committed a trespass. He was a trespasser in not having authority to enter these premises. Your honor can dispose of the case as the law requires.

The Recorder summed up the case with the following remarks:

The question is, what was his intention He was drunk, on a frolic. He went in that house as a public house. He wanted to go in. The woman did not want him in. Thereupon he uses his influence as police officer, with the idea of gaining admittance.

I am satisfied he had no intention of doing anything wrong. But I wish it to be well understood, not only for yourself, but for all the officers, that you have no right to enter any one's premises in the capacity of an officer of the law without a warrant.

DEFYING THE POLICE SUPERINTENDENT.

A Fighting Man Thrown Down Stairs.

Saturday night the Police Superintendent, Captain Cain, was at the Olympic and was there informed that a man was in the wine room, under the malign influence of benzine to such an extent that there were fears of his shooting or cutting somebody, as he was thrice armed with two derringers and a dirk cane. Captain Cain sent for him to come out to the head of the stairs, where the Superintendent of Police awaited him.

He came out, and his first salutation to the Superintendent was, "I want to slap your face." The Superintendent asked him why. He was explaining in an insulting manner, and was just on the point of making a hostile demonstration with one of his implements of fighting, when Captain Cain, who stood on the upper stair, and the fighting gentleman on the landing one step above him, grasped the fire-eater by the collar with both hands, and hurled him with railroad speed to the foot of the stairs.

The Superintendent of Police walked down and firmly held the fightist as he slowly gathered himself up and then put him into the custody of two patrolmen, who took him to the First Precinct station, where he was kept in confinement until this morning.

Then he appeared before Recorder Becker a soberer and wiser man, apologized to the Chief of Police for his conduct while under benzine influence, paid twenty-five dollars fine, gave bonds for future good behavior and departed without glory.

In consequence of a rise in freights, between Cairo and New Orleans, flour is $1 28 per barrel from Dubuque to New Orleans. Lard, bacon, etc., 64 cents per 100 pounds.

All things speak; note well the language and gather wisdom from it.

A SHINING LIGHT IN DARKNESS.

CHLOROFORMING A HOTEL KEEPER.

The Democratic Nigger.

It is the misfortune of a party that has patronage at its command to be disgraced by camp-fellowers. O. Shaw, the "Democratic nigger," who borrowed money from Rpublican members of the Legislature and Republican citizens, was one of the most pertinacious and persevering of these followers. When he could borrow no more money from Republicans, being too lazy to work, he went over, soul, body, tattered coat and toeless shoes, to the Democrats, and became one of their most efficient coadjutors in the work of attempting to convert colored voters to the Democratic faith. He has conscientious scruples against paying to his Republican victims any of the large or small amounts out of which he swindled them.

The following pleasant paragraph—especially agreeable to such Republicans as have made permanent investments by loaning small amounts of money to Mr. Farrel—we copy from the Ouachita Telegraph, with the suggestion that when he is released from Caldwell jail and this little unpleasantness, the financial operator will probably join the ranks of the Democracy and, like O. Shaw, become a leader of that party which hugs to its bosom every man who renounces Republicanism, whatever may be his offenses against law. This is what the Telegraph says:

One Farrel, a notorious Radical, was one of the Registrars appointed for the parish of Caldwell. He made himself very busy in that parish in trying to fix up things to secure a Radical success by fraud; but failing in this, he concluded to fix up things for himself. As he could not swindle the Democrats, he tried his sharpness on a Radical brother. He was not very fortunate in the selection of his victim, for, of all the shrewd fellows, who are up to dodges, Faulkner, the Radical Representative from Caldwell, is among the keenest. He is a perfect old salamander.

Faulkner keeps a hotel. Through the agency of chloroform Farrel put the gentle and unsuspecting Faulkner to sleep and lifted him out of $400. Faulkner, on recovering from his slumber, did something which he never did during the war, although he was paid to do it, and held a commission for that purpose; he actually presented a pistol at his enemy, and made him disgorge and own up. Farrel now lies in jail, and will remain there until he can find the wherewithal to appease Faulkner's anger.

RESCUE OF SHREVEPORT MURDERERS.

Sheriff Defied by Armed Band.

INTENSE EXCITEMENT THERE.

REWARD BY POLICE JURY AND SHERIFF.

The following is the copy of a telegram received by Governor Warmoth:

SHREVEPORT, December 19, 1868.

To His Excellency Governor Warmoth:

William Pittman and Heully, under sentence of imprisonment for life, pronounced this morning, for murder of Bob Watson, a colored man, were rescued by an armed crowd from the custody of the sheriff on their way to the jail after sentence. The excitement here about it is intense. The police jury offer one thousand dollars reward. Will the State offer five thousand dollars, or how much?

JOHN J. HOPE,
Sheriff Caddo Parish.

Governor Warmoth telegraphed to the Sheriff of Caddo this morning, authorizing him to offer one thousand dollars reward in behalf of the State for the arrest and conviction of the offenders.

THE METROPOLITAN POLICE CASE

Judge Cooley Before the Supreme Court.

HE IS ORDERED TO GRANT AN APPEAL.

Our readers will remember that in the case involving the constitutionality of the Metropolitan Police law, Judge Cooley rendered a lengthy decision against the constitutionality, and in order to prevent his decision from being reversed by the Supreme, or rather in order to constitute himself the Supreme Court, refused to allow an appeal from his judgement. The counsel of the Superintendent of Police went to the Supreme Court and applied for a writ of mandamus to teach Judge Cooley his duty under the law. Lengthy answer was written and elaborate argument made by Judge Cooley's attorney. But this morning the Supreme Court, through Judge Howe, rendered a sound and well considered opinion, concluding that Judge Cooley was wrong in refusing an appeal; ordering him to obey the law and grant the appeal, and condemning him to pay the cost of the mandamus suit.

BURGLARS ENTER A HOUSE.

A COURAGEOUS WOMAN SHOOTS.

THE BURGLARS RETURN THE FIRE.

About two o'clock this morning the premises of Mr. Miller, No. 253 Terpsichore street, were entered by burglars. They were discovered by Mrs. Miller, who fired two shots at them. The burglars returned the fire, but beat a hasty retreat, carrying nothing with them but five dollars in currency, which they stole. Mrs. Miller was alone in the house at the time.

DEATH BY CHARCOAL SUFFOCATION.

DISCOVERY OF LIFELESS BODIES.

John Henry and John Brown, both colored men, were found this morning nearly smothered to death at No. 201 Bienville street near Treme, and were sent to Marine Hospital. Martha Crosby, also colored, was found dead at the same place. A charcoal fire in the room is supposed to have been the cause of the death and smothering.

National banks, other than those designated as Government depositaries, are gradually withdrawing the bonds deposited by them with the Treasurer of the United States as security for public deposits. This is owing to the recent circular of instructions from Secretary McCulloch, directing collectors of internal revenue to deposit their collections with assistant treasurers and banks designated as depositaries.

The debate in the Senate, Monday, on the question of repealing the law which prevents the organization of militia in the Southern States, was generally conducted with dignity and good temper, and brought out Sawyer, of South Carolina, and Warner, of Alabama, for the first time, both of whom acquitted themselves creditably. The Republicans all favored the bill.

The Advocate for 1869.

A new volume of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE will commence January 1, 1869. It is our purpose to make it one of the best weekly religious journals in the Southwest. Primarily promoting the interest of the Church, it will still be the defender of liberty, and the educator of the freedmen. Thankful for past patronage from our friends, both in the North and in the South, we earnestly hope they will continue their subscription for another year; and we expect to add many new subscribers to our list.

But that there may be no misunderstanding in the matter, we hereby give notice, that unless otherwise informed, we shall continue to send the paper to all present subscribers, and in due time will send their bills.

It is our intention to publish the ADVOCATE in its present form and size, at three dollars per annum, and furnish such religious, literary and political matter as will best promote the present and future interests of man. Send on your names and your money.

Our Northern Subscribers.

DEAR FRIENDS: You have nobly stood by us from the beginning, and without your timely aid we could not have succeeded. You, therefore, shall share the reward for the good the ADVOCATE has done in planting our Church in the Southwest, and in otherwise aiding in the good work of forming a loyal public sentiment. The kind words you have sent us have no less cheered us than the money you have remitted, and while thanking you for both we most earnestly solicit your continued patronage for 1869. Could you know how the poor colored people took to the ADVOCATE as their banner, their defender and their teacher, we feel assured that you would not only remit your subscription of three dollars, but would remit more to send the paper to those poor freedmen, too poor to subscribe themselves. Here, then, is a golden opportunity for you to become a missionary in the South, and advance this good begun work.

Rev. Dr. Taylor, one of the secretaries of the American Bible Society has been making a southern tour in the interest of this great national institution. His stay in New Orleans was very brief, not even permitting an attendance upon the anniversary of the Southwestern society. A more general visitation of our churches and moving among our people would have been very desirable, as increasing the interest in the Bible work. We learn that Dr. Taylor was the guest of Mr. Price, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South.

GENERAL J. A. EKIN.—While in Washington lately we had the pleasure of meeting this distinguished officer of our army. He is now Acting Quartermaster General, and is held in high esteem by all who know him. Recently an official letter was published, in which he was complimented in the highest terms for his sterling integrity, and especially for his honesty in disbursing the many millions of money committed to his trust. We experienced a keen pleasure in reading these lines, and particularly so when official corruption has corrupted the whole body politic, and made it a stench in the nostrils of God and of all honest people. Abstractly, it is no special honor to a man to be honest, but it is an incomparable honor when honesty is the exception and not the rule. Then we heartily congratulate our distinguished friend and brother, and return thanks for that grace which has lifted him above his fellows and made his face to shine with the reflection of an honest heart.

Merry Christmas.

The joyous Christmas time has come again, with its gifts, its carols, its happy greetings to all; with melodies on the lip and in the heart, thrilling Christendom with precious memories of Bethlehem's babe and the angelic host which sang to the happy, wondering shepherds of Judea, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

And well, indeed, may earth's children take up and echo the angel song, for nothing of such vast import or promise ever transpired in this wondrous world as the birth of man's Redeemer, the dawning of the Christian Era.

The knell of priestly rule was struck and the doom of ritualistic service was sounded by that seraphic choir as they chanted: "A child is born, a son is given; the government shall be upon his shoulders; his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace."

Let us abandon ourselves to the rapture of the hour. Let the time past suffice for gloomy moods and sad discontents. The very children on the streets shame us into merry heartedness, and teach us to be thankful for our Father's goodness to all. Alas, many will use the occasion to abuse his gifts and violate his laws. They will make it a means of self-destruction, and in many a holiday gathering madness will rule the hour.

Sunday school children by the million will enjoy their annual festival. Trees of evergreen will bend beneath their rich burden of gifts; expectant stockings will make their mute appeals to the pockets of loving parents and friends, while dependants and subordinates of every order will hope for kindly and appreciative remembrance. In this scattering of benefits let not the ADVOCATE be forgotten; renew your subscription at once, and send one or more copies to comfort and instruct some other lover of good things.

It is a time, too, for retrospects and resolves. How about the past, and what shall be the future? No one can fail of benefit here. It is an apostolic injunction to "examine yourselves," and in the year gone by surely that stern old schoolmaster, experience, has taught us all something for our good.

In the South more than elsewhere in our country is this season observed and enjoyed. Eight days are devoted to its festivities, and it was the happy resting time of the toil-worn slave. Now the happier freedman will have an additional motive for gladness, and to welcome the Christian holiday.

We waft our hearty greeting and breathe our earnest prayer for all our friends and patrons. To them and us the past has been full of anxious fears for our country and for freedom. The future dawns with golden promise, and we are happy in our anticipations—trusting and hopeful. So let the children shout. Let the trees bend, the tables groan, all hearts be glad, and be sure that God's poor be not forgotten. Finally, to all, a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

Our Book Agents and Southern Advocates.

The subjoined letters came to hand last week unexpectedly, and as they indicate much interest in the subject under consideration, we publish them entire:

GALVESTON, December 14, 1868.

EDITOR ADVOCATE:

Sir—I have recently received from the agents of the Methodist, at Atlanta, Georgia, their circular, etc., asking us for subscribers, etc.

In it they say that they have decided to concentrate all of the Church interests in one paper, to be published at Atlanta, Georgia. I understood the General Conference to authorize the publication of three, and among the three, one at New Orleans, and supposed your paper would, under that arrangement, become official. I personally much prefer to use my little influence for your paper, unless there is some other arrangement made with you for turning over to them, etc., of which we in Texas, of course, are ignorant of. Yours truly,

GEORGE W. HONEY.

EDITOR ADVOCATE:

Sir—I have just received from our Book Agents, a circular, soliciting my aid and co-operation in establishing a church paper in Atlanta, Georgia, to be styled the Methodist Advocate.

The circular informs me, that the Methodist Advocate is to take the place of the Charleston and New Orleans Advocates, and that this plan is the result of a "consultation with those best acquainted with our work in the Southern States." What friend of our Southern work could have advised the substitution of any journal for the New Orleans ADVOCATE. I can not imagine. Surely no one who knew the Louisiana and Texas Conferences, and the work our paper has done from the first, is still doing so satisfactorily, and is to do in the future; a work for which it is so peculiarly adapted, and when, too, for its publication the Book Concern has not expended a dollar.

Six years residence here as a Methodist preacher, and three years as a presiding elder in Western Louisiana, warrants me in venturing the judgment that the success achieved here for the cause of Christ and the old Church is due to and mainly rests upon the New Orleans ADVOCATE. Our paper has been to us a banner, a voice, a defense and inspiration. It came as a heavenly gift to men who never before had a paper, a protector, a country.

The circular letter tells me further, that the Atlanta paper "can not be sustained without the united support of our Church in the several Southern States." If this is so, I fear that our Book Concern, with the great and beneficent interests involved, will have another sad failure to burden it. As for myself and the churches of my district, abandonment of the New Orleans ADVOCATE is, with our present light, impossible. At all events, we shall take no step in that direction, until we hear from you.

Yours fraternally,
R. K. DIOSSY,
Presiding Elder.

Upon resuming this important subject, we refer to a typogrpahical error in last week's article. In the fifteenth paragraph, the types make us say: "They must publish said papers for at least one full calendar year, and then, having ascertained by actual trial, that more than two thousand dollars would be required, then, and not till then, had they the right to disobey the expressed will of the General Conference." The latter clause should have read thus: "Then, and not till then, would they have the right to discontine a paper published by the expressed will of the General Conference."

It is also proper to disabuse the minds of those who have imagined that without the two thousand dollars per annum from the Agents at Cincinnati, that the New Orleans ADVOCATE can not longer be published. We are happy to inform the Church and our readers, that the New Orleans ADVOCATE is self-sustaining; and should Providence smile upon us in the future as in the past, we shall not need the two thousand dollars authorized to be paid us by the General Conference. But should a greater financial pressure come upon the South, in 1869, than we have experienced this year, we shall not hesitate to draw upon the Agents, and we feel that the next General Conference will recognize the claim as just, and will approve or disapprove of the action of the Agents as they shall have acted in the premises. We feel in honor bound to transfer the New Orleans ADVOCATE to the Book Agents, and we now assure them of our readiness to do so at once, without a dollar indebtedness on the paper, and with a very fair prospect of paying every dollar of current expenses for the coming year. If the paper is not all that they consider it should be, if at any time prior to 1872, it is suspended for lack of the two thousand dollars, they must bear the solemn responsibility before God and the Church.

We have written on this subject, because it involves a great church interest, and because we saw a sister paper—the Charleston Advocate and its noble editors, sacrificed to the shoutings of their enemies, and to the damage of our cause in South Carolina.

And it is proper for us to state that as a church paper, we are in full sympathy with the Methodist Advocate to be published at Atlanta, Georgia. Our Church should have a paper in Georgia, and were it in our power, we would gladly accept the position of corresponding editor, which Dr. Fuller was kind enough to tender us. He has our cordial sympathy in his great work, and we wish him success therein.

In the above letters are certain questions which we feel bound to answer.

1. The New Orleans ADVOCATE will be continued. We have not been requested to discontinue it, nor have we any intention to suspend its publication. Indeed, such is believed to be its importance to our work in the Southwest, that within the past week we have received letters from those high in authority in our Church, deprecating the possibility of its suspension. The New Orleans ADVOCATE is now three years old, and we hope that ten times three may be added thereunto.

2. We can not doubt that our Book Agents held a consultation on the subject, but when they state in their circular that "After consulting, as far as practicable, with those best acquainted with our work in the Southern States, and keeping in view the limit of expenditure expressly indicated by the General Conference, it is thought advisable to unite in the publication of one paper, and concentrate all our interests upon it for the present," we must also state that we were not among those who thought it "advisable" to do the thing which they have done. We expressed ourselves earnestly against the plan, and we do not betray any secrets when we state that Dr. Webster, Rev. W. C. Daily, Dr. Pearne and Rev. T. W. Lewis did the same, either at that time or on previous occasions.

Our preachers inquire as to their duty in the premises. We unhesitatingly say, that you owe allegiance first to the New Orleans ADVOCATE. Whether your influence is small or great, you are to exert it in favor of this paper, and you are authorized so to do by the action of the General Conference. We take the responsibility. When slandered by your enemies, the ADVOCATE is your defender. When anxious to promulgate a truth to arouse the Church, its columns are open to your communications. When sad and weary, far from home and friends, persecuted by relentless foes, and overcome by toils and sorrows, the ADVOCATE shall bring you good cheer, that the great Church is your defense, and that "Our God is marching on." Then carry the ADVOCATE into every home.

General Howard.

President Johnson has launched his last revengeful thunderbolt. He has stricken down in temporary disgrace a one-armed soldier of the republic. Far down in his low and bitter nature he has nursed for three years an angry purpose to strike at the victim of his displeasure when he could do so with the most destructive results. The opportunity has come, and the American Nero has added another to his long catalogue of offenses against the people of this country. To gratify his spleen he purposely sought to humble Sheridan, he wantonly aimed to disgrace Stanton, and now he has ordered that General Howard shall be mustered out of his rank as major general of volunteers and sent to his regiment.

A decent respect for the opinion of his countrymen should have induced him to defer issuing the order till after New Year, when the Freedmen's Bureau will cease to exist by the limitation of law, but Mr. Johnson's nature is too coarse to appreciate the claims of respectability.

As England has but one Howard, so there is but one American Howard. With a nature pure and simple as that of a child; with a soul as ardent and courageous as that of a hero, and a mind as clear as it is comprehensive, General Howard will live in the affections of his countrymen so long as mankind shall continue to admire personal worth, to prize loyalty and honor bravery. A soldier from religious convictions no less than from the choice of profession, General Howard fought for his country and defended his Government with a will and daring that cost him his right arm. His military record is without a stain, and reflects no less the Christian character of the man than the qualities of the true soldier. Grant, and Sherman, and Thomas each represent some great idea in generalship. So Howard illustrates the Christian soldier, and in this he stands alone in his beauty and usefulness. He fought as he prayed; he prayed as he fought.

But it is as chief of the Freedmens Bureau that he stands out most conspicuously, and for which he will hold no mean place in history. Both nature and grace conspired to adapt him for this important trust, and how he has discharged his duties the freedmen of the South are his grateful witnesses. At once sympathetic and prudent he kindly cared for the helpless, and provided for the gradual elevation of four million of emancipated slaves. The patient in the hospital has remembered him in his prayers; the laborer on the plantation has thanked God for a "friend at court;" while orphans and scholars in their asylums and schools have embalmed his name in grateful song. Such men never die. They live in character and example long after death has claimed the body and God has called home the soul.

Metropolitan Police.

That most loquacious and self-supposed Solon of the nineteenth century, Judge Cooley, has reached the end of his tether. We have a faint remembrance of this flatulent stump orator in the late Constitutional Convention, and we venture the remark, that excepting Judge Abel's and those of the exquisite Crane's, Cooley's vapid speeches have cost the State more money for printing them, than for those of any other man living or dead. By some curious freak of politics, he reached a subordinate judgeship, and has exercised his office to the great annoyance of the State. He is the judge whose decisions in the late elections practically caused the election to go by default; and in his late decision in the case of the Metropolitan Police, he has done much to disturb the tranquility of society. But Cooley has found in the Supreme Court a cooler to his Democratic ardor and personal aspirations, and our good citizens may now hope for relief from his officiousness.

It was reasonable to expect that the Democrats of New Orleans, like the Democrats of New York, would oppose the organization of a Metropolitan Police; and the bitter manner in which the Democratic press of this city has assailed this measure, does not either surprise us. But this opposition will prove powerless to repeal the law by which the present police force was created. We have no right to anticipate the forthcoming decision of the Supreme Court, and should it declare the law unconstitutional, the General Assembly, at its next session, will either remodel the bill or pass a new one, omitting the legal difficulties. If the law by which the Metropolitan Police was created, is unconstitutional, there is not a Republican in the State, who is not willing to have it repealed or amended. And if the fact that Lieutenant Governor Dunn holds two salaried offices, is the chief difficulty involved, we feel quite sure that he will cordially favor such amendments as to make the law harmonize with the constitution. But if the Democrats of New Orleans oppose the measure, because they claim it to be in conflict with chartered municipal rights, then we hope the General Assembly will sweep away the city charter, and give to New Orleans such a charter as the advanced ideas of our times demand. The history of the large cities of this country is in favor of a Metropolitan Police, and facts prove that the police of a State, including that of all the large cities, should emanate from the State Legislature, and not from municipal charters or common councils.

The present Metropolitan Police of New Orleans is not what it should be. There is a lack of that military discipline and absolute authority indispensable to an efficient police. The Commissioners should exercise a sternness of control that would carry power with it, and the Superintendent should be a man of the utmost decision and of an iron will. To our mind there has always been a lack of power at headquarters. There should be an absoluteness in the management of a police, which will command the implicit and immediate obedience of each man on the force, and which will strike terror to the hearts of thieves, assassins and all other evil doers. No policeman should be allowed to enter a saloon to drink, or be allowed to smoke, or be permitted to engage in ordinary conversation while on duty. His business is to patrol his beat in silence, watching every body and every thing. Nor should he be permitted to appear on duty without full uniform, and in a clean and soldierly appearance. At given times, a considerable portion of the whole force should be massed, taught military evolutions, so as to be able to make an assault or repel an attack, but what is most needed in our police force is to bring up the personal morale of each man. Each policeman should feel that he must do his duty to the death; to use baton and revolver when necessary; to display a dignity and a courage, and an impartiality worthy of a guardian of the lives and property of our citizens. We entertain the highest respect for a good policeman, and we are in favor of rewarding him for the faithful discharge of his duty with a higher salary than he now gets; and with medals of honor for fidelity in the discharge of his responsibilities.

Durell and his Court.

The conviction is rapidly gaining ground that the State of Louisiana should be divided into two judicial districts, and we are glad that the subject is now under advisement at Washington. It would be an immeasurable convenience to our citizens in Western Louisiana, were this proposition carried into immediate and practical effect. As it is now, Judge Durell is over-worked, and because of the immense pressure upon his Court, he finds himself inadequate to the demand. Besides this, it would be decidedly healthful for the Judge to be removed from the corrupting influences of the city to a purer residence on the upper Red River. Judges, like other men, form associations which imperceptibly weigh, even in a court of justice. Such a change would also hush the complaints which are constantly ringing in our ears, as to the manner of conducting the bankruptcy business in New Orleans. We think it eminently wise in the Hon. Mr. Wilson, of Iowa, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, in introducing in the House a resolution, instructing the Committee on the Revision of the Laws of the United States, to examine into and investigate the action of certain District Judges in appointing official general assignees, and to examine into the conduct of the latter.

The time has come for this investigation, and if conducted with energy and honesty, it will be to the honor of the State and to the interest of our citizens. Deeming this whole subject of so much importance, we respectfully request the members from Louisiana to favor both the proposed division of the State into two judicial districts and the investigation of the action of district judges in appointing assignees.

Mr. Creecy.

Whether from selfish or unselfish motives, some of our city cotemporaries have welcomed the arrival of this gentleman in flattering terms. But we have no flattering unction to offer him for his soul. Since our residence in Louisiana we have seen so many of these special agents, and who have been sent here on the old principle of "sending a thief to catch a thief," and who, when they met, lived in "sweet fellowship," that we have but little confidence in any of their successors. It has a bad look upon the face of it that Mr. Creecy receives but $2500 a year salary. Is not this a bid for official rascality? Does not Congress know that this is not equal to the salary of a first class clerk in one of our counting houses? Did Congress design that the Supervisor should accept considerations for keeping his eyes shut? We have no reason to doubt Mr. Creecy's uncorrupted and incorruptable honesty, but to live on $2500 per annum in the South he will be compelled to study the utmost economy. This smallness of salary is a temptation to an officer to steal, and should be supplemented to such a degree that the apology for official stealing may be unnecessary.

We trust Mr. Creecy is above temptation. The wine of corruption will flow freely, and any amount of money will be offered not to investigate and especially not to expose. Splendid dinners, late suppers, fine drives, and unmeasured flattery, will exert their potent influences, and we were about to say that the Supervisor is more than mortal if he does his duty.

We do not wish to discourage Mr. Creecy, but he has a "dirty job before him." There are heaps of filth in the Augean stables. Is Mr. Creecy the Hercules to clean them? If so, go ahead, sir, and we will stand by you; for we blush for humanity when we recall the long series of official plunderings practiced in this city; and although the disclosures will be a disgrace to the guilty and a dishonor to the nation, yet it were better to end the crying evil now than allow the crime to go unscathed of justice. "The way of transgressors is hard."

The Bible Society.

The Southwestern Bible Society held its nineteeth anniversary on the nineteenth instant, at the Bible House, 163 Camp street, New Orleans, and its public meeting next evening in the First Presbyterian church. Several of the city pastors were present and participated in the exercises. The inclemency of the weather prevented many friends of the Bible from attending, but the occasion was one of deep interest to all who love the work of God and desire its circulation.

The able and courteous general agent, Rev. Dr. Doremus, made the following report:

During the year two vice-presidents have died—Hon. William B. Lewis, and William Silliman, Esq., both of Louisiana.

New auxiliaries organized, 28. Whole number, 48.

Receipts, $5500, viz: from sales, contributions, rents, etc.

Bibles, etc., sent from the depository 15,000 volumes; value, $6500.

Bibles, etc., granted to the poor and to Sunday schools, 3000 volumes; value, $1300.

Families visited, 24,100; and all the asylums, hospitals and prisons accessible, and supplied.

Five parishes thoroughly, eight in part, and many villages supplied.

Sunday schools supplied gratuitously, 77.

Agents, 3, viz: the general agent and two field agents. 2 city colporteurs, 18 in the country, (15 of these voluntary).

Due the American Bible Society for Bibles, etc., $1800.

A Bloody Duel.

The Crescent recently contained the following unrebuked account of one of the most inhuman combats of which we have ever read:

The famous dueling ground on the Metairie Ridge known as "The Oaks," was the scene yesterday morning of a sanguinary duel between two young men of this city, which has rarely had its parallel in the annals of the code, either in this country or in Europe. The antagonists were, the one a native Creole of New Orleans, the other a Frenchman by birth; the provocation a blow in the face, at the hand of the Creole; the weapons were broadswords; the hour daybreak. Arrived on the field, accompanied by their seconds, the combatants stripped to the waist, and sword in hand, in the freezing air of the morning, sprung at each other like tigers. There was no hesitation or playing to try each other's skill. A few lunges and cuts were successfully parried, when suddenly an up-cut from the Frenchman's sword wounded his opponent in the right arm. The riposte from the Creole laid open the Frenchman's left cheek, laying the inside open and exposing his teeth. Nothing daunted, the wounded man stepped back, had a handkerchief bound around his face and again put himself in attitude of offense. His first lunge penetrated the breast of his antagonist between the rib and the skin, but it was made with such relentless force that it passed also through the off arm. An attempt was made at this moment by the seconds to stop the matter at that point, but the man with the handkerchief around his jaws rushed at the second who was most anxious to settle the matter, sword in hand, asservating that naught should quiet his animosity except a cut across the his throat. The battle was renewed and lasted until the Creole had received eight wounds and the other six—all severe and painful, but none, it is hoped, dangerous. Both men displayed extraordinary courage, animosity and endurance; and during the course of the bloody encounter neither was willing to give up the contest until both had to let their hands fall helpless to their sides from loss of blood and the pain of their wounds. The parties were carried home, after having their wounds dressed; and though the Creole had two more wounds, his situation was more comfortable and less critical than that of his antagonist.

Our surprise is not that two men can be found to engage in such a demon-like combat, but that a journal like the Crescent should publish such a record of horror without a rebuke. Does Colonel Nixon approve of duels? If not, how is it possible for such a high-toned journalist as he is to allow the whole community to be shocked with the above description without such a denunciation of the duello as would have doomed the duelist to public and perpetual infamy. Let the press speak out.

Prang's Chromos are said to be among the best, if not the best, in the world. They are manufactured in Boston.

Hon. J. H. Sypher.

This gentleman has delivered his maiden speech in Congress, and an eloquent one it is. The position was a trying one, but Mr. Sypher acquitted himself manfully. In noticing this speech some of our city press referred to it as sophomorical, but the following extract is concise and elegant, and gives promise that the author is destined to occupy no mean rank among Congressional orators. We have taken a deep interest in Mr. Sypher, and now feel a degree of honest pride that he is not only the first of Louisiana Congressman who has spoken for our State, but that in doing so he has spoken so well and eloquently:

WASHINGTON, December 17.—Representative Sypher's eulogy of Stevens, delivered in the House to-day, concludes:

"I pass over the period given to fostering and building up the institutions of the great commonwealth which he so highly honored, and come immediately to lay upon the grave of this great champion of freedom the grateful thanks of an emancipated race, of a disenthralled people, and of States regenerated. His name, with that of Lincoln, will ever be remembered with the warmest emotions of gratitude by this and succeeding generations of the emancipated people of America. When others now esteemed great shall be forgotten, he needs no statue of bronze, no pillar of marble, with carved inscriptions, to tell posterity his fame. The labors and achievements of his life have rendered him immortal. In the name of the loyal South, where fertile fields have been opened to free and skilled labor; in the name of toiling millions seeking homesteads; in the name of States now no longer cursed by slavery; in the name of a people struggling from abject slavery up to perfect freedom; in the name of a race once declared to be possessed of no rights which white men were bound to respect, but now clothed with the full rights of citizenship, which the whole power of the nation is pledged to defend, I thank God that Thaddeus Stevens lived, labored and triumphed."

CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS' GIFTS, in the way of magazines, papers and books, to be found at the room of that enterprising newsdealer, A. Simon, No. 85 Baronne street, near Union. Mr. Simon has about one hundred and fifty varieties of foreign and American magazines and papers. We would also state that Mr. Simon is the agent for the sale of Greeley's History of the Rebellion—the best history of the war that has been written. He is the agent also for Cruden's Cordance, a standard work, and for Woman's Work in the Late War.

AN OLD FRIEND IN A NEW DRESS.—We are pleased to announce that the Sunday School Times, of Philadelphia, so well known during the past ten years among earnest Sabbath school workers of all denominations, is to appear the first of January in a new and greatly improved form. Every subject connected with the most successful management of the Sunday school, in all its varied departments, with intelligence on the subject from different parts of the world, are found in its columns. We advise every superintendent, teacher and parent interested in the religious instruction of the young to send to the publishers for a sample copy, which can be obtained free on application.

PROF. WINCHELL.—This distinguished American scholar, now professor of geology in the Michigan State University, is writing a series of learned articles on the geological formations of our continent, which are being extensively copied in Western papers. He is also delivering scientific lectures to lyceums with great success. We could most heartily wish that our citizens would unite in an invitation to Prof. Winchell to deliver a course of scientific lectures in New Orleans. This would afford entertainment and instruction to our people during long winter evenings, and would divert public attention from places of popular and senseless amusement, and attract to those higher sources of pleasure which contribute so largely to excellence and stability of human character.

INAUGURATION SERMON.—A recent letter in the Central called public attention to the usual "inauguration ball" and the writer thereof expressed his just disapproval, and hoped that General Grant would not commence his administration in a ball room. Now we propose as a substitute for the ball an "Inauguration Sermon." From the Capitol of the nation, let the President pass to the house of God, and there from the lips of the Lord's embassador, learn the moral duties of a ruler, and be instructed in the ethics of government. This would be a suitable recognition of Jehovah as the supreme ruler of the universe, and would be in keeping with the earnest wishes of those citizens who elevated General Grant to office. And then at that very hour, say at high noon, when the President is receiving the word of the Lord, let the whole American church hold an Inauguration Prayer Meeting. Let it be done. Let the Young Men's Christian Association lead the movement.

Grocers, spice dealers and druggists should all sell Burnett's standard flavoring extracts. Demand Burnett's and you will get the best. New York depot, 592 Broadway.

We acknowledge the receipt of a copy of an elaborately written letter by J. R. G. Pitkin, Esq., of New Orleans, to General Butler, on the "Political Aspect of Louisiana." We presume a reply will be forthcoming.

Love, the toothache, a cough and tight boots are things which can not be long kept secret.

Methodist Book Store.

On the first of January, proximo, we shall open a Methodist book store at No. 203 Camp street, between Julia and St. Joseph. And here also will be the office of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, where subscriptions and advertisements will be received and where single copies of our paper may be had, as early in the week as Friday morning. The store and office will be in charge of Messrs. Spranly & Co.

It has been a part of a programme which we drew up five years ago for the planting and development of the Methodist Episcopal Church in the Southwest, to have a place in New Orleans, where the literature of our Church could be purchased; but we have not seen our way clear to do so until the present time. It is, therefore, a pleasure to announce to our members and friends, that at the "Methodist Book Store," No. 203 Camp street, they will find an excellent assortment of Bibles, hymn books, books of discipline, church records and class books, marriage certificates and certificates of church membership, Clark's and Benson's Commentaries, Wesley's and Watson's sermons, Steven's Church History, the biographies of eminent saints, and a large amount of rich and valuable miscellaneous works.

There will kept on hand Sunday school books and tune books, containtaining the best selections of the day. Officers and teachers of our Sunday schools will do well to call and purchase supplies for their schools.

A good assortment of stationary will also be kept for sale—such as paper, ink, pens and envelops.

And we also inform our German brethren that a good quantity of church books, in their native language, will also be for sale.

Our presiding elders can send their orders at any time, which will be promptly filled and on reasonable terms. Address Spranly & Co., Methodist Book Store, New Orleans, Louisiana.

Conference Meetings.

The Mississippi Annual Conference will meet at Canton, on Thursday, January 7, and not on the twenty-first, as published in the ADVOCATE. The change in the time has been made by Bishop Simpson.

All of the members of this Conference, and all who desire to join, should be at Canton on the sixth of January, and meet the Committee of Examination on the evening of that day.

Ministers on arriving will call on Rev. Alfred Handy, who will assign them to their lodgings.

JAMES LYNCH.

LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.—The fourth session of the Louisiana (formerly Mississippi Mission) Annual Conference will be held in Wesley Chapel, in the city of New Orleans, commencing Wednesday, January 13, at nine o'clock. All those on probation in Conference, and all who have been recommended to the traveling connection or for orders, will meet the committee at Wesley Chapel, on Tuesday, the twelfth of January, at ten o'clock A. M.

Preachers on arriving in the city will proceed to Wesley Chapel, where Brother Anthony Ross will be found to direct them to their places of entertainment.

TEXAS ANNUAL CONFERENCE.—The Texas Annual Conference will convene at Austin, on Tuesday, January 21, at nine o'clock A. M.

Freedmen's Schools.

H. H. PIERCE,
Brevet Capt. U. S. A. and
General Superintendent of Education.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the Ebenezer Benevolent Association is this day dissolved by mutual consent of its members. Mr. Spencer Jackson, Allick Fierne and John Oliver are appointed to settle the affairs of the society.

W. C. JOHNSTON,
Acting Secretary.
New Orleans, December 21, 1868.

Book Notices.

GRAPE CULTURIST.—A treatise on the cultivation of the native grape, by Andrew S. Fuller. To those who are engaged in the cultivation of the grape we recommend this work of Mr. Fuller. Nearly three hundred pages are devoted to this subject. Growing from seed, best plans of propagating, layering the vine, grafting, transplating, soil and situation, trellises, time and manner of pruning, description of varieties, etc., are all ably treated. Those now planting vineyards to supply the New Orleans market can gain sufficient information from this work on grape culture to pay for the book ten times over in a single year. It can be obtained of the publishers, Orange Judd & Co., 245 Broadway, New York, for the small sum of $1 50.

RURAL ARCHITECTURE, by Lewis F. Allen. In this work of more than three hundred pages, is given descriptions of farm houses, cottages and outbuildings, comprising wood houses, tool houses, carriage houses, workshops, stables, barns, ice houses, dove cotes, etc., together with lawns, pleasure grounds and parks, flower, fruit and vegetable gardens, etc., besides much other information, which is important for the farmer or ruralist to know.

Passing through almost any portion of the country one is surprised at the many wretchedly constructed houses. It would have cost little if any more, when building, to have made them both convenient and well proportioned. But the one building knew not how to make a good plan, hence the failure. Such a work as this, with plans all drawn and prepared, would have given the information desired, which would have resulted in a house that might ever be viewed with satisfaction. Any one about to build should obtain such a work and read it thoroughly before preparing his plan. The price is $1 50. Sent postpaid by the publishers, Orange Judd & Co., 245 Broadway, New York.

OUR FARM OF FOUR ACRES, and the money we made by it. Being a treatise on small farms, showing the actual profits of the author on the butter, pigs, poultry, kitchen garden, etc. Let the man with a small piece of ground get this and read it. Price thirty cents. Published by Orange Judd & Co., New York.

THE GARDEN OF SORROWS, or the Ministry of Tears. By Rev. John Atkinson. Published by Carlton & Lanahan, 200 Mulberry street, New York, 12 mo. 200 pages. This volume contemplates human sorrow from the standpoint of Gethsemane, in the light of revelations and of Christian faith. It is touchingly dedicated "to those who suffer and to these who weep." The work is put up in the neatest style, in clear type, on tinted paper. It is a work which every one may read with interest and profit.

Notices of Periodicals.

The Methodist for 1869 furnishes as premiums cyclopedias, dictionaries, commentaries, hymn books, sewing machines, gold and silver watches, organs, etc. The publishers of the Methodist are determined to make it to the interest of all who will, to engage earnestly in the work of canvassing, by the offer of an extraordinary list of premiums and cash commissions. They have set out with the purpose of adding ten thousand to their present subscription lists. Canvassers may earn their premiums by sending one-half new subscribers, and one-half old subscribers renewed, to make up the number required. Any one subscribing for two years and paying $5 in advance, will be counted as two subscribers. For every additional year paid in advance, at $2 50 per year, each year will count as one subscriber on premium account.

Appleton's Railway Guide.—Every traveler will find this work a great convenience. It contains a large map of the country, and smaller maps of each great railroad, separate, the latest time-tables of the various roads, name of officers, etc. It is not only a great convenience to the traveler, but contains a vast amount of useful information in regard to the railroad and steamboat lines of the country, which the stay-at-home should know. Price, cheap. Sold by the Appletons, New York, and by news dealers generally.

Peters's Monthly Glee Hive is printed on fine, white, heavy paper, large size, and contains fourteen pages of music, consisting of glees, trios, quartettes, etc. The number for December contains: Shout Forth Airs of Triumph, from Offenbach's comic opera of "Genevieve De Brabant;" O Let Me Kiss the Baby, quartette for mixed voices; Seek and Ye Shall Find; Hail, Thou Long Expected Jesus; Carrie, with the Golden Hair, etc.

Published by J. L. Peters, 198 Broadway, at three dollars per year.

Peters's Parlor Companion, published at the same place and for the same price as the Glee Hive contains sixteen pages of music arranged for the flute and violin, with piano accompaniment.

The enterprising proprietors of the American Stock Journal have put up three hundred thousand copies in packages of three each, with a finely illustrated show bill, premium list, etc., which they offer to send free and post paid to all who apply for them. Every farmer and stock breeder should avail themselves of this generous offer (to give away over $30,000 worth of books), as the three numbers contain near three hundred pages of choice original articles, and a great number of valuable recipes for the cure of various diseases to which horses, cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, etc., are liable. Farmers will find this monthly a very efficient aid in all the departments of farming and stock breeding. It has a a veterinary department under the charge of one of the ablest professors in the United States, who answers, through the Journal, free of charge, all questions relating to sick, injured or diseased horses, cattle, sheep, swine or poultry. Thus every subscriber has a horse and cattle doctor free. This journal is furnished at the low price of one dollar per year; specimen copies free. Address N. P. Boyer & Co., publisher, Parkersburg, Chester county, Pennsylvania.

Young Folks' News.—This paper meets a want long felt of a weekly paper for children. It is illustrated with wood cuts, is printed on fine white paper, is larger than any children's monthly paper that we have yet seen, and, it seems to us, must meet with success. Only one dollar per year. Published by Alfred Martin, No. 21 South Seventh street, Philadelphia.

A BEAUTIFUL PICTURE FOR EVERY HOME.—The publishers of the School Day Visitor are furnishing, as a premium to subscribers, a picture of "General Grant and his Family." It was produced at a cost of about one thousand dollars. It must, therefore, be as nearly perfect as can well be made. Every face is a truthful likeness, and the figures are grouped in an easy and natural manner. It probably has no equal in point of excellence. The Visitor is a live, well illustrated magazine for our young folks everywhere, and a glance at it recommends it. Every subscriber will receive the above mentioned two dollar and a half picture for the small sum of twenty-five cents additional to the subscription price. Price, one dollar and twenty-five cents a year. Specimen numbers ten cents. Address Danghaday & Becker, 424 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

Prang's Chromos.—This publication is issued in Boston, by Louis Prang & Co., the manufacturers of the beautiful chromos that have won such a reputation throughout the country. They rival the oil paintings of which they are copies, and can be obtained for a twentieth of the amount the originals would bring.

A full description of how chromos are made, together with a catalogue of the same, can be obtained by addressing Louis Prang & Co., 159 Washington street, Boston, Massachusetts.

New York Journal of Music.—A monthly musical periodical. A quarto, each number of which contains a piece of music, with several pages of musical reading. Terms, seventy-five cents a year. Single copies ten cents. Address Brown & Perkins, 76 East Ninth street, New York.

From the Churches.

Rev. Mr. Fenner sends an account of his fourth quarterly meeting:

On the twenty-eighth of November we tried to hold quarterly conference. The brethren out on the circuit could not come in, and I had only the help of Brothers Jordan and Cook. The out appointments have all been stopped since election, but prayer meetings and class meetings are held pretty regular. Brothers Ned Logwood and Andrew Harrison are doing their best amid great difficulties. The reports of members and minutes will be sent when prepared. Love feast was held before morning preaching. The feeling was excellent. In the afternoon the Lord's Supper was celebrated, and we had a good time. A great number of our members communed, and members of the Baptist and other churches met around the Lord's table. An exhortation being given, about fifteen persons came forward for prayers, one of whom professed religion before meeting closed, and two joined the church on probation. The power of the Lord did seem to be in our meeting.

Rev. Mr. Armisted sends the minutes of the fourth quarterly conference at our Zion Methodist Episcopal church, Shreveport:

The meeting was one of the best ever held in this city. All the preachers were present, excepting Stephen Thomas and Cotton Reeder. All was peace and happiness. Sunday the love feast was a happy time. We had an immersion, and then several were baptized in the church. The revival is still going on. Twelve profess conversion and the altar is full of mourners. God is mightily at work among us. We are thankful to the Bureau for giving us seventy-five dollars to help repair the house, but we need much more. Our people are well disposed and are trying to do right, but have had much trouble. They are poor, and we have to suffer together. Our Sunday school has seventy-five scholars, and the Bible class has twenty-three scholars. The superintendents are McClellan and Hall. Members of Zion church, 149; probationers, 24. Deaths, 7; withdrawn, 1; baptized, 24; conversions, 27. Four country appointments report 196 members, under Brothers York, Johnson, Jefferson and McClellan. I send recommendations for orders and for the traveling connection.

Rev. Mr. Bryan writes from St. Martinsville:

I have just come from Lafayette. Our members are much scattered, but there is hope of soon having a house. We appointed a committee on the building to wait on Captain Rice, consisting of Brothers Charles and George Baptiste. We had dull times. The weather was rainy. I had two good exhorters with me, and we labored Saturday night and Sunday morning. The school teacher is still at his work, but with no stove, has a cold time. At eleven o'clock we left for home, and had a pleasant ride over that great plain. We saw nothing but wickedness all along the way, for eighteen miles, that blessed Sabbath—horse racing, cattle driving, teaming, duck hunting—no mark of religion to be seen. Oh, what a Sabbath! It reminded me of Lot. When will our Christian brethren in other parts of the country come into this barren land, "gird on the gospel armor, and labor in the field." I have labored near two years in these two large parishes, without a church or a house for a preacher, but a better day is coming. We are trying to push the building here. I have the timber on the ground, foundation laid and am working at it myself, so as to have it inclosed before conference. I bought blocks and nails to start the work. We have no school here yet.

Rev. Henry Green, one of our oldest colored preachers, was sent, by the presiding elder of the New Orleans district, to hold the Quarterly Conference at Shady Grove, Mandeville and Pass Christian circuits. He rendered his report a week or two since, but its publication was neglected until the present. He says:

We went across Lake Pontchartrain to Mandeville. Accompanied by Brother Johnson, the pastor of that place, we started with a horse and wagon for Live Oak charge, in Washington parish. Arriving there, we found that the pastor, Amos Gunby, and his exhorters had been compelled to leave there previous to election, owing to threats against their lives on account of political prejudice. They had crossed Pearl river to New Hope, in Mississippi; there they worshiped in a house, not a church, however. After the election the house was nailed up, the people declaring that they should not haae a church there. The pastor then went to Zion Ridge, eight miles from Columbia, Mississippi, where we found him. Here there was Government land. The people of that vicinity said they were going to build a church there. They cut down trees and made seats on the hill. On the second Sunday of November, the members from Live Oak and New Hope met there between ten and eleven o'clock, about two hundred and fifty in number.

I preached the quarterly meeting sermon. The people were very joyful. I never saw a happier time in my life. Brother Solomon Hart was licensed as a local preacher; four other brethren were licensed as exhorters. The committee reported two hundred dollars, the amount estimated for the pastor's salary, but owing to the very hard times, only thirty-six dollars had been paid him. The congregation had been scattered much, looking for work; they could get but little, owing to political difficulties. They got somewhat discouraged and wished themselves in some other country. But they thanked God, now that things were getting better. On the twelfth of November we were on our way homeward. On the thirteenth we taveled till about ten o'clock at night, when we stopped for the night. There were about a dozen in number where we stayed. It was very cold, and we had no fire; I took an ax and went into the woods and cut three very large logs, and made such a big fire that it heated even the logs of the house. Brother Johnson and myself then had a wonderfully good prayer meeting, and we had a joyful night of it. We rose before day and started on. The stars were falling mightily; they did not appear to touch the ground; it seems but very few people saw the sight. At the place where we stayed there was an old colored woman about eighty years of age, who had been crazy for eight or ten years. She would walk to and fro in the yard, and take her text on the slaveholders, the sugar farms and cotton farms, and branch off then on the overseers, negro drivers, the bull whips, the stocks and negro dogs. She said that she hoped that God would avenge them for all the wrongs done her race; she hoped every steamboat that ever carried a slave would sink, etc. Then she would break out on the Baptists, and declare that they were no better than she was. Thus she continued, with her eyes toward the sky, until the froth run from her mouth. We asked her daughter what was the matter with her mother. She could not tell, but remarked that when she had those spells she neither ate nor drank. We could still hear cries when three-quarters of a mile away. Poor creature, it was pitiable! May her crazed brain find rest.

Proceeding on our journey, we reached Mandeville in due season, where, on the seventeenth of November, we held the Quarterly Conference of our Church. We found that the people at this place also were greatly in arrears in paying their preacher, Brother Johnson. They had agreed to pay him $150, but he had only received forty-four dollars and fifty cents. Three of his appointments had been broken up on account of Democracy. Here the people had great difficulty in getting work, and in many cases still greater difficulty in getting their pay after the work was done. I saw seven person, who, after having made five crops for their employers, were then turned away. There was no justice or protection for them. From Mandeville I went to Bay St. Louis, on the Pass Christian circuit, and on November 25, held the Quarterly Conference. Matters on this circuit are in a bad way, having been sadly neglected by the preacher in charge. I asked the pastor if he had been to his appointment at Pass Christian since the third quarter, and he said no. The brethren from that appointment, said he, had not preached there since the third quarterly meeting, and not more than three or four times during the year. The brethren at Handsboro, said he, had done nothing for them; if he had, they would have kept well together, and would have got their church paid for. The church there is in a bad way. We beg the Conference to help us at least to fifty dollars, if they can not any more, or our church will be sold again. There is a debt on it of $170.

The white people, for whom the colored people have worked in Handsboro, are determined not to give them any money, because they did not vote for them. For their labor they give them a bill stating the amount due, and tell them to go to the store and get what they want on it. The storekeeper charges them just what he chooses, and the result is they scarcely get enough to live on. The landlords of whom they rent their houses, charge on their paper what they desire. Some, however, will not take the paper but keep the tenant's things. This is the plan pursued at all the watering places along the lake.

The colored people wanted me to ask Dr. Newman if there could not be some way provided for them to emigrate to some other country, as they are tired of working so hard and getting nothing but a piece of paper, which is of such little value that they can get no money on it, and hardly get food enough and pay their rent. May the Lord bring better days! We believe he will.

Intelligence from Our Mission Rooms.

DOMESTIC MISSIONS.—We have before us the third quarterly report of Brother James Peck, superintendent of missions within the Rappahannock District, Washington Conference. At the quarterly meeting in Lynchburg, Virginia, the pastor, Rev. W. W. Foreman, took sixty-four members into full connection, making in all, since March last, nearly three hundred. A collection of $250 was taken for the church. They have a Sabbath school of one hundred and eighty pupils. Brother Peck writes that the past year has been a hard one for the colored people, but he thinks a change for the better is dawning. He closes as follows: "When I took the district, three years ago, we had but one church and two congregations; we now count fifteen churches and thirty-five congregations."

OUR CHILDREN.—They are doing well for us in the missionary cause. Carlton avenue, Brooklyn, has a juvenile organization in the cause of missions, that, by the pastor, has been brought to a state of great efficiency. They held their monthly meeting in the audience room of the church Sunday evening, December 6, and were addressed by E. Driggs, Esq., Mr. Haynes and Rev. Heman Bangs. The young friends treated their crowded audience to charming singing, and gave us as their monthly offering fifty-four dollars.

THE ADVOCATES.—These, appreciating the duty of the Church in relation to her action in the missionary cause, continue to lift up their voice. The Pittsburg Advocate says:

We have well organized mission stations in Africa, South America, China, Germany and Switzerland, Scandinavia, India and Bulgaria. We are also making provision to establish missions in Spain, Italy, Cuba, Mexico and New Granada. This is belting the world with centres from whence the light of the Gospel may radiate and fill the whole earth. The appropriations for the support of these missions amount to $275,866 78. This is bringing our appropriations to the foreign fields almost up to those made for the domestic field. The sum total of appropriations for 1869 is $850,000. The General Committee has in this acted wisely and well. Now let the Church perform the task assigned it; its missionary secretaries and pastors disseminate intelligence, and its members honor God in missionary gifts worthy of the age, and comporting somewhat with their privileges. We ought to give a dollar a member—nearly double the sum named. The call of the committee is moderate enough. We should meet it and more. Let this be done. "Close up." "Go forward." Do well for the perishing heathen. Our appropriations for Domestic Missions sum up $297,250. All this is needed, and more. The American continent is to be, and no other continent can be, the battle field of ideas. All natious are coming to us, Europeans through the gateways of the Atlantic, Asiatics through those of the Pacific. The African is already here, and wonderfully redeemed from bondage. This continent is to be the theatre of contending civilizations. If we would have the resultant civilization of a pure Christian type we must give without stint, pray without ceasing, and toil with unwearied spirit. We trust that God may kindle the fires of missionary zeal in our congregations, that our missionary gifts for the coming year may exceed the askings of the General Committee. The time for work has come. Let us do well this great duty of the hour. Up to the battle. Agitate. Scatter missionary intelligence. Circulate the Missionary Advocate. Think over the wants of the country and the world. Think how the Gospel will relieve those wants. Send the bread of life to the perishing. Open up streams of living water for the thirsty in the wilderness. Give, as God has given to you.

EIGHT HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS.—The General Missionary Committee, at its late meeting, found it absolutely necessary to appropriate eight hundred and fifty thousand dollars to carry out missionary work, at home and abroad, through the year 1869; and unless this sum be realized, the treasury will be embarrassed. The Committee, believing the Church to be both able and willing to make all needful contributions to maintain and carry forward this great and growing interest, ordered the distribution of the aforesaid eight hundred and fifty thousand dollars, to be raised among the conferences and churches, that all our pastors and people may have due notice of the same. In pursuance of this order, the distribution is made as follows, namely:

Alabama, $2009 80; Baltimore, $32,888 44; Black River, $7384 78; California, $4466 37; Central German, $7705 17; Central Illinois, $16,443 26; Central New York, $19,732 74; Central Ohio, $14,327 68; Central Pennsylvania, $20,492 54; Cincinnati, $28,385 18; Colorado, $559 78; Delaware, $1810 88; Des Moines, $5686 24; Detroit, $15,727 46; East Genesee, $15,437 78; East German, $2114 47; East Maine, $3624 73; Erie, $24,893 70; Genesee, $8398 73; Georgia, $2180 60; Holston, $4156 60; Illinois, $24,809 38; Indiana, $15,665 42; Iowa, $10,571 56; Kansas, $3639 86; Kentucky, $2954 37; Louisiana, $1437 80; Maine, $7231 76; Michigan, $11,340 56; Minnesota, $5971 56; Mississippi, $1024, Missouri, $4128 70; Nebraska, $1119 67; Nevada, $299 62; Newark, $25,227 94; New England, $25,496 67; New Hampshire, $8294 32; New Jersey, $22,402 95; New York, $48,407 80; New York East, $50,605; North Carolina, $500; North Indiana, $18,295 51; North Ohio, $16,160 91; Northwest German, $5315 98; Northwest Indiana, $10,121 04; Ohio, $26,534 32; Oregon, $2308 26; Philadelphia, $51,091 61; Pittsburg, $37,349 17; Providence, $13,050 93; Rock River, $20,613 30; St. Louis, $4768 90; South Carolina, $2737 60; Southeastern Indiana, $14,399 96; Southern Illinois, $12,362 41; Southwest German, $5133 32; Tennessee, $1685; Texas, $497 60; Troy, $21,175 37; Upper Iowa, $10,561 02; Vermont $8804 29; Virginia, $2167 18; Washington, $1310 78; West Virginia, $7001 78; West Wisconsin, $6856 59; Wilmington, $15,427 91; Wisconsin, $10,579 24; Wyoming, $14,139 14. Total, $850,000.

POWERFUL REVIVALS.—We have most cheering news from Sweden, in letters received at the Mission Rooms, from Rev. V. Witting, dated November 24, at Gottenburg. He says:

The work is spreading everywhere, and in some places with great power; especially is this the case in Carlscrona. I have lately visited this city, and had scarcely got home when very pressing letters followed me, and urged me to return, as a powerful revival had broken out among them. I sent Brother Larsen, of Wysby, who, when he arrived, helped the brethren mightily. Many were converted, and two additional classes were formed. After Brother Larsen left I sent Brother Kihlstrom to them. He can not be long absent from his work in Stockholm, and when he leaves them they must take care of themselves. We must have an ordained man for Carscrona if the work is to be carried forward successfully. The work is also progressing with great power in Calmar. My soul rejoices exceedingly, for God has indeed wrought wonders in this place. We have had some violent opposition, both in Calmar and Stockholm. Some windows have been broken, but some arrests of the offenders have been made, and we think now the churches will have peace. The great want in these cities is larger halls and more of them. Indeed, our work can not be fully accomplished until we can have commodious churches. Half the people can not get in who come to hear the word.

CHINA.—Those estimable women, the Misses Woolston, so long in charge of our girl's boarding school in Foochow, China, have written us quite recently: "The Chinese have changed very much, and are more friendly than formerly. We have Chinese visitors almost every day, and some days they are coming to and going from our school nearly all the time. They seem to enjoy calling, but we find it a great tax upon our time and strength. We returned many of their visits and were well received. A few years ago we thought it was hardly safe to ride through some of these places."

PRANG'S AMERICAN CHROMOS IN OIL AND WATER COLORS.

PRANG'S AMERICAN CHROMOS are fac simile re-productions of oil and water color paintings; so faithfully and skillfully done that it requires the experience of an expert to detect the difference between them and the originals.

For every purpose of decoration, for parlors, sitting rooms, nurseries, or chambers, nothing so exquisitely beautiful as these Chromos can be obtained for the same amount of money. No other ornaments of the same cost are so admirably calculated to adorn home, to cultivate a love for art among the people at large; to brighten up the dwellings of every class of our citizens, and to teach the rising generation, by their silent yet refining influence, to love the beautiful in Art and Nature. Hitherto Art has been aristocratic in its associations, none but the wealthy classes could afford to buy fine works of art; but chromo-lithography has changed all that, and brought exquisite paintings within the reach of every family. It is doing for Art what the printing press did for Literature. Let no family, henceforth, be without a few classical books and one or two masterly painting. Both should be regarded as indispensable to complete a home.

Ask for them at the art stores and book stores.

Our Chromos are sent free to any address within the United States east of the Mississippi, on receipt of price. Our journal of Popular Art, explaining how Chromos are made, mailed free. Send for a copy.

LITTLE MAUD.

BY THOMAS BAILY ALDRICH.

O where is our dainty, our darling,
The dantiest darling of all,
O where is the voice on the stairway,
O where is the voice in the hall?
The little short steps in the entry,
The silvery voice in the hall,
O where is our dainty, our darling,
The dantiest darling of all?
Little Maud

The peaches are ripe in the garden,
The apricots ready to fall;
The blue grapes are dripping their honey
In sunshine upon the white wall:
O where are the lips, full and melting,
That looked up so pouting and red,
When we dangled the sun-purpled bunches
Of Isabels over her head?
O Maud! little Maud! say where are you?
(She never replies to our coll!)
O where is our dainty, our darling,
The dantiest darling of all?
Little Maud

OUACHITA RIVER.—The Monroe Intelligencer says:

Upon this flag the rebels fired from their masked battery on Morris Island.

This we copy from the St. Louis Democrat:

Caleb Cushing is an able man, but he has gone somewhere on an erraud for Mr. Seward, and the presumption therefore is that more mischief is brewing. That fussy old gentleman, who used to make fine speeches, and who has written over more cartloads of paper than any non-editorial creature now existant, probably desires to signalize his departure from official station by some new and peculiarly conspicuous blunder, which, by dint of infinite mystery, he will make people believe a stroke of marvellous diplomacy.

This is from the New York Tribune:

The Republican State Central Committee of Louisiana ask General Rousseau some very pat questions about his recent report. Why, for example, could he not have preserved the peace as well by stopping rebels from voting as loyal men? Why could he not have brought into town the troops under his command and within reach, instead of deploring his lack of troops to preserve the peace? Why could he not have told the truth about the Metropolitan Police? But what, if this committee is right, becomes of the Governor who approved Rousseau's action?

The Sugar Planter, of West Baton Rouge, pays an equivocal compliment to Judge W. H. Cooley, of the Sixth District Court of this city. It says:

The Fifth District Court meets in this parish on Monday next, Judge R. T. Posey presiding. The criminal docket is rather slim, which speaks volumes for the good behavior and orderly conduct of our citizens. In civil matters there will be much to do, owing to the failure of holding court at the last regular term in April. This, however, was owing to the trick played upon our worthy Judge by his then confrere, Judge Cooley, of Point Coupee, who requested an exchange of the benches for the term, and was accepted by Judge Posey. Cooley posted off to New Orleans to attend to his election there, in which he was successful. On ascertaining this fact, Judge Posey promptly vacated his seat and returned home, but it was too late for our regular term, and so we lost it.

LITTLE SUGAR FARMS.—We copy the following from the Planters' Banner, published at Franklin, St. Mary parish. Colored men can manage these farms and make sugar as well as white men. "There is no mistake about the matter:"

We hope our young men will fasten with tenacity upon the small sugar farm idea. Get small farms, rent or buy, as means, or want of means may dictate, plant an acre, or ten acres, or more, according to circumstances, get a little sugar mill, and go ahead. In ten years a man may be extremely independent if he will go into the business in earnest. It is the true road to success, and ultimate independence. Small sugar farms, small mills, industry and economy will accomplish the object. White men can manage these farms and make sugar. There is no mistake about the matter.

OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE.

Congressman Blaine on the President's Message—Thomas J. Durant in the Supreme Court—Personal, etc.

[Special Correspondence of the Republican.]

WASHINGTON, December 12, 1868.

On Thursday the House went into Committee of the Whole on the President's message, and was addressed by Hon. J. G. Blaine, of Maine. Mr. Blaine's address embraced a careful resume of national affairs since the election of Abraham Lincoln. I would like to transfer the whole of this brilliant address to your columns, but I am admonished to respect your limited space. I can not refrain, however, from giving you an eloquent extract, which has the true "Young America" ring about it:

With the election of General Grant comes a higher standard of American citizenship—with more dignity and character to the name abroad and more assured liberty and security attaching to it at home. Our diplomacy will be rescued from the subservient tone by which we have so often been humiliated in our own eyes and in the eyes of Europe, and the true position of the first nation of the earth in rank and prestige will be asserted: not in the spirit of bravado or with the mere arrogance of strength, but with the conscious dignity which belongs to power, and with the moderation which is the true ornament of justice.

And with this vindication of the rights and rank of our citizenship abroad will come also its protection and its panoply at home. That provision of the Federal Constitution which solemnly guarantees that "the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States" will not be a dead letter under the administration of General Grant, as it in fact has been from the foundation of the Federal Government down to this hour. Henceforward it is to be practically enforced throughout all our borders, and every citizen of the republic, himself observant of the law and of the rights of others, shall go where it may please him, and speak as he may see fit, unawed by mobs, unharmed by murderers, unmenaced in life, limb or estate!

Mr. Blaine, by the way, is the most prominently named candidate, next to General Banks, for the next Speakership of the House.

The cases of the United States versus the "Nina Simmes," and same versus the "Beauregard" were up for argument in the Supreme Court yesterday, on appeal from the judgment of the District Court of Louisiana. These boats were libelled under the act of July, 1861, on the ground they had been used for Confederate purposes with the consent of the owners. Judge Durell acquitted them and the United States appealed. The case was argued on the part of the Government by Assistant Attorney General Ashton, and for claimants by Hon. Thomas J. Durant. The whole question turned upon whether the consent was voluntarily given. The case of the claimants was presented by Mr. Durant with a clearness, precision and vigor which is rare even in that Court. His description of the tyranny and absolute despotism of the Confederate military rule and of the powerlessness of the individual citizen was most vivid and telling.

Colonel B. B. Keeler, of General Rousseau's staff, is still here, at the Metropolitan. He has been trying to save Gen. Rousseau's shoulder-straps. He has been quite ill, and confined to his room for several days. He is out again, however, and proposes to start to morrow for Chicago, in company with Generals Grant, Thomas and Schofield and staffs, to attend the grand reunion of soldiers about to take place there. Colonel Keeler will then return to New Orleans, disgusted with the disposition of Congress toward General Rousseau.

General Lee and Colonel Lynch stopped over a day on their return from New York. General Lee is probably by this time in New Orleans, while the Colonel makes a detour through Ohio and the West. Colonel James F. Casey and John J. Anderson, of New Orleans, are at Willard's. Charles A. Weed passed through on his way to the North. Colonel C. W. Lowell, Speaker of the Louisiana House of Representatives, is here, and will remain until the holidays.

Legislation for Louisiana and the South—Internal Improvements and Land Grants—Senator Harris's "Pavement" Bill and the Questions it Provokes—Leaumont Commented On—Legislation on Steamboat Disasters—Personal, Etc.

WASHINGTON, December 14, 1868.

Congress met to-day after having taken a recess since Wednesday, and quite a number of important measures were introduced. I telegraphed you those affecting Louisiana and her nearest sisters. The resolution of Judge Kellogg calling for the data on file in the Freedmen's Bureau of Louisiana concerning recent outrages upon the freedmen will have much to do with the disposition to be made of the recent election there. The resolution introduced into the House by Mr. Whittemore, of South Carolina, tends to the same result, although it complicates matters to unite three States in the investigation. The bill of Representative Kellogg, of Mobile, "granting to the New Orleans, Mobile and Chattanooga Railroad Company the right of way through the public lands of the United States," etc., modestly provides for the donating of every alternate section of public land on the line of said railroad in the State of Louisiana, designated by odd numbers, to the amount of ten alternate sections per mile for each mile of said railroad, said alternate sections to be selected within ten miles upon each side of the centre line of the road; but "if public lands sufficient for the purpose shall not be found within said limit of ten miles upon each side of said road, then the said alternate sections of land are granted and may be selected within the limit of forty miles north of the centre line of said railroad," etc. This, in short, intimates a general "jobbing" of the best lands in the Opelousas country.

The act incorporating the Mississippi and Mexican Gulf Ship Canal Company provides for the granting of $300,000 to pay the expenses of the work, which are estimated not to exceed $350,000, while the act in favor of the New Orleans and Ship Island Canal Company provides for the donating of about three millions of acres of the public domain in aid of the enterprise. All propositions looking to the internal improvement of the Southern States meet with general favor, and any process of legislation which will people the vacant lands of the South will receive generous treatment.

Senator Harris's bill, providing for the expenditure of something over three hundred thousand dollars for the paving of Pennsylvania avenue with the Nicolson pavement, seems destined to bring up a fresh proposition to remove the Capital to the West. There is a manifest disposition on the part of our legislators from the West and South to remove the Capital to the Mississippi river, and, meantime, to permit no temporary expenditure for the improvement of Washington that will hereafter be rendered valueless.

An able article, recently published in DeBow's Review, suggesting St. Louis as the future Capital of the Republic, is eagerly sought for and generally read; and although there may be some question about St. Louis being the location sought, it still strengthens the hands of General John A. Logan, who submitted the motion in the last session of Congress in favor of an immediate change of the Capital to the region of the great West away from this out-of-the-way corner of the world. Legislation is not for the past, when George Washington could jump into his saddle and ride up to the Capital before breakfast, but for the great future, and in the track of the "Star of Empire" which westward takes its way.

The recent remarkable decision of Judge Leaumont, on the Metropolitan Police bill, is exciting considerable comment among Louisianians now in Washington. They marvel greatly that the only Republican elected to the bench in the parish of Orleans should take such a violent partisan view of the matter; and, instead of deciding the case fairly upon its legal merits, should stoop to special pleading in the interest of the corrupt and imbecile municipal administration of the city. The points made by the Judge, on the question of the constitution of the House when the bill was passed, afford considerable amusement to legislators and parliamentarians. They pronounce his Creole judgeship decidedly Lame on'it.

The frightful collision on the Ohio river is one of the most exciting subjects of town talk. The Secretary of the Treasury has directed the Supervising Inspector of Steamboats of the disaster in which the recent terrible collision of the steamers America and United States took place, to make a strict investigation into the causes of that fearful disaster. It is also understood that Mr. McCulloch has recommended to Congress the repeal of the law authorizing the carriage of petroleum as freight on passenger steamers, and that Congress will perpetrate rigid legislation on the subject.

Lieutenant A. W. Greeley, formerly Captain of the Eighty-First United States colored infantry, and for some three years during the war stationed in and around New Orleans, and now of the Thirty-Sixth United States infantry, is stationed at Fort Greble, near Washington, attached to the telegraphic signal corps. He was recently on duty at Salt Lake City, and his narrations of experience among the Mormons are very interesting.

Dr. Samuel Bard, editor of the Atlanta (Georgia) New Era, was, on Friday last, upon motion of Assistant Attorney General Ashton, admitted and enrolled as an attorney of the Supreme Court of the United States. Mr. Bard is well known as the former Superintendent of Public Education in Louisiana.

General Eggleston and his Mississippi delegation are here, urging the immediate admission of the State into the Union.

General Sypher's Pretensions—The Militia Bill—Federal Court and Bankruptcy Matters—Pitkin (J. R. G.) on the Rampage—He Addresses General Butler a Long Printed Letter on the Political Aspect of Louisiana—Specimen Quotations—Personals.

WASHINGTON, December 14, 1868.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:

Mr. Sypher's friends claim great credit for that gentleman for procuring the repeal of the prohibition against the organization of militia forces in the lately rebellious States. An examination of the Congressional Globe will show you that on the fourteenth instant Mr. Sypher, by unanimous consent, submitted the following resolution, which was read, considered and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs be directed to inquire into the expediency of repealing the sixth section of the act making appropriations for the support of the army for the year ending June 30, 1868, and for other purposes, approved March 2, 1867, which prohibits the organization of militia forces in the States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Texas; and that they report by bill or otherwise.

If Mr. Sypher was so anxious for a repeal of the prohibition, why did he not with his own pen at once frame a bill with the object in view, and have his bill referred to the Committee, instead of asking the Committee to draw up a bil to effect the purpose. But, unfortunately for Mr. Sypher's fame in this particular, General Paine, of Port Hudson fame, on the same day introduced a bill on the same subject, complete in all its formalities and details, which was read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Reconstruction. It is surmised here that after the fourth of March Mr. Sypher may accept a position under the militia law of Louisiana which will enable him to snow off his ability and prowess.

There is one matter in which Mr. Sypher is entitled to exclusive honor. That is, the promptness with which he introduced bills giving Government aid to each of two rival canal schemes.

Mr. McKee, of Kentucky, has introduced a bill to establish a new judicial district in Kentucky. It was read a first and second time and referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. A similar bill, to be applicable to Louisiana, is in course of preparation, and will be passed a few days before General Grant's inauguration. Several of your best lawyers are already mentioned in connection with the new judgship.

Mr. O'Neill, of Philadelphia, has introduced a bill supplementary to an act entitled "An act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States," approved March 2, 1867, which was read a first and second time, and referred to the Committee on Revision of Laws of the United States. Several important changes in the present bankrupt law are in contemplation. Mr. Wilson, of Iowa, is devoting some attention to the subject.

We have a new sensation in semi-official circles here. The letter of Hon. J. R. G. Pitkin, of your city, to General Butler on the political aspect of Louisiana, reached here yesterday morning in pamphlet form and is a scorcher. While, in some respects, it is considered perhaps too severe, in others it seems to be about right. I am told that it is intended for Northern circulation more particularly; if so, you may have not seen it. A Senator, whom I called upon last night, expressed himself in enthusiastic terms over it, pronouncing it a superb paper in its boldness, honesty and style. As I apprehended you may have not seen it, I shall quote a little from it. I have but one copy of the production, and that is somewhat torn, but I cut from it the following paragraphs—the mildest in the whole pamphlet—from which you can form your own idea as to Mr. Pitkin's purposes:

"Several letters beside your own have recently come to hand from the North, in regard to matters in Louisiana, but the fact of your intimate acquaintance with our people six years ago, to say nothing of a gracious exhibition hitherto of confidence in my views, persuades me that I can not do better than address an especial reply to yourself. I am not unaware that I have stood here in a somewhat peculiar attitude of late; denounced upon one side as having been industrious upon Northern platforms and through political correspondence in devising slanders upon the local Democratic element; and upon the other, as a recusant Republican, simply because I disdain to be servile to a clique, arrogating that distinction, and to accept its dictum, as peremptory upon every man in our midst who professes the Republican creed. In other words, I am a "scalawag" for subordinating myself to the "carpet-bagger," only to discover that I am a "conservative bolter" for refusing so to subordinate myself. These are rather incongruous baptisms. I have never felt crushed by their reproach, when mindful of the vicious sponsors. * * * *

I am compelled to deny the Republican assumptions, first of the present administration of this State. I do not propose to review the miserable theft by which the head of that administration grasped a nomination. It was a sober admonition to me of the greed and the devious methods to satisfy it which would be exhibited by his adherents should they compass our public trusts. I protested, as a Republican, against so shameless a trick upon my party, and, as a Louisianian I denounced the fraud upon my State. I was bidden to keep silence and conform to party discipline. I denied that any cabal could be my oracle, that as a free man my convictions were not my own to foster and avow, and that to that cabal of new and responsible men had been confided the authority of a party. * * * *

But, sir, if the recreant men I have indicated are to be upbraided for their misconduct, some of their white associates in that Legislature are to be yet more sternly condemned. Theirs are the brains to conceive, shape and mask the plans; theirs the influences secured and the chief profits realized as partners with the lobby in their own bills. Such men may rise at their desks and discourse upon our State, of whose parishes many of them can tell neither the number nor the names, and to the people of which they first introduced themselves on their ballots; they may prate loudly of the Union and execrate those who were arrayed against it here; they may continue to announce themselves brass mounted Republicans, but they can't afford to talk of "rebels"—although a man stood in the uniform of an insurgent, another who crawls in the wake of the Fedral army in the guise of an earnest patriot, clutches at our immunities as legitimate booty, prostitutes our precious trusts and abases our law-making power for his own ends, and impairs our effort at a wholsome reconstruction, commits no less desperate a treason to the Union, and I denounce him as a rebel before the country. He confesses himself contemptible by his cowardice. * * * * *

In saying this let it be clearly understood that I am no less ready than in the past to combat that political element in our midst which has surrendered its arms, but not its intent to do mischief—which can not forbear the hates of the war; whose policy is one of mere malevolence; an element that is even blind to the odium and peril to which it subjects the party of whose ranks it claims to be a part; an element that in the late political canvass, drew out appeal and remonstrance from the alarmed Northern Democracy up to the very day of election. The more liberal Democratic leaders here have, to my knowledge, frankly deplored the mad bigotry of this class.

I have nothing to recant of what I have said concerning it in the past, although aware of desperate animosities having provoked against me in consequence; so long as its members angrily refuse to assist, whether from my platform or one of their own, it matters little if it be a good one, to conserve the public peace and promote a stable prosperity, so long am I, for one, in the name of this people, Democrats and Republicans alike, the unremitting enemy of this class, nor do I fear to wait till partisanship cools, for the common judgment of that people as citizens.

Rather than weary you any longer I will abandon this imperfect indictment of men whose influence has been so pernicious in our local councils. If I have erred, it is rather because I have fallen short of the truth than ventured beyond it. Of the five hundred original Union men who organized in defiance of rebel hate, during your military occupation here, not one—I speak advisedly—is to-day in office throughout Louisiana. They have been prescribed as completely as the worst rebel by the demagogues in power. One of your own officers, who came here with you and so endeared himself to our community as a loyal and capable gentleman as to be persuaded to abide with us, was ejected from a civil office last spring to make room for one of the "ring."

The Chronicle to-day makes liberal quotations from an article of yours on "Fraud and Violence in Elections," and adds appropriate remarks. Senator Kellogg is at Willard's hotel; Senator Harris stops at the Washington House, also Mr. Vidal and lady. Your "regular" correspondent, Rob Roy, is a great favorite here among all public men. He is deservedly esteemed by the Louisiana delegation.

St. Louis Navigation.

The St. Louis Republican, of Tuesday, says:

Under the influence of the warm and genial rays of the sun the ice and snow which have covered the streets for several days are rapidly disappearing, leaving in their place any quantity of mud and slush. The ice in the river is also receiving its full share of attention, and is rapidly softening. This was realized to such an extent yesterday that the ferryboats made their regular trips without trouble, and the commander of the Lady Gay felt justified in starting his boat for New Orleans, and, under the present aspect of the weather, she will reach Cairo without detention, and will be followed to day by Captain Dave Silver's famous packet, Peoria City.

The Atlantic and Mississippi Steamship Company have the Olive Branch announced to leave this evening. The weather wise predict an open river hence to Cairo for the next two weeks at least.

The mild weather gave a lively impetus to business on 'Change, and freights for southern ports were offered in quite liberal quantities, even at the advanced rates which, at the meeting of the Association, was set for the present week at seventy-five cents per barrel on flour and one dollar and twenty-five cents per barrel on pork; pound freights forty cents per one hundred pounds.

The owners of the Great Republic—the sale of which by the United States Marshal is advertised to take place to-day—are using every effort, with good hopes of success, to raise the necessary amount to pay off the liabilities, and thus avoid a sacrifice of what is the best and finest steamer now afloat on Western waters.

A New Orleans letter to the New York Dispatch is thus cruelly uncomplimentary to Federal officials in this city:

There is here, too, a whisky ring in which it is said General Steedman, the Johnson whitewashing partner of Fullerton, now under indictment by a United States Grand Jury in your city, figures, though I do not vouch for the truth of the rumor. Other prominent officials in the Internal Revenue Collectors and Assessors offices who are around the city wearing diamond pins and rings, pockets flush with greenbacks, and sporting with fast women, are said to be infected with the mania of speculation in whisky and tobacco. It will be well for General Grant, after the fourth of March next, to cleanse these augean sables of iniquity and corruption, by turning out of office these fishy politicians, including Perry Fuller, the Collector of the Port, E. T. Parker, the Surveyor of the Port, Dr. Sullivan, the Naval officer, Smallwood, the Postmaster, Torrey, the District Attorney, for they are, none of them, fit for the places which they now hold.

The Atlanta, Georgia, New Era says:

General Grant is in our opinion the hope of the nation. We said as much as this eighteen months ago. Our recent visit to Washington has fully confirmed us in this opinion, and we now rejoice that we raised his name for the Presidency when we did. We have not been disappointed in our high expectations of the "Great Captain" of the age. We repeat he is the hope of the nation, and when he officially says "Let us have peace," the mandate will be obeyed, and order and prosperity will be restored to the entire country. He will prove a refreshing stream in a weary land. "Let us have peace."

Eighteen thousand colored voters were registered in New Orleans, but only about one hundred were permitted to vote. This illustrates the necessity of holding federal elections under the protection of Federal laws. In other parts of the State about the same proportion prevailed between the vote registered and the vote polled. The Democrats first attempted to buy the negroes; but the "inferior race" being proof against this corruption, intimidation was resorted to with success. Doubtless the election will undergo a severe scrutiny in the House of Representatives, and Louisiana may find herself unrepresented, till she submits to a legal, if not a fair election.—Kennebec, (Maine) Journal.

The American Union, published at Macon, Georgia, is a Republican paper laboring under difficulties. This is one paragraph relating to that matter:

We then sent North for two men to come to Macon and go to work on the Union. One of them answers that he is not in the humor to take up his abode in Purgatory so long as he can just as well avoid it; and the other returns a scrap cut from the Union, and asks how we can have the heart to invite our friends to face not only persecution and robbery, but death! and begs respectfully to be excused for the present.

HARD TO BEAT.—We are infomed that Mr. Nathaniel Bankston, residing near the Tangipahoa river, opposite to this place, made, from one-fourth of an acre of sugar cane, one hundred and sixty gallons of fine syrup. We have seen a sample of it and can testify to its being of fine flavor and fine appearance. With these facts before us, who can say that mother earth does not smile sweetly upon us.—Livingston Herald.

Colonel Gano, formerly of Morgan's cavalry, is preaching with great effect at Lexington, Kentucky. Mr. Gano was once a practicing physician in Texas, then member of the Legislature of that State, then a Colonel in Morgan's cavalry, and after being blown up on a steamboat turned preacher, and the most effective one, at least for drawing crowds, in the State of Kentucky.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

DEATHS LAST WEEK.—According to the report of Dr. G. W. Dirmeyer, Secretary of the Board of Health, the number of interments last week was 100. Of these 9 died of consumption, 2 in childbed, 7 stillborn, 3 tris. nascentium, 5 premature birth, 4 old age and the rest of various diseases; 30 were under 1 year of age, 16 between 1 and 15; 15 between 15 and 30; 25 between the ages of 30 and 60, 11 between the ages of 60 and 100, 100 years and upward 1; unknown 1. Of the total 63 were natives of the United States, 8 of Ireland, 6 of Germany, 3 of France, 2 of England, 1 of Italy, 1 of Canada, 1 of Africa, 1 of Prussia, 2 of Spain and 12 whose nativity was not stated. There were 52 males, 45 females and 3 with sex not stated; whites 60, blacks 24 and 11 not stated.

PARAGRAPHS.—Charles Rose, a youth, charged by Charles Laughhaw with opening and attempting to steal the contents of his money drawer, was sent to the Parish Prison without bail. A skeleton and a safe key were found in his possession. Rose was arrested about a week ago for attempting to rob the drawer of W. A. Peck & Co., at which time he had a complete set of skeleton keys.

Saturday night a burglar was discovered in the yard of Mr. Dimitry, No. 280 Camp street. One of the inmates of the house gave the alarm, and two officers, who were in the vicinity, gave chase, firing a shot at the decamping thief, but without effect. The fellow succeeded in making his escape, leaving his plunder and his own coat behind him. The latter was taken to the station.

Corporal Brim and Officer Driscoll, of the Second District police, arrested the notorious Johnny Snapper and E. B. Malone, Saturday night, while they were in the act of committing a robbery at 24 Bourbon street. Johnny Snapper resisted and shot Corporal West in the leg. West was taken to the hospital and Johnny and his comrade locked up.

Mr. Joseph Pope, a brother of Manager Pope of the St. Charles Theatre, while passing a pit dug for repairs to the gas pipe on Carondelet street, near Poydras, was suddenly confronted by a man who sprung out of the hole, seized him by the throat and ordered him to disgorge. Mr. Pope, who is quite a powerful young man, knocked him down for his pains, and called for the police.

E. B. Malone, one of the three men arrested the other night for burglarious operations on Jackson street, whose picture adorns the rogues' gallery, was before Recorder Gastinel to-day. The chances are that he will again be set at liberty. The public are everywhere declaring that "it must be stopped"—this pernicious custom of releasing men notoriously guilty of burglaries and other crimes. Until it is stopped no police can be efficient.

The Coroner is holding an inqest to-day in the case of the colored man, Bailey, who died Saturday from wounds inflicted the evening previous. No result had been reached when our reporter left.

The police are active and vigilant. The notorious Johnny Snapper, the well known William Little and the pictured E. B. Malone have all been arrested since the last issue of the REPUBLICAN. After the arrest what? not conviction, unless the courts will sustain the police.

---

THE UNEMPLOYED.—Yesterday a Canal street merchant advertised for a porter, to apply Monday morning. In passing that establishment this morning before the store was opened, our reporter saw at least twenty-five men waiting outside. This affords some idea of the number of unemployed men in this city, and their anxiety to get something to do.

---

ABOUT POWDER AND DANGER THEREFROM.—Sergeant Cambias, of the river precinct, reports to the Superintendent of Police that the flatboat, with powder on board, is below the limits of the city, and that the powder was transferred to the flat from the three-masted schooner Kate Bigan, from Philadelphia. The powder was landed for the purpose of being put in the new powder magazine on the left bank, below the city. Therefore the owners did not violate any city ordinance, and the Sergeant ordered them to put it into the magazine immediately.

The Sergeant calls the attention of the Superintendent to three powder boats that land at the Canal street ferry, where they never have less than three or four hundred pounds of powder on board. It is dangerous for them to lie under the ferry wharf, as parties are always on the wharf with lighted cigars, regardless of the explosive materials under it. The agents are L. Wood, G. W. Hoyle & Co., and Randlett & Bauer.

---

SHOOTING AFFRAY AT BROOKHAVEN, MISSISSIPPI.—A gentleman, who recently came down the Jackson railroad, states that on Tuesday last a difficulty occurred at Brookhaven, Mississippi, between Captain S. W. Younkin and a Mr. Swan, which resulted in the death of the former by a pistol shot wound at the hands of the latter. He states that Captain Younkin and Mr. Swan were in a business copartnership, which created some misunderstanding between them, and on the morning of the homicide, Captain Younkin collared Mr. Swan, shook and threatened to kill him; the latter drew his pistol and fired three shots, with the result above stated.

---

IMPRISONMENT OF COLORED VOTERS.—The case of the United States vs. Charles Cavanac came up before the United States District Court yesterday, when the District Attorney entered a nolle prosequi. Mr. Cavanac was one of the Commissioners of Election during the election for the Constitution, and as such, in obedience to the orders of the Commanding General, and the instruction of the Registrars, sent a number of colored men to the Parish Prison for an alleged attempt to vote fraudulently. The prosecution was commenced before Commissioner Shannon for false imprisonment, under the civil rights bill, whence Mr. Cavanac was sent before the United States District Court under bond.

The real facts of the matter are that the Commissioners of Election acted according to instructions from military headquarters, which authorized the arrest of legal voters who were reported by pimps and spies as having no legal right to vote. Innocent men suffered imprisonment, and the real remedy should have been against the military authorities, who authorized this outrage, and not against Mr. Cavanac.

---

PARAGRAPHS.—At the house near the corner of Johnson and Columbus streets, where a large quantity of stolen goods were captured and several suspected persons were arrested by Special Officers Hennessey and Gowey, a large Rio Grande hunting knife was found, about twelve inches long and two inches wide. It is an ugly looking weapon.

William Penn was arrested yesterday, on the steamboat landing, charged with passing a ten dollar counterfeit bill. He had other spurious money in his possession.

The New Orleans Gas Light Company has declared a dividend of six dollars per share, payable after the fifth of January next.

The crew of a flatboat lying on the other side of the river, last night, attempted to load four hundred barrels of gunpowder. The foreman of the gang was under the influence of liquor. The loading of gunpowder in the night time is in contravention of a city ordinance, and the river police prevented it.

Officer Maguire reported yesterday afternoon, that the driver of float No. 665, struck a lady with a piece of stone while on Poydras street. Upon the approach of the officer, the driver ran away, leaving his float and horse to be taken to the pound.

On motion of P. A. Ducros, Esq., attorney at law, Judge Cooley adjourned the Sixth District Court yesterday afternoon, in respect to the memory of the Honorable Auguste Prevosty, a prominent lawyer of Louisiana, of upward of thirty years standing, and a resident of the parish of Pointe Coupee.

A young man was yesterday brought up on a criminal charge before Recorder Gastinel, of the Second District. The charge was made by a Sheriff's officer, to the effect that he had furnished his brother, who had been convicted and sentenced to the Penitentiary for burglary, with a loaf of bread containing a file. The burglar and other convicts were on their way from the prison, under a guard, to the steamboat, when the officer detected the presence of the file in the loaf furnished by the brother. The culprit was discharged.

Formal inquiries have been made through the French Consulate relative to the fate of Emile Victor Fleurchamp, supposed to have died suddenly in New Orleans, but of which fact no proof has yet been found. He was one of two French orphan children reared in one of the orphan asylums in New Orleans. The other orphan, after becoming of age, went to Mexico and enlisted as a soldier under Maximillian.

Some time since a package was brought to the office of the Superintendent of Police, addressed to "Captain W. P. Madison, steamer Mittie Stephens," and this indorsement on it: "$400 for frait—take with care." The seals have never been opened. The owner of the package can have the same by application to the Superintendent and proving property.

ALLEGED COUNTERFEIT UNITED STATES TREASURY NOTES.—Before United States Commissioner Urban yesterday the case of George Carinan, charged on affidavit of James T. Cunningham, special officer Metropolitan police, with having counterfeit United States treasury notes and small pieces of United States coin in his possession, came up for examination. The money was examined by A. Fortier, president of the bank of America, and Mr. J. Marshall, formerly book-keeper at the United States Treasury in this city, who both pronounced the notes genuine, and also the coin, with the exception of a dime piece.

The prosecution having stated that the notes now shown were not all that were found in the possession of the defendant at the time of his arrest, that there was some fractional currency of denominations of 25 and 50 cents missing, the commissioner reserved his decision until to-day, in order to give the prosecution an opportunity of substantiating their assertion as to missing money.

This case was transferred to the commissioner by Recorder Gastinel. The money received by the former consisted of three $20, eight $10 and fourteen $5 notes and seventy-four pieces of small silver coin, in five and ten cents pieces, etc.

A DARING ROBBERY IN DAYLIGHT.—Yesterday afternoon, between three and four o'clock, Mr. A. B. Rennoyer, a citizen of Illinois, who, returning homeward from a trip to Texas, had taken advantage of his brief stay in New Orleans to walk about the city, was accosted at the corner of Common and Basin streets by a man, a stranger to him, who, after asking several questions as to his place of residence and length of time in the city, politely inquired whether Mr. Rennoyer could cash for him a United States treasury bond. Being informed in the negative, he inquired: "Could he change a bill?" Mr. Rennoyer said that he could, and accordingly pulled out his pocket-book containing $120 in currency. At this moment, a third party knocked roughly against Mr. Rennoyer, distracting his attention, while the other seized the pocket-book, slipped rapidly around the corner and ran. He was pursued, but not captured.

---

BURGLARY ON BASIN STREET.—Between two and three o'clock yesterday morning, the front room on the lower floor of the house No. 63 Basin street, was entered by an unknown thief, through a window, and completely stripped of all the small articles of value it contained. The room is let furnished by Mr. Barker, the proprietor of the house, to two young gentlemen. The bed was immediately in front of the two windows, the foot being opposite the one opened.

The thief succeeded in raising the windows, crawling over the two sleeping men, and getting, unobserved, away with two complete suits of clothes, including overcoats, and a pocketbook containing one hundred dollars in money.

One of the gentlemen was a passenger on the unfortunate steamer America, lately destroyed in the Ohio river, and lost everything but the suit of clothes on his back. The burglary was not discovered until the policeman of the beat, passing by, saw the window open and aroused the men.

PERJURY, ELOPEMENT AND MARRIAGE.—In the arrest, last evening, of a young gentleman well known in the city, the Times states, on a charge of perjury, there is developed the details of an elopement, which doubtless in a day or two will become public through the testimony elicited before Recorder Becker. Until that time our readers must rest satisfied with such a history of the matter as we can glean, and an omission of all names.

It seems the daughter of the prosecutrix, a young lady, perhaps fifteen, and described by those intimately acquainted with the family as being not only remarkable for her extreme beauty, but of peculiar intelligence, was privately married by a Justice of the Peace to a member of one of the most influential Creole families of the city. The ceremony, so the Justice alleges, was only performed after the sworn statement of the gentleman arrested that she had attained her majority.

Once married, it was of course useless to attempt at separation, and now the mother proposes to prosecute the witness criminally and the Justice for malfeasance in office. How the affair will eventually terminate yet remains a mystery. The matter has created no little stir among fashionable circles, both the bride and groom being well known, and the former especially, having a host of sincere friends.

ROMANCE OF A STOLEN BUGGY.—Three or four days ago a sorrel mare and top-buggy were stolen from Gravier street, between Carondelet and Bronne, and the establishment was found about one o'clock the next morning in the Third District.

The animal was so severely driven as to be utterly unable to move out of the stable since. Supposing the thief resided in the vicinity, the police have kept a lookout on the house in front of which the animal was found, from that time.

It now turns out, says the Times, that a young and rather wild clerk hired a buggy, and having occasion to stop at the office of his employer left the animal standing near the door. Finding two vehicles when he came down stairs, and not being a suficient judge of horseflesh to tell positively which was his, he jumped into the first and started for the Lake. The companion of his trip proved amiable and the wine excellent, and it is not surprising night was far advanced when they returned home.

Driving through the Third District, to leave the fairer of the passengers, the buggy was left standing on the street. The police had just then received a telegram describing the sorrel mare, and finding an equipage that answered the description exactly, it was at once seized upon and driven to the owner's stable. The young gentleman returning to the street, viewed with some surprise the sudden disappearance and lost no time in reporting it to the livery stable. Reaching there he was more astonished to to hear that the vehicle he hired had been taken out of the pound about five hours before. The youth by mistake had taken a buggy belonging to Mr. Nelson, and his own, standing some time without a driver, was finally driven to the pound by the policeman of the beat.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF THE LOSS OF THE STEAMER ERA NO. 10.—From the pilot of the steamer Era No. 10, who arrived here yesterday afternoon, on the steamer St. Nicholas, the Bee learns that the steamers Era No. 9 and Era No. 10, the former bound up, the latter coming down from Shreveport, with 886 bales cotton and sundries for this port, collided in Red river, one mile above the mouth of Old river, on the seventeenth instant, at about four A. M. A hole was knocked in the bow of the Era No. 10; she was towed to the shore by the Era No. 9, and sunk in about five hours after the collision to the cabin floor, and will probably careen over. The passengers and crew, with 269 bales cotton, and sundries, were transferred to the St. Nicholas and brought to this city. The boat will be a total toss; her cargo will be saved, but in a damaged condition. The Era No. 9 proceeded on her way up the river, having sustained no material damage.

A WANDERER.—This is one of the Picayune's pleasant stories. Whether true or untrue, it reads well:

A few weeks since an old man, a native and a long time a resident of Lyons, France, came to this city in search of a daughter, who, three years ago, left her native city for the United States. Her companion was a young and dissolute American, who, it is said, shortly after their arrival in New York, deserted her. She then adopted the mode of life too frequently resorted to by young and beautiful girls. She was an only child, the sole solace of a widowed father. Although scorned by the world, she was dear to him; and despite the contumely and reproach she had brought upon him, he set out in search of her. Shortly after his reaching New York he learned that she had come to New Orleans, and here, a few days since, he discovered her. All his importunities were unheeded; his entreaties that she would return with him to their own country denied. The interview is ascribed as a most affecting one, but it was, nevertheless, unable to soften the obdurate heart of the daughter. As a dernier resort, he has appealed to the police, but how the matter will terminate, of course, rests in the decision of the Recorder.

---

Our former co-laborer and our friend, J. M. West, was brutally beaten and abused on St. Charles street a few nights ago by two or more Metropolitan policemen. Captain West, who is one of the most adventurous and chivalrous men alive, is badly bruised about the head. Luckily for the policemen the first blow from a club stunned him, otherwise the report might have been different.—Crescent.

In the above paragraph there is an ungenerous fling at the police. Captain West was badly beaten, but the blows were struck by policemen, as is alleged, and not denied, to prevent him from pulling the trigger of a pistol which he held at the breast of a patrolman, whose life was saved only by knocking down the party alluded to, who himself declares that from the time he was in Strong's coffeehouse until he found himself in the police station he was utterly unconscious of what he was doing. According to the police reports there were two lucky men; one the policeman whose life was so providentially and promptly saved, the other the prisoner, who otherwise would have been arrested on a most serious charge. No one presumes that Mr. West would have interfered to rescue a prisoner from the police or would have attempted to shoot the officer had he been in a condition of moral responsibility. It was an unfortunate affair and much to be regretted, but while the public may be willing to exculpate Mr. West from any intention to commit a wrong, it is unjust to charge policemen who saved two lives with abusing one of these very men whose life was saved.

This is said with only the kindest feeling toward the party alluded to.

A CONSPIRACY.—Last evening Mr. Johnson, an old gentleman, apparently fifty at the least, came to the office of the Superintendent of Police to complain that he had been the victim of a conspiracy. It appears, according to the report of the Times, that while promenading through the city, toward dark, Mr. Johnson made the acquaintance of quite a fine looking woman, who being amiably disposed, invited him to take a walk. The old gentleman, nothing loth, joined her, and victims of mutual admiration, wended their way to the residence of the woman, somewhere in the rear of the city.

The house, a frame building, with a yard, was at length reached, and the two entered the large side gate. Scarcely had they proceeded half a dozen steps before the woman suddenly disappeared. Mr. Johnson at first believed himself the victim of a joke, and returned toward the street, when, to his surprise, he found the gate locked.

He endeavored to climb over the pickets, but they stuck in his legs, and he fell. At length, driven to despair, he banged loudly at a side door. This brought out the proprietress, who, by the by, was not his companion of the promenade. She threatened to arrest him as a thief, but a policeman fortunately passing by he was set at liberty.

Superintendent Cain will look after the character of the inmates of this delectable habitation.

AN ACT

To Form a New Parish to be Called the Parish of Iberia.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That from and after the passage of this act there shall be a new parish formed from a portion of the south part of the parish of St. Martin and from a portion of the north part of the parish of St. Mary, to be called and known by the name of the parish of Iberia.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That the following shall be the boundaries of the parish of Iberia, viz: Beginning at the Gulf of Mexico at the entrance to the Southwest, or Vermilion Pass; thence along the middle of the main channel of said pass to the entrance into Vermilion Bay; thence in a direct line to the mouth of Petite Anse Bayou; thence in a direct line to the western shore of Lake Peigneur; thence along the western shore of said lake, and along the line dividing the parishes of St. Martin, Vermilion and Lafayette to a point intersected by a line running east and west two and one-half miles north of the township line between townships eleven and twelve south, in range five east, thence due east to the township line between ranges five and six east, thence southeast to the upper line of lands now belonging to S. M. Darby (originally confirmed to J. Fontenette, commonly represented number fifty-nine), thence northeastwardly along said upper line to Lake Yasse, thence southeastwardly through the middle of said lake, in a direct line to the upper line of lands now owned by John Wyche, thence along said upper line to the Bayou Teche, thence crossing said bayou to the upper line of lands belonging to J. F. Wyche, following said upper line to the depth of forty arpents, thence following the rear concession of lands lying south of J. F. Wyche, and fronting Bayou Teche at a distance of forty arpents from said bayou to the south line of Onezephore Delahoussaye, thence circumscribing the lands of said Oneziphore Delahoussaye to Coulie Portage, following said Coulie to Bayou Portage, thence along the middle of said bayou to Lake Fausse Point, and through the middle of said lake to a point intersected by the township line between townships eleven and twelve south; thence east along said line to the eastern limits of the parish of St. Martin on Grand river, thence southwardly with said limits to the line between townships twelve and thirteen south, thence westwardly in a direct line to the northwest corner of the lands of Charles Greivemberg, thence southeastwardly across the Bayou Teche along the upper line of said lands of Charles Grevemberg and in a direct line to the sea marsh, thence through said sea marsh midway between the highlands of Cypremort and Grand Cote to Vermilion Bay, thence through said bay to the southeast pass of Cote Blanche Bay, and thence along the coast of the Gulf of Mexico to the point of beginning, including Petite Anse Island.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of the Governor, immediately after the passage of this act, to nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint for the said parish a Judge, a Sheriff, a Recorder, and all other officers that may be necessary therefor, whose power and duties shall be the same as those of other judges, sheriffs, recorders and like officers throughout the State.

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of the Parish Judge of the said parish of Iberia immediately after he receives his commission, to convene the several Justices of the Peace to meet at a convenient time and place, a majority of whom shall form a quorum, for the purpose of laying off four Police Jury Districts in said parish.

SEC. 5. Be it further enacted, etc., That the Parish Judge of the parish of Iberia, as soon as the police district shall have been formed as required by the foregoing section of this act, and after giving regular notice of time and place, shall cause an election to be held by a Justice of the Peace in each Police District, for the election of two members of each district to the Police Jury.

SEC. 6. Be it further enacted, etc., That the town of New Iberia shall be the county seat of said parish, and that the Parish Judge shall convene the members of the Police Jury, immediately after the election, at the town of New Iberia, for the purpose of causing to be erected thereat the necessary public buildings.

SEC. 7. Be it further enacted, etc., That the Parish Judge shall keep his office at the county seat of said parish, and that the said parish shall form a part of the Third Judicial District of the State, and the District Court for said parish shall be held at the seat of justice thereof at such times as may be fixed by law.

SEC. 8. Be it further enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of the Clerks of the District and Parish Courts of the parishes of St. Mary and St. Martin to transmit to the Clerks of the District and Parish Courts of the parish of Iberia all petitions, answers, documents and papers appertaining to suits wherein the defendant or defendants reside within the parish of Iberia.

SEC. 9. Be it further enacted, etc., That immediately after the passage of this act it shall be the duty of the Recorders of the parishes of St. Mary and St. Martin to make a true copy from the records of all acts, deeds and titles, papers of record in their respective offices, relative to or affecting landed property situated within the limits of the parish of Iberia, which the said Recorders shall cause to be transcribed in a well-bound book or books, paraphed ne varietur at the top and foot of each page, accompanied by a certificate at the end of each book, with the seal of the said Recorders affixed to the end of their respective book or books, all of which shall be made, and with the original acts and title deeds be transmitted by the said Recorders; respectively, to the Recorder of the parish of Iberia, at the expense of the parish of Iberia.

SEC. 10. Be it further enacted, etc., That until otherwise provided for by the Legislature the parish of Iberia hereby created shall be represented in both branches of the General Assembly by the duly qualified Representatives of the parishes of St. Mary and St. Martin.

SEC. 11. Be it further enacted, etc., That in due time and before the expiration of the term for which the Representatives of the parishes of St. Mary and St. Martin have been elected, the General Assembly shall make the necessary provisions in order that the said parish of Iberia may be duly represented in said General Assembly.

SEC. 12. Be it further enacted, etc., That nothing in this act shall prevent the Collectors of St. Mary and St. Martin from collecting the arrear taxes which may be due within the limits of said parish of Iberia, including the taxes for the year eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

SEC. 13. Be it further enacted, etc, That the Sheriff of the parish of Iberia, before entering on the duties of his office shall give bond in the penal sum of eight thousand dollars with similar securities and under the same conditions as are required of the Sheriffs for the faithful performance of the duties of their office and for the collection of and accounting for all taxes and fines and other sums which it may be his duty to collect.

SEC. 14. Be it further enacted, etc., That the school fund for said parish of Iberia shall be provided in the same manner as for the other parishes of the State.

SEC. 15. Be it further enacted, etc., That the existing laws and rules of practice for the several courts held in the parish of St. Martin relative to public notices and advertisements and in relation to all judicial sales made in said parish of St. Martin, shall be and exist in full force in the parish of Iberia.

SEC. 16. Be it further enacted, etc., That the Police Jury of the parish of Iberia shall have all the powers that are now possessed by, and be subject to all the duties that are now enjoined upon, the Police Jury of the parish of St. Martin.

SEC. 17. Be it further enacted, etc., That this act shall take effect from and after its passage.

Special Dispatches to the N. O. Republican

WASHINGTON, December 18, 1868.

Hon. James F. Wilson, of Iowa, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, has introduced a resolution in the House instructing the committee on the revision of the laws of the United States to examine into and investigate the action of certain District Judges in appointing official general assignees, and to examine into the conduct of the latter.

Henry I. Black, George F. H. Youngs and Henry Street have been appointed Internal Revenue Storekeepers, at New Orleans, on the recommendation of Supervisor Creecy.

Mr. Lupton, of Tennessee, is ahead for General Steedman's place. The objection to Mr. Johnson, who is pretty well recommended, is that he holds office under Governor Warmoth, and is not satisfied with one office.

Mr. Sypher and his admirers claim that it was through his influence that the militia bill was passed.

The bill to extend the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims over Louisiana meets with decided opposition.

Its opponents say it was gotten up to serve the interests of a number of speculators in war claims.

Mr. Billings, of New Orleans, now here, is supposed to be in the ring.

ROB ROY.

WASHINGTON, December 21, 1868.

The President has gone back on his New Orleans friends and to-day nominated a Memphis gentleman, W. O. Loftes, Collector of Internal Revenue, vice Steedman. Your Senators say they will not allow any non resident carpet-bagger to be confirmed.

Adolph Bouchard, of New Orleans, now here pressing a cotton claim, has been nominated Collector of Internal Revenue, vice Tisdale, removed. The President had nominated Mr. Johnson, but on getting more light, and satisfying himself that Bouchard is a native Louisianaian, and can be confirmed, he changed the nomination.

James Hart has been nominated to Norcross's place.

Congress has adjourned to the fifth of January.

ROB ROY.

[Associated Press Dispatches.]

WASHINGTON, December 17.—Senate.—The bill granting the right of way through public lands to the New Orleans, Mobile and Chattanooga Railroad, was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

The House bill, removing disabilities from certain citizens of South Carolina, passed.

Mr. Sumner's resolution regarding the Spanish revolutions was discussed. Mr. Bayard characterized them as impertinent. The resolution went over.

The resolution of the Finance Committee censuring the President's financial views, was discussed.

Mr. Dixon spoke at length on the financial question; he said that the way to resume specie payments was to first institute a system of rigid economy, and second to remove all political disabilities from the Southern people. The resolution finally passed—43 to 6.

The House was engaged all day on Stevens eulogies.

Dispatches from St. Louis indicate the election of Carl Schurz to the United States Senate.

Judge Chase is quoted as having said that he don't believe a single Associate Justice has given an intimation of his views on the constitutionality of legal tenders.

Customs from the seventh to the twelfth instant, inclusive, $2,162,000.

Hon. Robert J. Walker and W. W. Worden, the President's private secretary, were before the Retrenchment Committee to-day in reference to the Alaska corruption fund.

Internal revenue receipts to-day, $184,000.

The Reconstruction Committee have continued the examination regarding Mississippi and Georgia.

General Sypher, at the request of Mr. Menard, will present the latter's credentials to-morrow. Mr. Hunt will present certain papers; also Simon Jones, when the whole matter, without argument or recognition, will go to the Election Committee.

The House bill repealing militia restrictions passed the Senate without comment.

Governor Bullock, of Georgia, having been summoned before the Reconstruction Committee of the House and requested to give his opinion as to the proper mode of overcoming the difficulties in Georgia, recommended that there should be a literal execution of the reconstruction acts, which required the primal organization of the State Legislature, to be made by the admission of only those who could take the test oath, or had been relieved of disabilities by Congress.

This course would restore the colored men to their seats without any special legislation and place the legislative department of Georgia in the hands of loyal men. After the adoption by such a body of the fundamental conditions precedent to the State's admission to the Union, all members eligible under the State Constitution and the fourteenth amendment will be admitted to seats and no further action of Congress would be necessary.

[Special Dispatch to the Chicago Tribune.]

WASHINGTON, December 14.—The House Committee on Freedmen's Affairs have determined, almost unanimously, to report against a bill for continuing the bureau. The parties interested in getting it continued will now labor with the Senate, and some of them express confidence that Senator Wilson can and will carry it through for them. The judgment of the House is unquestionably against its passage, and that of the Senate is believed to be so. If it should pass the Senate, it might possibly be carried in the House, though that is doubtful.

The committee has been greatly beset by the friends of continuance for several days, but the chairman to-day told them that in the present temper of the House it would be wholly useless to bring a bill forward, as it would certainly be killed. The committee will probably report in favor of continuing the freedmen's hospitals at Washington, Richmond, Vicksburg and New Orleans for six months, as the expenses will not be large and the benefits will be great. They have not yet determined what they will do about investigating the affairs of the Bureau.

The House Postoffice Committee to-day took up the question of postal telegraphs, and are likely to have it under consideration for some time. Hon. E. B. Washburne approved and spoke briefly about his bill for a new government telegraph line from here to New York, and William Orton, of the Western Union Line, made a long speech against all schemes of postal telegraphing. Mr. Washburne is to be heard again, and Gardner Hubbard will be heard bye-and-bye on his project for using the present lines through the Postoffice Department. It may be said in this connection that several postal bills are to be brought in during the session. One of them, for a government line between Boston and New York, came in to-day. It is not yet possible to tell what the views of the committee are, nor to say how any of the projects will be received by the house.

Special Dispatch to the Cincinnati Gazette.]

WASHINGTON, December 14.—The conclusion of the whole matter about Caleb Cushing is that nobody knows where he has gone, and that Mr. Seward is immensely tickled with the muddle he has created in the public mind about the matter. It was given out last night by a Senator who had talked with the Secretary Saturday evening, that Mr. Cushing had certainly gone to England to aid Reverdy Johnson. It is given out to-night by a Senator who talked with him to-day when at the capitol that Mr. Cushing has gone to Bogota, or somewhere else in South America, to negotiate for making a canal across the isthmus of Darien. Correspondents and Congressmen are doing their best to get at the facts about the mission, but the Secretary is as yet too much for them. Somebody will make him show his hand, however, after a while.

WASHINGTON, December 18.—Senate—Mr. Kellogg's bill regarding loyal claimants in Louisiana and Arkansas was indefinitely postponed.

Mr. Abbott introduced a similar bill, applicable to all the lately rebellious States. Referred to the Judiciary Committee.

House—Colonel Hunt's and Menard's papers were referred to the Election Committee without remark.

A resolution appointing a committee to investigate the Louisiana election was referred to the Reconstruction Committee.

WASHINGTON, December 19.—Senate—Mr. Abbott introduced a bill for the payment of the claims of loyal citizens South. It empowers Chief Justice Chase to appoint three commissioners, who shall meet here and award claims not to exceed two million dollars, proof of loyalty to be the same as exacted in the Quartermaster's Department.

Mr. Edmunds introduced a bill repealing the admission of Georgia. The preamble states that the Legislature violated the fourteenth amendment, in not purging itself of members ineligible under the fourteenth article, and violated both the constitution and the principle upon which reconstruction is founded, in expelling negroes. The bill revives military government and allows the present constitution to operate, subject to the pleasure of Congress; that the Legislature assemble, those under the fourteenth article excluded, and that the Federal courts have concurrent jurisdiction, when one party swears justice can not be had in the provisional courts.

The Judiciary Committee was directed to inquire whether the removal of political disability passed prior to the adoption of the fourteenth amendment is now valid.

Sumner's resolution congratulating the Spanish people passed.

Senator Cameron eulogized Mr. Stevens until adjournment.

House—The Committee on the Revision of the Laws was directed to inquire into the expediency of appointing a commission to make changes in the bankrupt laws, to make the practice uniform. The difficulty appears to arise from certain district judges appointing general assignees, and the scope of inquiry covers the proceedings of such assignees. Mr. Finney's death was announced, when the House adjourned to Monday.

WASHINGTON, December 18.—The Speaker laid before the House Colonel Hunt's claims to Colonel Mann's seat as Representative from Louisiana. It is understood that neither Hunt, Jones or Menard will be allowed to take a seat pending the contest.

Increase of the whisky tax again is predicted.

The Chronicle appears to have received $3000 in gold for the use of its columns by Robert J. Walker in discussing the Alaska purchase.

A bill was introduced in the Senate to-day forbidding civil officers from holding military commissions. This will prevent the appointment of officers to the Cabinet.

Andrew J. Goss has been appointed collector at St. Augustine, Florida.

General Grant, declining a reception at Philadelphia, returns here to-night.

WASHINGTON, December 19.—The Supreme Court, in the case of Homes Foundry vs. the United States, orders the reversal of the decision of the Louisiana Circuit Court and that the case be remanded to that court for further proceedings.

WASHINGTON, December 19.—Senator Pomeroy introduced a bill requiring the constitutional convention of Georgia to reassemble and make express provision in its fundamental law, that citizens may hold office irrespective of race or color.

A resolution offered by Mr. Harlan was adopted, requesting the Judiciary Committee to frame a bill reapportioning representation in Congress according to section two of the fourteenth amendment.

Discussion as to taking up the copper tariff is now in progress.

WASHINGTON, December 19.—The President has nominated George W. Colby, Collector of the Second District of Alabama; Otis H. Russell, Fourth District of Virginia; Robert K. Boyd, Second District of Tennessee; Albert G. Ryan, First District of Arkansas; Lloyd D. Wooddell, Assessor of the First District of Georgia; Thomas K. Burdett, Collector of the First District of Mississippi; James Davis, Postmaster at Memphis; Thomas M. Stillwell, Minister to Venezuela.

Secretary Seward testified before the Retrenchment Committee that the expense attending the Alaska purchase did not exceed $500 at the State Department.

Senate—The Chair presented a memorial of fifteen hundred citizens of Stockholm, who desire assistance to emigrate.

Mr. Pomeroy presented another Georgia bill, providing for the reassembling of the Constitutional Convention within thirty days to construct an organic law to define more clearly the rights of colored citizens and forbid the meeting of the Legislature until the required amendment to the Constitution is adopted.

Mr. Kellogg presented the Louisiana Legislature's resolutions condoling Stevens's death.

The Judiciary Committee were instructed to consider the appointment of representation in accordance with the fourteenth amendment.

The Senate refused to consider the copper tariff bill by 22 to 25.

Adjourned.

WASHINGTON, December 20.—M. De Bodisco, of the Russian Legation, notified the Committee on Public Expenditures, through Secretary Seward, that his Government will not permit him to testify before the committee.

General Grant attended Dr. Sunderland's church to-day. Secretary Schofield has returned.

Advices from Greece and Turkey show indisposition to precipitate hostilities.

WASHINGTON, December 21.—The government will proceed to attach the property of Frazer, Trenholm & Co., on a judgment for half a million dollars. Proceedings will commence January 1.

This morning's Republican says the Senate Judiciary Committee has decided that there is no necessity for Congressional action in reference to Georgia, and will report Senator Edmunds's bill back with amendments.

Senate.—Wilson introduced a bill allowing Associate Justices of the Supreme Court having attained the age of seventy to resign, with continuance of salary for life.

A motion to add two members to the Pacific Railroad Committee, giving the South a representation, is pending with a sharp sectional debate in progress.

House.—Without a quorum. No business. Adjourned.

The President has nominated W. O. Lofland Collector of Internal Revenue for the First District of Louisiana, Adolph Bouchard for the Third District and James Hart Assessor for the Third District.

LONDON, December 17.—The Telegraph thinks Reverdy Johnson would have fared better in the Alabama claims negotiations had he been less zealous for peace.

A Greek steamer was chased to and blockaded in Syria by a Turkish man-of-war.

CONSTANTINOPLE, December 17.—Greece rejects the Turkish ultimatum, and the Greek envoy here has received his passports. All male Greeks remaining in Turkey after a fortnight will be regarded as Turkish subjects. A naval battle has occurred between the Greek steamer Erosis and a Turkish cruiser, the particulars of which have not transpired.

Many suspected Greeks are detained here. It is reported that the Corte has declined to admit to the Bosphorus a Greek ironclad, to take on board the Greek Embassador.

MADRID, December 17.—Rumors of difficulties among members of the Provisional Government are unfounded. The city is tranquil, and the citizens returning to their homes and business.

HAVANA, December 17.—The Diario, strongly in the Spanish interest, says that within the jurisdiction of Santiago de Cuba no crops will be gathered. The insurrectionists destroy the coffee as soon as ripe, and feed the sugar cane to horses. The Diario charges many cases of violation of women to the insurgents, but the Cubans deny the truth of this.

Troops from Spain have arrived, which revives the hopes of the Spaniards that the revolution will be speedily suppressed.

The Diario says the misery in Santiago de Cuba is heartrending, whichever party prevails the prosperity of the eastern district is ruined for years.

HAVANA, December 18.—A fire at Cardenas burned a hardware store and the papers of the American Consulate.

LONDON, December 18.—South American advices report that the Allies threatened an attack on Villetta. McMahon had ascended the Paraguay river with gunboats.

PARIS, December 18.—M. Moustier announces some changes in the French ministry, indicates a more liberal policy toward the press.

MADRID, December 18.—A large meeting of the Progressists was held at Carthagena. Espartero was named as their choice for the throne. It is said that Serrano has resigned the presidency of the ministry.

The provisional government report that the peace is not likely to be disturbed during the Cortes election.

A slight demonstration was made at Merando in favor of the Carlists, but was easily suppressed.

The bearer of a Republican proclamation was arrested yesterday at Madeira.

PARIS, December 18.—The Moniteur regrets the rupture between Turkey and Greece, and hopes the action of the great powers will shorten its duration and circumscribe its consequences.

LONDON, December 18.—The Times, in an article on the Eastern war, says Greece is the aggressor. The Times thinks the European powers will bring a pressure to bear which will restore peace.

The Star and Standard both attribute the outbreak in the East to the obstinacy of the European powers in maintaining the statu quo of the Ottoman empire. A dispatch from Constantinople charges the Greeks with commencing hostilities.

CONSTANTINOPLE, December 18.—It is officially announced that the Grand Turk will enforce his demands on Greece. Four frigates sailed yesterday for the Archiapelago.

LONDON, December 18.—Greece has called out her reserves, and the mobilization of the militia ordered and formation into battalions.

GIBRALTAR, December 18.—A heavy shock of an earthquake was felt to-day, but no lives or property destroyed.

QUEENSTOWN, December 18.—Advices from Antwerp report the ship St. John's abandoned at sea.

LIVERPOOL, December 18.—The steamer Columbia, from New York November twenty-eight, has not arrived. Apprehensions for her safety are felt. Heavy premiums are demanded for insurance. [Note: The steamer Palmyra, which arrived December sixteen, reports having met the Columbia with her screw lost, but requiring no assistance. She was proceeding to Queenstown under sail.]

LONDON, December 19.—The Greeks sent two war ships to Syria to enforce the entrance to that harbor. The French, British and Russian governments have each one war vessel at Syria.

Hobart Pacha dont attempt to blockade the port of Syria; he allowed two Greek ships to enter.

CONSTANTINOPLE, December 19.—The rejection of the Sultan's ultimatum by Greece is confirmed.

The Greek ship Erosis ran into Syra, damaged in a conflict with a Turkish cruiser.

PARIS, December 19.—Napoleon and Eugenie have visited Queen Isabella.

The changes in the French ministry are regarded as confirmation of Napoleon's programme of liberality at home and peace abroad.

HAVANA, December 18.—Steamship Bienville, New York for New Orleans, arrived this morning.

LONDON, December 19.—Hobart Pacha, at the request of the French Admiral in the Archipelago, would await the order of the Turkish Government before coercing Erosis.

The utter inability of the great powers of Europe to control the action of Greece in the pending troubles with Turkey, excites distrust in financial circles here, and a general falling off in all moneyed values is feared. The press of London unites in urging the great powers to make a final remonstrance.

MADRID, December 19.—The elections in corporate cities are progressing without disturbance; a large majority of those elected favor a monarchy. The Government authorizes the statement that peace with Chili is certain.

LONDON, December 19.—The Turkish commander, Omar Pacha, is forbidden to invade Greece unless armed bands of Greeks cross the Thessalian frontier.

PARIS, December 19.—The Moniteur has the following details of the Erosis affair: The Erosis answered Hobart Pacha's signal with shot, and immediately ran into Syria. Hobart agreed to raise the blockade if the Erosis was taken to Athens to await judicial proceedings for the outrage.

CONSTANTINOPLE, December 19.—The Greek Embassador demands the protection of the great powers for Greek subjects in Constantinople. The French Envoy declined to act.

The Sultan demands the banishment of Greeks from Bulgaria.

HAVANA, December 19.—Generals Espinore and Latorre, with 350 soldiers, arrived here to-day by steamer from Spain.

General Espinore relieves Bulounseda, and Latorre will command the eastern department.

A Spanish prisoner who escaped from Boganio reports that the insurgents had shot a major and captain who refused to capitulate, and that the other officers were in irons. Boganio is destitute of provisons.

Insurgents continue in the neighborhood of Mansanillo. It is rumored that there is fighting going on at Holguin, Santiago de Cuba and Bayamo.

LONDON, December 19.—John Laird, a new member of Parliament, published a correspondence which he had with Reverdy Johnson, showing the origin and course of friend ship between them. Laird himself made the first advance toward friendship. In October last, long before the Liverpool banquet, Laird invited Johnson to Birkenhead, to his establishment, to hear his (Laird's) wishes for lasting peace between England and America. Johnson, in reply, regretted that lack of time would prevent his acceptance of the invitation, and added the following words: "Notwithstanding you sympathized with my Southern brethren during the late war, I shall have much pleasure in making your acquaintance and hear your sincere wishes for peace."

The utter inability of great powers to control the action of Greece excites distrust in financial circles here. Fear of general falling off in all moneyed values. This distrust is only increased by the reassurance of the French press that even if Russia is not in earnest in her remonstrance, it is the general impression that she will not be able to render Greece any material aid. The press of London generally unite in urging the great powers to a final remonstrance.

LONDON, December 20.—Eastern advices are more pacific. The Greek government, which was heretofore hurried along by popular eagerness, is now disposed to listen to the protests of European powers. It is understood the Western powers sustain the Sultan's ultimatum, while Russian interest in Greece will look to modification.

It was rumored yesterday that Russia had sent an unfavorable note to France. It is a canard intended to depress the market.

CONSTANTINOPLE, December 20.—The Greeks in this city ask of the Porte the privilege of remaining here in case of hostilities, agreeing to preserve strict neutrality. Corps have been formed ready to proceed to Greece at short notice.

Turkey continues tranquil.

[Special Dispatch to the Chicago Tribune.]

NEW YORK, December 14.—Money.—The week opens with decided activity in the money market. Currency shipments to the South and West continue on a liberal scale. One bank to-day received an order from Chicago for five hundred thousand dollars, and another bank had an order for four hundred thousand to Cincinnati. An intimation from Washington that the Supreme Court is likely to declare the legal tender act unconstitutional excites eager interest in Wall street, but it is generally believed that the Chief Justice will postpone the decision until Congress is allowed time to take a less violent method of reaching specie payment. There is no disposition to operate until the question is decided. Several private telegrams were received this afternoon that the act would probably be declared constitutional, and gave a momentary buoyancy to the market.

NEW YORK, December 20.—The Herald's Havana letter of the twelfth says:

"It is a fact that a gigantic insurrection exists on this island, supported or countenanced by the great mass of the native population, the exceptions being insignificant in number; that it has had many encounters with Spanish troops, in which its supporters inflicted quite as much, if not more, damage than they suffered, and that the best informed among the disinterested and unprejudiced are already beginning to calculate on ultimate success, which shall leave Cuba free and independent.

"In Hayti Salnave captured Miragoane and destroyed many houses and a large quantity of produce. The prisoners all amnestied, except a few chiefs. Salnave will next attack Jacmel. Diplomatic representatives acknowledge the present blockade effective.

NEW YORK, December 19.—The Congressional Committee to investigate the election frauds will commence to-morrow.

The commercial travelers are holding a meeting here with the view of petitioning Congress relative to the license law.

The memorial against the bill increasing the copper tariff, which passed the House, is receiving the signatures of our leading merchants.

The stringency in the money market has been very severe during the morning and well in the afternoon. The demand was active on call, and the rates paid were seven per cent on currency and seven per cent on gold, as well as 1-32 per cent on commission in addition to the legal rate in gold, and 1-32, 1-16, and one eighth per cent in addition to the legal currency.

On the stock exchange at one time there was a difference of one eighth to one-quarter per cent between cash and regular, and three-quarter per cent between cash and buyer for thirty days. These high rates induced some of the Shylocks to hold their money for still greater shaves. But toward three o'clock the demand lessened and the market was a little easier, loans being made at seven and six per cent on gold, and finally at seven per cent currency.

The discount market is unsettled, and there is next to nothing doing. The bank statement is unfavorable, but the loss in legal tenders is not so large as was expected, and on the whole, it was well received. The decrease in legal tenders represents the shipments to the South, and the difference between the loss in deposits and that in loans, specie and greenbacks, shows that in round numbers the banks have lost 5,000,000 in legal tenders and National bank notes during the week.

WASHINGTON, December 21.—The Retrenchment Committee, discussing Mr. Johnson, says: "The character of Mr. Johnson's appointments from then till now are illustrated in the case of Perry Fuller, who, after being rejected by the Senate almost unanimously as Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and although rich from government and Indian contracts, desired the office of Collector of Customs in New Orleans, where the legitimate fees would not exceed $3000 per annum. Yet New Orleans reeks with fraud even worse than New York."

This evening's Express says: "A report has been sent from this city to certain journals that C. E. Creecy, Esq., the newly appointed Supervisor for Louisiana, is not entitled to half the proceeds of the tobacco recently seized at his instance at New Orleans on account of frauds on the revenue, because of Mr. Creecy's position as Internal Revenue Supervisor. There is no truth in the report. The Commissioner has made no such decision, the effect of which would be to induce Supervisors to consult the interests of the tobacco and whisky rings rather than the interests of the Government. Mr. Creecy's reward for the New Orleans seizures will, it is expected, amount to $36,000."

The dispatch steamer Tallapoosa left for Aspinwall to-day.

The Reconstruction Committee had the Georgia and Mississippi cases up to-day, but adjourned without action till January 5.

Mr. Seward, answering a letter from New York merchants says: "It is my duty to inform you that the United States are at peace with the Republic of Hayti. The Government of the United States will protect no United States citizens who attempt to trade in Haytian ports in violation of any existing blockade or any lawful decree of the Government of the Haytian Republic, which has been recognized by the United States. All persons trading in insurrectionary ports of Hayti will be liable to be dealt with according to the processes and principles of international law."

In the case of Gordon vs. the United States, appealed from the Court of Claims, that the award made by the Secretary of War was null and void upon repeal of the joint resolution directing it, and that an action founded on that award must be dismissed. The action of the Secretary of War in making the award was held to be ministerial and not binding on the Government. The case is from Florida and involves damages on account of the war.

The court adjourns from twenty-fourth instant to January fourth, on which day original actions between States and actions arising under the Constitution will be called.

Senator Trumbull's bill providing for the safety of extradition prisoners, is approved by Secretary Seward.

The Retrenchment Committee publish a report on revenue frauds. They say: "The greatest want is undoubtedly of honest officials, but no improvement can be hoped for in that direction under the present executive—a fact Congress should have realized and acted upon long ago, and then devised a system which human ingenuity and official rapacity could not easily circumvent.

They say most of the distilleries are running now in fraud of the revenue.

A hospital in course of construction, attached to the Howard University, a freedmen's institution, fell to-day hurting fifteen, ten of whom were colored, five seriously.

The Senate passed the resolution adding two Southern Senators to the Pacific Railroad Committee, and adjourned.

[Special Dispatch to the Missouri Democrat.]

WASHINGTON, December 18. — Recent events in Cuba have brought out a fact heretofore known only to a comparatively small circle, and carefully guarded by those who composed it. The idea of getting possession of Cuba has been very prominent in Mr. Johnson's mind since the Spanish bombardment of Valparaiso. Soon after that event a Senator in close sympathy with the President sounded the Committe on Foreign Relations to ascertain how far the Republicans would support the President in a direct seizure of Cuba. The leading members of the committee opposed it, and so did Mr. Seward.

PLAN OF PRESENT REVOLUTION.

The plan of the present revolution, already telegraphed as having originated here, was set on foot by the Republicans acting in concert with leading Cuban Liberals. One of the most prominent in the matter here was a general officer of distinction under Bolivar. The plan was submitted to numbers of the members of each House, and considerable material aid is said to have been secured here. The first idea was to have a considerable number of ex-soldiers to go quietly from New Orleans, Charleston and the Texas ports, the revolutionists on the island to be ready to act promptly in concert with these parties. It was supposed that the Cuban authorities would of themselves be utterly powerless to check the movement, and that, as it would require more than thirty days to get any aid from Spain, the possession of the whole island could be gained.

This was to be followed by those interested in the two Houses of Congress here either in recognition of the Republican government there, or by annexation of the island and the creation thereof into a regularly organized State government.

The first date fixed for the breaking out of the revolution was early last winter; but satisfactory arrangements regarded as safe could not be completed, and the blow was postponed to the twenty-second of last February. There was a failure on this occasion, caused by the unexpected watchfulness of the Cuban authorities. As soon, however, as the late troubles assumed a grave character in Spain it was believed by the leaders in this plan that a favorable time for the movement had arrived, and insurrection began. The opinion is daily gaining strength here that the revolution will finally succeed.

A private letter from New Orleans, says affairs in official circles there are about as bad as well can be, and as an instance of the situation, it is stated that Mrs. General Gaines, who gained her great suit in the Supreme Court here last winter, is preparing to have Judge Durell, of the District Court of New Orleans, impeached, on the ground that he demanded money before he would do his duty in her case. The knowledge of this fact is said to cause a good deal of talk down there.

TALLAHASSEE, Florida, December 21.—Telegraphic information hasbeen received here to-day that Judge Miller, of the United States Supreme Court, on the plea of the respondent, Gleason, has signed the citation which was refused signature here in the case lately closed in the State Supreme Court by judgment of ouster against Lieutenant Governor Gleason, inquiring as to his title to office under the State Constitution.

The United States District Court is in session at Jacksonville, Florida, and it is currently reported here that efforts will be made to indict Governor Reed before a jury for some failure or excess of duty while agent of the Postoffice Department previous to election as Governor; also to indict Senator Osborne for some misdealing while register in bankruptcy previous to his election as Senator.

LONDON, December 21.—Messrs. Gladstone, Bright and Lowe have been re-elected to Parliamant.

Mr. Gladstone announced himself not wholly in favor of the ballot, but if free voting was impossible without such safeguard, he was for the ballot.

Mr. Bright also spoke before re election, saying he declined the Secretaryship for India on account of the severe labor of that position, and also because the popular views on the Indian policy were not sufficiently far advanced. He argued that the recent elections furnish fresh evidence in favor of the ballot; denounced the profligacy of the Tory party, and promised, on the part of the Cabinet, economical administration of the Government.

It is generally believed that the French ministerial changes are due to the influence of the anti-clerical free press.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sunday, December, 20.—The Porte approves of Hobart Pasha's conduct at Syria. The Embassadors of the Western powers decline to exercise protection of the affairs of the Greek residents after their expulsion from Turkish dominions.

LONDON, December 21.—President Johnson's full message has arrived. The Times refers to the President's stubbornness, denounces his repudiation proposition, and approves of the Senate and House's disposition of the document.

LISBON, December 21.—Rio Janeiro advices to sixth instant, say no fighting has occurred since last report. Rear Admiral Davis and McMahon had gone to Ascuncion.

WASHINGTON, December 22.—There are a hundred large cotton cases pending before the Court of Claims, some involving $200,000, aggregating several millions The Treasury Department takes great interest in the matter. Mr. Hale, of New York, has been regularly employed to defend these cases. Facts are carefully sifted and the loyalty of claimants carefully scrutinized.

PARIS, December 22.—It is reported that the Austrian Government has instructed Prince Metternich to act in concert with France in the Eastern question.

The Presse represents the war feeling in Constantinople intense. The Russian flag was publicly burned.

MONTGOMERY, December 17.—To-day the stockholders of the projected Chattanooga and Meridian Railroad elected N. D. Stanton, of Boston, President, and ex-Governor Patton Vice-President.

The House has passed a bill applying the two and three per cent fund of the State to the road from Decatur to Montgomery. It will probably pass the Senate.

The House is discussing a revenue bill. No signs of adjournment yet.

RICHMOND, December 17. — Governor Wells, this morning, respited Peter Phillips, who was to have been hung on Friday for wife murder, until February 15, by which time the habeas corpus issued by Judge Underwood in his case will have been disposed of in the United States Court.

The gallows was being erected, the Sheriff having determined to disregard the habeas corpus and hang the prisoner, unless respited by the Governor.

CHICAGO, December 14.—Our city is already beginning to fill up with soldiers who come to take part in the grand reunion to-morrow and the day following. The following are now here: General Grant and staff, Lieutenant General Sherman and family, Major Generals Negley, Palmer, Curtis, A. G. Smith, Giles A. Smith, Belknap, Hickenlooper, A. H. Perrell, Meredith, McClernand, Tower, Logan, Thomas, Pope, Buckland, Este, Slocum, Elliott, Vandorn, Tillman, Sawtelle, Barnum, Willich, Gibson, McArthur, Jordan, Ingalls, Butterfield, McDowell, Cogswell, Bloomfield, Dunn, Cox, Secretary Schofield and a large number of lesser military lights.

A large number of our citizens called upon General Grant and Lieutenant General Sherman at the Tremont House to-day to pay their respect. To-night they are the guests of Lieutenant Governor Bross, at his residence on Michigan avenue. A large number of army officers and hundreds of our citizens, with their families, are present to pay their respects.

CINCINNATI, December 17.—Several fires occurred this morning, damaging property to the amount of $80,000.

MEMPHIS, December 17.—A fight occurred between thirty militia and a number of the citizens of Augusta, Arkansas, yesterday. Four militia were killed.

Governor Clayton's message says the militia will be withdrawn and their places taken by United States troops.

PHILADELPHIA, December 17.—The trial of the Twichells for the murder of their mother commenced to-day.

[Special Dispatch to the Missouri Democrat.]

OMAHA, December 14.—A recent letter from San Francisco, stating that the Union Pacific had been blocked by snow from the fourth to the twelfth, created great indignation among the officers of the Union Pacific, as the statement was notoriously false, the road not having been obstructed not more than forty hours.

The General Superintendent of the Union Pacific to-day notified the Postmaster General that he can now carry the mail to Evanston, nine hundred and fifty-seven miles west of Omaha. The road is entirely clear, trains running regularly.

[Special Dispatch to the Missouri Democrat.]

DENVER, December 14.—The annual election of officers of the Denver Pacific Railroad was held to-day. Governor Evans was elected President. The old Board of Directors, with but one exception, were re-elected.

This company was organized but one year ago, and have since finished grading the entire road from Denver to a connection with the Union Pacific, a distance of 105 miles. The entire work was paid for in cash, furnished by the business men of Denver. The treasurer's report shows total receipts of over $650,000 and disbursements nearly $200,000. The track will be laid the entire length of the road either this winter or early next spring.

CHARLESTON, S. C., December 17.—In the Legislature to-day a resolution was introduced authorizing the Governor to arm and equip one hundred men as a reserve force to send to any county where acts of lawlessness are committed, the expenses to be paid by special tax on such county.

AN ACT

To create the parish of Richland, and providing for the organization thereof.

SECTION 1. Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Louisiana in General Assembly convened, That a new parish be and is hereby created, composed of contiguous portions of the parishes of Ouachita, Franklin, Carroll and Morehouse, and embraced within the following bounderies, to wit: Commencing at a point on Bœuf river where the Bayou Lafourche empties out of it, at or near Point Jefferson, thence down the main channel of the Bayou Lafourche to the line dividing the parishes of Ouachita and Caldwell; thence east on said dividing line to Bœuf river; thence down Bœuf river to the mouth of Bayou Big Creek; thence up the channel of Big Creek to the line dividing the parishes of Franklin and Carroll; thence east on such dividing line to the Bayou Macon; thence up the Bayou Macon to the line dividing townships eighteen and nineteen; thence west on said township line to range line dividing ranges eight and nine east; thence north on said range line to the line dividing townships nineteen and twenty; thence west on said township line to Bœuf river; thence down Bœuf river to the point of beginning, which said parish shall be called and known by the name of the parish of Richland.

SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, etc., That John Bishop, William T. Oliver, Elijah Scott, John E. Hemler, Aquilla Dyson, James G. Richardson and Dr. J. N. Lewis, residents of said parish of Richland, be and are hereby appointed Commissioners, whose duty it shall be to convene at the town of Rayville, in said parish, within thirty days after the passage of this act, the time of meeting to be fixed by William T. Oliver, who shall notify the Commissioners of the time and place thereof. At the meeting herein provided for said Commissioners shall organize by electing one of their body President and one Secretary, and shall take the oath required by the Constitution to be taken by State officers; said Commissioners shall then proceed to divide said parish into not less than five nor more than seven police jury wards and to designate in each of said Police Jury wards a place for holding elections for parish officers; said Commissioners shall also fix a day for the election of all parish officers, including Parish Judge, Sheriff, Clerk, Coroner, one Justice of the Peace and one Constable for each ward, members of the Police Jury, and any and all other officers of the parish made by the Constitution and laws elective by the people, and shall cause notices of said election to be immediately posted up in each ward in said parish; and if, previous to the time fixed for holding said election, a registry of the voters of said pairish has not been made and commissioners to hold the elections have not been appointed by some other provisions of law, then said Commissioners shall name three Commissioners at each precinct to hold said election, and all persons legally authorized to vote according to the provisions of the Constitution shall have the right to vote at said election for all said officers. Said Commissioners shall also appoint a person to prepare the requisite poll boxes and deliver the same to the Commissioners at the place of holding the election. The Commissioners of election shall have all the powers and rights to preserve order at the election the laws confer on Commissioners of election, and shall have power to name any person to execute their orders. They shall make return of the election to the President of the Board of Commissioners, who shall make duplicate return thereof, one to the Secretary of State and the other to be preserved and handed to the Clerk of the Court elected or appointed for said parish. That it shall be the duty of the Governor to issue commissions to all the officers so elected, to whom by law commissions are required to issue, upon their complying with the law. The officers so elected shall enter on the discharge of the duties of their offices as soon as they are commissioned and give bond, and are qualified according to law, and their term of service shall be counted as commencing on the first Monday of November, eighteen hundred and sixty-eight, whether they enter on the discharge of their duties before or after that time.

SEC. 3. Be it further enacted, etc., That the seat of justice for the parish of Richland shall be and is hereby located on or near the railroad at the town of Rayville, in township seventeen, north of range seven east.

SEC. 4. Be it further enacted, etc., That the police jury of the parish of Richland shall meet within twenty days after their election as provided for in this act, and at their first meeting, they shall designate a place for the erection of a Courthouse, and provide for the acquisition of the site thereof, and shall provide places for holding courts and the offices of clerks and sheriff of said parish, until suitable buildings can be erected or provided.

SEC. 5. Be it further enacted, etc., That the parish of Richland shall form part of the Twelfth Judicial District, and the District Courts shall be held therein, commencing on the third Monday of February and August of each year.

SEC. 6. Be it further enacted, etc., That the parish of Richland shall form part of the Senatorial District now composed of the parishes of Carroll, Madison and Morehouse.

SEC. 7. Be it further enacted, etc., That the Sheriff of the parish of Richland shall collect all taxes against the citizens residing within the limits of said parish, which shall remain unpaid when the sheriff of the parish of Richland shall receive his commission, and to enable him to do so, the Sheriffs of Ouachita, Franklin, Carroll and Morehouse shall respectively furnish him with certified lists of the names of such persons in the said parish of Richland as may have been assessed and have not already been paid, together with the amount of taxes against them, which taxes, as fast as collected by the Sheriff of the parish of Richland, shall be paid over—the State taxes to the State Treasurer, and the parish taxes to the Treasurer of the parish of Richland.

SEC. 8. Be it further enacted, etc., That the Police Jury of the parish of Richland, and all other officers of said parish, shall have the powers that are possessed by and be subject to all the duties enjoined on similar officers for the parish of Ouachita and by the general laws of the State.

SEC. 9. Be it further enacted, etc., That it shall be the duty of the Clerks of the Courts for the parishes of Ouachita, Morehouse, Franklin and Carroll, to transmit to the Clerk of the Court of Richland parish the original papers and all papers filed in all suits pending in either of these parishes against defendants residing in the parish of Richland, at the time of the passage of this act, and also a certified copy of all the orders made in any of such suits, which are entered on the minutes of the court, and the cost of making a copy of such minutes shall, in no case, exceed five dollars, and the same to be charged as taxed costs in the case, and the Clerk of the Court of Richland parish shall receipt for such papers. If there be more than one defendant in any of such suits, and one of them resides in the parish in which the suit was originally brought, such suit is not to be transferred, but is to be finally disposed of in the court ewhre it was instituted.

SEC. 10. Be it further enacted, etc., That the Recorders of the parishes of Ouachita, Morehouse, Carroll and Franklin shall, within six months after the passage of this act, transmit and deliver to the Recorder of the parish of Richland all the original deeds, donations and other notarial acts or other copies of original notarial acts on file in their respective offices bearing on the title to property situated in said parish of Richland, and the deeds of Sheriffs, Tax Collectors, Coroners and deeds of sale of succession property, or property of minors or interdicted persons, and the originals or copies of original notarial acts or mortgage which have not been recorded or reinscribed more ten years bearing on property situated in said parish of Richland, and the Recorder of the parish of Richland shall receipt for the same, and shall record the same within one year from the passage of this act, in the order of dates as recorded in the parish from whence they were transmitted, the fees for which recording shall be five cents for every hundred words, to be paid by the parish of Richland, on the warrant of the President of the Police Jury of said parish, when he is satisfied the services have been performed and the fees legally charged, a specific account of which shall accompany the warrant, and be certified by the President of she Police Jury, and sworn to by the Recorder as being correct. The Recorder shall have twenty-five cents for the certificate and seal showing such record, and a failure to have such acts duly recorded within one year from the date of the passage of this act shall subject the Recorder to a fine of five hundred dollars, to be recovered from the Recorder and his surety at the suit of the parish of Richland; and it shall be the duty of the District Attorney, or the District Attorney pro tempore, to institute such suit to recover such fine before any court of competent jurisdiction.

Fifth—That on due proof of said publication the Court shall homologate the report, so far as not approved, and enter up a judgment decreeing the expropriation of the land, etc., prayed for, and for such sum for and against the city, or the various individuals, as the case may be, which said report may call for, with eight per cent interest thereon from the date of judgment.

Sixth—That should there be any opposition to said report as to the amounts allowed or exacted, no other opposition is to be allowed, the Court shall fix a time for the hearing of said opposition at as early a day as practicable, and shall try the same in a summary manner, and without the intervention of a jury. The judgment of homologation, and on the oppositions, to be subject to appeals to the Supreme Court in all cases where the amount in dispute is appealable. The trial of said appeals being entitled to a preference over all other cases except those in which the State is a party.

Seventh—That the amount decreed to be paid by the city shall be due and payable whenever the city shall take possession of the property expropriated, and the amount due to the city bear mortgage and lien upon the property upon which it was assessed.

SEC. 11. Be it further enacted, etc., That in all proceedings in courts, such as writs of sequestration or injunctions, or in appeals, the corporation is dispensed from giving security, and on affidavit of the Mayor that the interest of the city requires it, shall be entitled to have all cases fixed by preference in the inferior courts as well as in the Supreme Court over all other cases, except those in which the State is a party.

SEC. 12. Be it further enacted, etc., That the city shall cause a plan book of all the squares of the city to be made, on which shall appear the subdivision of each square into lots, with the dimensions of all lots, squares, streets and banquettes, and the angle at each corner of each square, as at present divided, as well as the present owner or owners of each lot and square, which plan book shall be kept deposited in the City Surveyor's office, and no new subdivision of a square shall be considered lawful, unless the same shall have first been made by the City Surveyor and approved by the City Council and been entered on the book of plans; the Mayor of the city is prohibited from recording any sale made after the completion of said plan books of any property within the limits of the city of Jefferson in which any other subdivision shall appear than that authorized by said book or plans, under a penalty of one hundred dollars for each violation of this section, to be collected in any court of competent jurisdiction, for the benefit of the city. And in order to this the certificate of the Surveyor shall be given, in every required case, that the acts of sale correspond with the divisions and subdivisions as shown on the book of plans approved and on file in this office; and the Mayor of the city of Jefferson is hereby required to report to the City Surveyor, within forty-eight hours after the recording of an act, every transfer recorded by him of property within the limit of the corporation, under a penalty of five dollars for each day's delay; which transfer shall be entered by the City Surveyor in the margin of the book of plans, on the opposite page of the plan book of the square in which the property so tranferred is situated. The fees of the Mayor of the parish for such certificate is fixed at twenty-five cents for each transfer.

SEC. 13. Be it further enacted, etc., That the act approved March 8, 1867, entitled "An act incorporating the city of Jefferson," and all acts amendatory or supplemental thereto, and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with or contrary to the provisions of this act are hereby repealed.

SEC. 14. Be it further enacted, etc., That this act shall take effect from and after its passage.
